Before the Supreme Court the appellant contended that the High Court ought not to have passed any direction in the writ petition filed by Respondent 3 because it was filed after undue delay. The appellant was also aggrieved by the order of withdrawal of the prosecution against Respondent 3.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

The order of the High Court was primarily based on the report of the DIG, CID, Gwalior who had conducted the inquiry at the instance of the Court and submitted the report. On the basis of the inquiry report, the High Court directed the Superintendent of Police, Gwalior to take action for registration of the case and conduct the investigation and inquiry in accordance with law. (Para 21)

The impugned judgment of the High Court has been carefully examined. There is no infirmity therein. In the backdrop of the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case, no interference is called for. (Paras 22 and 23). Ghanshyam v. State of M.P., (2006) 10 SCC 473: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 602.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-9-2006]

[1285] — Ss. 154 and 156(3) — Duty of police to register FIR in case S. 156(3) is attracted — Held, registration of an FIR involves only the process of entering the substance of the information relating to commission of the cognizable offence in a book kept by the officer in charge of the police station — Held, it is the duty of the officer in charge of the police station to register an FIR when investigation under S. 156(3) is directed by the Magistrate, even when the Magistrate explicitly does not say so

Any Judicial Magistrate, before taking cognizance of the offence, can order investigation under Section 156(3) CrPC. But if he does so, he is not to examine the complainant on oath because he was not taking cognizance of any offence therein. For the purpose of enabling the police to start investigation it is open to the Magistrate to direct the police to register an FIR. There is nothing illegal in doing so. After all registration of an FIR involves only the process of entering the substance of the information relating to the commission of the cognizable offence in a book kept by the officer in charge of the police station. Even if a Magistrate does not say in so many words while directing investigation under Section 156(3) CrPC that an FIR should be registered, it is the duty of the officer in charge of the police station to register the FIR regarding the cognizable offence disclosed by the complainant because that police officer could take further steps contemplated in Chapter XII CrPC only thereafter. (Para 11). Mohd. Yousuf v. Afaq Jahan, (2006) 1 SCC 627: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 460: AIR 2006 SC 705: (2006) 1 KLT 939: (2006) 2 Guj LR 1742: (2006) 38 AIC 70 (SC): 2006 Cri LJ 788.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-1-2006]

Suresh Chand Jain v. State of M.P., (2001) 2 SCC 628: 2001 SCC (Cri) 377, relied on

Gopal Das Sindhi v. State of Assam, AIR 1961 SC 986: (1961) 2 Cri LJ 39; Narayandas Bhagwandas Madhavdas v. State of W.B., (1960) 1 SCR 93: AIR 1959 SC 1118: 1959 Cri LJ 1368, considered

(iii) Quashing of FIR

See also CrPC, 1973, S. 482 pp. 1260 et seq. in Vol. 2

See also CONSTITUTION OF INDIA, Arts. 32, 136 and 226 in Vol. 7, Vol. 8 and Vol. 9, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn., respectively

[1286] — Ss. 154 and 482 — Appellant, sister of main accused, included in FIR on the ground that questioning her would be advantageous — FIR did not disclose any offence so far as she was concerned — Dismissal of her application under S. 482 by High Court — Sustainability — Held, instant case falls within Category I of illustrations given in Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335 — Therefore, proceedings relatable to the FIR as far as appellant was concerned, quashed — Hence, appellant shall not be treated as an accused — However, it is open to the investigating agencies to examine her as a witness — Constitution of India — Art. 226 (Paras 2, 3 and 8). Reshma Bano v. State of U.P., (2008) 5 SCC 791: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 86: (2008) 3 All LJ 607: (2008) 64 AIC 7 (SC).

(5)(iii) Interference by court - Quashing of FIR (contd.)

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-2008]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, followed

[1287] — S. 154 — High Court dismissing writ petition for quashing FIR by applying ratio of the decision by which High Court had previously disposed of large number of cases involving more or less similar prayers to quash FIR in each case — Sustainability — Held, on facts, impugned order of High Court does not show as to how the ratio of decision in a batch of writ petitions disposed by it previously had any application or relevance to the present case — Hence, impugned order of High Court set aside and matter remitted — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420 and 424 — U.P. Gangsters and Anti-Social Activities (Prevention) Act, 1986 (7 of 1986), Ss. 2 and 3 — Constitution of India — Art. 226 (Paras 2 to 6). Ashfaq Khan v. State of U.P., (2008) 11 SCC 143: 2008 Cri LJ 1598: (2008) 2 All LJ 710.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-2-2008]

[1288] — Ss. 154, 155, 451 and 457 — FIR — Quashment of, in writ petition filed by third party — Impermissibility — FIR against drivers and cleaners, but not against owners, of trucks for filling animals in trucks in a cruel manner and carrying them for slaughter contrary to statutory prohibition — Consequently, animals seized — Owners of trucks filing complaint against First Informant and police but not seeking quashment of FIR — They also seeking custody of seized animals but trial court rejecting that request and therefore they filing writ petition — Quashment of FIR in such writ petition, held, impermissible — Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Act, 1960, S. 11(1)(d) — Bombay Animal Preservation Act, 1954 (72 of 1954), Ss. 5, 6 and 8 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 395, 427, 506 Pt. II and S. 34 — Constitution of India — Art. 226 (Paras 19, 20 and 22). Bharat Amratlal Kothari v. Dosukhan Samadkhan Sindhi, (2010) 1 SCC 234.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-2009]

Dosukhan Samdakhan Sindhi v. State of Gujarat, 2009 Cri LR 101 (Mah & Guj), reversed

[1289] — Ss. 154, 155 and 482 — FIR — Quashment of, under Art. 226 of Constitution — Hearing of First Informant, held, necessary — More so when FIR was under various statutory provisions and the Court invoked one of them for convicting a party to writ petition before it — Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Act, 1960, S. 11(1)(d) — Bombay Animal Preservation Act, 1954 (72 of 1954), Ss. 5, 6 and 8 — Penal Code, 1860, S. 279 (Para 25). Bharat Amratlal Kothari v. Dosukhan Samadkhan Sindhi, (2010) 1 SCC 234.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-2009]

Dosukhan Samdakhan Sindhi v. State of Gujarat, 2009 Cri LR 101 (Mah & Guj), reversed

[1290] — Ss. 154, 156, 157, 173 and 482 — Delay in completing investigation — When can FIR be quashed on ground of such delay — On facts, held, no interference called for with quashing of FIR by High Court

A case under S. 5(2) read with S. 5(1)(e) of the Prevention of Corruption Act was registered against the respondent, an officer in IPS in March 1984. The respondent was placed under suspension pending inquiry but on the basis of inquiry the State Government passed an order in September 1984 for stopping further action and for his reinstatement in service. However, by a subsequent order in July 1985, the government cancelled its earlier order and directed the respondent to show cause as to why the penalty of compulsory retirement should not be imposed on him. The respondent filed a writ petition before the High Court challenging the order. The writ petition was transferred to the Central Administrative Tribunal which held that the impugned order was illegal and beyond the powers of the government. The government being aggrieved filed an SLP before the Supreme Court which on November 16, 1988 dismissed the same in view of the fact that the respondent had already retired from service on attaining age of superannuation. Meanwhile the Anti-Corruption Bureau after completing its investigation in the criminal case had submitted its report in April 1987 to its Director-General who in turn had sent the same to the government on September 17, 1988. The respondent filed the criminal petition for quashing further proceedings pursuant to the registration of the first information report, inter alia, contending that there had been lull in the investigation for fairly long spell causing inordinate delay and that the prosecution had not filed its report contemplated under S. 173 CrPC till he filed the petition for quashing the proceedings in November 1987 though the case was registered in March 1984. The High Court on July 29, 1988 quashed the FIR and the subsequent proceedings on the ground of inordinate delay in the investigation. However, the appellant-government accorded sanction for prosecution of the respondent only on September 16, 1988 i.e. after nearly 50 days of the quashing of the FIR. Dismissing the appeal the State on the peculiar facts,

Held :

In view of the facts and circumstances and the various events following the suspension of the respondent culminating in his being allowed to retire on attaining the age of superannuation, it is not a fit case for interference.

No general and wide proposition of law can be formulated that wherever there is any inordinate delay on the part of the investigating agency in completing the investigation such delay is a ground to quash the FIR. State of A.P. v. P.V. Pavithran, (1990) 2 SCC 340: AIR 1990 SC 1266: 1990 Cri LJ 1306.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-3-1990]

[1291] — Ss. 154 and 482, 156 and 157 — Delay as ground for quashing FIR/proceedings — Right to speedy trial — Protracted criminal proceedings — Quashing of — Strict framing/applicability of guideline(s)/principle(s)/factor(s) — Impracticality of — Various factors and grounds for quashing FIR/proceedings on ground of delay, stated — Constitution of India — Art. 21

Whenever there is any allegation of violation of right to speedy trial (or delay on the part of the investigating agency in completing the investigation) the court has to perform by balancing the act by taking into consideration all attending circumstances and to decide whether the right to speedy trial has been denied in a given case or not. There is no general and wide proposition of law formulated that whenever there is delay on the part of the investigating agency in completing the investigation, such a delay can be a ground for quashing the FIR. It would be difficult to formulate inflexible guidelines or rigid principles in determining as to whether the accused has been deprived of fair trial on account of delay or protracted investigation; it would depend on various factors including whether such a delay was reasonably long or caused deliberately or intentionally to hamper the defence of the accused or whether the delay was inevitable in the nature of things or whether it was due to dilatory tactics adopted by the accused. It would depend upon certain peculiar facts and circumstances of each case i.e. the volume of evidence collected by the investigating agency and the nature and gravity of the offence for which the accused has been charge-sheeted in a given case. The nexus between whole and some of the above factors is of considerable relevance. Therefore, whether the accused has been deprived of fair trial on account of protracted investigation has to come on facts. He has also to establish that he had no role in the delay. Every delay does not necessarily occur because of the accused. (Paras 11 and 10). Supdt. of Police, Karnataka Lokayukta v. B. Srinivas, (2008) 8 SCC 580: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 587: (2008) 69 AIC 49 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-8-2008]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; P. Ramachandra Rao v. State of Karnataka, (2002) 4 SCC 578: 2002 SCC (Cri) 830; Abdul Rehman Antulay v. R.S. Nayak, (1992) 1 SCC 225: 1992 SCC (Cri) 93; State of M.P. v. Ram Singh, (2000) 5 SCC 88: 2000 SCC (Cri) 886, relied on

Common Cause, A Registered Society v. Union of India, (1996) 4 SCC 33: 1996 SCC (Cri) 589; Common Cause, A Registered Society v. Union of India, (1996) 6 SCC 775: 1997 SCC (Cri) 42; Raj Deo Sharma v. State of Bihar, (1998) 7 SCC 507: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1692; Raj Deo Sharma (II) v. State of Bihar, (1999) 7 SCC 604: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1324, clarified

[1292] — Ss. 154 and 157 — FIR against public servant — Ground for quashing — Preliminary enquiry should be made before registering a case

In a perfect system of prevention and detection of crimes, undeniably the paramount duty of a police officer to whom the commission of a cognizable offence is reported, is to register a case without causing any delay and promptly commence the investigation without perverting or subverting the law. However, before a public servant is publicly charged with acts of dishonesty and corruption, and a first information report is lodged against him, there should be some suitable preliminary enquiry into the allegations by a responsible officer. State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426: AIR 1992 SC 604: 1992 Cri LJ 527.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-11-1990]

[1293] — Ss. 154 and 482 — Court not competent to quash FIR and proceedings taken in pursuance thereof thereby restraining the police authorities from performing their duties — Held, High Court erred in quashing the FIR by not only examining the averments made in the FIR but also going into merits of the case before investigation and collection of evidence by the investigating agency. State of Punjab v. Dharam Singh, 1987 Supp SCC 89: 1987 SCC (Cri) 621.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V. Balakrishna Eradi and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-2-1987]

(5) Interference by court (contd.)

(iv) Practice and Procedure

[1294] — Ss. 154 and 174 — New plea — Plea that complaint was not registered within the police station which had jurisdiction, not urged before the courts below — Raised before the Supreme Court at the time of addressing arguments — Held, could not be entertained at this belated stage — Constitution of India — Art. 136 (Para 19). Ravi v. State, (2004) 11 SCC 266: AIR 2004 SC 4164.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-2004]

(6) Non-initiation of proceedings after FIR lodged

[1295] — Ss. 154 and 173 — Person lodging FIR entitled to hearing when on the basis of police report Magistrate prefers to drop the proceedings instead of taking cognizance of offence — Person injured or relative of the person who died in the incident complained of has no such right of hearing except a standing to appear before the Magistrate — Magistrate, of his own discretion can also give notice to them for hearing

In a case where the Magistrate to whom a report is forwarded under S. 173(2)(i) decides not to take cognizance of the offence and to drop the proceedings or takes the view that there is no sufficient ground for proceeding against some of the persons mentioned in the First Information Report, the Magistrate must give notice to the informant and provide him an opportunity to be heard at the time of consideration of the report. Unnecessary delay on account of the difficulty of effecting service of the notice on the informant cannot be a valid objection against this view because in any case the action taken by the police on the First Information Report has to be communicated to the informant and a copy of the report has to be supplied to him under S. 173(2)(i). Moreover, the difficulty of service of notice on the informant cannot provide any justification for depriving the informant of the opportunity of being heard at the time when the report is considered by the Magistrate.

The injured person or any relative of the deceased who is not an informant, though not entitled to notice from the Magistrate, has locus to appear before the Magistrate at the time of consideration of report, if he otherwise comes to know that the report is going to be considered by the Magistrate and if he wants to make his submissions in regard to the report; the Magistrate is bound to hear him. The Magistrate may also, in the exercise of his discretion, if he so thinks fit, give such notice to the injured person or to any particular relative or relatives of the deceased, but not giving of such notice will not have any invalidating effect on the order which may be made by the Magistrate on a consideration of the report. Bhagwant Singh v. Commr. of Police, (1985) 2 SCC 537: 1985 SCC (Cri) 267: AIR 1985 SC 1285: 1985 Cri LJ 1521.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, A.N. Sen and D.P. Madon, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-4-1985]

(7) Miscellaneous

[1296] — Ss. 154, 156, 161 and 190 — Powers of legislature — Limits of — Impugned resolution passed by Vidhan Sabha containing directions as to how the criminal investigation into appellant's alleged wrongdoing should be conducted — Resolution also containing directions regarding filing of FIRs, custodial interrogation and to Vigilance Department — Improper intrusion on province of executive and judiciary — Held, doctrine of separation of powers is an inseparable part of parliamentary democracy — Legislative body not entrusted with power of adjudicating a case once an appropriate forum is in existence under the constitutional scheme — For functions within domain of executive, role of legislature could at best be recommendatory — Determination of guilt or innocence is a role properly reserved for trial Judge — Only exception is when impugned acts have the effect of distorting, obstructing or threatening integrity of legislative proceedings, thereby warranting the exercise of privileges — Hence, a jurisdictional error was committed by Punjab Vidhan Sabha in passing said resolution — Constitution of India, Arts. 194(3), 105(3), 32, 136, 226, 73 and 162 — Central Vigilance Commission Act, 2003, Ss. 8 and 11

The doctrine of separation of powers is an inseparable part of the evolution of parliamentary democracy itself. Renowned French philosopher Montesquieu had drawn the attention of political theorists to the dangers inherent in the concentration of legislative, executive and judicial powers in one authority and stressed on the necessity of checks and balances in constitutional governance. Our institutions of governance have been intentionally founded on the principle of separation of powers and the Constitution does not give unfettered power to any organ. All the three principal organs are expected to work in harmony and in consonance with the spirit and essence of the Constitution. It is clear that a legislative body is not entrusted with the power of adjudicating a case once an appropriate forum is in existence under the constitutional scheme. (Para 87)

The impugned resolution (dated 10-9-2008) passed by the Punjab Vidhan Sabha contains directions as to how the investigation into the appellant's and petitioners' alleged wrongdoing should be conducted. The resolution directs the filing of first information reports (FIRs) and custodial interrogation in addition to directing the Vigilance Department, Punjab to find out where the appellant and the others have stored their "ill gotten wealth" and further directs the Vigilance Department to report back to the Speaker of the Punjab Vidhan Sabha. These functions are within the domain of the executive. It is up to the investigating agencies themselves to decide how to proceed with the investigation in a particular case. The role of the legislature in this regard can at best be recommendatory and the Speaker of a legislature may not assume the responsibility of monitoring an ongoing investigation. A determination of guilt or innocence by way of fact finding is a role properly reserved for the trial Judge. The only exception to this principle is when the impugned acts have the effect of distorting, obstructing or threatening the integrity of legislative proceedings or are likely to do the same, thereby warranting the exercise of privileges. There was an obvious jurisdictional error on part of the Punjab Vidhan Sabha in the present case. The observations cited above are self-explanatory and raise concerns about the overreach into the judicial domain in the present case. [Paras 89 to 91 and 92(i)]

The resolution passed by the Punjab Vidhan Sabha on 10-9-2008, directing the expulsion of the appellant for the remainder of the thirteenth term of the Vidhan Sabha is constitutionally invalid. Hence, restoration of the appellant's membership in the Punjab Vidhan Sabha is directed. However, nothing in this judgment should act as a hurdle against the investigation, if any, into the alleged role of the appellant and the petitioners in the improper exemption of land from the Amritsar Improvement Scheme that was notified on 13-1-2006. [Paras 93 and 92(i)]. Amarinder Singh v. Punjab Vidhan Sabha, (2010) 6 SCC 113.

Bench Strength 5. Coram : K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and R.V. Raveendran, P. Sathasivam, J.M. Panchal and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision : 26-4-2010]

Indira Nehru Gandhi v. Raj Narain, 1975 Supp SCC 1; Kilbourn v. Thompson, 26 L Ed 377: 103 US 168 (1880), referred to

[1297] — Ss. 154, 190, 195, 196, 197 and 200 — Prosecution against a former Chief Minister, Minister, Public Servant or person connected with the former administration can be initiated without setting up a Commission of Inquiry prior to such prosecution — Commissions of Inquiry Act, 1952, S. 3 — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 6

Per Bhagwati, C.J. and Oza, J.

It would be perfectly legitimate for the successor Government to initiate a prosecution of a former Chief Minister or a person who has held high political office under the earlier regime without first having an inquiry made by a Commission of Inquiry, provided, of course, the investigation is fair and objective and there is sufficient material to initiate such prosecution. There are, under the existing law, sufficient safeguards for the purpose of ensuring that no public servant is harassed by false and vexatious prosecution or charges of corruption because no such prosecution can be initiated without sanction under S. 6 of the Prevention of Corruption Act or S. 197 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973. These safeguards cannot be said to be inadequate even if they do not afford adequate protection in any particular case; the Magistrate is always there to protect an innocent accused because if in the opinion of the Magistrate, there is not sufficient evidence and the charge against the accused appears to be groundless, the Magistrate may straightway discharge the accused without taking any evidence. Sheonandan Paswan v. State of Bihar, (1987) 1 SCC 288: 1987 SCC (Cri) 82: AIR 1987 SC 877: 1987 Cri LJ 793.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, C.J.[1] and E.S. Venkataramiah[2], V. Khalid[3], G.L. Oza[1] and S. Natarajan[4], JJ. [Date of decision: 20-12-1986]

— S. 154(2) See Ss. 154(1), 154(2), 154(3), 157(1), 190(1)(a) and 200

— S. 154(3) See Ss. 154(1), 154(2), 154(3), 157(1), 190(1)(a) and 200

See also Ss. 200 to 204 and 154(3)

See also Ss. 482, 154(3) and 174

Sections 155 to 159 — Power and Conduct of Investigation by Police

Ss. 155 to 159 See also Ss. 155 to 159, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 998 to 1003 et seq. in Vol. 2

Synopsis

(1) Generally 392

(2) Authority that may investigate and Role of court 397

- (i) Generally 397
- (ii) Police 401
- (iii) Other Agencies (including CBI) 403
- (iv) Ss. 156 and 202 — Relative scope 408
- (v) Transfer of investigation 410

(3) Investigation when may be initiated by police officer 412

(4) Section 155(4) 416

(5) Refusal to investigate or Improper investigation — Monitoring of investigation and Role of court 416

(6) Power under Section 156(3) — Nature and Scope 428

(7) Section 157(1) proviso (b) — Sufficient grounds for non-investigation 435

(8) Procedure and Duty and Powers of investigating officer 436

(9) Hearing to accused during investigation 444

(10) Defective investigation 445

(11) Illegal/Partisan/Mala fide investigation — Effect and Quashment 453

(12) Delay in investigation and Quashment 455

(13) Result of investigation — When evidence 457

(14) Forwarding and receipt of Section 157 report (Ss. 158-159) 457

(15) Other 458

— S. 155 See Ss. 41 to 44 & 46 and 155 and 157, 2(h)

See also Ss. 73, 167, 204, 82, 83 and 155

See also Ss. 150, 154 and 155 and S. 2(h)

See also Ss. 151, 155 and 156

See also Ss. 154, 155, 156, 157, 162, 169, 170 and 173

See also Ss. 154 to 173

See also Ss. 154 to 173 and 482

See also Ss. 156 and 155

See also Ss. 156, 155 and 157

See also Ss. 157 and 155

See also Ss. 157 & 155 and 41 to 44 & 46 and Ss. 437 to 439

See also Ss. 157 & 155 and 190

See also Ss. 157, 156 and 154, 155

See also Ss. 164(1) & (5), 154 to 160, 165 to 173(5) & (8) and 311

See also Ss. 172 and 155

See also Ss. 438, 437 & 438 and 2(h), 155 to 157 and 41 to 44 & 46

See also Ss. 482 and 2(d), 154, 155 and 190, 200

See also Ss. 482 and 154, 155, 156, 157, 162, 169, 170, 173

— S. 155(2) See Ss. 2(c) & (d), 154, 155(2) & 190(1)(a) and (b)

— S. 156 See Ss. 41, 151, 2(c), 156 and 157(1)

See also Ss. 41, 151, 156 and 157(1)

See also Ss. 151, 155 and 156

See also Ss. 154, 155, 156, 157, 162, 169, 170 and 173

See also Ss. 154 to 173

See also Ss. 154 to 173 and 482

See also Ss. 154, 156 & 157

See also Ss. 154, 156 & 157 and 162

See also Ss. 154, 156, 157, 173 and 482

See also Ss. 154, 156 and 162, 177, 178

See also Ss. 154, 156 and 173

See also Ss. 154, 156, 173(2) & (8) and 211

See also Ss. 154, 156, 177 and 178

See also Ss. 154, 157 and 156

See also Ss. 154, 190, 156 and 157

See also Ss. 154 and 482, 156 and 157

See also Ss. 157 and 156

See also Ss. 157, 156 and 154, 155

See also Ss. 157, 156, 154, 159, 160 and 161

See also Ss. 157, 156, 154 and 190
See also Ss. 157, 156 and 159
See also Ss. 157, 156, 165 and 482
See also Ss. 157, 156 and 169
See also Ss. 157, 156, 169, 170, 173 and 190 & 173(8)
See also Ss. 163, 161 and 156
See also Ss. 164(1) & (5), 154 to 160, 165 to 173(5) & (8) and 311
See also Ss. 170 and 156
See also Ss. 173(8), 36 and 156
See also Ss. 173(8) and 156
See also Ss. 173(8), 156 and 157
See also Ss. 177, 178, 181 and 156
See also Ss. 177, 178, 482, 156, 162 and 154
See also Ss. 190, 154, 156 & 157
See also Ss. 190 & 200 to 203, 154 and 156
See also Ss. 190 & 200 to 203 and 156 & 157
See also Ss. 190, 200, 203 and 156 & 157
See also Ss. 190(1) and 200 & 154, 156
See also Ss. 193, 190, 156, 157 and 173
See also Ss. 319, 154, 156, 173, 190, 204, 209
See also Ss. 406, 177, 178 and 156
See also Ss. 438, 437 & 438 and 2(h), 155 to 157 and 41 to 44 & 46
See also Ss. 438 & 439(2) and 156
See also Ss. 482 and 154, 155, 156, 157, 162, 169, 170 and 173
See also Ss. 482 & 156
See also Ss. 482, 156 & 154
See also Ss. 482, 156, 154 & 157
See also Ss. 482, 156 & 173
See also Ss. 482, 156, 190(1)(b) & 204
See also Ss. 482 and 193, 190, 156 & 157
— S. 156(1) See Ss. 173(8) & (2) and 156(1)
See also Ss. 482, 173(8) & (2) and 156(1)
— S. 156(2) See Ss. 482, 154 and 156(2)
— S. 156(3) See Ss. 2(h), 2(g) & 156(3) and 157
See also Ss. 94 and 156(3)
See also Ss. 154 and 156(3)
See also Ss. 154 & 156(3) and Ss. 161 & 162
See also Ss. 154(3) & 36, 156(3), 200 and 482
See also Ss. 173, 190(1)(b), 156(3), 200, 203 and 204
See also Ss. 178, 181(4) and 156(3)
See also Ss. 190, 156(3) and 482
See also Ss. 190, 200, 204 and 156(3)
See also Ss. 190(1)(b) & 204, 200, 156(3), 468 and 401
See also Ss. 202(1) and 156(3)
See also Ss. 239, 240, 227, 190(1), 156(3) and 468
See also Ss. 397 & 156(3)
See also Ss. 397 & 401 and Ss. 156(3) & 200
See also Ss. 482, 154, 156(3) and 157
See also Ss. 482 and 156(3)
See also Ss. 482, 156(3) & 154
— S. 157 See Ss. 2(h), 2(g) & 156(3) and 157
See also Ss. 41 to 44 & 46 and 155 and 157, 2(h)
See also Ss. 41, 151, 157 and 172
See also Ss. 154, 155, 156, 157, 162, 169, 170 and 173
See also Ss. 154 to 173
See also Ss. 154 to 173 and 482
See also Ss. 154, 156 & 157
See also Ss. 154, 156 & 157 and 162
See also Ss. 154, 156, 157, 173 and 482
See also Ss. 154 and 157
See also Ss. 154, 157 and 156
See also Ss. 154, 157 and 158
See also Ss. 154, 157 and 174
See also Ss. 154, 158 and 157
See also Ss. 154, 158, 157 and 174
See also Ss. 154, 190, 156 and 157
See also Ss. 154 and 482, 156 and 157
See also Ss. 155(4), 157 and 198
See also Ss. 156, 154, 157 and 190
See also Ss. 156, 155 and 157
See also Ss. 156 and 157
See also Ss. 156, 157, 154, 190 and Ch. XII
See also Ss. 156, 157 and 161
See also Ss. 156, 157, 161 and 165
See also Ss. 156, 157, 169, 173 and 190
See also Ss. 156, 157, 170, 173(8) and 190
See also Ss. 156, 157 and 190
See also Ss. 156 & 157 and 190 & 200 to 203
See also Ss. 156, 157, 465, 401 and 397
See also Ss. 156(1) & 157 and 2(h)
See also Ss. 162, 154, 157 and 2(h)
See also Ss. 163, 161 and 157
See also Ss. 164(1) & (5), 154 to 160, 165 to 173(5) & (8) and 311
See also Ss. 172, 168 and 157
See also Ss. 173(8), 156 and 157

See also Ss. 190, 154, 156 & 157
See also Ss. 190, 200 and 157
See also Ss. 190 & 200 to 203 and 156 & 157
See also Ss. 190, 200, 203 and 156 & 157
See also Ss. 193, 190, 156, 157 and 173
See also Ss. 231 & 242 and 173 & 157
See also Ss. 386 and 157
See also Ss. 438, 437 & 438 and 2(h), 155 to 157 and 41 to 44 & 46
See also Ss. 482 and 154, 155, 156, 157, 162, 169, 170, 173
See also Ss. 482, 154, 156(3) and 157
See also Ss. 482, 154 and 157
See also Ss. 482, 156, 154 & 157
See also Ss. 482 and 157 & 154
See also Ss. 482 and 193, 190, 156 & 157

— S. 157(1) See Ss. 41, 151, 2(c), 156 and 157(1)
See also Ss. 41, 151, 156 and 157(1)
See also Ss. 154 and 157(1)
See also Ss. 154(1), 154(2), 154(3), 157(1), 190(1)(a) and 200

— S. 157(1) proviso (b) See Ss. 156(3), 157(1) proviso (b) & (2), 190, 200 and 154

— S. 157(2) See Ss. 156(3), 157(1) proviso (b) & (2), 190, 200 and 154

— S. 158 See Ss. 154 to 173
See also Ss. 154 to 173 and 482
See also Ss. 154, 157 and 158
See also Ss. 154 and 158
See also Ss. 154, 158 and 157
See also Ss. 154, 158, 157 and 174
See also Ss. 157 to 161 and 172(2)
See also Ss. 157 to 161 and 173
See also Ss. 157 to 167
See also Ss. 157 to 172 and 198
See also Ss. 157 to 173
See also Ss. 159 and 158
See also Ss. 164(1) & (5), 154 to 160, 165 to 173(5) & (8) and 311

— S. 159 See Ss. 154 to 173
See also Ss. 154 to 173 and 482
See also Ss. 154, 159, 190 and 482
See also Ss. 157, 156, 154, 159, 160, 161
See also Ss. 157, 156 and 159
See also Ss. 157 and 159
See also Ss. 157 to 161 and 172(2)
See also Ss. 157 to 167
See also Ss. 157 to 161 and 173
See also Ss. 157 to 172 and 198
See also Ss. 157 to 173
See also Ss. 164(1) & (5), 154 to 160, 165 to 173(5) & (8) and 311

Section 155
§[1299], §[1308], §[1319], §[1342], §[1378], §[1436]

Section 155(4)
§[1356]

Section 156
§[1299] - §[1301], §[1308], §[1309], §[1311], §[1313]-§[1317], §[1320] - §[1336], §[1338]-§[1339], §[1341]-§[1346], §[1357] - §[1364], §[1366], §[1369], §[1372], §[1375], §[1380], §[1381], §[1383], §[1386], §[1410], §[1411], §[1424], §[1447], §[1474]-§[1477]

Section 156(1)
§[1302], §[1312], §[1393]

Section 156(2)
§[1312], §[1393]

Section 156(3)
§[1318], §[1340], §[1387] - §[1408]

Section 157
§[1299], §[1300], §[1302] - §[1310], §[1314], §[1317], §[1319], §[1320], §[1327], §[1331], §[1337], §[1347] - §[1359], §[1361] - §[1363], §[1365] - §[1386], §[1409] - §[1445], §[1448]-§[1473], §[1475] - §[1496], §[1500], §[1501]

Section 158
§[1376], §[1377], §[1414] , §[1415], §[1434], §[1451], §[1462], §[1479], §[1492], §[1497], §[1498]

Section 159
§[1309], §[1376], §[1377], §[1380], §[1414], §[1415], §[1434], §[1451], §[1462], §[1479], §[1482], §[1492], §[1498] - §[1500]

(1) Generally

[1298] — Ss. 156, 155 and 157 — Investigation by police — Powers of, in respect of cognizable and non-cognizable offences — Police when obliged to investigate an offence — Held, obligation to register a case is not to be confused with the remedy if the same is not registered — Registration of a case does not ipso facto warrant the setting in motion of an investigation, as the same is subject to discretion of police subject to Ss. 157(1) proviso & 157(2) in case of cognizable offences, and scheme of S. 155 in case of non-cognizable offences — S. 156(3) vests a discretionary power on a Magistrate empowered under S. 190 to order an investigation by a police officer as contemplated in S. 156(1)

In this connection, it may be noted that though a police officer cannot investigate a non-cognizable offence on his own as in the case of cognizable offence, he can investigate a non-cognizable offence under the order of a Magistrate having power to try such non-cognizable case or commit the same for trial within the terms under Section 155(2) CrPC but subject to Section 155(3) CrPC. Further, under Section 155(4), where a case relates to two offences to which at least one is cognizable, the case shall be deemed to be a cognizable case notwithstanding that the other offences are non-cognizable and, therefore, under such circumstances the police officer can investigate such offences with the same powers as he has while investigating a cognizable offence. (Para 69)

The obligation to register a case is not to be confused with the remedy if same is not registered. The answer to the question whether the registration of a criminal case under Section 154(1) CrPC ipso facto warrants the setting in motion of an investigation under Chapter XII CrPC is provided by Sections 157(1) proviso and 157(2) CrPC. Section 156(3) vests a discretionary power on a Magistrate empowered under Section 190 to order an investigation by a police officer as contemplated in Section 156(1). Section 156(3) does not empower a Magistrate to stop an investigation undertaken by the police. (Paras 70, 71 and 73). Parkash Singh Badal v. State of Punjab, (2007) 1 SCC 1: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 193: AIR 2007 SC 1274: (2007) 51 AIC 623 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-12-2006]

[1299] — Ss. 157 and 156 — Manner of conduct of investigation and lack of bona fides of investigating officer — Deprecated in strong terms — Investigating officer (though retired) directed to attend hearing in Supreme Court and file explanatory affidavit (Paras 25, 35, 36, 41 and 42). Parminder Kaur v. State of U.P., (2010) 1 SCC 322.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-10-2009]

[1300] — Ss. 156, 195 & 340 and 341 — Bar under S. 195 — Applicability — Whether Ss. 195 and 340 affect the power of police to investigate into a cognizable offence — Held, Ss. 195 and 340 do not control or circumscribe the power of the police to investigate — Once the investigation is completed, the court would not be competent to take cognizance in view of the embargo in S. 195 — But, the court can file a complaint for the offence on the basis of the FIR and the material collected during investigation provided it follows the procedure laid down in S. 340 — In such case no right to file an appeal under S. 341 is affected (Para 8)

The accused-respondents contended that since the instant case fell under Section 195 CrPC, it was the provisions of Chapter XXVI CrPC which would apply and not that of Chapter XII CrPC. Thus, it was submitted that in such a case the only procedure which could be followed was to make an application to the court, but by not following the procedure laid down under Chapter XXVI the right of the respondents under Article 21 of the Constitution of India had been affected. The respondents argued that if an application had been made to the court and the court had taken a decision then under Section 341 CrPC an appeal could have been filed. It was submitted that by making a complaint to the police, who would then make a report to a court and the court would take cognizance the respondents were deprived of the right of appeal as provided under Section 341.

Rejecting the said submissions, the Supreme Court held as above. M. Narayandas v. State of Karnataka, (2003) 11 SCC 251: 2004 SCC (Cri) 118.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-9-2003]

State of Punjab v. Raj Singh, (1998) 2 SCC 391: 1998 SCC (Cri) 642, followed

[1301] — Ss. 156(1) & 157 and 2(h) — Investigation — Private funding of — Statutory investigating agency cannot be directed to obtain financial assistance from private parties for meeting the expenses required for conducting the investigation

An FIR was lodged by a company, having its headquarters at Shillong in Meghalaya, with the Shillong Police alleging that a Mumbai based company had cheated it to the tune of Rs 9 crores. The Shillong Company, having found that that the police was not moving ahead with the investigation as fast or as distant as the company expected, filed a writ petition before the High Court of Guwahati for appropriate directions. A Single Judge of the High Court directed that in case the said Company was "ready to deposit the amount which would be required to undertake the investigation and for the visit of the senior police officers to Bombay in connection with the investigation work the State Government shall allow them to do so" and directed the investigating team to proceed in right earnest and speedily. The Director General of Police, Meghalaya and the Home Secretary of the State filed an appeal along with the State before a Division Bench of the High Court challenging the said direction issued by the Single Judge but the same was dismissed. The appellant was kept in dark about what all happened at Shillong but when he was called by the police in connection with the FIR lodged at Shillong, he learned about the facts which preceded till then. Hence he moved the High Court of Bombay in a writ petition under Article 226 of the Constitution for quashing the FIR and the further proceedings taken thereon. But a Division Bench of the Bombay High Court dismissed the writ petition on the sole ground that the High Court of Bombay had no jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution to deal with an FIR registered at Shillong. In the present appeal before the Supreme Court, direction of the High Court to the Shillong Police to collect funds from the respondent Company, has been challenged. Setting aside the said direction,

(1) Generally (contd.)

Held :

The official investigation has to be totally extricated from any extraneous influence. The police investigation should necessarily be with the fund supplied by the State. It may be possible for a rich complainant to supply any amount of fund to the police for conducting investigation into his complaint. But a poor man cannot afford to supply any financial assistance to the police. Somebody who incurs the cost of anything would normally secure its control also. In our constitutional scheme, the police and other statutory investigating agency cannot be allowed to be hackneyed by those who can afford it. All complaints shall be investigated with equal alacrity and with equal fairness irrespective of the financial capacity of the person lodging the complaint. (Para 17)

Financial crunch of any State treasury is no justification for allowing a private party to supply funds to the police for conducting such investigation. Augmentation of the fiscal resources of the State for meeting the expenses needed for such investigations is the lookout of the executive. Failure to do it is no premise for directing a complainant to supply funds to the investigating officer. Such funding by interested private parties would vitiate the investigation contemplated in the Code. A vitiated investigation is the precursor for miscarriage of criminal justice. Hence any attempt, to create a precedent permitting private parties to supply financial assistance to the police for conducting investigation, should be nipped in the bud itself. No such precedent can secure judicial imprimatur. (Para 18). Navinchandra N. Majithia v. State of Meghalaya, (2000) 8 SCC 323: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1510: AIR 2000 SC 3275.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.T. Thomas, R.P. Sethi and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-2000]

Navinchandra N. Majithia v. State of Maharashtra, (2000) 7 SCC 640; H.N. Rishbud v. State of Delhi, AIR 1955 SC 196: 1955 Cri LJ 526; State of M.P. v. Mubarak Ali, AIR 1959 SC 707: 1959 Cri LJ 920; P. Sirajuddin v. State of Madras, (1970) 1 SCC 595: 1970 SCC (Cri) 240; State of Rajasthan v. Gurcharandas Chadha, (1980) 1 SCC 250: 1980 SCC (Cri) 208; R. Sarala v. T.S. Velu, (2000) 4 SCC 459: 2000 SCC (Cri) 823, relied on

Muddamma Malla Reddi, Re, 1954 Cri LJ 167 (Mad), approved

(1999) 1 Gau LR 498 (Gau), reversed

[1302] — S. 157 — Investigation — Object of — Held, is to find out whether the offences alleged have been committed and, if so, who have committed it (Para 11). Kari Choudhary v. Sita Devi, (2002) 1 SCC 714: 2002 SCC (Cri) 269: AIR 2002 SC 441: 2002 Cri LJ 923: (2002) 1 CHN (Supp) 108.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-12-2001]

[1303] — S. 157 — Disclosure of information to media by investigating officers — Held, premature disclosures or "leakage" to media in a pending investigation will jeopardise and impede further investigation, and may allow real culprit to escape from law — Hence, held, attempts to claim credit for imaginary investigational breakthroughs should be curbed (Para 21). Rajendran Chingaravelu v. R.K. Mishra, (2010) 1 SCC 457.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and K.S. Radhakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-2009]

[1304] — S. 157 — Investigation — It is only a preliminary step for gathering of evidence. Major G.S. Sodhi v. Union of India, (1991) 2 SCC 382: 1991 SCC (Cri) 357: AIR 1991 SC 1617: (1991) 1 LLN 365: 1991 Cri LJ 1947.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-11-1990]

[1305] — S. 157 — Investigation — Media influence — Fair trial — Need for restraint by media — Distinction between trial by media and informative media to be maintained — Trial by media to be avoided particularly at stage when suspect is entitled to constitutional protection — Reporting of sub judice matters to be subjected to checks and balances so as not to interfere with administration of justice — Constitution of India, Arts. 19(1)(a) and 21 — Contempt of Courts Act, 1971, S. 4

Despite the significance of the print and electronic media in the present day, it is not only desirable but the least that is expected of the persons at the helm of affairs in the field, is to ensure that trial by media does not hamper fair investigation by the investigating agency and more importantly does not prejudice the right of defence of the accused in any manner whatsoever. It will amount to travesty of justice if either of this causes impediments in the accepted judicious and fair investigation and trial. There is danger of serious risk of prejudice if the media exercises an unrestricted and unregulated freedom such that it publishes photographs of the suspects or the accused before the identification parades are constituted or if the media publishes statements which outrightly hold the suspect or the accused guilty even before such an order has been passed by the court. (Paras 297 and 298)

In the present case, certain articles and news items appearing in the newspapers immediately after the date of occurrence, did cause certain confusion in the mind of public as to the description and number of the actual assailants/suspects. It is unfortunate that trial by media did, though to a very limited extent, affect the accused, but not tantamount to a prejudice which should weigh with the court in taking any different view. The freedom of speech protected under Article 19(1)(a) of the Constitution has to be carefully and cautiously used, so as to avoid interference with the administration of justice and leading to undesirable results in the matters sub judice before the courts. (Para 299)

Presumption of innocence of an accused is a legal presumption and should not be destroyed at the very threshold through the process of media trial and that too when the investigation is pending. In that event, it will be opposed to the very basic rule of law and would impinge upon the protection granted to an accused under Article 21 of the Constitution. It is essential for the maintenance of dignity of the courts and is one of the cardinal principles of the rule of law in a free democratic country, that the criticism or even the reporting particularly, in sub judice matters must be subjected to checks and balances so as not to interfere with the administration of justice. (Para 301)

Every effort should be made by the print and electronic media to ensure that the distinction between trial by media and informative media should always be maintained. Trial by media should be avoided particularly, at a stage when the suspect is entitled to the constitutional protections. Invasion of his rights is bound to be held as impermissible. [Para 303(11)]. Manu Sharma v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 6 SCC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and Swatanter Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision : 19-4-2010]

P.C. Sen, In re, AIR 1970 SC 1821: 1970 Cri LJ 1525; Reliance Petrochemicals Ltd. v. Indian Express Newspapers, Bombay (P) Ltd., (1988) 4 SCC 592; R.K. Anand v. Delhi High Court, (2009) 8 SCC 106: (2010) 2 SCC (Cri) 563; M.P. Lohia v. State of W.B., (2005) 2 SCC 686: 2005 SCC (Cri) 556; Anukul Chandra Pradhan v. Union of India, (1996) 6 SCC 354: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1338, relied on

[1306] — Ss. 157, 154 and 162 & 2(h) — Investigation when commences — Telephonic FIR

The question as to at what stage the investigation commences has to be considered and examined on the facts of each case, especially, when the information of a cognizable offence has been given on telephone. If the information given on telephone is not cryptic and on basis of that information, the officer in charge, is prima facie satisfied about the commission of a cognizable offence and he proceeds from the police station after recording such information, to investigate such offence then any statement made by any person in respect of the said offence including about the participants, shall be deemed to be a statement made by a person to the police officer "in the course of investigation", covered by S. 162 of the Code. Ramsinh Bavaji Jadeja v. State of Gujarat, (1994) 2 SCC 685: 1994 SCC (Cri) 609: 1994 Cri LJ 3067: (1994) 2 Punj LR 671: (1994) 1 MWN (Cri) 130: (1994) 1 GLH 329.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-3-1994]

[1307] — Ss. 157, 156 and 154, 155 — Duty of police after registration of FIR

The registration of the FIR empowers the officer in charge of the police station to commence investigation with respect to the crime reported to him. A copy of the FIR is required to be sent forthwith to the Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of such offence. After recording the FIR, the officer in charge of the police station is obliged to proceed in person or depute one of his subordinate officers not below such rank as the State Government may, by general or special order, prescribe in that behalf to proceed to the spot to investigate the facts and circumstances of the case and if necessary, to take measures for the discovery and arrest of the offender. (Para 5). Bijoy Singh v. State of Bihar, (2002) 9 SCC 147: AIR 2002 SC 1949: 2002 Cri LJ 2623.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.P. Sethi and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-4-2002]

[1308] — Ss. 157, 156, 154, 159, 160 and 161 — Immediate medical aid to injured persons — State's obligation to preserve life — Professional obligation of all doctors, of government hospitals or private, to extend medical aid to the injured immediately — Statutory procedural requirements of observance of police formalities or zoning of hospitals or formalities of evidence of doctor cannot delay/avoid rendering of immediate medical relief — In not waiting for completion of legal formalities doctors would not be violating any law — Lawyers, police and courts exhorted not to call the doctors for evidence or interrogation unless absolutely necessary and when called to treat them with respect and not be made to wait for long or suffer harassment — The 1985 decision of committee chaired by Director General of Health Services (quoted below), held, will become operative immediately — Governments of States and UTs can seek amendment in directions up to three months — Government media, Registry, law reports and Medical Council of India directed to inform all concerned, the Courts, medical colleges, practising doctors and to give wide publicity to this ruling Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 45. Parmanand Katara v. Union of India, (1989) 4 SCC 286: 1989 SCC (Cri) 721: AIR 1989 SC 2039: 1989 ALR 695.

(1) Generally (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ranganath Misra[1] and G.L. Oza[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 28-8-1989]

[1309] — Ss. 157, 173, 24 and 243 — Fair trial — Meaning and scope — Rights of accused — Fair and impartial investigation and prosecution as well as fair trial, emphasised — Right against self-incrimination and double jeopardy — Scope — Reiterated — Constitution of India — Arts. 21, 19 and 20 and 243

In Indian criminal jurisprudence, the accused is placed in a somewhat advantageous position than under different jurisprudence of some of the countries in the world. The criminal justice administration system in India places human rights and dignity for human life at a much higher pedestal. An accused is presumed to be innocent till proved guilty. The alleged accused is entitled to fairness and true investigation and fair trial and the prosecution is expected to play balanced role in the trial of a crime. The investigation should be judicious, fair, transparent and expeditious to ensure compliance with the basic rule of law. These are the fundamental canons of our criminal jurisprudence and they are quite in conformity with the constitutional mandate contained in Articles 20 and 21 of the Constitution of India. (Para 197)

A person is entitled to be tried according to the law in force at the time of commission of offence. A person could not be punished for the same offence twice and most significantly cannot be compelled to be a witness against himself and he cannot be deprived of his personal liberty except according to the procedure established by law. The law in relation to investigation of offences and rights of an accused, has developed with the passage of time. On the one hand, power is vested in the investigating officer to conduct the investigation freely and transparently. Even the courts do not normally have the right to interfere with the investigation. It exclusively falls in the domain of the investigating agency. In exceptional cases the High Courts have monitored the investigation but again within a very limited scope. There, on the other a duty is cast upon the Prosecutor to ensure that rights of an accused are not infringed and he gets a fair chance to put forward his defence so as to ensure that a guilty does not go scot-free while an innocent is not punished. Even in the might of the State the rights of an accused cannot be undermined, he must be tried in consonance with the provisions of the constitutional mandate. The cumulative effect of this constitutional philosophy is that both the courts and the investigating agency should operate in their own independent fields while ensuring adherence to basic rule of law. (Para 198)

It is pertinent to note here that one of the established canons of just, fair and transparent investigation is the right of defence of an accused. An accused may be entitled to ask for certain documents during the course of enquiry/trial by the court. (Para 203)

It is not only the responsibility of the investigating agency but as well as that of the courts to ensure that investigation is fair and does not in any way hamper the freedom of an individual except in accordance with law. Equally enforceable canon of the criminal law is that the high responsibility lies upon the investigating agency not to conduct an investigation in tainted and unfair manner. The investigation should not prima facie be indicative of a biased mind and every effort should be made to bring the guilty to law as nobody stands above law dehors his position and influence in the society. (Para 199)

The courts have even declined to accept the report submitted by the investigating officer where it is glaringly unfair and offends basic canons of criminal investigation and jurisprudence. Contra veritatem lex nunquam aliquid permittit: implies a duty on the court to accept and accord its approval only to a report which is the result of faithful and fruitful investigation. The court is not to accept the report which is contra legem but to ensure that the investigating agencies conduct judicious and fair investigation and submit a report in accordance with Section 173 of the Code which places a burden and obligation on the State Administration. The aim of criminal justice is two-fold. Severely punishing and really or sufficiently preventing the crime. Both these objects can be achieved only by fair investigation into the commission of crime, sincerely proving the case of the prosecution before the court and the guilty is punished in accordance with law. (Para 200)

Historically but consistently the view of the Supreme Court has been that an investigation must be fair and effective, must proceed in proper direction in consonance with the ingredients of the offence and not in haphazard manner. In some cases besides investigation being effective the accused may have to prove miscarriage of justice but once it is shown the accused would be entitled to definite benefit in accordance with law. The investigation should be conducted in a manner so as to draw a just balance between citizen's right under Articles 19 and 21 and expansive power of police to make investigation. (Para 201). Manu Sharma v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 6 SCC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and Swatanter Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision : 19-4-2010]

Kashmeri Devi v. Delhi Admn., 1988 Supp SCC 482: 1988 SCC (Cri) 864; Sasi Thomas v. State, (2006) 12 SCC 421: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 72; State (Inspector of Police) v. Surya Sankaram Karri, (2006) 7 SCC 172: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 225; T.T. Antony v. State of Kerala, (2001) 6 SCC 181: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1048; Nirmal Singh Kahlon v. State of Punjab, (2009) 1 SCC 441: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 523, relied on

(2) Authority that may investigate and Role of court

Synopsis

(i) Generally 397
(ii) Police 401
(iii) Other Agencies (including CBI) 403
(iv) Ss. 156 and 202 — Relative scope 408
(v) Transfer of investigation 410

See also CONSTITUTION OF INDIA, Arts. 32, 136 and 226 in Vol. 7, Vol. 8 and Vol. 9, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn., respectively

See also Sections 155 to 159, '(5) Refusal to investigate or Improper investigation — Monitoring of investigation and Role of court', and

'(6) Power under Section 156(3) — Nature and Scope', below

See also Section 154, '(4) Powers, Role and Duty of police in respect of FIR', and

'(5) Interference by court', above

(i) Generally

[1310] — Ss. 156 and 190 — Power to investigate an offence, held, is exclusively reserved for police — Restrictions on said power, if any — Power of court to change IO — Held, though the said power is unfettered, it must be legitimately exercised in strict compliance with the provisions under Ch. XII CrPC

The investigation of an offence is the field exclusively reserved for the police officers whose powers in that field are unfettered so long as the power to investigate into the cognizable offences is legitimately exercised in strict compliance with the provisions under Chapter XII CrPC. However, unfettered discretion does not mean any unaccountable or unlimited discretion and act according to one's own choice. The power to investigate must be exercised strictly on the condition of which that power is granted by CrPC itself. (Para 39)

Therefore, the High Court in exercise of its inherent jurisdiction cannot change the investigating officer in the midstream and appoint any agency of its own choice to investigate into a crime on whatsoever basis and more particularly on the basis of complaints or anonymous petitions addressed to a named Judge. Such communications cannot be converted into suo motu proceedings for setting the law in motion. Neither the accused nor the complainant or informant is entitled to choose its own investigating agency to investigate a crime in which it may be interested. (Para 40)

In the present case, the contents of the petition submitted by the victim and also the allegations made in the anonymous complaint reveal no cause for issuing directions relieving the investigating officer of his statutory power and duty to investigate the crime in question. Neither has the anonymous petition nor the complaint made by the victim been directed against the investigating officer complaining of any bias or any attempt on his part to destroy the available evidence. It is difficult to discern the basis for arriving at the conclusion that the entire attempt of the investigating officer was to exonerate the accused and make the complainant as the accused. The investigation was in progress as is evident from the case diary. The special investigation team also proceeded on the same lines as that of the investigating officer and similar observations as the one made by the investigating officer are found in the report of the special investigation team. (Paras 34, 35 and 37). Divine Retreat Centre v. State of Kerala, (2008) 3 SCC 542: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 9: AIR 2008 SC 1614: (2008) 1 KLT 1042: 2008 Cri LJ 1891.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.H. Kapadia and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-2008]

(2)(i) Authority that may investigate and Role of court - Generally (contd.)

Emperor v. Khwaja Nazir Ahmad, AIR 1945 PC 18; S.N. Sharma v. Bipen Kumar Tiwari, (1970) 1 SCC 653: 1970 SCC (Cri) 258; State of Bihar v. J.A.C. Saldanha, (1980) 1 SCC 554: 1980 SCC (Cri) 272; M.C. Abraham v. State of Maharashtra, (2003) 2 SCC 649: 2003 SCC (Cri) 628; State of W.B. v. S.N. Basak, AIR 1963 SC 447: (1963) 2 SCR 52; Hazari Lal Gupta v. Rameshwar Prasad, (1972) 1 SCC 452: 1972 SCC (Cri) 208; Nirmaljit Singh Hoon v. State of W.B., (1973) 3 SCC 753: 1973 SCC (Cri) 521, relied on

M.C. Mehta (Taj Corridor Scam) v. Union of India, (2007) 1 SCC 110: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 264, considered

CBI v. Ravi Shankar Srivastava, (2006) 7 SCC 188: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 233; Popular Muthiah v. State, (2006) 7 SCC 296: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 245; State of Karnataka v. L. Muniswamy, (1977) 2 SCC 699: 1977 SCC (Cri) 404, distinguished [1311] — Ss. 156(2) and 156(1) — Unassailability of investigation started under S. 156(1) — Nature and effect of protection afforded under S. 156(2) — Held, S. 156(2) ensures that once an investigation is commenced under S. 156(1), the same is not interrupted on the ground that police officer was not empowered to investigate — S. 156(2) is in the nature of a "saving clause" in respect of investigations undertaken in respect of cognizable offences (Para 24). Rasiklal Dalpatram Thakkar v. State of Gujarat, (2010) 1 SCC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-11-2009]

[1312] — S. 156 — Circumstances warranting interference — Breach of fundamental rights — Allegations of corruption against incumbent Chief Minister — Held, writ court can play corrective role where there is apathy, partiality, obstruction in investigation process, destruction of evidence or undue pressure from powerful interests, when a specific violation of fundamental rights is shown — In all of these circumstances, the writ court can only play a corrective role to ensure that the integrity of the investigation is not compromised — However, writ court cannot order initiation of investigation — Such a role lies in the domain of executive — The allegations came within ambit of PC Act, 1988, and investigating agencies such as State police, CBI or CVC could be moved for this purpose — Complainant has in the first instance to take resort to statutory remedies under law and only after exhausting such remedies, he can move writ court, that too the High Court first instead of directly approaching Supreme Court — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 13 — Constitution of India — Arts. 32 and 226 (Paras 16 to 18). Kunga Nima Lepcha v. State of Sikkim, (2010) 4 SCC 513.

Bench Strength 3. Coram : K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and P. Sathasivam and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision : 25-3-2010]

Vineet Narain v. Union of India, (1998) 1 SCC 226: 1998 SCC (Cri) 307, relied on

[1313] — Ss. 156, 157, 169, 173 and 190 — Powers of court during investigation — While investigation is in progress, court cannot direct the investigating agency to submit a report in accordance with the court's own view — On facts held, High Court exceeded its jurisdiction under Art. 226 in directing the investigating officer to submit a charge-sheet — Constitution of India — Art. 226

It is for the investigating agency to submit a report to the Magistrate after full and complete investigation. The investigating agency may submit a report finding the allegations substantiated. It is also open to the investigating agency to submit a report finding no material to support the allegations made in the first information report. It is open to the Magistrate concerned to accept the report or to order further enquiry. But while it is open to the High Court, in appropriate cases, to give directions for prompt investigation etc. the High Court cannot direct the investigating agency to submit a report that is in accord with its views as that would amount to unwarranted interference with the investigation of the case by inhibiting the exercise of statutory power by the investigating agency. Even in a case where a report is submitted by the investigating agency finding that no case is made out for prosecution, it is open to the Magistrate to disagree with the report and to take cognizance, but what he cannot do is to direct the investigating agency to submit a report to the effect that the allegations have been supported by the material collected during the course of investigation. (Para 17)

In the instant case the investigation is in progress. It is the statutory duty of the investigating agency to fully investigate the matter and then submit a report to the Magistrate concerned. The Magistrate will thereafter proceed to pass appropriate order in accordance with law. It was not appropriate for the High Court in these circumstances to issue a direction that the case should not only be investigated, but a charge-sheet must be submitted. The High Court exceeded its jurisdiction in making this direction which deserves to be set aside. (Paras 17 and 18)

In the circumstances, therefore, the direction contained in the order of the High Court dated 10-1-2002 directing the arrest of the appellants is set aside. The direction made by the High Court directing the investigating agency to submit a charge-sheet is also set aside. However, the investigating agency must promptly take all necessary steps, conclude the investigation and submit its report to the Magistrate concerned. It is open to the investigating agency to submit such report as it considers appropriate, having regard to the facts and circumstances of the case and result of the investigation. After such a final report is submitted by the investigating agency, the Magistrate concerned will proceed to deal with the matter further in accordance with law without being influenced by any observation made by the High Court in the impugned orders. (Para 19). M.C. Abraham v. State of Maharashtra, (2003) 2 SCC 649: 2003 SCC (Cri) 628.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-12-2002]

State of Bihar v. J.A.C. Saldanha, (1980) 1 SCC 554: 1980 SCC (Cri) 272; King Emperor v. Khwaja Nazir Ahmad, (1944) 71 IA 203: AIR 1945 PC 18; S.N. Sharma v. Bipen Kumar Tiwari, (1970) 1 SCC 653: 1970 SCC (Cri) 258; Abhinandan Jha v. Dinesh Mishra, AIR 1968 SC 117: 1968 Cri LJ 97, relied on

[1314] — S. 156 — PIL — Interference with investigation — Scope and parameters, reiterated — Held, directions that may be passed are essentially to ensure performance of statutory duty by the investigating agency — Constitution of India — Arts. 226 and 32

The impugned order must be held to be an order passed overstepping the limits of judicial interference. Even in public interest litigation proceedings, appropriate directions may be issued and the purpose in issuing such directions is essentially to ensure performance of statutory duty by the investigating agency. The duty of the court in such proceedings is to ensure that the agencies do their duties in compliance with law. (Paras 28 and 29). D. Venkatasubramaniam v. M.K. Mohan Krishnamachari, (2009) 10 SCC 488: (2009) 82 AIC 245 (SC): (2009) 3 APLJ 205 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-2009]

[1315] — Ss. 156, 165 and 173 — Court's power to interfere in and during investigation — Propriety of and maintainability of, order passed — In the present case, Metropolitan Magistrate directing IO to add S. 307 IPC and investigate the matter — High Court also upholding the order passed by court below — Applying the decision in M.C. Abraham case, (2003) 2 SCC 649, held, order of High Court unsustainable and hence, set aside — Liberty given to IO to file fresh charge-sheet on the basis of material collected during investigation (Paras 6 and 7). Shariff Ahmed v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2009) 14 SCC 184: AIR 2009 SC 2691.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-4-2009]

M.C. Abraham v. State of Maharashtra, (2003) 2 SCC 649: 2003 SCC (Cri) 628, applied

[1316] — Ss. 156, 157, 170, 173(8) and 190 — Powers of court during investigation — Crime detection and crime punishment have clearly demarcated spheres of activity — Investigation proceedings by police ends only when Magistrate takes cognizance of offence and courts should not interfere prior to that stage unless there is gross abuse of power — Constitution of India — Art. 226. State of Bihar v. J.A.C. Saldanha, (1980) 1 SCC 554: 1980 SCC (Cri) 272: AIR 1980 SC 326: 1980 Cri LJ 98: 1980 MLJ (Cri) 382: (1980) 17 ACC 279: (1980) 28 BLJR 18.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria, D.A. Desai and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-11-1979]

[1317] — Ss. 156(3), 154, 190, 200 and 203 — Invocation of writ jurisdiction bypassing these provisions — When proper — Held, although there are adequate remedies provided under CrPC for person aggrieved by inaction on part of police or who is not getting proper response, and that it is for such person to seek relief with aid of those provisions but, held, as instant case (involving communal riots) is an "extraordinary case", hence, writ petition under Art. 226 by Respondent 1 was warranted — Constitution of India — Art. 226

After the demolition of Babri Masjid on 6-12-1992, communal riots occurred in various parts of the country including Mumbai. At the material time, Respondent 2 was a PSI. On 10-1-1993, Respondent 2 and his staff, while on patrol duty, received a message from Wireless Control Room, that a mob of 2000 to 2500 people armed with deadly weapons is resorting to rioting and arson near Hari Masjid, Sewree, Bombay and, therefore, Respondent 2 rushed to the site. The DCP also arrived at the site and tried to control the mob in order to restore peace. However, the mob turned more violent and even started attacking the police by resorting to firing from the side of Hari Masjid. Therefore, in order to maintain law and order and to save innocent people, the DCP ordered Respondent 2 to open fire. In obedience to the orders of the superior police officer, Respondent 2 and his staff opened fire, which resulted in the death of six persons.

In respect of the said incident, FIR came to be lodged on 10-1-1993 under Sections 143 to 149, 151, 153-B and 307 IPC read with Sections 3 and 25, Arms Act, 1959, and under Section 37(i), Bombay Police Act, against 50 accused persons and about 2000-2400 unknown wanted accused persons and Respondent 1 was specifically named in the FIR. After completion of the investigation, charge-sheet came to be filed before the competent court and as far as Respondent 1 was concerned, the trial against him was separated by court's order dated 5-8-2005.

(2)(i) Authority that may investigate and Role of court - Generally (contd.)

On 5-8-2006, Respondent 1 filed a complaint and sought registration of FIR against Respondent 2 and other police officers in respect of the Hari Masjid incident. On 1-8-2007, Respondent 1 filed writ petition before the High Court and sought a writ of mandamus directing the Government to prosecute Respondent 2. By the impugned order dated 18-12-2008, the High Court allowed the writ petition by treating the writ petition as public interest litigation and directed CBI to register the case and investigate the said incident. Challenging the said order, the State filed this present appeal.

The main grievances of the State with regard to entrusting the investigation to CBI were as follows:

(i) Since, the Supreme Court was seized of the same matter in issue by entertaining two writ petitions under Article 32 and pending decision, the High Court ought not to have exercised jurisdiction under Article 226.

(ii) The State itself had constituted Special Task Force (STF) and proceeded with the investigation.

(iii) When adequate remedy was available under CrPC, the writ petition under Article 226 before the High Court was not the proper remedy and the High Court ought not to have entertained the same.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

As regards the second objection, by a Gazette Notification dated 25-1-1993, the State had appointed a Commission headed by Justice B.N. Srikrishna to enquire into the riots and various incidents which occurred during the riots in Mumbai. The Report of the Commission was published on 16-12-1998. The High Court had also noted the Commission's finding about the role of Respondent 2 in the Hari Masjid incident which was referred to in the Commission's Report and in the High Court's order. The STF only proceeded on the basis of the version given by the police witnesses. The High Court had observed that it is completely one-sided investigation and it is difficult to countenance an investigation where the statement of none of the injured witnesses was recorded and which was confined to reaching a conclusion on the basis of the statements of the police officers who were present at the time of incident, when the Commission had prima facie indicted that some of these officers have committed serious offences. In view of the factual opinion about the investigation of the STF by the Commission, there is no error in the decision of the High Court in ordering investigation by a special agency like CBI. Accordingly, the second contention is also rejected. (Paras 16 to 18)

Coming to the last submission, if any person is aggrieved by the inaction on part of the police or not getting proper response, there are adequate remedies provided under CrPC and it is for such person to seek relief with the aid of those provisions. However, in the case on hand, in view of the demolition of Babri Masjid on 6-12-1992, and riots in various places all over India including Mumbai on 10-1-1993, specific allegation in the complaint of Respondent 1, who was an affected person, coupled with the findings of the Srikrishna Commission accepted by the State, about how the STF conducted investigation and further assertion that the State Police did not examine the injured witnesses who were available at the spot and suffered a lot, it is an "extraordinary case" and Respondent 1 herein is fully justified in approaching the High Court seeking extraordinary jurisdiction for direction for entrusting the investigation to independent and special agency like CBI. Accordingly, the last contention is also rejected. (Paras 24 and 25)

Moreover, after the Notification of the Government dated 7-2-2008, consenting CBI to investigate the incident relating to Hari Masjid, it is not understandable as to the opposition of the direction of the High Court ordering CBI inquiry. (Para 26)

About the direction by the High Court, in exercise of its jurisdiction under Article 226, requesting CBI to investigate a cognizable offence within the territory of a State without its consent, it is held that in order to protect civil liberties, fundamental rights and more particularly Article 21, the Supreme Court and High Courts can very well exercise the power, which, no doubt, must be exercised sparingly, cautiously and in exceptional situations. (Para 29)

In the light of the above discussion, the stand of the State is not accepted and the High Court was right in ordering investigation by CBI. Taking note of the fact that the incident related to 1993 and also of the fact that CBI has already examined several persons, it is directed that CBI would continue and complete the investigation into the incident and file a final report to the Court concerned within a period of six months. (Para 30). State of Maharashtra v. Farook Mohammed Kasim Mapkar, (2010) 8 SCC 582.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and , JJ. [Date of decision : 30-7-2010]

Gangadhar Janardan Mhatre v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 7 SCC 768: 2005 SCC (Cri) 404; Hari Singh v. State of U.P., (2006) 5 SCC 733: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 63; Aleque Padamsee v. Union of India, (2007) 6 SCC 171: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 1, considered

State of W.B. v. Committee for Protection of Democratic Rights, (2010) 3 SCC 571: (2010) 2 SCC (Cri) 401, relied on [1318] — Ss. 157 & 155 and 41 to 44 & 46 and Ss. 437 to 439 — Investigation and arrest — Scope of judicial interference — Held, role of investigator is well defined and the jurisdictional scope of interference by court in process of investigation is limited — Court ordinarily will not interfere with the investigation of a crime or with the arrest of the accused in a cognizable offence — Constitution of India — Arts. 226 and 136 (Para 19). Adri Dharan Das v. State of W.B., (2005) 4 SCC 303: 2005 SCC (Cri) 933: AIR 2005 SC 1057: (2005) 117 DLT 686: (2005) 2 Mah LJ 259: 2005 Cri LJ 1706.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-2-2005]

[1319] — Ss. 157, 156, 165 and 482 — Stay of investigations — Interference by court with investigation justified only if by not doing so will result in miscarriage of justice — Hence routine police investigations should not be stayed by court, more so on mere oral petitions — Constitution of India — Article 136

Save in exceptional cases where non-interference would result in miscarriage of justice, the Court and the judicial process should not interfere at the stage of investigation of offences. In a routine case where information of an offence or offences has been lodged, investigation commenced, search and seizure followed and suspects arrested. Resort to the unusual procedure of oral applications and oral appeals and interim stay order thereon would have the effect of interfering and staying the investigation of offences by investigating officer performing statutory duty under CrPC. Eastern Spg. Mills v. Rajiv Poddar, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 385: AIR 1985 SC 1668.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: D.A. Desai, V. Balakrishna Eradi and R.B. Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-1984]

See also State of W.B. v. Sampat Lal, (1985) 1 SCC 317

(ii) Police

[1320] — S. 156 — Investigation by complainant police officer himself — Validity of — Nothing pointed out to show that the said investigation has caused prejudice or was biased against the accused — Hence, held, valid — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — S. 8(c) r/w S. 20(b)(ii)

The appellants were found guilty of offences under Section 8(c) read with Section 20(b)(ii) of the NDPS Act. They were found in possession of narcotic drug (hashish). The case was registered against the appellants on the basis of the statement of PW 8 (Inspector) who had conducted the search. Before the Supreme Court, it was argued that PW 8 was the complainant and he himself conducted the investigation and hence the entire investigation of the case was vitiated.

Dismissing the appeals,

Held :

In the instant case, PW 8 conducted the search and recovered the contraband article and registered the case. Thereafter as part of his official duty he investigated the case and filed a charge-sheet. He was not in any way personally interested in the case. There is no bias in the process of investigation. The appellants also could not point out any circumstances by which the investigation caused prejudice or was biased against them. The appellants were thus rightly convicted and sentenced by the courts below. (Paras 3 and 4). S. Jeevanantham v. State, (2004) 5 SCC 230: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1584.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-2004]

Megha Singh v. State of Haryana, (1996) 11 SCC 709: 1997 SCC (Cri) 267, impliedly distinguished

State v. V. Jayapaul, (2004) 5 SCC 223, followed

[1321] — Ss. 156, 154, 173 and 482 — Investigation by the same police officer who lodged the FIR — Held, not barred by law — If at all, such investigation could only be assailed on the ground of bias or real likelihood of bias on the part of IO — The question of bias would depend on the facts and circumstances of each case — Not proper to lay down a broad and unqualified proposition that such investigation necessarily would be unfair or biased — Inspector of Police, Vigilance & Anti-Corruption (appellant) receiving information about commission of offences in question — Hence, he preparing the FIR and registering the crime — Thereafter, investigating the matter and submitting a final report to the court — Held, said investigation not vitiated on the ground of bias or the like factor — High Court erred in quashing the proceedings on the said ground

On receiving information that the respondent was indulging in corrupt practices by extracting money from the drivers and owners of the motor vehicles while conducting check of the vehicles and making use of certain bogus notice forms in the process, the Inspector of Police (Vigilance & Anti-Corruption), Tiruchirapalli prepared the first information report and registered the crime under Sections 420 and 201 IPC and Section 13(2) read with Section 13(1)(d) of the Prevention of

(2)(ii) Authority that may investigate and Role of court - Police (contd.)

Corruption Act, 1988. He then proceeded to take up investigation, gathered information, examined the witnesses and filed the charge- sheet in the court. The respondent was implicated for the offences under Sections 465, 468 IPC and Sections 7 and 13(2) read with Section 13(1)(d) of the PC Act. The respondent then moved the High Court of Madras to quash the said proceedings. The ground on which the High Court quashed the proceedings was that the investigation by the very same police officer who registered the case by lodging the first information would cause prejudice to the accused.

Allowing the appeal and setting aside the impugned order of the High Court,

Held :

There is nothing in the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code which precluded the appellant from taking up the investigation. The fact that the said police officer prepared the FIR on the basis of the information received by him and registered the suspected crime does not disqualify him from taking up the investigation of the cognisable offence. A suo motu move on the part of the police officer to investigate a cognisable offence impelled by the information received from some sources is not outside the purview of the provisions contained in Sections 154 to 157 of the Code or any other provisions of the Code. (Para 4)

There is no principle or binding authority to hold that the moment the competent police officer, on the basis of information received, makes out an FIR incorporating his name as the informant, he forfeits his right to investigate. If at all, such investigation could only be assailed on the ground of bias or real likelihood of bias on the part of the investigating officer. The question of bias would depend on the facts and circumstances of each case and it is not proper to lay down a broad and unqualified proposition, in the manner in which it has been done by the High Court, that whenever a police officer proceeds to investigate after registering the FIR on his own, the investigation would necessarily be unfair or biased. (Para 6)

In the present case, the police officer received certain discreet information, which, according to his assessment, warranted a probe and therefore he made up his mind to investigate. The formality of preparing the FIR in which he records the factum of having received the information about the suspected commission of the offence and then taking up the investigation after registering the crime, does not, by any semblance of reasoning, vitiate the investigation on the ground of bias or the like factor. If the reason which weighed with the High Court could be a ground to quash the prosecution, the powers of investigation conferred on the police officers would be unduly hampered for no good reason. What is expected to be done by the police officers in the normal course of discharge of their official duties will then be vulnerable to attack. Thus, there is no illegality in the process of investigation set in motion by the appellant police officer and his action in submitting the final report to the Court of Special Judge. (Paras 6 and 13). State v. V. Jayapaul, (2004) 5 SCC 223: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1607: 2004 Cri LJ 1819.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ruma Pal and P. Venkatarama Reddi, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-3-2004]

State of U.P. v. Bhagwant Kishore Joshi, AIR 1964 SC 221: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 140, relied on

Megha Singh v. State of Haryana, (1996) 11 SCC 709: 1997 SCC (Cri) 267; Bhagwan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, (1976) 1 SCC 15: 1975 SCC (Cri) 737, explained and distinguished on facts

[1322] — Ss. 156 and 161 — Investigation by the very police officer who lodged the complaint — Held, not conducive to fair and impartial investigation — Appellant apprehended by Constables PWs 2 and 3 and a pistol and live cartridges without any licence recovered from him — Evidence of PWs 2 and 3 discrepant regarding the number of cartridges recovered and as to the place from where the pistol was recovered — No other independent witness examined — Nevertheless, the designated court convicting the appellant under S. 6(1) of TADA and S. 25 of Arms Act — Held, the evidence did not inspire confidence — Further, it was on the complaint of PW 3 that a formal FIR was lodged — He being the complainant, PW 3 should not have proceeded with the investigation himself — Such practice against fair and impartial investigation — Conviction therefore set aside — TADA Act, 1987 — S. 6(1) — Arms Act, 1959 — S. 25. Megha Singh v. State of Haryana, (1996) 11 SCC 709: 1997 SCC (Cri) 267: AIR 1995 SC 2339.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-2-1995]

[1323] — S. 156 — Investigation by the complainant Head Constable himself of offence of offering bribe — Held, improper — S. 165-A, IPC. Bhagwan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, (1976) 1 SCC 15: 1975 SCC (Cri) 737: AIR 1976 SC 985: 1976 Cri LJ 713.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, P.N. Bhagwati and R.S. Sarkaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-8-1975]

[1324] — Ss. 156 and 198 — Dowry death — Investigation directed to be proceeded with by an officer not below the rank of S.P. — Mandamus to the concerned States — Constitution of India — Art. 32. Jt. Women's Programme v. State of Rajasthan, 1987 Supp SCC 707: AIR 1987 SC 2060.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.P. Thakkar and B.C. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-3-1987]

[1325] — Ss. 156 and 198 — Dowry death — State Government directed to create a Special Dowry Cell associating one or two leading women Social Workers. Jt. Women's Programme v. State of Rajasthan, 1987 Supp SCC 707: AIR 1987 SC 2060.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.P. Thakkar and B.C. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-3-1987]

(iii) Other Agencies (including CBI)

See also CONSTITUTION OF INDIA, Arts. 32, 136 and 226 in Vol. 7, Vol. 8 and Vol. 9, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn., respectively

[1326] — Ss. 156 & 157 and 190, 200 & 203 — CBI enquiry — Writ petition seeking Court's direction to conduct enquiry by CBI into murder of petitioner's son, no action having been taken by police on FIR lodged by him — Held, cannot be entertained in view of relevant provisions of CrPC — Constitution of India — Art. 32

When the information is laid with the police, but no action in that behalf is taken, the complainant can under Section 190 read with Section 200 of the Code lay the complaint before the Magistrate having jurisdiction to take cognizance of the offence and the Magistrate is required to enquire into the complaint as provided in Chapter XV of the Code. In case the Magistrate after recording evidence finds a prima facie case, instead of issuing process to the accused, he is empowered to direct the police concerned to investigate into the offence under Chapter XII of the Code and to submit a report. If he finds that the complaint does not disclose any offence to take further action, he is empowered to dismiss the complaint under Section 203 of the Code. In case he finds that the complaint/evidence recorded prima facie discloses an offence, he is empowered to take cognizance of the offence and would issue process to the accused. A writ petition in such cases is not to be entertained. It is the case of the petitioner that he is under constant threat by some persons and his life and property are in danger. If he seeks any protection, it is the duty of the police officials concerned to provide such security as is warranted in the circumstances in accordance with law. (Paras 4 to 6). Hari Singh v. State of U.P., (2006) 5 SCC 733: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 63: AIR 2006 SC 2464: (2006) 130 DLT 591: (2006) 3 KLT 269: (2006) 5 All LJ 345: 2006 Cri LJ 3283.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-6-2006]

All India Institute of Medical Sciences Employees' Union (Regd.) v. Union of India, (1996) 11 SCC 582: 1997 SCC (Cri) 303; Gangadhar Janardan Mhatre v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 7 SCC 768: 2005 SCC (Cri) 404; Minu Kumari v. State of Bihar, (2006) 4 SCC 359: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 310, relied on

Applied in Aleque Padamsee v. Union of India, (2007) 6 SCC 171

[1327] — S. 156 — Criminal law can be set in motion by anybody — Hence prosecution initiated by CBI instead of bank or financial institution whose money was subject-matter of offence, held, not improper — Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (Central Act 25 of 1946)

The officials of UCO Bank and National Housing Bank who helped Harshad Mehta (since deceased) in siphoning off public money of Rs 40 crores were also charged for criminal breach of trust, apart from being charged for criminal conspiracy.

Held :

It is not the law that complaint petition under all circumstances must be made by banks and financial institutions whose money had been the subject-matter of offence. It is also not the law that suffering of loss is a sine qua non for recording a judgment of conviction. Criminal law can be set in motion by anybody. The prosecution was initiated on the basis of information received by Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI). CBI is entitled to do so not only in regard to its statutory powers contained in the Delhi Special Police Act but it was also entitled to take cognizance in terms of the report submitted by the Janakiraman Committee. The money involved in transfer is public money belonging to public sector banks. If transaction was illegal, as a result whereof, a private person, who was not expected to reap fruits of "call money" was allowed to retain the same for a period to make an unlawful gain therefrom, offence of criminal breach of trust must be held to have been committed. It is for the same reason the submission that as nobody ultimately suffered any loss, an offence under Section 409 of the Penal Code was not made out, cannot be accepted. A bank or financial institution may not suffer ultimate loss but if money has been allowed to be used by another person illegally for illegal purpose, ingredients of Section 405 of the Penal Code would get attracted. A case involving temporary embezzlement also attracts ingredients of Section 405 of the Penal Code. (Paras 150, 152 and 153). R. Venkatkrishnan v. CBI, (2009) 11 SCC 737.

(2)(iii) Authority that may investigate and Role of court - Other Agencies (including CBI) (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

[1328] — Ss. 156 and 154 — Investigation by complainant — Propriety — Held, there is no legal bar — Merely because the complainant conducted the investigation, that would not be sufficient to cast doubt on the prosecution version to hold that the same makes the prosecution version vulnerable — Matter has to be decided on a case-to-case basis without any universal generalisation (Para 8). Bhaskar Ramappa Madar v. State of Karnataka, (2009) 11 SCC 690: 2009 Cri LJ 2422.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-2009]

Bhagwan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, (1976) 1 SCC 15: 1976 SCC (Cri) 737; Megha Singh v. State of Haryana, (1996) 11 SCC 709: 1997 SCC (Cri) 267, limited to facts of case

[1329] — S. 156 — Investigation by CBI in cognizable offence which took place within territory of a State — Whether court can make order in respect of, without consent of State Govt. concerned — Held, said question was required to be settled by a larger Bench — Matter directed to be placed before Chief Justice of India for appropriate orders — Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (Central Act 25 of 1946) — Ss. 5 & 6 (Para 11). State of W.B. v. Committee for Protection of Democratic Rights, (2006) 12 SCC 534: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 100.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-11-2006]

Advance Insurance Co. v. Gurudasmal, (1970) 1 SCC 633: (1970) 3 SCR 881; Kazi Lhendup Dorji v. CBI, 1994 Supp (2) SCC 116: 1994 SCC (Cri) 873, distinguished

[1330] — Ss. 156 and 157 — Investigation by CBI into Cogentrix case/Police investigation — Held, cannot be ordered by High Court on the basis of mere suspicion — Cogentrix Mangalore power project case — Award of power project by State (Karnataka) to foreign company (Cogentrix) — Suspicion of receipt of kickbacks by authorities concerned based on mere surmise and conjecture — On such suspicion only and without analysing the rival submissions of the parties, held, High Court was not justified in directing the State Govt. to get an investigation done through CBI when neither specific crime nor persons involved in the crime nor place of crime is known — Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (Central Act 25 of 1946) — S. 4 — Constitution of India — Art. 226

The Central Electricity Authority conducted a power survey in India which indicated that the southern region including the State of Karnataka would face acute power shortage both in terms of peaking capacity as well as energy requirement. The National Thermal Power Corporation (for short "NTPC") in collaboration with the erstwhile USSR evinced interest in setting up a 2420 MW coal-fired super thermal power plant at the site at which KPCL had intended to set up a project. This proposed project was, therefore, entrusted to NTPC which also obtained clearance from the Department of Ecology and Environment and Forests, Government of Karnataka. However, the proposal to set up the project by NTPC with the aid from USSR did not materialise for various reasons including the disintegration of USSR. The Government of India invited Cogentrix Inc. established in USA to attend a seminar on the power sector in the month of June 1992 when the representatives of Cogentrix met the officials of the Karnataka Government and thereafter, Cogentrix forwarded a draft memorandum of understanding to the Government of India. The Government of Karnataka entered into MoUs with Cogentrix for setting up a 2 x 250 MW coal-based thermal power station at Mangalore and Bangalore. A detailed report of the tour made by the Chief Minister to USA, UK and Italy for holding discussions with different foreign companies was placed in the Cabinet meeting when it was also made known that two MoUs had been signed with M/s Cogentrix for thermal power projects at Mangalore and Bangalore, the details of which had been set out in the Cabinet note. On 19-11-1992, a new Government assumed office in the State of Karnataka headed by a new Chief Minister. Under the directions of the new Government, all MoUs signed by the previous Government were to be re-examined and brought before the Cabinet for its consideration again. The Chief Secretary of Government of Karnataka conducted meetings to review all MoUs which was attended by the senior officers of the Government such as the Additional Chief Secretary, the Finance Commissioner, Secretary to the Energy Minister, the Energy Secretary and Chairman, Karnataka Electricity Board. M/s Cogentrix thereafter requested the Government to extend the MoU and stating that due to siting difficulties at Bangalore it was agreed that the Bangalore project be deferred and that a 1000 MW project be developed at Mangalore. A Cabinet meeting was held and it was decided to permit the appellant to set up a 1000 MW thermal power plant at Mangalore to be implemented in three phases of 334 MW (each phase consisting of 2 units of 167 MW). This was widely publicised by publication in the Karnataka Gazette. Thereafter various steps were taken and in the meanwhile the Government of India, Secretariat for Industrial Approvals, Ministry of Industry, conveyed its approval to the proposal to set up the power plant in Mangalore to M/s Cogentrix and by an amendment made, China Light and Power was permitted by the Government of India to acquire equity holdings in the project. Thereupon, the Mangalore Power Company was incorporated under the Companies Act, 1956. Thereafter steps were taken to enter into a power purchase agreement. They also consulted Tata Energy Research Institute of India (TERI), GOPA of Germany and SAIC of USA. The power projects agreement, which incorporates the recommended configuration of 4 x 250 MW units, was signed between KEB and M/s Cogentrix Inc. The press release was made announcing entry of China Light and Power to Mangalore Power Plant. The power purchase agreement was placed before the State Legislature. A detailed project report was sent to the Central Electricity Authority in compliance with Sections 29, 30 and 31 of the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1948 for obtaining techno-economic clearance. A scheme was published in terms of Section 28 read with Section 29(2) of the Electricity (Supply) Act. The power purchase agreement stood revised and techno-economic clearance was issued by the Central Electricity Authority. And in the meanwhile the Govt. again changed in the State of Karnataka twice.

The respondents filed writ petitions in the High Court seeking investigation by appropriate agencies into the various allegations made by them and initiation of criminal proceedings against the guilty persons as per law. It was also prayed to set aside the power project entered by KEB with Mangalore Power Corporation (MPC) and reallot the power project through an open bidding process. The necessity for establishing a thermal power station was, in detail, considered by the High Court of Karnataka in Jana Jagruthi Samithi v. Union of India, (1991) 2 Kar LJ 524. The circumstance in which the Government of Karnataka took the decision to invite foreign investors, the manner in which it was done, was also the subject of consideration in Indian Council for Enviro-Legal Action v. Union of India, ILR 1997 Kant 2956 and the High Court rejected objections thereto which was not interfered with in SLP by the Supreme Court and thus that order became final.

However, the High Court by an order made on 27-2-1998 granted some of the reliefs sought for in the writ petition. It inter alia directed that: the State of Karnataka shall get an FIR registered with CBI under the provisions of the Delhi Special Police Establishment Act for various cognizable offences, without however, naming any person or group of persons as accused; and upon registration of the FIR, the Director General of CBI shall direct the investigation to be conducted by an officer under the supervision and control of an official not below the rank of Deputy Director General of CBI.

Allowing the appeals,

Held :

It is difficult to visualise that when an agreement had been entered into with a foreign company it has been done under suspicious circumstances, particularly when it had stood the test of scrutiny under three different Governments headed by at least three different Chief Ministers and when the examination of the project and its approval was considered by different statutory and other agencies of the Government of India. It cannot still be said that there had been kickbacks to any one of them or all of them in the matter of entering into a memorandum of understanding or in continuation of the same. The acts of persons will not be the subject of criminal investigation unless a crime is reported to have been committed or reasonable suspicion thereto arises. On mere conjecture or surmise as a flight of fancy that some crime might have been committed, somewhere, by somebody, but the crime is not known, the persons involved in it or the place of crime unknown, cannot be termed to be a reasonable basis at all for starting a criminal investigation. However condemnable be the nature or extent of corruption in the country, not all acts could be said to fall in that category. The attempt made by the High Court in this case appears to be in the nature of a blind shot fired in the dark without even knowing whether there is a prey at all. That may create sound and fury but not result in hunting down the prey. The High Court has looked at different circumstances in the case with a jaundiced eye, without giving due weight to the rival submissions made by the parties. The High Court has not at all analysed the contentions put forth by either party. Hardly any reasons are forthcoming in the order. What is stated by the writ petitioners and the respondents is summarised. When the High Court steers itself clear of expressing any opinion one way or the other even as to whether a prima facie case exists or not and whether there is a reasonable suspicion of any crime having been committed, it is difficult to accept the view taken by the High Court. (Para 16)

(2)(iii) Authority that may investigate and Role of court - Other Agencies (including CBI) (contd.)

Therefore, the order made by the High Court has got to be set aside, but this order will not preclude the parties concerned on finding appropriate material to place the same before any authorised agency to register the case and investigate the matter and, in the event there is any inaction on their part, may seek relief in an appropriate court. (Para 18). State of Karnataka v. Arun Kumar Agarwal, (2000) 1 SCC 210: 2000 SCC (Cri) 135: AIR 2000 SC 411.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and S. Rajendra Babu, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-12-1999]

Vineet Narain v. Union of India, (1996) 2 SCC 199: 1996 SCC (Cri) 264, distinguished

Arun Kumar Agrawal v. State of Karnataka, (1999) 1 Kant LJ 603, reversed

[1331] — S. 156 — Adroit financial manipulations — Investigation agency for — Finding the police and CBI to be not equipped to deal with cases of, hope expressed that Government would set up a cell having expertise to unravel and trace such frauds — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 25 and 409 (Para 28). Pramod Malhotra v. Union of India, (2004) 3 SCC 415: (2004) 120 Comp Cas 137: (2004) 111 DLT 605.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-2-2004]

[1332] — Ss. 156 and 173(8) — ISRO Espionage case — Withdrawal of the consent given under S. 6, Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 — Impermissibility — Investigation transferred and entrusted to CBI pursuant to the consent given by the State Government under S. 6 — CBI completing the investigation and submitting its report under S. 173(2) CrPC — Even at this stage withdrawal of the said consent by the State Government to enable the State Police to further investigate the case, held, patently invalid — S. 156 CrPC does not lead to a different conclusion — Even otherwise, on facts, the notification, held, mala fide — Rs 1 lakh each awarded as costs to the accused — Words and phrases — "Further" — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 34 — Official Secrets Act, 1923 — Ss. 3 and 4 — Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (Central Act 25 of 1946) — Ss. 6, 5(1) & (3), 2 and 3 and Preamble

On the complaint of a Police Inspector, a case was registered by the Kerala Police against M and F (appellants herein), for offences punishable under Sections 3 and 4 of the Official Secrets Act, 1923 read with Section 34 IPC on the allegation that in collusion with some Indians and foreigners they had committed acts prejudicial to the safety and sovereignty of India. During the investigation certain other persons (appellants in accompanying appeals) were arrested. Thereafter, a DIG of Police, who was the head of the team conducting the investigation, recommended the case for being investigated by the CBI. Pursuant to that recommendation the Government of Kerala by a notification dated 2-12-1994 accorded its consent under Section 6 of the Delhi Special Police Establishment Act ("Act" for short) to investigation of the case by the CBI. Accordingly, the CBI took up the investigation. After completion of the investigation, on 16-4-1996 the CBI filed its report in final form under Section 173(2) CrPC stating that the charges were not proved and were false. Accepting the report, the Magistrate discharged the accused-appellants. Thereafter on 27-6-1996 the Government of Kerala issued a notification withdrawing the consent earlier given to the CBI to investigate the said case. The object of the said notification was to enable a reinvestigation of the case by a team of State Police Officers. By an amendatory notification dated 8-7-1996, the words 'reinvestigation of the case' were substituted by the words 'further investigation of the case'. The State Government notification dated 27-6-1996 (as amended) was upheld by the High Court. The State opposed the instant appeals on the ground that under Section 156 CrPC parallel or simultaneous investigation by two different agencies was permissible. The State added that, unlike Kazi Lhendup Dorji case, in the instant case, as the CBI had already completed the investigation and submitted its report in final form and that therefore the State Government was fully justified in withdrawing the consent for making a proper investigation into the offence in question. Rejecting these contentions and allowing the appeals,

Held :

From Section 173 CrPC it is evident that even after submission of police report under sub-section (2) on completion of investigation, the police has a right of "further" investigation under sub-section (8) but not "fresh investigation" or "reinvestigation". The dictionary meaning of "further" (when used as an adjective) is "additional; more; supplemental". "Further" investigation therefore is the continuation of the earlier investigation and not a fresh investigation or reinvestigation to be started ab initio wiping out the earlier investigation altogether. This conclusion is supported also by the fact that sub-section (8) clearly envisages that on completion of further investigation the investigating agency has to forward to the Magistrate a "further" report or reports — and not fresh report or reports — regarding the "further" evidence obtained during such investigation. Once it is accepted that an investigation undertaken by CBI pursuant to a consent granted under Section 6 of the Act is to be completed, notwithstanding withdrawal of the consent, and that "further investigation" is a continuation of such investigation which culminates in a further police report under Section 173(8), it necessarily means that withdrawal of consent in the instant case would not entitle the State Police, to further investigate into the case. To put it differently, if any further investigation is to be made it is the CBI alone which can do so, for it was entrusted to investigate into the case by the State Government. Resultantly, the notification issued withdrawing the consent to enable the State Police to further investigate into the case is patently invalid and unsustainable in law.

Moreover, even assuming that the State Government had the requisite power and authority to issue the impugned notification, still the same would be liable to be quashed on the ground of mala fide exercise of power. Eloquent proof thereof is furnished by the following facts and circumstances as appearing on the record:

(i) Since the DIG had recommended the case to be transferred to the CBI on the grounds that: (a) the incidents of the case were spread over several States; (b) that State police might not be able to interrogate senior military personnel whose complicity was very likely; and (c) that the case was fit for being transferred to the CBI, it is not conceivable that the State Government would be able to pursue the investigation effectively as those impediments would still be there. The State's contention that its police officers, with the assistance of related organisations of the Central Government, could carry on effective and purposeful investigation cannot be accepted as the Central Government was satisfied with the report of the CBI and no affidavit was filed by the Central Government or any of those organisations to support the State's contention.

(ii) If the State Government found that the conclusions drawn by the CBI were not proper, the only course left to the State Government, was to ask the Central Government to take a different view of the materials collected during investigation and persuade it to lodge a complaint in accordance with Section 13 of the Official Secrets Act.

(iii) Though the investigation of the case centered round espionage activities in ISRO no complaint was made by it to that effect nor did it raise any grievance on that score.

(iv) In view of the stand taken by the Government of India, any further investigation by the State Government would be an exercise in futility.

(v) Though the duty of the investigating agency is not merely to bolster up a prosecution case with such evidence as may enable the Court to record a conviction but to bring out the real unvarnished truth, yet the Kerala Government wants the instant case to be further investigated by a team nominated by it with the avowed object of establishing that the accused-appellants are guilty, even after the investigating agency of its choice, the CBI, found that no case had been made out against them. If before taking up further investigation an opinion has already been formed regarding the guilt of the accused and, that too, at a stage when the commission of the offence itself is yet to be proved, it is obvious that the investigation cannot and will not be fair — and its outcome appears to be a foregone conclusion. K. Chandrasekhar v. State of Kerala, (1998) 5 SCC 223: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1291: AIR 1998 SC 2001: 1998 Cri LJ 2897.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-1998]

Kazi Lhendup Dorji v. Central Bureau of Investigation, 1994 Supp (2) SCC 116: 1994 SCC (Cri) 873; Jamuna Chaudhary v. State of Bihar, (1974) 3 SCC 774: 1974 SCC (Cri) 250, relied on

Explained and distinguished in State of A.P. v. A.S. Peter, (2008) 2 SCC 383*

[1333] — S. 156 — Investigating agency — Communal riots in the State of Gujarat — Post-Godhra riot cases — Investigation by SIT — Progress by SIT, reviewed — In view of thoroughness of discharge of duties by SIT in these cases, SIT directed to continue investigation until completion of trial in all the cases — SIT to complete pending investigations or any further investigation that may arise in course of trials — SIT further directed to file supplementary charge-sheets in the cases concerned where SIT had found further material and/or identified other accused — Chairman SIT, to keep track of progress of trials and to submit quarterly reports to Supreme Court — SIT also permitted to move Supreme Court for any further directions found necessary [Paras 4 and 40(i), (vii), (x), (xi) & (xiii)]. NHRC v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 767.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, P. Sathasivam and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2009]

NHRC v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 342: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 1055, referred to

(2)(iii) Authority that may investigate and Role of court - Other Agencies (including CBI) (contd.)

[1334] — Ss. 156 and 173 — State police/investigating agencies — Scope — CID, held, is not a different investigating agency but a part of the investigating authorities of the State

Section 36 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 empowers a police officer, superior in rank to an officer in charge of a police station, to exercise the same powers throughout the local area to which they are appointed, as may be exercised by such officer within the limits of his police station. It is not correct to contend that the investigation was taken up by a different agency. CID is a part of the investigating authorities of the State. It was, therefore, permissible for the higher authority to carry out or direct further investigation in the matter. (Paras 11, 12 and 18). State of A.P. v. A.S. Peter, (2008) 2 SCC 383: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 427: AIR 2008 SC 1052.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-12-2007]

[1335] — S. 156 — Investigation by CB CID — Direction for — When warranted — Offences of cheating, criminal misappropriation, etc. occurring at several places within the State concerned and also in other States — High Court transferring investigation from Calcutta to State of U.P. without specifying any particular police station for that purpose — On these facts, held, investigating officer attached to one police station may feel handicapped in carrying out the investigation within the entire State — Further, it may also be necessary to investigate the matter even in other States — Hence, in such a case, investigation directed to be carried out by CB CID of the State concerned

The order passed by the Allahabad High Court has been complied with. Some offences at various places situated within the State of U.P. had been committed. The High Court had not issued any direction as to which investigating officer attached to which police station of U.P. will have jurisdiction in the matter. The direction of the High Court, in that way is vague and indefinite. Investigating officer attached to one police station may feel handicapped in carrying out the investigation within the entire State. In this case, it may be necessary for the investigating officer to make investigation even in other States for the aforementioned purpose. (Para 36)

Therefore, by exercising extraordinary jurisdiction under Article 142 of the Constitution to subserve the interest of justice, the appeal is disposed of with directions that (i) further investigation must be carried out by CB CID of the State of U.P., (ii) the accused must surrender before the Chief Judicial Magistrate, Allahabad and their applications for grant of bail, if any, may be considered by the said court on its own merits, (iii) investigation must be carried out inter alia on the premise that the jurisdiction to make investigation would be subject to the ultimate decision of the Court of the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Calcutta as if investigations are being carried out by CB CID of the State of U.P. in continuation of the investigation made by the police officer of Calcutta, and (iv) the report on completion of the investigation must be forwarded to the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Calcutta who would determine the question of his own jurisdiction at an appropriate stage. (Para 38). Asit Bhattacharjee v. Hanuman Prasad Ojha, (2007) 5 SCC 786: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 31: AIR 2007 SC 1925: 2007 Cri LJ 3181: (2007) 104 Cut LT 488: (2007) 4 All LJ 567: (2007) 54 AIC 38 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-5-2007]

[1336] — S. 157 — Directions passed in the interest of justice — Direction for CBI investigation and prompt disposal of pending proceedings — Considering the delay in the disposal of the pending contempt petition (9 years) and registration of an FIR against a police officer, Supreme Court directing matter to be investigated by CBI within three months and directing the High Court to dispose of the contempt petition within three months — Contempt of Courts Act, 1971, S. 2(b) — Constitution of India, Art. 142 (Paras 6, 8, 9 and 10). Ramesh Kumari v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2006) 2 SCC 677: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 678: AIR 2006 SC 1322: 2006 Cri LJ 1622: (2006) 127 DLT 636: (2006) 2 KLT 404.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-2-2006]

(iv) Ss. 156 and 202 — Relative scope

See also S. 202, below

[1337] — Ss. 156 and 202 — Distinction between — Investigation by police under — Held, investigation envisaged under S. 156 relates to commission of cognizable offence which starts with entry in the station house diary by officer in charge of police station and culminates in the report filed by police under S. 173 — Where a Magistrate directs investigation under S. 156 he has to do so before taking cognizance — S. 202 contemplates investigation of a limited nature which is directed by Magistrate either to police or any other person after taking cognizance (Paras 17 and 18). Dilawar Singh v. State of Delhi, (2007) 12 SCC 641: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 330: AIR 2007 SC 3234: 2007 Cri LJ 4709.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-9-2007]

Mohd. Yousuf v. Afaq Jahan, (2006) 1 SCC 627: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 460, relied on

[1338] — Ss. 156 and 202 — Investigation envisaged under — Difference between, discussed

An application was filed by the appellant before the CJM alleging that the accused with the help of the Bank Manager had forged his signature in the documents showing him as a guarantor. The CJM directed the police to register the FIR and to investigate the case. After investigation charge-sheet was filed by the police. Respondent 1 filed an application under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the FIR, the charge-sheet and the order of the Magistrate by which he had taken cognizance, and the order directing the police to investigate the case under Section 156(3) CrPC. By the impugned order the High Court quashed the charge-sheet on the ground that the Magistrate had no power to order registration of the case. Hence the present appeal.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Any Judicial Magistrate, before taking cognizance of the offence, can order investigation under Section 156(3) CrPC. But if he does so, he is not to examine the complainant on oath because he was not taking cognizance of any offence therein. For the purpose of enabling the police to start investigation it is open to the Magistrate to direct the police to register an FIR. There is nothing illegal in doing so. After all registration of an FIR involves only the process of entering the substance of the information relating to the commission of the cognizable offence in a book kept by the officer in charge of the police station. Even if a Magistrate does not say in so many words while directing investigation under Section 156(3) CrPC that an FIR should be registered, it is the duty of the officer in charge of the police station to register the FIR regarding the cognizable offence disclosed by the complainant because that police officer could take further steps contemplated in Chapter XII CrPC only thereafter. (Para 11)

The investigation started thereafter can end up only with the report filed by the police as indicated in Section 173 CrPC. The investigation contemplated in Chapter XII can be commenced by the police even without the order of a Magistrate. But that does not mean that when a Magistrate orders an investigation under Section 156(3) it would be a different kind of investigation. Such investigation must also end up only with the report contemplated in Section 173 CrPC. But the significant point to be noticed is, when a Magistrate orders investigation under Chapter XII he does so before he takes cognizance of the offence. (Para 8)

But a Magistrate need not order any such investigation if he proposes to take cognizance of the offence. Once he takes cognizance of the offence he has to follow the procedure envisaged in Chapter XV CrPC. A reading of Section 202(1) CrPC makes the position clear that the investigation referred to therein is of a limited nature. The Magistrate can direct such an investigation to be made either by a police officer or by any other person. Such investigation is only for helping the Magistrate to decide whether or not there is sufficient ground for him to proceed further. This is because he has already taken cognizance of the offence disclosed in the complaint, and the domain of the case would thereafter vest with him. (Paras 9 and 10)

Chapter XII of the Code contains provisions relating to "information to the police and their powers to investigate", whereas Chapter XV, which contains Section 202, deals with provisions relating to the steps which a Magistrate has to adopt while and after taking cognizance of any offence on a complaint. Provisions of the above two chapters deal with two different facets altogether, though there could be a common factor i.e. complaint filed by a person. Section 156, falling within Chapter XII deals with powers of the police officers to investigate cognizable offences. True, Section 202, which falls under Chapter XV, also refers to the power of a Magistrate to "direct an investigation by a police officer". But the investigation envisaged in Section 202 is different from the investigation contemplated in Section 156 of the Code. (Para 7). Mohd. Yousuf v. Afaq Jahan, (2006) 1 SCC 627: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 460: AIR 2006 SC 705: (2006) 1 KLT 939: (2006) 2 Guj LR 1742: (2006) 38 AIC 70 (SC): 2006 Cri LJ 788.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-1-2006]

Suresh Chand Jain v. State of M.P., (2001) 2 SCC 628: 2001 SCC (Cri) 377, relied on

Gopal Das Sindhi v. State of Assam, AIR 1961 SC 986: (1961) 2 Cri LJ 39; Narayandas Bhagwandas Madhavdas v. State of W.B., (1960) 1 SCR 93: AIR 1959 SC 1118: 1959 Cri LJ 1368, considered

Distinguished on facts in Raghu Raj Singh Rousha v. Shivam Sundaram Promoters (P) Ltd., (2009) 2 SCC 363*

(2)(iv) Authority that may investigate and Role of court - Ss. 156 and 202 — Relative scope (contd.)

[1339] — Ss. 156(3), 202(1), 202(2), 203 and 193 — Difference between investigation under Ss. 156(3) and 202(1) — Explained — Magistrate's discretion to keep a case for his own enquiry under S. 202(1) instead of directing police investigation under S. 156(3) — Permissibility — Held, investigation under S. 156(3) is permissible at pre-cognizance stage while enquiry under S. 202(1) is at post-cognizance stage — Held on facts, there was no illegality in Magistrate keeping a case for his own enquiry under S. 202(1) — Further held, it is also open to Magistrate to dismiss the complaint under S. 203 or to commit the case to Court of Session under S. 193

The appellant's brother was found dead at the place of his work. Post-mortem was conducted but medical officer reported that it was a case of natural death. The investigating officer on the basis of post-mortem report and statements of relatives closed the case. Dissatisfied with closure of investigation, the appellant filed a complaint before the Magistrate alleging commission of offences under Sections 302, 114 read with Section 120-B of the Penal Code, 1860, and prayed to the Magistrate for ordering investigation under Section 156(3). The Magistrate treated the appellant's complaint as complaint under Section 200 CrPC, and kept it for court enquiry under Section 202(1) CrPC and postponed issuance of process. The appellant filed special criminal application in the High Court praying that the Magistrate ought to have ordered enquiry under Section 156(3). This application was dismissed by the High Court. The appellant thereafter filed SLP in the Supreme Court.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

An investigation ordered by the Magistrate under Chapter XII [containing Section 156(3)] is at pre-cognizance stage and inquiry and/or investigation ordered under Section 202 is at post-cognizance stage. Power to direct investigation to police authorities is available to the Magistrate both under Section 156(3) and Section 202 CrPC. The only difference is the stage at which the power may be invoked by the Magistrate. The Magistrate in the present case has chosen to adopt latter course and has treated protest petition filed by the appellant as a complaint under Section 200 and thereafter proceeded under Section 202, and kept the matter with himself for an enquiry in the facts of the case. There is nothing irregular in the manner in which the Magistrate has proceeded and if at the stage of Section 202(2), the Magistrate deems it fit, he may either dismiss the complaint under Section 203 or proceed in terms of Section 193 and commit the case to the Court of Session. There is therefore no reason to interfere with the order of the Magistrate. (Paras 24 to 27). Rameshbhai Pandurao Hedau v. State of Gujarat, (2010) 4 SCC 185.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision : 19-3-2010]

Suresh Chand Jain v. State of M.P., (2001) 2 SCC 628: 2001 SCC (Cri) 377; Dharmeshbhai Vasudevbhai v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 576: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 76; Devarapalli Lakshminarayana Reddy v. V. Narayana Reddy, (1976) 3 SCC 252: 1976 SCC (Cri) 380; Dilawar Singh v. State of Delhi, (2007) 12 SCC 641: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 330; Mohd. Yousuf v. Afaq Jahan, (2006) 1 SCC 627: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 460, relied on [1340] — Ss. 156 and 202 — Investigation envisaged under Ss. 156 and 202 — Difference between

Section 156, falling within Chapter XII, deals with powers of the police officers to investigate cognizable offences. Section 202 which falls under Chapter XV, also refers to the power of a Magistrate to "direct an investigation by a police officer". But the investigation envisaged in Section 202 is different from the investigation contemplated in Section 156 of the Code. The significant point to be noticed is that when a Magistrate orders investigation under Chapter XII he does so before he takes cognizance of the offence. A Magistrate need not order any such investigation if he proposes to take cognizance of the offence. Once he takes cognizance of the offence he has to follow the procedure envisaged in Chapter XV of the Code. A reading of Section 202(1) CrPC would convince that the investigation referred to therein is of a limited nature. The Magistrate can direct such an investigation to be made either by a police officer or by any other person. Such investigation is only for helping the Magistrate to decide whether or not there is sufficient ground for him to proceed further. (Paras 7 to 9). Suresh Chand Jain v. State of M.P., (2001) 2 SCC 628: 2001 SCC (Cri) 377: AIR 2001 SC 571.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-1-2001]

(v) Transfer of investigation

See also Ss. 177 and 178, below

[1341] — Ss. 156 and 155 — Transfer of investigation to CBI — Directions for time-bound disposal of investigation — Investigations under Ss. 22 and 33-H, DCA, 1940 — Authorities for conducting — High Court transferring certain investigations being conducted by State Police and CBI to CVC — CVC not having necessary infrastructure therefor, said investigations directed to be conducted by CBI, if necessary by custodial interrogation, under supervision of CVC — CBI directed to conclude investigation and file report within six months of this order — Drugs and Cosmetics Act, 1940 — Ss. 22 and 33-H. Maharashtra Antibiotics & Pharmaceuticals Ltd. v. Democratic Youth Federation of India, (2005) 12 SCC 162.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde, D.M. Dharmadhikari and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-3-2005]

[1342] — S. 156 — Transfer of case to Customs Officers — When warranted — Customs Officer vis-à-vis "police officer in charge of station" — Scope and powers — Customs Officer in terms of notification vested with powers of police officer — Customs Officer empowered to investigate into commission of a cognizable offence and could file a charge-sheet — However, such vesting of police powers on Customs Officer does not take away powers of officer in charge of police station — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985, Ss. 42 and 53 (Paras 14 and 21). Raju Premji v. Customs, NER, Shillong Unit, (2009) 16 SCC 496.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

[1343] — S. 156 — Transfer of investigations (relating to financial trand) in different cases to one agency — Finance companies accepting deposits from a large number of persons but not repaying them — FIRs lodged by depositors against Directors of such companies at different places in different States — Prayer of accused persons for transferring the investigation in all such cases to CBI, rejected — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 420, 406, 409, 120-B, 467, 468 and 471 — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 — S. 138 — Constitution of India — Art. 32

The petitioners' prayer that the investigations of all cases should be transferred to CBI has to be rejected. (Para 62). Narinderjit Singh Sahni v. Union of India, (2002) 2 SCC 210: AIR 2001 SC 3810.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik, U.C. Banerjee and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2001]

[1344] — Ss. 156 and 173(8) — Transfer of investigation — Death in police custody — Case against police of committing murder by torture and conducting partisan investigation to shield guilty policemen, prima facie made out — Trial court before which charge-sheet already submitted directed to exercise its powers under S. 173(8) CrPC to direct CBI to make proper and thorough investigation in independent and objective manner and submit additional charge-sheet, if any, in accordance with law — Constitution of India — Arts. 136 and 226 — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/304 and 323/34. Kashmeri Devi v. Delhi Admn., 1988 Supp SCC 482: 1988 SCC (Cri) 864: AIR 1988 SC 1323.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.N. Singh and M.H. Kania, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-4-1988]

[1345] — S. 156 and Ss. 177, 178 & 181 — Order of High Court transferring investigation from one police station to other — Whether sustainable — FIR lodged by appellant on 23-12-2006 at Vadodara Police Station under Ss. 406, 420 & 120-B IPC against respondents — Application for transfer of investigation filed by the respondents within a few days i.e. on 26-12-2006 — High Court by the impugned order passed on 28-12-2006 allowing the application and directing investigation to be transferred to Waghodia Police Station within whose jurisdiction respondent institution was situated — Transfer ordered without issuing notice to appellant informant and neither impleading him, considering the fact that Additional Public Prosecutor (APP) had waived service on behalf of opponent State — High Court neither assigning any reason while passing the impugned order, nor adverting to the question as to whether it had any jurisdiction to pass such order — Reason why the APP had made such a concession on first day of hearing also not known — Held, power of the court to interfere with an investigation is limited — Police authorities in terms of S. 156 CrPC exercise the statutory power to direct transfer of an investigation from one police station to another in the event it is found that they do not have any jurisdiction in the matter — Court should not interfere in the matter at an initial stage in regard thereto — If it is found that the investigation has been conducted by an investigating officer who did not have any territorial jurisdiction in the matter, the same should be transferred by him to the police station having the requisite jurisdiction — Investigation had to be carried out on the basis of the allegations made — Informant was required to be examined; statements of his witnesses were required to be taken; the accused were also required to be interrogated — Undue haste with which High Court exercised its jurisdiction, held, cannot be encouraged — FIR prima facie shows that a part of cause of action arose within the territorial jurisdiction of Vadodara Police Station — Waghodia Police Station where the "institution" in question was situated was within the jurisdiction of Vadodara (District) and hence, it was not a case where the accused would have been even otherwise gravely prejudiced in joining the investigation (Paras 2 to 7, 9, 10 and 13). Naresh Kavarchand Khatri v. State of Gujarat, (2008) 8 SCC 300: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 614: AIR 2008 SC 2180: (2008) 2 KLT 747.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-2008]

Satvinder Kaur v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (1999) 8 SCC 728: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1503; Asit Bhattacharjee v. Hanuman Prasad Ojha, (2007) 5 SCC 786: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 31, relied on

(3) Investigation when may be initiated by Police Officer

See also Sections 155 to 159, '(5) Refusal to investigate or Improper investigation — Monitoring of investigation and Role of court', below

[1346] — Ss. 157, 154 and 162 & 2(h) — Investigation when commences — Telephonic FIR

The question as to at what stage the investigation commences has to be considered and examined on the facts of each case, especially, when the information of a cognizable offence has been given on telephone. If the information given on telephone is not cryptic and on basis of that information, the officer in charge, is prima facie satisfied about the commission of a cognizable offence and he proceeds from the police station after recording such information, to investigate such offence then any statement made by any person in respect of the said offence including about the participants, shall be deemed to be a statement made by a person to the police officer "in the course of investigation", covered by S. 162 of the Code. Ramsinh Bavaji Jadeja v. State of Gujarat, (1994) 2 SCC 685: 1994 SCC (Cri) 609: 1994 Cri LJ 3067: (1994) 2 Punj LR 671: (1994) 1 MWN (Cri) 130: (1994) 1 GLH 329.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-3-1994]

[1347] — Ss. 157 and 154 — There cannot be an enquiry without registering a criminal case. Mohindro v. State of Punjab, (2001) 9 SCC 581: AIR 2001 SC 2113: 2001 Cri LJ 2587.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-1-2001]

[1348] — S. 157 — 'Reason to suspect'

The words 'reasons to suspect' in the context of the expression "reason to suspect the commission of an offence" would mean the sagacity of rationally inferring the commission of a cognizable offence based on the specific articulate facts mentioned in the first information report as well in the annexures, if any, enclosed and any attending circumstances which may not amount to proof. State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426: AIR 1992 SC 604: 1992 Cri LJ 527.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-11-1990]

[1349] — S. 157 — 'Reason to suspect' — Sufficient to commence investigation under — 'Reasonable suspicion' not required — S. 41(a) and (g) compared

The expression "reason to suspect" as occurring in S. 157(1) is not qualified as in S. 41(a) and (g) of the Code, wherein the expression 'reasonable suspicion' is used. Therefore, what S. 157(1) requires is that the police officer should have 'reason to suspect' with regard to the commission of an offence. Union of India v. W.N. Chadha, 1993 Supp (4) SCC 260: 1993 SCC (Cri) 1171: AIR 1993 SC 1082: 1993 Cri LJ 859.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-1992]

[1350] — S. 157 — Conditions precedent to commencement of investigation by police — S. 157(1) and proviso (b) — Reason to suspect the commission of a cognizable offence and sufficiency of ground for entering on an investigation — Both reason to suspect and sufficiency of ground must be based only on allegations made in FIR — 'Reason to suspect' — Meaning of

The commencement of investigation by a police officer is subject to two conditions, firstly, the police officer should have reason to suspect the commission of a cognizable offence as required by S. 157(1) and secondly, the police officer should subjectively satisfy himself as to whether there is sufficient ground for entering on an investigation even before he starts an investigation into the facts and circumstances of the case as contemplated under clause (b) of the proviso to S. 157(1) of the Code.

The expression "reason to suspect" as occurring in S. 157(1) is not qualified as in S. 41(a) and (g) of the Code, wherein the expression, "reasonable suspicion" is used. As the words 'reason to suspect' are apparently clear, plain and unambiguous, considering the context and the object of the procedural provision in question, only the plain meaning rule is to be adopted so as to avoid any hardship or absurdity resulting therefrom and the words are used and also to be understood only in common parlance.

So read the expression "reason to suspect the commission of an offence" would mean the sagacity of rationally inferring the commission of a cognizable offence based on the specific articulate facts mentioned in the first information report as well in the annexures, if any, enclosed and any attending circumstances which may not amount to proof. Therefore, the existence of the reason to suspect the commission of a cognizable offence has to be, prima facie, disclosed by the allegations made in the first information laid before the police officer under S. 154(1). The meaning of the expression "reason to suspect" has to be governed and dictated by the facts and circumstances of each case and at that stage the question of adequate proof of facts alleged in the first information report does not arise.

As clause (b) of the proviso to S. 157 permits the police officer to satisfy himself about the sufficiency of the ground even before entering on an investigation, it postulates that the police officer has to draw his satisfaction only on the materials which were placed before him at that stage, namely, the first information together with the documents, if any, enclosed. In other words, the police officer has to satisfy himself only on the allegations mentioned in the first information before he enters on an investigation as to whether those allegations do constitute a cognizable offence warranting an investigation. State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426: AIR 1992 SC 604: 1992 Cri LJ 527.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-11-1990]

[1351] — S. 157 — Initiation of investigation of cognizable offence — Basis for — Level of satisfaction of police office concerned required — "Reason to suspect the commission of a [cognizable] offence" — Import of — Suspicion if enough — For taking up investigation in a cognizable case, it is enough if the police officer on the basis of the information given suspects the commission of a cognizable offence, and not that he must be convinced or satisfied that a cognizable offence has been committed — If the police officer has reasons to suspect so, he has no option but to record the information and proceed to investigate the case either himself or depute any other competent officer to conduct the investigation — There is no need for the police officer to be satisfied about the truthfulness of the information at this stage — Matters which are alien to the consideration of the question whether the report discloses the commission of a cognizable offence, stated — Where the General Diary entry recorded on the basis of a telephonic information disclosed commission of a cognizable offence under S. 13 of the PC Act, 1988, held the SP, CBI rightly proceeded to intercept the accused and investigate the case

The information given disclosing the commission of a cognizable offence only sets in motion the investigative machinery, with a view to collect all necessary evidence, and thereafter to take action in accordance with law. The true test is whether the information furnished provides a reason to suspect the commission of an offence, which the police officer concerned is empowered under Section 156 of the Code to investigate. If it does, he has no option but to record the information and proceed to investigate the case either himself or depute any other competent officer to conduct the investigation. At this stage it is enough if the police officer on the basis of the information given suspects the commission of a cognizable offence, and not that he must be convinced or satisfied that a cognizable offence has been committed. Further, at this stage it is also not necessary for him to satisfy himself about the truthfulness of the information. It is only after a complete investigation that he may be able to report on the truthfulness or otherwise of the information. The question as to whether the report is true, whether it discloses full details regarding the manner of occurrence, whether the accused is named, and whether there is sufficient evidence to support the allegations are all matters which are alien to the consideration of the question whether the report discloses the commission of a cognizable offence. Even if the information does not furnish all the details, the police officer concerned must find out those details in the course of investigation and collect all the necessary evidence. (Para 20)

In the instant case, the information received by the Superintendent of Police, CBI clearly spells out the offence of criminal misconduct under Section 13 of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988. The allegation certainly gives rise to a suspicion that a cognizable offence may have been committed by the respondent, which the Superintendent of Police, CBI was empowered to investigate. Therefore if the Superintendent of Police, CBI proceeded to intercept the respondent and investigate the case, he did only that which he was in law obliged to do. His taking up the investigation, therefore, cannot be faulted. (Para 21)

The judgment and order of the High Court is set aside and the appellants are directed to proceed with the investigation in accordance with law and thereafter to take all steps as are required to be taken in law. (Para 24). CBI v. Tapan Kumar Singh, (2003) 6 SCC 175: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1305: AIR 2003 SC 4140: 2003 Cri LJ 2322.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-4-2003]

(3) Investigation when may be initiated by Police Officer (contd.)

[1352] — Ss. 157, 154 and 2(h) — Investigation, inquest and FIR — Validity, authenticity and evidentiary value — Telephonic information being basis of investigation and inquest — Formal FIR being lodged afterwards — Held, investigation and inquest can start with telephonic information even prior to lodging of formal FIR and it would not affect trial and evidence in court — Submission that FIR loses its authenticity if lodged after inquest is a general proposition and cannot be universally applied — Prosecution case cannot be dismissed only because there is discrepancy in inquest report — Neither FIR, nor inquest report nor post-mortem report can be regarded as substantive pieces of evidence — FIR or inquest report may only be used to contradict or corroborate the maker thereof — Non-mention of accused in inquest report, held, may not mean that FIR was non-existent prior to inquest CrPC, 1973 — Ss. 154, 157, 2(h) and 174

Submission that FIR loses its authenticity if it is lodged after the inquest report is recorded is a general proposition and cannot be universally applied. No doubt the inquest report was prepared by PW 8 at 9.30 p.m. and the formal FIR was lodged by PW 1 at 11.30 p.m. But it is also relevant that the investigation was started by PW 8 after receipt of telephonic information from PW 3 at 6:30 pm that the deceased was lying in a serious condition. And thereafter inquest report was prepared. (Paras 21 and 20)

The principle of law in Sections 2(h) and 157 CrPC is that when information regarding a cognizable offence is furnished to the police that information will be regarded as the FIR and all enquiries held by the police subsequent thereto would be treated as investigation, even though the formal registration of the FIR takes place only later. (Paras 26 to 31)

Neither FIR, nor inquest report nor post-mortem can be regarded as substantive pieces of evidence. FIR or inquest report may only be used to contradict or corroborate the maker thereof. Therefore, there is no merit in the submission of the counsel for the appellants. Any discrepancy occurring in the inquest report can neither be termed to be fatal nor even a suspicious circumstance which would warrant a benefit to the accused and the resultant dismissal of the prosecution case. Assuming that some report was made on telephone and that was the real first information report, this by itself would not affect the appreciation of evidence made by the Sessions Judge and the conclusions of fact drawn by him. (Paras 31, 23 and 25)

The object of the inquest proceedings under Section 174 CrPC is to ascertain whether a person has died under unnatural circumstances or an unnatural death and if so, what the cause of death is. The question regarding the details as to how the deceased was assaulted or who assaulted him or under what circumstances he was assaulted, is foreign to the ambit and scope of the proceedings under Section 174 CrPC. Mention of the name of the accused and eyewitness in the inquest report is not necessary. Due to non-mentioning of the name of the accused in the inquest report, it cannot be inferred that FIR was not in existence at the time of inquest proceedings. (Paras 22 and 24). Sambhu Das v. State of Assam, (2010) 10 SCC 374: AIR 2010 SC 3300.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-9-2010]

Maha Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1976) 1 SCC 644: 1976 SCC (Cri) 135; State of U.P. v. Bhagwant Kishore Joshi, AIR 1964 SC 221: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 140; Pedda Narayana v. State of A.P., (1975) 4 SCC 153: 1975 SCC (Cri) 427; George v. State of Kerala, (1998) 4 SCC 605: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1232; Suresh Rai v. State of Bihar, (2000) 4 SCC 84: 2000 SCC (Cri) 764, relied on

Balaka Singh v. State of Punjab, (1975) 4 SCC 511: 1975 SCC (Cri) 601; Ramesh Baburao Devaskar v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 13 SCC 501: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 212, considered

[1353] — S. 157 — Police when obliged to investigate an offence — Held, obligation to register a case is not to be confused with the remedy if the same is not registered — Registration of a case does not ipso facto warrant the setting in motion of an investigation, as the same is subject to discretion of police subject to Ss. 157(1) proviso & 157(2) in case of cognizable offences, and scheme of S. 155 in case of non-cognizable offences — S. 156(3) vests a discretionary power on a Magistrate empowered under S. 190 to order an investigation by a police officer as contemplated in S. 156(1)

In this connection, it may be noted that though a police officer cannot investigate a non-cognizable offence on his own as in the case of cognizable offence, he can investigate a non-cognizable offence under the order of a Magistrate having power to try such non-cognizable case or commit the same for trial within the terms under Section 155(2) CrPC but subject to Section 155(3) CrPC. Further, under Section 155(4), where a case relates to two offences to which at least one is cognizable, the case shall be deemed to be a cognizable case notwithstanding that the other offences are non-cognizable and, therefore, under such circumstances the police officer can investigate such offences with the same powers as he has while investigating a cognizable offence. (Para 69)

The obligation to register a case is not to be confused with the remedy if same is not registered. The answer to the question whether the registration of a criminal case under Section 154(1) CrPC ipso facto warrants the setting in motion of an investigation under Chapter XII CrPC is provided by Sections 157(1) proviso and 157(2) CrPC. Section 156(3) vests a discretionary power on a Magistrate empowered under Section 190 to order an investigation by a police officer as contemplated in Section 156(1). Section 156(3) does not empower a Magistrate to stop an investigation undertaken by the police. (Paras 70, 71 and 73). Parkash Singh Badal v. State of Punjab, (2007) 1 SCC 1: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 193: AIR 2007 SC 1274: (2007) 51 AIC 623 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-12-2006]

[1354] — S. 157 — Investigation when may be commenced — Judicial interference when warranted — Police investigation under, can be commenced only if FIR prima facie discloses commission of a cognizable offence — Where such offence is not disclosed, held, court is justified in interfering with the investigation and quashing the same — Constitution of India — Arts. 226 and 136

Per Chandrachud, C.J. (Varadarajan, J. concurring)

The police do not have an unfettered discretion to commence investigation under S. 157 of the Code. Their right of enquiry is conditioned by the existence of reason to suspect the commission of a cognizable offence and they cannot, reasonably, have reason so to suspect unless the FIR, prima facie, discloses the commission of such offence. If that condition is satisfied, the investigation must go on and the rule in Khwaja Nazir Ahmad case will apply. The court has then no power to stop the investigation. On the other hand, if the FIR does not disclose the commission of a cognizable offence, the court would be justified in quashing the investigation on the basis of the information as laid or received.

In the present case the FIR does not allege, directly or indirectly, that the firm was promoting or conducting a scheme for the making of quick or easy money, dependent on any event or contingency relative or applicable to the enrolment of members into the scheme ; nor does it contain any allegation whatsoever that persons who advanced or deposited their monies with the firm were participants of a scheme for the making of quick or easy money, dependent upon any such event or contingency. Since the FIR did not allege or disclose that the essential requirements of S. 2(c) read with Ss. 4 and 3 of the Act are prima facie satisfied, it cannot be said in the absence of any allegation whatsoever in that behalf, that there is "reason to suspect" the commission of that offence within the meaning of S. 157 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, so as to justify the investigation undertaken by the State authorities.

Therefore, the investigation which has been commenced upon the FIR is without jurisdiction and must, therefore, be quashed.

Per A.N. Sen, J. (concurring)

Whether an offence into which an investigation is made or to be made is disclosed or not must necessarily depend on the facts and circumstances of each particular case and in considering that question the court has mainly to take into consideration the complaint or FIR On a consideration of all the relevant materials, the court has to come to the conclusion whether an offence is disclosed or not. If on such consideration, the court is satisfied that an offence is disclosed, the court will normally not interfere with the investigation into the offence and will generally allow the investigation into the offence to be completed for collecting materials for proving the offence. If on the other hand, the court is satisfied that no offence is disclosed, it will be the duty of the court to interfere with any investigation and to stop the same to prevent any kind of uncalled for and unnecessary harassment to an individual.

As on facts and in the circumstances of the present case no offence under the Act is at all disclosed, it will be manifestly unjust to allow the process of Criminal Code to be issued or continued against the firm and to allow any investigation which will be clearly without any authority.

The proceedings against the firm and its partners arising out of the FIR must be quashed as the FIR and the other materials do not disclose any offence under the Act and as such no investigation into the affairs of the firm under the Act can be permitted or allowed to be continued. State of W.B. v. Swapan Kumar Guha, (1982) 1 SCC 561: 1982 SCC (Cri) 283: AIR 1982 SC 949: 1982 Cri LJ 819: (1982) 1 Comp LJ 217.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J.[1] and A. Varadarajan[2] and A.N. Sen[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 2-2-1982]

(4) Section 155(4)

[1355] — Ss. 155(4), 157 and 198 — Facts disclosing both cognizable and non-cognizable offences relating to offences concerning marriage — Complaint not filed by aggrieved party — Police not debarred from investigating non-cognizable cases also and including them in the charge-sheet — Complaint to the police in respect of offences under Ss. 498-A and 494 IPC lodged by the Women's Commission and not by the wife herself — Offence under S. 494 IPC being non-cognizable — Held, the High Court was not justified in quashing the charge under S. 494 IPC — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 494 and 498-A

Sub-section (4) of Section 155 creates a legal fiction and provides that although a case may comprise of several offences of which some are cognizable and others are not, it would not be open to the police to investigate the cognizable offences only and omit the non-cognizable offences. Since the whole case (comprising cognizable and non-cognizable offences) is to be treated as cognizable, the police had no option but to investigate the whole of the case and to submit a charge-sheet in respect of all the offences, cognizable or non-cognizable both, provided it is found by the police during investigation that the offences appear, prima facie, to have been committed.

The statutory provision is specific, precise and clear and there is no ambiguity in the language employed in sub-section (4). It is apparent that if the facts reported to the police disclose both cognizable and non-cognizable offences, the police would be acting within the scope of its authority in investigating both the offences as the legal fiction enacted in sub-section (4) provides that even a non-cognizable case shall, in that situation, be treated as cognizable. State of Orissa v. Sharat Chandra Sahu, (1996) 6 SCC 435: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1387: AIR 1997 SC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-1996]

(5) Refusal to investigate or Improper investigation — Monitoring of investigation and Role of court

See also CONSTITUTION OF INDIA, Arts. 32, 136 and 226 in Vol. 7, Vol. 8 and Vol. 9, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn., respectively

See also Sections 155 to 159 '(2) Authority that may investigate and Role of court', above, and

'(10) Defective investigation', and

'(11) Illegal/Partisan/Mala fide investigation — Effect and Quashment', below

See also Ss. 190 and 202, below

See also S. 154, '(4) Powers, Role and Duty of police in respect of FIR', and

'(5) Interference by court', above

[1356] — Ss. 156 & 157 and 190 & 200 to 203 — Information to police regarding commission of cognizable offence — No action taken by police — Course open to complainant — Held, in such a case, complainant is given power under S. 190 read with S. 200 CrPC to lay down the complaint before the Magistrate concerned — Then the Magistrate is required to enquire into the complaint as provided in Ch. XV CrPC — Writ petition in such a case, held, not maintainable

When the information is laid with the police, but no action in that behalf is taken, the complainant is given power under Section 190 read with Section 200 of the Criminal Procedure Code to lay the complaint before the Magistrate having jurisdiction to take cognizance of the offence and the Magistrate is required to enquire into the complaint as provided in Chapter XV of the Code. In case the Magistrate after recording evidence finds a prima facie case, instead of issuing process to the accused, he is empowered to direct the police concerned to investigate into offence under Chapter XII of the Code and to submit a report. If he finds that the complaint does not disclose any offence to take further action, he is empowered to dismiss the complaint under Section 203 of the Code. In case he finds that the complaint/evidence recorded prima facie discloses an offence, he is empowered to take cognizance of the offence and would issue process to the accused. A writ petition in such cases is not to be entertained. (Para 16). Minu Kumari v. State of Bihar, (2006) 4 SCC 359: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 310: AIR 2006 SC 1937: 2006 Cri LJ 2468: (2006) 2 KLT 588: (2006) 3 Guj LR 2013.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-4-2006]

All India Institute of Medical Sciences Employees' Union (Regd.) v. Union of India, (1996) 11 SCC 582: 1997 SCC (Cri) 303; Gangadhar Janardan Mhatre v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 7 SCC 768: 2005 SCC (Cri) 404, relied on

[1357] — Ss. 156, 154 and 157 — FIR and investigation — Interference by Chief Minister of State (CM) — Invalidity and unwarrantedness — FIR alleging illegal moneylending under 1946 Bombay Act — CM and his PS instructing Collector and police station concerned respectively not to lodge FIR and not to initiate action on any complaint lodged against an MLA and his family members and to seek legal opinion from Govern- ment Pleader — Said instructions and interference, held (per curiam), illegal, unwarranted, against equality and social justice — CM should have understood necessity of implementing Moneylenders Act and ground realities that many farmers were committing suicide due to atrocities of moneylenders — Said instructions therefore, condemned and set aside — Exemplary costs of Rs 10 lakhs imposed on State — Bombay Moneylenders Act, 1946 (31 of 1947), S. 32-B — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 341, 342, 363, 392 and 504 r/w S. 34

The Collector in his order dated 5-6-2006 to the District Superintendent of Police referred to the meeting and instructions of the Chief Minister on 1-6-2006 and accordingly directed that if any complaint is received against a specified MLA or his family members, the said matter/complaint be placed for decision before the District Anti-Moneylending Committee and the said Committee should obtain the legal opinion of the District Government Pleader and then only take decision on the same and take appropriate legal action accordingly.

A complaint was lodged by Respondent 1 against the said MLA/family members under Sections 341, 342, 363, 392, 504 read with Section 34 IPC and Section 32-B of the Bombay Moneylenders Act, 1946. Station diary entry of the police station concerned where complaint had been lodged revealed that PS to the Chief Minister telephoned twice to the police station and directed that no action should be taken as instructed by the Chief Minister and that no offence should be registered.

The High Court after examining the provisions of the Bombay Moneylenders Act and also the materials on record held that the letter dated 5-6-2006 and the telephonic message recorded in the station diary entry exhibited gross abuse of power by the authority concerned and struck down both the communications.

Dismissing the appeal with costs of Rs 10 lakhs,

Held :

Per A.K. Ganguly, J. (for Singhvi, J. and himself)

The instruction of the Chief Minister to the Collector in their meeting dated 1-6-2006 as reflected in the Collector's order dated 5-6-2006 to the District Superintendent of Police has no warrant in law and is unconstitutional and is quashed. The order of the High Court is affirmed. Such instructions should not have come from the Chief Minister of a State which is governed under a Constitution which resolves to constitute India into a socialist, secular, democratic republic. The Chief Minister's instructions are so incongruous and anachronistic, being in defiance of all logic and reason, that it deeply disturbs the conscience. The same is condemned in no uncertain terms. (Paras 47 and 46)

If the information lodged with the police discloses cognizable offence, the police shall record the same in accordance with and under Section 154 CrPC. The police officer's power to investigate in case of a cognizable offence without order of the Magistrate is statutorily recognised under Section 156 CrPC. The police officer in charge of a police station, on the basis of information received or otherwise, can start investigation if he has reasons to suspect the commission of any cognizable offence. This is subject to Section 157 provisos (a) and (b) CrPC which leave discretion with the police officer in charge of police station to consider if the information is not of a serious nature, he may depute a subordinate officer to investigate and if it appears to the officer-in-charge that there does not exist sufficient ground, he shall not investigate. (Paras 29 and 30)

The law does not accord any special treatment to any person in respect of any complaint having been filed against him when it discloses the commission of any cognizable offence. It is a vital component of the rule of law. (Para 31)

The direction of the then Chief Minister to give special treatment to the MLA concerned and his family about registering of complaint filed against them is totally unwarranted in law. The way interference was caused first from the office of the Chief Minister by his Private Secretary by two telephone calls on 31-5-2006 and the manner in which the District Collector was summoned by the Chief Minister on the very next day i.e. 1-6-2006 for giving instructions to specially treat any complaints filed against the said MLA and his family has no precedent either in law or in public administration. (Paras 31 and 28)

From the affidavit filed by the Police Inspector concerned it is clear that 34 cases were filed against the said MLA and his family in respect of allegation of moneylending. From the communication of the Collector containing the instructions of the then Chief Minister, it is clear that the Chief Minister was aware of the various complaints. Even then the Chief Minister passed an order for special treatment in favour of the said family which is unknown to law and which is not available to other similarly placed persons. The Chief Minister was acting solely on political considerations to screen the family of the said MLA from the normal process of law. (Paras 32 to 34 and 20)

(5) Refusal to investigate or Improper investigation — Monitoring of investigation and Role of court (contd.)

The argument that some of the cases in which complaints were filed against the family of the said MLA, were investigated and charge-sheets were filed, is a poor consolation and does not justify the issuing of the wholly unauthorised and unconstitutional instructions to the Collector. It is not known in how many cases investigation has been totally scuttled in view of the impugned directions. Records disclosed in this case show that out of 74 cases only in seven cases were charge-sheets filed and the rest of the cases were either compromised or withdrawn. How can poor farmers sustain their complaints in the face of such directions and how can the subordinate police officers carry on investigation ignoring such instructions of the Chief Minister? Therefore, the instructions of the Chief Minister have completely subverted the rule of law. (Paras 40 and 41)

The Chief Minister of the State of Maharashtra was expected to know that the farmers of the State specially those in the Vidarbha region are going through a great deal of suffering and hardship in the hands of moneylenders. (Para 31)

This being the ground reality, the Chief Minister of the State who holding a position of great responsibility as a high constitutional functionary, certainly acted beyond all legal norms by giving the impugned directions to the Collector to protect members of a particular family who are dealing in moneylending business, from the normal process of law. This amounts to bestowing special favour to some chosen few at the cost of the vast number of poor people who as farmers have taken loans and who have come to the authorities of law and order to register their complaints against torture and atrocities by the moneylenders. The instructions of the Chief Minister will certainly impede their access to legal redress and bring about a failure of the due process. (Para 38)

The aforesaid action of the Chief Minister is completely contrary to and inconsistent with the constitutional promise of equality and also the Preambular resolve of social and economic justice. As the Chief Minister of the State, he had taken a solemn oath of allegiance to the Constitution but the directions which he gave are wholly unconstitutional and seek to subvert the constitutional norms of equality and social justice. (Para 39)

Per G.S. Singhvi, J. (supplementing)

The instructions given by the Chief Minister to District Collector were ex facie ultra vires the provisions of the Act which do not envisage any role of the Chief Minister in cases involving violation of the provisions of the Act and amounted to an unwanted interference with the functioning of the authorities entrusted with the task of enforcing the Act enacted for regulating, controlling transactions of moneylending and protecting unsuspecting borrowers against oppression and harassment at the hands of unscrupulous moneylenders. The District Anti-Moneylending Committee was constituted by the Government of Maharashtra for protecting the farmers against unscrupulous moneylenders and not for protecting the wrong-doers, but in total disregard of the scheme of the Act, the Chief Minister gave instructions which had the effect of frustrating the object of the legislation enacted for protection of the farmers. (Para 71)

The camouflage of sophistry used by the Chief Minister in the instructions given by him and the affidavit filed before the Supreme Court is clearly misleading. The message to the authorities was loud and clear i.e. they were not to take the complaints against the family concerned seriously and not to proceed against them. The District Magistrate, the District Superintendent of Police and officers subordinate to them were bound to comply with the same in their letter and spirit. They could disregard those instructions at their own peril and none of them was expected to do so. (Para 70). State of Maharashtra v. Sarangdharsingh Shivdassingh Chavan, (2011) 1 SCC 577.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.S. Singhvi^{2} and A.K. Ganguly^{1}, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-12-2010]

Lalita Kumari v. Govt. of U.P., (2008) 14 SCC 337: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 812, distinguished

[Ed.: See also Criminal Procedure Code, 1973, Ss. 155 to 159, '(5) Refusal to investigate or Improper investigation — Monitoring of investigation and Role of court', pp. 404 et seq. in Vol. 16; and

S. 154, '(4)(i) — Powers, Role and Duty of police in respect of FIR — Generally', pp. 367 et seq. also in Vol. 16, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn.]

[1358] — Ss. 156, 154, 157 and 190 — Refusal of police to initiate proceedings — Availability of a remedy under S. 156 r/w S. 190 CrPC bar to petition under Art. 227 of the Constitution of India — Petition seeking directions to police station officers to take immediate cognizance of the complaints made by the petitioner (respondent before Supreme Court) and to register offences against certain persons — High Court disposing of the petition at the stage of admission itself and issuing certain directions — Held, High Court erred in entertaining the petition when remedy was available under S. 156 CrPC — Constitution of India — Art. 227 (Paras 3, 5 and 7). Anandwardhan v. Pandurang, (2005) 11 SCC 195.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-1-2005]

[1359] — Ss. 156, 190 and 200 — Investigation by police in cognizable offence — Interference by writ court — Grounds for — Non-initiation of investigation by police — Remedy available to informant in case of — Held, Higlh Court in exercise of its writ jurisdiction under Art. 226 can interfere with investigation only in the rarest of the rare case where a case of abuse of power of investigation and non-compliance with the provisions under Ch. XII CrPC is clearly made out — But, even in such cases, High Court cannot direct the police as to how the investigation is to be conducted but can always insist for the observance of process as provided for in CrPC — Where no action is taken by police on the information given to it, the informant's remedy lies under Ss. 190 and 200 CrPC and no writ petition in such a case must be entertained

The High Court in exercise of its power under Article 226 can always issue appropriate directions at the instance of an aggrieved person if the High Court is convinced that the power of investigation has been exercised by an investigating officer mala fide. That power is to be exercised in the rarest of the rare case where a clear case of abuse of power and non-compliance with the provisions falling under Chapter XII CrPC is clearly made out requiring the interference of the High Court. But even in such cases, the High Court cannot direct the police as to how the investigation is to be conducted but can always insist for the observance of process as provided for in CrPC. Even in cases where no action is taken by the police on the information given to it, the informant's remedy lies under Sections 190 and 200 CrPC, but a writ petition in such a case is not to be entertained. (Paras 41 and 42). Divine Retreat Centre v. State of Kerala, (2008) 3 SCC 542: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 9: AIR 2008 SC 1614: (2008) 1 KLT 1042: 2008 Cri LJ 1891.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.H. Kapadia and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-2008]

Gangadhar Janardan Mhatre v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 7 SCC 768: 2005 SCC (Cri) 404, relied on

[1360] — Ss. 156 and 157 — Fair and impartial investigation — Right to — Scope of — Locus standi to seek enforcement of such right — State has a duty to ensure such investigation against any person including its own officers, accused of commission of cognizable offence — Accused, victim and in certain situations even a witness to the crime can seek enforcement of their rights — Constitution of India — Arts. 21, 32 and 226

The words "life" and "personal liberty" are used in Article 21 as compendious terms to include within themselves all the varieties of life which go to make up the personal liberties of a man and not merely the right to the continuance of a person's animal existence. All those aspects of life, which make a person live with human dignity are included within the meaning of the word "life". The State has a duty to enforce the human rights of a citizen providing for fair and impartial investigation against any person accused of commission of a cognizable offence, which may include its own officers. Article 21 in its broad application not only takes within its fold enforcement of the rights of an accused but also the rights of the victim. In certain situations even a witness to the crime may seek for and shall be granted protection by the State. The right to life and personal liberty is paramount. Likewise, if Articles 14 and 19 are put out of operation, Article 32 will be drained of its life blood. [Paras 68(ii), 60, 61, 62 and 64]

Being the protectors of civil liberties of the citizens, the Supreme Court and the High Courts have not only the power and jurisdiction but also an obligation to protect the fundamental rights, guaranteed by Part III in general and under Article 21 of the Constitution in particular, zealously and vigilantly. Therefore, a direction by the High Court, in exercise of its jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution, to CBI to investigate a cognizable offence alleged to have been committed within the territory of a State without the consent of that State will neither impinge upon the federal structure of the Constitution nor violate the doctrine of separation of power and shall be valid in law. (Para 69). State of W.B. v. Committee for Protection of Democratic Rights, (2010) 3 SCC 571.

Bench Strength 5. Coram : K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and R.V. Raveendran, D.K. Jain, P. Sathasivam and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision : 17-2-2010]

[1361] — Ss. 156 and 157 — Investigation — Interference with — Power of writ court — Scope — Held, ordinarily a writ court cannot direct investigative agency to carry out investigation in a particular manner — It can interfere with functioning of investigative agency only in exceptional cases — No such case was made out herein — Constitution of India — Arts. 226 and 32 (Para 30). Shashikant v. CBI, (2007) 1 SCC 630: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 406: AIR 2007 SC 351: (2007) 49 AIC 292 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 995: (2007) 103 Cut LT 511.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-11-2006]

(5) Refusal to investigate or Improper investigation — Monitoring of investigation and Role of court (contd.)

[1362] — Ss. 156 and 157 — Investigation — Judicial review of

It may be that in a given case permission granted by the Magistrate for investigation by a police officer of a rank lower than the designated rank may be judicially reviewable. The court would not attach any importance to any illegality in the matter of investigation if it is relied upon at the conclusion of a trial in the absence of prejudice pleaded and proved. A.R. Antulay v. Ramdas Sriniwas Nayak, (1984) 2 SCC 500: 1984 SCC (Cri) 277: AIR 1984 SC 718: 1984 Cri LJ 647: 1984 Bom LR 228.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: D.A. Desai, R.S. Pathak, O. Chinnappa Reddy, A.P. Sen and V. Balakrishna Eradi, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-2-1984]

[1363] — Ss. 156 and 482 — Interference in investigation and arrest in exercise of inherent powers of High Court — 12 cases pending between appellant and Respondent 6, while 8 cases pending between appellant and Respondent 5 — Appellant alleging that Respondents 5 and 6 were deliberately and intentionally implicating him by making false calls to the police, and that Respondent 4, who was a police officer, had searched his vehicle thrice with mala fide intention, but was unable to find any incriminating material — His attempt of getting his complaint registered having failed, he filed a petition under S. 482 CrPC for a direction to register a criminal case against Respondents 4 to 6 — High Court finding that Respondent 4 was only doing his duty and had no mala fide motive in searching appellant's vehicle — It also found no fault with alleged role played by Respondents 5 and 6 but left it open for the appellant to avail alternative remedy — In the SLP filed thereagainst, Supreme Court directing officer of rank of DIG, under direct supervision of DGP to make independent investigation as to whether Respondent 4 had attempted to harass the appellant by making endeavours to lodge cases under NDPS Act — Affidavit filed by DGP mentioning search of appellant's vehicle by Respondent 4 — Version given by Respondent 4 about secret information being conveyed to SP, not supported by the SP, while version given by the appellant that Respondent 4 had tried to take the car to police station, but he himself rushed to SP's residence, found correct — Further, it was also found that such search was not directed by SP — DGP finding that Respondent 4 and other local officers had acted in a male fide manner — In such circumstances, held, there was a need for investigation into the allegations — Hence, officer of the rank of DIG directed to investigate the case unbiasedly and independently taking into account previous history of litigation between parties — However, appellant's prayer for handing over investigation to CBI rejected — Constitution of India — Art. 136 (Paras 2 and 11 to 16). Sarvsheel Mago v. State of Haryana, (2008) 11 SCC 703: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 882.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-3-2008]

[1364] — Ss. 157, 160 and 161 — Investigation — Court should not monitor investigation process unless such investigation transgresses any provision of law. Dukhishyam Benupani v. Arun Kumar Bajoria, (1998) 1 SCC 52: 1998 SCC (Cri) 261: AIR 1998 SC 696: (1998) 91 Comp Cas 413: 1998 Cri LJ 841.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-11-1997]

[1365] — Ss. 157, 156, 154 and 190 — Direction by High Court to register case and conduct investigation in offence which took place about 18 years ago — Challenge to, by aggrieved appellant — Sustainability — Writ petition filed in 2004 by Respondent 3 seeking direction for registration of case against appellant in respect of case relating to year 1986 in which Respondent 3 was attacked and had suffered injuries — Impugned direction based on enquiry report of Dy. Inspector General, CID who conducted enquiry at the instance of High Court — Considering the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case, held, judgment of High Court not liable to be interfered with — Hence, upheld — Constitution of India — Art. 226

A writ petition was filed by Respondent 3 before the High Court alleging inaction on the part of the police authorities in not registering his complaint and taking action against the persons who had caused injuries to him and his sons in an incident occurring on 8-11-1986. The Single Judge of the High Court directed the Director General of Police (DGP) to appoint a senior police officer to conduct an enquiry into the matter. Pursuant to that order, the Dy. Inspector General, CID conducted the enquiry and submitted a report. The Single Judge held that once it was established that Respondent 3 had sustained injuries in the incident and injuries on his person were confirmed in the medical examination, the police authorities ought to have registered a case and taken appropriate steps in accordance with law. On the basis of the final report of the inquiry, the Single Judge directed the Superintendent of Police to register a case in the police station of competent jurisdiction and take action in accordance with law. The application filed by the appellant for recalling the said order was dismissed. Hence, the present appeal.

As per the appellant, he was tenant in the house of Respondent 3. Respondent 3 attempted to illegally evict the appellant from his rented house with the help of antisocial elements who came to his house armed with weapons on 8-11-1986. Respondent 3 along with his men started dismantling the house of the appellant without prior permission and/or notice to him. The appellant was seriously injured when he tried to obstruct them from dismantling the house. The appellant lodged a first information report under Sections 147/307 IPC against Respondent 3 and his men. Later, the said criminal case was withdrawn by the Public Prosecutor. The revision filed before the High Court against the said withdrawal was dismissed.

Before the Supreme Court the appellant contended that the High Court ought not to have passed any direction in the writ petition filed by Respondent 3 because it was filed after undue delay. The appellant was also aggrieved by the order of withdrawal of the prosecution against Respondent 3.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

The order of the High Court was primarily based on the report of the DIG, CID, Gwalior who had conducted the inquiry at the instance of the Court and submitted the report. On the basis of the inquiry report, the High Court directed the Superintendent of Police, Gwalior to take action for registration of the case and conduct the investigation and inquiry in accordance with law. (Para 21)

The impugned judgment of the High Court has been carefully examined. There is no infirmity therein. In the backdrop of the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case, no interference is called for. (Paras 22 and 23). Ghanshyam v. State of M.P., (2006) 10 SCC 473: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 602.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-9-2006]

[1366] — Ss. 157, 160, 167, 170, 190 and 319 — Investigation — Court cannot direct IO that any person be included as an accused. CBI v. Niyamavedi, (1995) 3 SCC 601: 1995 SCC (Cri) 558: 1995 Cri LJ 2917.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, C.J. and K.S. Paripoornan and Sujata V. Manohar, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-1995]

[1367] — Ss. 157, 162, 173(6) and 172 — Interference by Courts in investigation — Statement recorded by police during investigation and police diaries — Use of — ISRO Espionage case — Court should not disclose material contained in police diaries and statements recorded during investigation — Nor should it make comments on manner of investigation or make observations amounting to interference in investigation — Directions given by the High Court to the Director, CBI in regard to the investigation matters disapproved — However, High Court was right in expressing a general view that the investigation agency must act in an efficient and vigilant manner without being pressurised. CBI v. Niyamavedi, (1995) 3 SCC 601: 1995 SCC (Cri) 558: 1995 Cri LJ 2917.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, C.J. and K.S. Paripoornan and Sujata V. Manohar, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-1995]

[1368] — Ss. 156 and 157 — Interference with criminal investigation — Monitoring of investigations by courts in respect of offences allegedly committed, when investigation had already commenced by investigating agency — When warranted — Land dispute between appellant and respondent landowners — Respondents commencing various litigations against appellant — FIR filed in relation thereto — High Court, in writ concerned, directing investigating authority concerned to submit action-taken report with respect to investigation carried out in FIR — Sustainability — Held, normally investigation of offences is function of investigating agencies and courts do not ordinarily interfere with the same — But, at the same time, High Court is vested with such powers, though the same are invoked only in cases where extraordinary facts are involved, necessitating such monitoring by courts — When required, not only can High Court or Supreme Court direct investigating agencies to conduct investigation in a fair and unbiased manner, but in exercise of powers under Art. 142, Supreme Court can also issue directions for enforcement of fundamental rights and to ensure that complete justice is done to parties — Therefore, in appropriate cases, courts may monitor investigation into offence, when it is satisfied that either investigation is not being proceeded with or is being influenced by interested persons — On facts, progress of investigation herein was tardy and slow — Hence, High Court rightly adopted procedure for keeping a watch over investigation in order to prevent a miscarriage of justice — It repeatedly intervened and passed orders to ensure that investigation was being conducted diligently — Periodical status reports were required in that regard — Only after High Court began monitoring progress of investigation that investigating authorities began to deal with the matter with some amount of seriousness — Hence, no interference warranted

(5) Refusal to investigate or Improper investigation — Monitoring of investigation and Role of court (contd.)

with orders of High Court — Investigating authorities directed to proceed in the manner indicated by High Court — Constitution of India — Arts. 226, 227, 32, 136 and 142 (Paras 13, 41, 49, 51, 42, 43, 47 and 52). Babubhai Jamnadas Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 9 SCC 610.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-9-2009]

S.N. Sharma v. Bipen Kumar Tiwari, (1970) 1 SCC 653: 1970 SCC (Cri) 258; Kashmeri Devi v. Delhi Admn., 1988 Supp SCC 482: 1988 SCC (Cri) 864; State of Bihar v. Ranchi Zila Samta Party, (1996) 3 SCC 682; Vineet Narain v. Union of India, (1998) 1 SCC 226: 1998 SCC (Cri) 307; State of W.B. v. Nuruddin Mallick, (1998) 8 SCC 143: 1999 SCC (L&S) 144; Nirmal Singh Kahlon v. State of Punjab, (2009) 1 SCC 441: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 523; Gudalure M.J. Cherian v. Union of India, (1992) 1 SCC 397; Comptroller and Auditor General of India v. K.S. Jagannathan, (1986) 2 SCC 679: 1986 SCC (L&S) 345: (1986) 1 ATC 1, relied on [1369] — S. 157 — Investigation — Non-investigation after lodging of FIR — Interference by Supreme Court — Police not proceeding/investigating FIR on ground that custody of accused could not be taken — Accused involved in other cases against him in Kanpur and Delhi, pending at various stages — Custody of petitioner applicant directed to be taken by Mumbai police in present case after cases in Kanpur and Delhi were over, and matter to proceed thereafter. Om Prakash Srivastava v. Union of India, (2005) 12 SCC 458.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-1-2005]

[1370] — S. 157 — Investigation — Stay of — Issuance of show-cause notice to investigating agencies by High Court — Effect — Held, issuance of show-cause notice does not necessarily mean that further investigation cannot be done. Directorate of Enforcement v. Guru Swarup Srivastava, (2006) 6 SCC 350: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 211.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-6-2006]

[1371] — Ss. 157 and 156 — Investigation by police — Power of police not unrestricted — In case of illegal and improper exercise of investigatory powers in violation of statutory provisions Court would interfere

The investigation of an offence is the field exclusively reserved for the police officers whose powers in that field are unfettered so long as the power to investigate into the cognizable offences is legitimately exercised in strict compliance with the provisions falling under Chapter XII of the Code and the courts are not justified in obliterating the track of investigation when the investigating agencies are well within their legal bounds. A noticeable feature of the scheme under Chapter XIV of the Code is that a Magistrate is kept in the picture at all stages of the police investigation but he is not authorised to interfere with the actual investigation or to direct the police how that investigation is to be conducted. But if a police officer transgresses the circumscribed limits and improperly and illegally exercises his investigatory powers in breach of any statutory provision causing serious prejudice to the personal liberty and also property of a citizen, then the court on being approached by the person aggrieved for the redress of any grievance, has to consider the nature and extent of the breach and pass appropriate orders as may be called for without leaving the citizens to the mercy of police echelons since human dignity is a dear value of our Constitution. No one can demand absolute immunity even if he is wrong and claim unquestionable right and unlimited powers exercisable up to unfathomable cosmos. Any recognition of such power will tantamount to recognition of 'Divine Power' which no authority on earth can enjoy. State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426: AIR 1992 SC 604: 1992 Cri LJ 527.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-11-1990]

[1372] — S. 157 — Police Investigation — Interference with by the court — Limitations — Held, interference by the court at the investigation stage is not called for — However, the investigating agency cannot be given the latitude of protracting the conclusion of the investigation without any limit of time (Para 5). Mahendra Lal Das v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 149: 2002 SCC (Cri) 110: AIR 2001 SC 2989.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2001]

[1373] — S. 157 — Investigation when may be commenced — Judicial interference when warranted — Police investigation under, can be commenced only if FIR prima facie discloses commission of a cognizable offence — Where such offence is not disclosed, held, court is justified in interfering with the investigation and quashing the same — Constitution of India — Arts. 226 and 136

Per Chandrachud, C.J. (Varadarajan, J. concurring)

The police do not have an unfettered discretion to commence investigation under S. 157 of the Code. Their right of enquiry is conditioned by the existence of reason to suspect the commission of a cognizable offence and they cannot, reasonably, have reason so to suspect unless the FIR, prima facie, discloses the commission of such offence. If that condition is satisfied, the investigation must go on and the rule in Khwaja Nazir Ahmad case will apply. The court has then no power to stop the investigation. On the other hand, if the FIR does not disclose the commission of a cognizable offence, the court would be justified in quashing the investigation on the basis of the information as laid or received.

In the present case the FIR does not allege, directly or indirectly, that the firm was promoting or conducting a scheme for the making of quick or easy money, dependent on any event or contingency relative or applicable to the enrolment of members into the scheme ; nor does it contain any allegation whatsoever that persons who advanced or deposited their monies with the firm were participants of a scheme for the making of quick or easy money, dependent upon any such event or contingency. Since the FIR did not allege or disclose that the essential requirements of S. 2(c) read with Ss. 4 and 3 of the Act are prima facie satisfied, it cannot be said in the absence of any allegation whatsoever in that behalf, that there is "reason to suspect" the commission of that offence within the meaning of S. 157 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, so as to justify the investigation undertaken by the State authorities.

Therefore, the investigation which has been commenced upon the FIR is without jurisdiction and must, therefore, be quashed.

Per A.N. Sen, J. (concurring)

Whether an offence into which an investigation is made or to be made is disclosed or not must necessarily depend on the facts and circumstances of each particular case and in considering that question the court has mainly to take into consideration the complaint or FIR On a consideration of all the relevant materials, the court has to come to the conclusion whether an offence is disclosed or not. If on such consideration, the court is satisfied that an offence is disclosed, the court will normally not interfere with the investigation into the offence and will generally allow the investigation into the offence to be completed for collecting materials for proving the offence. If on the other hand, the court is satisfied that no offence is disclosed, it will be the duty of the court to interfere with any investigation and to stop the same to prevent any kind of uncalled for and unnecessary harassment to an individual.

As on facts and in the circumstances of the present case no offence under the Act is at all disclosed, it will be manifestly unjust to allow the process of Criminal Code to be issued or continued against the firm and to allow any investigation which will be clearly without any authority.

The proceedings against the firm and its partners arising out of the FIR must be quashed as the FIR and the other materials do not disclose any offence under the Act and as such no investigation into the affairs of the firm under the Act can be permitted or allowed to be continued. State of W.B. v. Swapan Kumar Guha, (1982) 1 SCC 561: 1982 SCC (Cri) 283: AIR 1982 SC 949: 1982 Cri LJ 819: (1982) 1 Comp LJ 217.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J.[1] and A. Varadarajan[2] and A.N. Sen[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 2-2-1982]

[1374] — Ss. 157 & 156 — Fresh investigation — When can be directed by court — Ordinarily further investigation, not reinvestigation, permissible — "Ordinary" excludes extraordinary — Court's interference with investigation warranted only in extraordinary or exceptional cases of gross abuse of power and failure of justice — Court would direct de novo investigation to prevent miscarriage of justice, if investigation is tainted and biased, suffers from irregularities and conducted in mala fide exercise of power by police causing serious prejudice and harassment to any party — Charge-sheet filed and any other order issued by investigating agency pursuant to such vitiated investigation also liable to be quashed — Constitution of India — Arts. 136 and 14

Not only fair trial but fair investigation is also part of constitutional rights guaranteed under Articles 20 and 21 of the Constitution of India. Therefore, investigation must be fair, transparent and judicious as it is the minimum requirement of rule of law. The investigating agency cannot be permitted to conduct an investigation in a tainted and biased manner. The investigation into a criminal offence must be free from objectionable features or infirmities which may legitimately lead to a grievance on the part of the accused that investigation was unfair and carried out with an ulterior motive. It is also the duty of the investigating officer to conduct the investigation avoiding any kind of mischief and harassment to any of the accused. The investigating officer should be fair and conscious so as to rule out any possibility of fabrication of evidence and his impartial conduct must dispel any suspicion as to its genuineness. The investigating officer "is not merely to bolster up a prosecution case with such evidence as may enable the court to record a conviction but to bring out the real unvarnished truth". (Paras 45 and 32)

(5) Refusal to investigate or Improper investigation — Monitoring of investigation and Role of court (contd.)

Where the court comes to the conclusion that there was a serious irregularity in the investigation that had taken place, the court may direct a further investigation under Section 173(8) CrPC, even transferring the investigation to an independent agency, rather than directing a reinvestigation. Scheme of investigation, particularly, Section 173(8) CrPC provides for further investigation and not reinvestigation. Therefore, if the court comes to the conclusion that the investigation has been done in a manner with an object of helping a party, the court may direct for further investigation and ordinarily not for reinvestigation. The expression "ordinarily" means normally and it is used where there can be an exception. It means in the large majority of cases but not invariably. "Ordinarily" excludes "extraordinary" or "special circumstances". Therefore, unless an extraordinary case of gross abuse of power is made out by those in charge of the investigation, the court should be quite loathe to interfere with the investigation, a field of activity reserved for the police and the executive. In exceptional circumstances, the court in order to prevent the miscarriage of criminal justice, if considers necessary, may direct for investigation de novo wherein the case presents exceptional circumstances. Where non-interference of the court would ultimately result in failure of justice, the court must interfere. In such a situation, it may be in the interest of justice that independent agency chosen by the High Court makes a fresh investigation. Thus, in case of a mala fide exercise of power by a police officer the court may interfere. (Paras 37, 40, 41, 38, 42 and 45)

In the instant case, admittedly, the High Court has given detailed reasons for coming to the conclusion that the investigation has been totally one-sided, biased and mala fide. One party has been favoured by the investigating agency. The natural corollary to this finding is that the other party has been harassed in an unwarranted manner. Thus, the cause of the other party has been prejudiced. Even before the High Court conduct of the party and investigating agency was found to have not been fair. (Paras 43 and 29)

The charge-sheets filed by the investigating agency in both the cases are against the same set of accused. A charge-sheet is the outcome of an investigation. If the investigation has not been conducted fairly, such investigation would ultimately prove to be a precursor of miscarriage of criminal justice. In such a case the court would simply try to decipher the truth only on the basis of guess or conjectures as the whole truth would not come before it. It will be difficult for the court to determine how the incident took place wherein three persons died and so many persons including the complainant and the accused got injured. (Para 44)

Thus, the order of the High Court requires modification to the extent that the charge-sheets in both the cases and any order consequent thereto stand quashed. In case any of the accused could not get bail because of the pendency of these appeals before the Supreme Court, it shall be open to him to apply for bail or any other relief before the appropriate forum. (Para 46). Babubhai v. State of Gujarat, (2010) 12 SCC 254.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-8-2010]

R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; Jamuna Chaudhary v. State of Bihar, (1974) 3 SCC 774: 1974 SCC (Cri) 250; Mahmood v. State of U.P., (1976) 1 SCC 542: 1976 SCC (Cri) 72; State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192; Navinchandra N. Majithia v. State of Meghalaya, (2000) 8 SCC 323: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1510; K. Chandrasekhar v. State of Kerala, (1998) 5 SCC 223: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1291; Ramachandran v. R. Udhayakumar, (2008) 5 SCC 413: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 631; Mithabhai Pashabhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 332: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 1047; Kishan Lal v. Dharmendra Bafna, (2009) 7 SCC 685: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 611; S.N. Sharma v. Bipen Kumar Tiwari, (1970) 1 SCC 653: 1970 SCC (Cri) 258; Kashmeri Devi v. Delhi Admn., 1988 Supp SCC 482: 1988 SCC (Cri) 864; Kailash Chandra v. Union of India, AIR 1961 SC 1346; Eicher Tractors Ltd. v. Commr. of Customs, (2001) 1 SCC 315; State of A.P. v. V. Sarma Rao, (2007) 2 SCC 159: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 535; Nirmal Singh Kahlon v. State of Punjab, (2009) 1 SCC 441: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 523; Manu Sharma v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 6 SCC 1: (2010) 2 SCC (Cri) 1385, relied on [1375] — Ss. 157 to 173 — Criminal investigation open to challenge on ground of violation of Art. 21 if investigation not conducted with due observance of procedure. State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192: AIR 1991 SC 1260.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh[1] and K. Ramaswamy[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 2-4-1991]

[1376] — Ss. 157 to 173 — Investigation — Scope of judicial review — Mala fide exercise of power by investigator open to court's interference — Function of judiciary in the course of police investigation is complementary — Except to the extent expressly prohibited by the Code, the Evidence Act and the Constitution, full freedom should be accorded to the investigator to conduct investigation and collect evidence

Per K. Ramaswamy, J.

The Magistrate is empowered to consider the police report and on satisfying himself that the accused prima facie committed the offence, take cognizance of the offence and would issue process or warrant to the accused, if on bail, to appear on a date fixed for trial or to commit him for trial to the Court of Session. It is not incumbent upon the Magistrate to accept the report of the investigating officer that there is no sufficient evidence or reasonable ground to connect the accused with the commission of the crime; he may direct further investigation or suo motu the investigator may himself submit supplemental charge-sheet under S. 173(8) if he subsequently becomes aware of certain facts or itself or through a subordinate Magistrate to make further enquiry or to take cognizance of the offence upon consideration of the material so placed before him and take further steps as aforesaid. Then only proceedings in a criminal case stands commenced. Taking cognizance of the offence is coterminus with the power of the police to investigate in the crime. Until then there is no power to the Magistrate except on a private complaint in a cognizable/non-cognizable offence to direct the police to investigate into the offence. The Magistrate is not empowered to interfere with the investigation by the police.

However, in an appropriate case where after registering the crime if no expeditious investigation for unexplained reasons was done the Magistrate or the High Court, on satisfying the grounds, may direct completion of the investigation within a reasonable time.

"The function of the judiciary and the police are complementary, not overlapping" and "the court's functions begin when a charge is preferred before it, and not until then". State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192: AIR 1991 SC 1260.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh[1] and K. Ramaswamy[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 2-4-1991]

S.N. Sharma v. Bipen Kumar Tiwari, (1970) 1 SCC 653: (1970) 3 SCR 946; State of Bihar v. J.A.C. Saldhana, (1980) 1 SCC 554: 1980 SCC (Cri) 272: (1980) 2 SCR 16; State of W.B. v. Sampat Lal, (1985) 1 SCC 317: 1985 SCC (Cri) 62, relied on

[1377] — Ss. 157 & 155 and 190 — Investigation by police and cognizance by Magistrate — Grounds for — Effect of complaint having been filed by political opponent — Effect of actuation by malice — Held, merely because a political opponent was the complainant does not per se lead to an inference that the complaint has to be thrown out — If the use of the power is for fulfilment of a legitimate object, the actuation or catalysation by malice is not fatal — The ultimate test is whether the allegations have any substance

So far as the allegation that a political opponent had lodged the complaint is concerned, that itself is not sufficient for the court to interfere. When the allegation is made, investigation is undertaken to find out whether there is any substance in the allegation. Merely because the political opponent was the complainant that does not per se lead to an inference that the complaint has to be thrown out or that no notice should be taken thereof. If the use of the power is for the fulfilment of a legitimate object the actuation or catalysation by malice is not legicidal. The ultimate test, therefore, is whether the allegations have any substance. An investigation should not be shut out at the threshold because a political opponent or a person with political difference raises an allegation of commission of offence. Therefore, the plea of mala fides as raised cannot be maintained. (Paras 62, 72 and 74). Parkash Singh Badal v. State of Punjab, (2007) 1 SCC 1: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 193: AIR 2007 SC 1274: (2007) 51 AIC 623 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-12-2006]

[1378] — Ss. 157 & 155 and 190 — Investigation by police and cognizance by Magistrate — Grounds for — Effect of complaint having been filed by political opponent — Effect of actuation by malice — Held, reiterating the view taken in Parkash Singh Badal case, (2007) 1 SCC 1, even though there may be an element of personal or political rivalry, it is not the credibility of the person who makes the allegations but the existence of materials necessitating investigation which is relevant — However, in light of certain materials not having been before High Court, High Court directed to consider the matter relating to plea of mala fides, for which parties permitted to place relevant materials on record (Paras 5 and 11). K. Karunakaran v. State of Kerala, (2007) 1 SCC 59: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 251: (2007) 1 KLT 58: (2007) 208 ELT 322: (2007) 208 ELT 322: (2007) 51 AIC 621 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-12-2006]

R.S. Nayak v. A.R. Antulay, (1984) 2 SCC 183: 1984 SCC (Cri) 172; Parkash Singh Badal v. State of Punjab, (2007) 1 SCC 1, followed

[1379] — Ss. 157, 156 and 159 — Magistrate cannot normally interfere with the police investigation proceeding in compliance with the statutory provisions — Magistrate can intervene only when police officer decides not to investigate

After registration of a case under S. 154(1), the police have a statutory right under S. 156(1) to investigate any cognizable case without requiring sanction of a Magistrate. The core of Ss. 156, 157 and 159 of the Code is that if a police officer has reason to suspect the commission of a cognizable offence, he must either proceed with the investigation or cause an investigation to be proceeded with by his subordinate; that in a case where the police officer sees no sufficient ground for investigation, he can dispense with the investigation altogether; that the field of investigation of any cognizable offence is exclusively within the domain of the investigating agencies over which the courts cannot have control and have no power to stifle or impinge upon the proceedings in the investigation so long as the investigation proceeds in compliance with the provisions relating to investigation and that it is only in a case wherein a police officer decides not to investigate an offence, the concerned Magistrate can intervene and either direct an investigation or in the alternative, if he thinks fit, he himself can, at once proceed or depute any Magistrate subordinate to him to proceed to hold a preliminary inquiry into or otherwise to dispose of the case in the manner provided in the Code. State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426: AIR 1992 SC 604: 1992 Cri LJ 527.

(5) Refusal to investigate or Improper investigation — Monitoring of investigation and Role of court (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-11-1990]

[1380] — Ss. 157, 156, 169, 170, 173 and 190 & 173(8) — Investigation — Interference with, by Magistrate — Held, Magistrate cannot interfere with the investigation — Position same for corruption cases — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 — S. 7-A — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 — S. 22

The provision in Chap. XII CrPC shows that detailed and elaborate provisions have been made for securing that an investigation takes place regarding an offence of which information has been given and the same is done in accordance with the provisions of the Code. The manner and the method of conducting the investigation are left entirely to the officer in charge of the police station or a subordinate officer deputed by him. A Magistrate has no power to interfere with the same. The formation of the opinion whether there is sufficient evidence or reasonable ground of suspicion to justify the forwarding of the case to a Magistrate or not as contemplated by Sections 169 and 170 is to be that of the officer in charge of the police station and a Magistrate has absolutely no role to play at this stage. Similarly, after completion of the investigation while making a report to the Magistrate under Section 173, the requisite details have to be submitted by the officer in charge of the police station without any kind of interference or direction of a Magistrate and this will include a report regarding the fact whether any offence appears to have been committed and if so, by whom, as provided by clause (d) of sub-section (2)(i) of this section. These provisions will also be applicable in cases under the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 by virtue of Section 7-A thereof and the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 by virtue of Section 22 thereof. (Para 13). Union of India v. Prakash P. Hinduja, (2003) 6 SCC 195: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1314: AIR 2003 SC 2612: 2003 Cri LJ 3117.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-7-2003]

[1381] — Ss. 157 and 482 — Direction to initiate investigation against an institution by High Court — Grant of opportunity of hearing to institution prior to said direction — Necessity — High Court on entertaining an anonymous petition directing investigation against the institution in question in respect of which even no complaint/information was lodged with the police — Director of the institution was a party to the petition and the whole of the allegations in the petition were levelled against the institution — Held, in such a situation, it was imperative for the High Court to put the institution on notice before passing the said order — Hence, the impugned order passed without providing any opportunity of hearing to the institution was violative of principles of natural justice

No judicial order can ever be passed by any court without providing a reasonable opportunity of being heard to the person likely to be affected by such order and particularly when such order results in drastic consequences of affecting one's own reputation. The impugned order of the High Court directing enquiry and investigation into allegations against the appellant institution in respect of which not even a complaint/information has been lodged with the police is violative of principles of natural justice. The Director of the appellant institution has been impleaded as a party respondent in the criminal petition and the whole of the allegations in the anonymous petition are levelled against the appellant and in such a situation it was imperative for the High Court to put the appellant on notice before passing the impugned order. The appellant undoubtedly is aggrieved by the impugned order and, therefore, entitled to invoke the jurisdiction under Article 136 of the Constitution. (Paras 51 to 53). Divine Retreat Centre v. State of Kerala, (2008) 3 SCC 542: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 9: AIR 2008 SC 1614: (2008) 1 KLT 1042: 2008 Cri LJ 1891.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.H. Kapadia and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-2008]

Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Union of India v. W.N. Chadha, 1993 Supp (4) SCC 260: 1993 SCC (Cri) 1171, distinguished on facts

[1382] — Ss. 156, 157, 154, 190 and Ch. XII — Remedies open to aggrieved person against improper investigation — Interference in the process of investigation — Permissibility and extent of — Reiterated, aggrieved person can claim investigation and proper investigation but has no right to claim investigation by any particular agency like CBI — Constitution of India — Arts. 21 & 226

If a person has a grievance that the police station is not registering his FIR under Section 154 CrPC, then he can approach the Superintendent of Police under Section 154(3) CrPC by an application in writing. Even if that does not yield any satisfactory result in the sense that either the FIR is still not registered, or that even after registering it no proper investigation is held, it is open to the aggrieved person to file an application under Section 156(3) CrPC before the learned Magistrate concerned. If such an application under Section 156(3) is filed before the Magistrate, the Magistrate can direct the FIR to be registered and also can direct a proper investigation to be made, in a case where, according to the aggrieved person, no proper investigation was made. The Magistrate can also under the same provision monitor the investigation to ensure a proper investigation. (Para 11)

Even if an FIR has been registered and even if the police has made the investigation, or is actually making the investigation, which the aggrieved person feels is not proper, such a person can approach the Magistrate under Section 156(3) CrPC, and if the Magistrate is satisfied he can order a proper investigation and take other suitable steps and pass such order(s) as he thinks necessary for ensuring a proper investigation. All these powers a Magistrate enjoys under Section 156(3) CrPC. (Para 13)

Section 156(3) provides for a check by the Magistrate on the police performing its duties under Chapter XII CrPC. In cases where the Magistrate finds that the police has not done its duty of investigating the case at all, or has not done it satisfactorily, he can issue a direction to the police to do the investigation properly, and can monitor the same. (Para 15)

Section 156(3) CrPC is wide enough to include all such powers in a Magistrate which are necessary for ensuring a proper investigation, and it includes the power to order registration of an FIR and of ordering a proper investigation if the Magistrate is satisfied that a proper investigation has not been done, or is not being done by the police. Section 156(3) CrPC, though briefly worded, is very wide and it will include all such incidental powers as are necessary for ensuring a proper investigation. (Para 17). Sakiri Vasu v. State of U.P., (2008) 2 SCC 409: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 440: AIR 2008 SC 907: (2008) 1 KLT 724: (2008) 2 Guj LR 1666.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.K. Mathur and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-12-2007]

CBI v. Rajesh Gandhi, (1996) 11 SCC 253: 1997 SCC (Cri) 88, relied on [1383] — S. 157 — Investigation — Inaction of police — Responsibility of officers concerned — Proceedings that may be initiated — Investigation by particular agency (CBI) — Directions for — Petitioner claiming various reliefs — However, Supreme Court finding that only grievance worth entertaining under Art. 32, and as highlighted by amicus curiae, was remissness on part of police officials concerned in investigating crime allegedly committed against petitioner — Police having identified negligent officer, and as criminal proceedings in respect of said crime pending, Supreme Court not making any observations in respect thereof — Leaving it open to State Government to take appropriate departmental action against negligent officer concerned if criminal court seized of matter, came to such a finding — Constitution of India — Art. 32 (Paras 11 to 13). K. Vidya Sagar v. State of U.P., (2005) 5 SCC 581: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1345: AIR 2005 SC 2911: 2005 All LJ 2450.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and H.K. Sema and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-7-2005]

[Ed.: See also (1983) 3 SCC 344; see generally Art. 32, '(b)(11)(iii) Interference in particular kinds of matters/rights — Criminal matters...' pp. 400 et seq., and '(e)(6)(xv) Orders/Directions relating to particular aspects/matters — Police inaction/atrocities', pp. 593 et seq. in Vol. 7, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn.]

[1384] — S. 157 — Non-compliance with requirements of — Conclusion of High Court in respect of — On facts, not justified

It has not been indicated as to why and how the High Court came to the conclusion about non-compliance with the requirements of Section 157 CrPC. It was only stated that there was no proof of compliance with Section 157 CrPC. It has not been indicated as to what is the requirement and what proof was required to be adduced. (Para 8). State of M.P. v. Mansingh, (2003) 10 SCC 414.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-2003]

(5) Refusal to investigate or Improper investigation — Monitoring of investigation and Role of court (contd.)

[1385] — Ss. 157, 156 and 169 — Non-prosecution by police — Effect — Conviction upheld on the ground that testimony of prosecutrix stood corroborated by the medical report and her father's testimony — Police abandoning case of rape on ground of complaint being not genuine — Report of Chemical Examiner on vaginal swabs for semen withheld by police — Held, in such circumstances, at the trial based on private complaint by the prosecutrix, defence cannot rely on non-prosecution by the police — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 376

It is curious that in spite of the statements of the girl and her father and the medical report, the police was not satisfied even prima facie as to the truth of the allegations against the appellants. The police officers including the Superintendent of Police, did not even consider it their duty to produce before the court the report of examination by the Chemical Examiner of the vaginal swabs of the prosecutrix as to the presence of semen and spermatozoa. There is no explanation why such a very important and vital evidence has been withheld from the court. In the circumstances, no importance whatsoever should be given to the fact that the police was not satisfied about the genuineness of the prosecution case. Balwant Singh v. State of Punjab, (1987) 2 SCC 27: 1987 SCC (Cri) 249: AIR 1987 SC 1080: 1987 Cri LJ 971.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.L. Oza and M.M. Dutt, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-2-1987]

(6) Power under Section 156(3) — Nature and Scope

See also Sections 155 to 159, '(2)(iv) Ss. 156 and 202 — Relative scope', and

(5) Refusal to investigate or Improper investigation — Monitoring of investigation and Role of court', above

See also Ss. 190 and 202, below

[1386] — Ss. 156(3) and 190 — Relative scope — Two sections are mutually exclusive — S. 156(3) operates at pre-cognizance stage — A Magistrate on receiving complaint under S. 190 may not take cognizance and order investigation under S. 156(3) (even if offence charged is exclusively triable by Court of Session) — Having done so he is not debarred on receiving final report of police from taking cognizance and proceeding with the complaint according to Ss. 200 and 204. Tula Ram v. Kishore Singh, (1977) 4 SCC 459: 1977 SCC (Cri) 621: AIR 1977 SC 2401: 1978 Cri LJ 8.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and P.S. Kailasam, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-10-1977]

[1387] — Ss. 156(3), 157(1) proviso (b) & (2), 190, 200 and 154 — Power of Magistrate to direct investigation — When arises — Effect of order under S. 156(3) — Held, the said power arises in two situations: (i) when FIR is refused to be lodged; and (ii) when statutory power of investigation for some reason or the other is not exercised — Further held, when order is passed under S. 156(3), investigation must be carried out, which culminates in filing a charge-sheet if prima facie case is made out — When however, IO finds that alleged offence has not been committed, a report to that effect needs to be submitted (Paras 6 and 7). Dharmeshbhai Vasudevbhai v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 576.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2009]

S.N. Sharma v. Bipen Kumar Tiwari, (1970) 1 SCC 653: 1970 SCC (Cri) 258; Devarapalli Lakshminarayana Reddy v. V. Narayana Reddy, (1976) 3 SCC 252: 1976 SCC (Cri) 380; Adalat Prasad v. Rooplal Jindal, (2004) 7 SCC 338: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1927; K.M. Mathew v. State of Kerala, (1992) 1 SCC 217: 1992 SCC (Cri) 88; Everest Advertising (P) Ltd. v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (2007) 5 SCC 54: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 444; Dinesh Dalmia v. CBI, (2007) 8 SCC 770: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 36; S. Suresh v. Annappa Reddy, (2004) 13 SCC 424, followed

[1388] — Ss. 156(3) & 320 and 482 & 483 — Power of Magistrate to recall order for investigation passed by him under S. 156(3) or for withdrawal of investigation — Unavailability of — Inherent powers, if any — Held, powers of Magistrate are limited and he has no inherent powers — Ordinarily he has no power to recall his order — In the instant case investigation was directed by Magistrate in terms of S. 156(3) — He had no jurisdiction to recall said order — High Court erred in not interfering with his order recalling the investigation — Further held, High Court could have interfered therewith even suo motu when it was brought to its notice — CrPC, 1898, S. 561-A — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 406, 420, 423, 465, 477, 468, 471, 120-B, 124 and 34 (Paras 8 to 11)

The appellants were depositors in a cooperative bank. Some of the borrowers had mortgaged their properties with the Bank. Alleging commission of offences under Ss. 406, 420, 423, 465, 477, 468, 471, 120-B, 124 and 34 IPC, Bank filed complaint petition before Judicial Magistrate against respondent-accused seeking direction against the police to register and investigate the case under S. 156(3) CrPC. The Magistrate upon considering the allegations granted the prayer. However, the complainant thereafter filed an application before Magistrate informing him that a compromise had been entered into by and between the accused and the Bank. Pursuant thereto, order directing enquiry was recalled by the Magistrate. A writ petition was filed by appellants challenging the same. The High Court by impugned judgment declined to interfere with the said order. Hence, the present appeal.

Allowing the appeals, the Supreme Court held as above. Dharmeshbhai Vasudevbhai v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 576.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2009]

S.N. Sharma v. Bipen Kumar Tiwari, (1970) 1 SCC 653: 1970 SCC (Cri) 258; Devarapalli Lakshminarayana Reddy v. V. Narayana Reddy, (1976) 3 SCC 252: 1976 SCC (Cri) 380; Adalat Prasad v. Rooplal Jindal, (2004) 7 SCC 338: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1927; K.M. Mathew v. State of Kerala, (1992) 1 SCC 217: 1992 SCC (Cri) 88; Everest Advertising (P) Ltd. v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (2007) 5 SCC 54: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 444; Dinesh Dalmia v. CBI, (2007) 8 SCC 770: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 36; S. Suresh v. Annappa Reddy, (2004) 13 SCC 424, followed

[1389] — S. 156(3) — Direction for investigation by Magistrate under — Requirements for — Power if properly exercised — Magistrate allowing application filed by respondent SEPCO under S. 156(3) CrPC, and forwarding original complaint alleging commission of offences under Ss. 405, 406, 418, 420, 427, 503, 504, 506/34 and 120-B IPC, to SHO concerned directing him to register FIR after due enquiry, and to submit charge-sheet after investigation — Sustainability — Held, for proceeding under S. 156(3) what is required is a bare reading of complaint and whether it discloses a cognizable offence — Magistrate then instead of applying his mind to the complaint for deciding whether or not there are sufficient grounds for proceeding, may direct police to investigate — In instant case, offences alleged were all cognizable offences, and hence, Magistrate committed no illegality in passing direction for investigation, warranting any interference by High Court under Art. 226 of the Constitution — Single Judge as well as Division Bench rightly refused to interfere with such limited order — Moreover, challenge at this stage by appellants was premature and High Court rightly rejected their request — Constitution of India — Arts. 226 and 136 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 405, 406, 418, 420, 427, 503, 504, 506/34 and 120-B (Paras 15 to 24)

The Magistrate only ordered investigation under Section 156(3) CrPC. The Magistrate perused the complaint without examining the merits of the claim that there is sufficient ground for proceeding or not and directed the police officer concerned for investigation under Section 156(3) CrPC. As rightly observed by the Single Judge of the High Court, the Magistrate did not bring into motion the machinery of Chapter XV CrPC. He did not examine the complainant or his witnesses under Section 200 CrPC which is the first step in the procedure prescribed under the said Chapter. The question of taking the next step of the procedure envisaged in Section 202 did not arise. Instead of taking cognizance of the offence, the Magistrate has merely allowed the application filed by the complainant/SEPCO under Section 156(3) CrPC and sent the same along with its annexure for investigation by the police officer concerned. (Para 22)

To proceed under Section 156(3) CrPC, what is required is a bare reading of the complaint and if it discloses a cognizable offence, then the Magistrate instead of applying his mind to the complaint for deciding whether or not there is sufficient ground for proceeding, may direct the police for investigation. In the case on hand, the Single Judge and the Division Bench of the High Court rightly pointed out that the Magistrate did not apply his mind to the complaint for deciding whether or not there is sufficient ground for proceeding and, therefore, the Magistrate has not committed any illegality in directing the police for investigation. As a matter of fact, even after receipt of a report under Section 173, the Magistrate under Section 190(1)(b) may or may not take cognizance of offence. In other words, he is not bound to take cognizance upon submission of the police report by the investigating officer, hence, by directing the police to file charge-sheet or final report and to hold investigation, it cannot be construed that the Magistrate has exceeded his power as provided in Section 156(3). (Para 23). Srinivas Gundluri v. SEPCO Electric Power Construction Corpn., (2010) 8 SCC 206.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and Anil R. Dave, JJ. [Date of decision : 30-7-2010]

Devarapalli Lakshminarayana Reddy v. V. Narayana Reddy, (1976) 3 SCC 252: 1976 SCC (Cri) 380; Tula Ram v. Kishore Singh, (1977) 4 SCC 459: 1977 SCC (Cri) 621, relied on

Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234, distinguished on facts

Nirmaljit Singh Hoon v. State of W.B., (1973) 3 SCC 753: 1973 SCC (Cri) 521, cited

[1390] — Ss. 156(3), 190 and 200 — Exercise of jurisdiction — Need for prima facie satisfaction of Magistrate that offence has been committed — Need to examine complainant and witnesses, if any — Summoning of accused in a criminal case being a serious matter, application of mind by Magistrate, emphasised

The Chief Judicial Magistrate noticed that the Bank deceived the Company by filing false suit before DRT by making false submissions and producing false affidavit. Hence the complaint necessitated investigation by the police. Whether such a suit is maintainable and/or is ultimately to be decreed or disposed of is a question which has to be gone into in the suit itself. A criminal court cannot even take that factor into consideration. (Paras 10 and 14)

(6) Power under Section 156(3) — Nature and Scope (contd.)

Where a jurisdiction is exercised on a complaint petition filed in terms of Section 156(3) or Section 200 CrPC, the Magistrate is required to apply his mind. Summoning of an accused in a criminal case is a serious matter. Criminal law cannot be set into motion as a matter of course. The Magistrate has to carefully scrutinise the evidence brought on record and may even himself put questions to the complainant and his witnesses to elicit answers to find out the truthfulness of the allegations or otherwise and then examine if any offence is prima facie committed by all or any of the accused. (Paras 13 and 15). Maksud Saiyed v. State of Gujarat, (2008) 5 SCC 668: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 692: (2007) 140 Comp Cas 590.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-2007]

Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Special Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400, relied on

[1391] — Ss. 156(3) and 200 — Power of Magistrate under S. 156(3) — Magistrate, before taking cognizance of an offence and without examining the complainant on oath, if could direct the police to register an FIR and investigate the matter concerned — Prize Chits and Money Circulation Schemes (Banning) Act, 1978 — S. 3 — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 420

Any Judicial Magistrate, before taking cognizance of the offence, can order investigation under Section 156(3) CrPC. If he does so, he is not to examine the complainant on oath because he was not taking cognizance of any offence therein. For the purpose of enabling the police to start investigation it is open to the Magistrate to direct the police to register an FIR. There is nothing illegal in doing so. Even if a Magistrate does not say in so many words while directing investigation under Section 156(3) of the Code that an FIR should be registered, it is the duty of the officer in charge of the police station to register the FIR regarding the cognizable offence disclosed by the complaint because that police officer could take further steps contemplated in Chapter XII of the Code only thereafter. (Para 10). Suresh Chand Jain v. State of M.P., (2001) 2 SCC 628: 2001 SCC (Cri) 377: AIR 2001 SC 571.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-1-2001]

Ram Narain v. Lokuram, (1986) 37 Raj LW 143, distinguished

Suresh Kumar v. State of Haryana, (1996) 3 Rec Cri R 137, overruled

Gopal Das Sindhi v. State of Assam, AIR 1961 SC 986: (1961) 2 Cri LJ 39; Tula Ram v. Kishore Singh, (1977) 4 SCC 459: 1977 SCC (Cri) 621: AIR 1977 SC 2401, followed

[1392] — Ss. 156(3) and 177, 178, 181 and Ss. 156(2) & (1) & 190 — Nature and scope of Magistrate's power under S. 156(3) explained — Magistrate's direction under S. 156(3) to police officer for conducting investigation — Whether police officer can file a report that he does not have territorial jurisdiction to conduct investigation — Held, not permissible — Magistrate exercises power at a stage prior to taking decision whether or not he has requisite jurisdiction to issue process — Such a decision can be taken by Magistrate only when he has complete facts before him on the basis of investigation conducted by police — On facts also held, cause of action had partly arisen in Ahmedabad (in State of Gujarat) and therefore Economic Offences Wing, CID (Crime), Ahmedabad, could not refuse to investigate on the ground that it did not have territorial jurisdiction — Multi-State Cooperative Societies Act, 2002, S. 119

The appellant had taken a loan from a cooperative Bank which had its business operations in the States of Gujarat, Maharashtra and other States. The Bank filed criminal complaints against the appellant in Ahmedabad in the State of Gujarat. The Magistrate issued a direction under Section 156(3) CrPC to the Economic Offences Wing, CID (Crime), Ahmedabad to conduct an investigation against the appellant. The police however filed a report that the alleged offences were committed in the State of Maharashtra inasmuch as the loan was taken by the appellant from a branch of the cooperative Bank which was situated and registered in Maharashtra, and therefore the Gujarat police did not have territorial jurisdiction to conduct investigation. It was further prayed that the competent agency to conduct the investigation was Maharashtra police. It was however on record that the appellant had applied for a loan to the Head Office of the cooperative Bank in Gujarat and loan was sanctioned by the Head Office.

The High Court held that police in Ahmeda- bad could not refuse to conduct investigation on the ground that it did not have territorial jurisdiction contending that the cause of action had arisen in Maharashtra.

Affirming the judgment of the High Court and dismissing the appeal,

Held :

It was not within the jurisdiction of investigating agency to refrain itself from holding a proper and complete investigation merely upon arriving at a conclusion that the offences had been committed beyond its territorial jurisdiction. The material before the Magistrate indicates that a major part of loan transaction had, in fact, taken place in the State of Gujarat and that having regard to provisions of Section 156(2) CrPC, proceedings of investigation could not be questioned on the ground of jurisdiction of the officer to conduct such investigation. It was open to the Magistrate to direct an investigation under Section 156(3) CrPC without taking cognizance on complaint and where an investigation is undertaken at the instance of the Magistrate, a police officer empowered under Section 156(1) is bound, except in specific and especially exceptional cases, to conduct such an investigation even if he was of the view that he did not have jurisdiction to investigate the matter. (Paras 27 and 28)

A complaint made in a criminal case follows the place where the cause arises, but the distinguishing feature in the instant case is that the stage of taking cognizance was yet to arrive. The investigating agency was required to place facts elicited during investigation before the court in order to enable the court to come to a conclusion as to whether it had jurisdiction to entertain the complaint or not. Without conducting such an investigation, it was improper on the part of investigating agency to forward its report with the observation that since the entire cause of action for the alleged offence had purportedly arisen in the city of Mumbai within the State of Maharashtra, the investigation should be transferred to the police station concerned in Mumbai. (Para 30)

Section 156(3) contemplates a stage where the Magistrate is not convinced as to whether process should issue on the facts disclosed in the complaint. Once the facts are received, it is for the Magistrate to decide his next course of action. In this case, there are materials to show that the appellant had filed his application for a loan with the Head Office of the Bank at Ahmedabad and that processing and sanction of loan was also done in Ahmedabad, which clearly indicates that a major part of the cause of action for complaints arose within the jurisdiction of the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Ahmedabad. It was not, therefore, desirable on the part of the investigating agency to make an observation that it did not have territorial jurisdiction to proceed with the investigation, and which was required to be transferred to the police station having jurisdiction to do so. (Paras 31 and 33). Rasiklal Dalpatram Thakkar v. State of Gujarat, (2010) 1 SCC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-11-2009]

Agencia Commercial International Ltd. v. Custodian of the Branches of Banco Nacional Ultramarino, (1982) 2 SCC 482; Satvinder Kaur v. State (NCT of Delhi), (1999) 8 SCC 728: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1503; Naresh Kavarchand Khatri v. State of Gujarat, (2008) 8 SCC 300: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 614; Asit Bhattacharjee v. Hanuman Prasad Ojha, (2007) 5 SCC 786: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 31, distinguished on facts

[1393] — Ss. 156(3) and 181(4) — Magistrate's direction under S. 156(3) to police for conducting investigation in a case involving criminal misappropriation or criminal breach of trust — Magistrate's territorial jurisdiction if restricted by S. 181(4) — Held, direction for investigation given by Magistrate under S. 156(3) is not restricted by territorial limit laid down in S. 181(4) — Direction for investigation under S. 156(3) can therefore be given by Magistrate irrespective of territorial limit for enquiry or trial under S. 181(4) — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 403 and 405 (Paras 25 and 26). Rasiklal Dalpatram Thakkar v. State of Gujarat, (2010) 1 SCC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-11-2009]

[1394] — S. 156(3) and Ch. XII — Incidental/Implied powers of Magistrate to direct/monitor police investigation, laid down — Doctrine of implied powers applied — Held, S. 156(3) CrPC is wide enough to include all such powers in a Magistrate which are necessary for ensuring a proper investigation (Paras 17 to 23). Sakiri Vasu v. State of U.P., (2008) 2 SCC 409: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 440: AIR 2008 SC 907: (2008) 1 KLT 724: (2008) 2 Guj LR 1666.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.K. Mathur and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-12-2007]

ITO v. M.K. Mohammad Kunhi, AIR 1969 SC 430; Union of India v. Paras Laminates (P) Ltd., (1990) 4 SCC 453: 1991 SCC (L&S) 208: (1990) 14 ATC 798; RBI v. Peerless General Finance and Investment Co. Ltd., (1996) 1 SCC 642; CEO & Vice-Chairman, Gujarat Maritime Board v. Haji Daud Haji Harun Abu, (1996) 11 SCC 23; J.K. Synthetics Ltd. v. CCE, (1996) 6 SCC 92; State of Karnataka v. Vishwabharathi House Building Coop. Society, (2003) 2 SCC 412; Savitri v. Govind Singh Rawat, (1985) 4 SCC 337: 1985 SCC (Cri) 556, applied

Mohd. Yousuf v. Afaq Jahan, (2006) 1 SCC 627: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 460; Dilawar Singh v. State of Delhi, (2007) 12 SCC 641; State of Bihar v. J.A.C. Saldanha, (1980) 1 SCC 554: 1980 SCC (Cri) 272, relied on

Union of India v. Prakash P. Hinduja, (2003) 6 SCC 195: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1314, clarified

Doubted in Nirmal Singh Kahlon v. State of Punjab, (2009) 1 SCC 441*

(6) Power under Section 156(3) — Nature and Scope (contd.)

[1395] — S. 156(3) — CJM directing CBI to investigate a case — Competence of the Magistrate to issue such direction — What kind of cases should be entrusted to CBI for investigation — Routine case of theft of muddamal property not such a case — Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (Central Act 25 of 1946)

In CBI v. State of Rajasthan the Supreme Court held that magisterial power cannot be stretched under Section 156(3) beyond directing the officer in charge of a police station to conduct the investigation and no such direction can be given to CBI. In the instant case, the first information report was already registered and in that sense Section 156(3) CrPC had no application. There is substance in the plea that routine matters should not be entrusted to CBI as the investigating agencies of various States can effectively investigate such matters. Of course, where it is shown that the investigating agency is not doing proper investigation and/or that there is reason to believe that there is laxity in the investigation, a direction may be given to CBI to investigate the matter in appropriate cases. This case is not one where any complexity was involved. It was a routine case of theft of muddamal property. The Sessions Judge, therefore, rightly appears to have set aside the orders passed by the Chief Judicial Magistrate. The High Court had no basis to doubt the bona fides of CBI in moving the application before it under Section 397 CrPC. There was no bar for the High Court to entertain the said petition. The criticism levelled against CBI and its officers and costs imposed do not have any legal sanction. They are accordingly set aside. (Para 5). CBI v. State of Gujarat, (2007) 6 SCC 156: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 65: AIR 2007 SC 2522: (2007) 56 AIC 65 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-6-2007]

CBI v. State of Rajasthan, (2001) 3 SCC 333: 2001 SCC (Cri) 524, relied on [1396] — S. 156(3) — Magistrate's power to order investigation — When available — Held, where FIR already registered, S. 156(3) has no application (Para 5). CBI v. State of Gujarat, (2007) 6 SCC 156: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 65: AIR 2007 SC 2522: (2007) 56 AIC 65 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-6-2007]

[1397] — S. 156(3) — Non-application of mind — Order for police investigation — Untenable assumptions — Magistrate assuming submission of false affidavit by Company in a pending civil suit — Held, whether such a suit is maintainable and/or is ultimately to be decreed or disposed of is a question which has to be gone into in the suit itself — A criminal court cannot even take that factor into consideration

The jurisdiction of the High Court to quash an FIR in exercise of its jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC is well known. The Court may not enter into determination of a disputed question of fact at that stage. It may, however, take note of the allegations made in the complaint petition vis-à-vis the conduct of the parties. Allegations contained in the complaint petition, as noticed by the Magistrate, may give rise to tortious liability on the part of the Bank. Principal allegations were made against the Bank. Who had acted on behalf of the Bank was not disclosed. The acts of omission and commission on the part of the Bank, if any, by withholding export bills of the Bank may give rise to a statutory violation on its part but the respondents were not personally liable therefor. (Paras 6 and 11)

IPC does not contain any provision for attaching vicarious liability on the part of the Managing Director or the Directors of the Company when the accused is the Company. The learned Magistrate failed to pose unto himself the correct question viz. as to whether the complaint petition, even if given face value and taken to be correct in its entirety, would lead to the conclusion that the respondents were personally liable for any offence. The Bank is a body corporate. Vicarious liability of the Managing Director and Director would arise provided any provision exists in that behalf in the statute. Statutes indisputably must contain provision fixing such vicarious liabilities. Even for the said purpose, it is obligatory on the part of the complainant to make requisite allegations which would attract the provisions constituting vicarious liability. (Para 13). Maksud Saiyed v. State of Gujarat, (2008) 5 SCC 668: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 692: (2007) 140 Comp Cas 590.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-2007]

Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Special Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400, relied on

[1398] — Ss. 156(3) and 202 — Scope of order made under S. 156(3) — Compared with order under S. 202

An order made under sub-section (3) of S. 156 is in the nature of a peremptory reminder or intimation to the police to exercise their plenary powers of investigation under S. 156(1). Such an investigation embraces the entire continuous process which begins with the collection of evidence under S. 156 and ends with a report or charge-sheet under S. 173.

On the other hand the object of an investigation under S. 202 is not to initiate a fresh case on police report but to assist the magistrate in completing proceedings already instituted upon a complaint before him. Devarapally Lakshminarayana Reddy v. V. Narayana Reddy, (1976) 3 SCC 252: 1976 SCC (Cri) 380: AIR 1976 SC 1672: 1976 Cri LJ 1361.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria, P.N. Shinghal and Jaswant Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-5-1976]

[1399] — S. 156(3) — Scope of power of Magistrate under, in respect of investigations — Held, S. 156(3) does not empower a Magistrate to stop an investigation undertaken by the police (Para 71). Parkash Singh Badal v. State of Punjab, (2007) 1 SCC 1: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 193: AIR 2007 SC 1274: (2007) 51 AIC 623 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-12-2006]

State of Punjab v. Gurdial Singh, (1980) 2 SCC 471; State of Bihar v. J.A.C. Saldanha, (1980) 1 SCC 554: 1980 SCC (Cri) 272; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Gangadhar Janardan Mhatre v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 7 SCC 768: 2005 SCC (Cri) 404, relied on [1400] — S. 156(3) — Order passed under — Nature of — Whether a judicial order or an administrative order — Question not gone into (Para 39). Asit Bhattacharjee v. Hanuman Prasad Ojha, (2007) 5 SCC 786: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 31: AIR 2007 SC 1925: 2007 Cri LJ 3181: (2007) 104 Cut LT 488: (2007) 4 All LJ 567: (2007) 54 AIC 38 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-5-2007]

[1401] — Ss. 156(3), 173(2), 154 and 190(1)(a) & (b) — Complaint to Magistrate disclosing cognizable offence — Direction by Magistrate asking the police to register a case and investigate into the same — Held, not illegal — In such a situation the complaint transforms itself to a first information report — Even in the absence of a direction to register a case the police is bound to formally register a case and then investigate into the same — On police report submitted under S. 173(2) after completion of investigation the Magistrate may take cognizance under S. 190(1)(b) and not S. 190(1)(a) — Proper direction under S. 156(3) to the police would be "to register a case treating the complaint as the FIR and investigate into the same"

When a written complaint disclosing a cognizable offence is made before a Magistrate, he may take cognizance upon the same under Section 190(1)(a) of the Code and proceed with the same in accordance with the provisions of Chapter XV. The other option available to the Magistrate in such a case is to send the complaint to the appropriate police station under Section 156(3) for investigation. Once such a direction is given under sub-section (3) of Section 156 the police is required to investigate into that complaint under sub-section (1) thereof and on completion of investigation to submit a "police report" in accordance with Section 173(2) on which a Magistrate may take cognizance under Section 190(1)(b) — but not under Section 190(1)(a). Since a complaint filed before a Magistrate cannot be a "police report" in view of the definition of "complaint" referred to earlier and since the investigation of a "cognizable case" by the police under Section 156(1) has to culminate in a "police report" the "complaint" — as soon as an order under Section 156(3) is passed thereon — transforms itself to a report given in writing within the meaning of Section 154 of the Code, which is known as the first information report (FIR). As under Section 156(1), the police can only investigate a cognizable "case", it has to formally register a case on that report.

Whenever a Magistrate directs an investigation on a "complaint" the police has to register a cognizable case on that complaint treating the same as the FIR and comply with the requirements of the above Rules. Therefore, it cannot be said that the direction of a Magistrate asking the police to "register a case" makes an order of investigation under Section 156(3) legally unsustainable. Indeed, even if a Magistrate does not pass a direction to register a case, still in view of the provisions of Section 156(1) of the Code which empowers the police to investigate into a cognizable "case" and the Rules framed under the Indian Police Act, 1861 it (the police) is duty-bound to formally register a case and then investigate into the same. The provisions of the Code, therefore, do not in any way stand in the way of a Magistrate to direct the police to register a case at the police station and then investigate into the same. when an order for investigation under Section 156(3) of the Code is to be made the proper direction to the police would be "to register a case at the police station treating the complaint as the first information report and investigate into the same". Madhu Bala v. Suresh Kumar, (1997) 8 SCC 476: AIR 1997 SC 3104: 1997 Cri LJ 3757.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-7-1997]

Gopal Das Sindhi v. State of Assam, AIR 1961 SC 986: (1961) 2 Cri LJ 39: (1961) 1 MLJ (SC) 217; Tula Ram v. Kishore Singh, (1977) 4 SCC 459: 1977 SCC (Cri) 621, distinguished

[1402] — Ss. 156(3), 173(8), 190, 200 and 204 — A Judicial Magistrate, after taking cognizance of an offence on the basis of police report and after appearance of the accused, cannot order of his own further investigation in the case — Order of the Magistrate directing further investigation set aside with a direction to dispose of the case either by framing the charge or discharge the accused on the basis of the material already on the record — If the order be of discharge, further investigation by the police on its own would be permissible. Randhir Singh Rana v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1997) 1 SCC 361: AIR 1997 SC 639: 1997 Cri LJ 779.

(6) Power under Section 156(3) — Nature and Scope (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and B.L. Hansaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-12-1996]

Abhinandan Jha v. Dinesh Mishra, (1967) 3 SCR 668: AIR 1968 SC 117; Tula Ram v. Kishore Singh, (1977) 4 SCC 459: 1977 SCC (Cri) 621; Ram Lal Narang v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1979) 2 SCC 322: 1979 SCC (Cri) 479; State v. Mehar Singh, 1974 Cri LJ 970: ILR (1973) 2 Punj 561 (P&H); Devarapalli Lakshminarayana Reddy v. V. Narayana Reddy, (1976) 3 SCC 252: 1976 SCC (Cri) 380; State v. Sankar Halder, 89 CWN 1063; State of Rajasthan v. Aruna Devi, (1995) 1 SCC 1: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1, distinguished [1403] — S. 156(3) — A Magistrate under S. 156(3) has no power to direct CBI to conduct investigation into any offence. CBI v. State of Rajasthan, (2001) 3 SCC 333: 2001 SCC (Cri) 524: AIR 2001 SC 668: (2001) 1 KLT 563: 2001 Cri LJ 968.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-1-2001]

[1404] — Ss. 156(3) and 36 — Power of Magistrate to direct superior police officer, if any — S. 156(3) confers power on Magistrate to order an "officer in charge of a police station" to investigate any cognizable case over which the Magistrate has jurisdiction — Though Magistrate cannot direct a superior police officer to conduct the investigation but if the superior officer conducts the investigation suo motu or on direction of a superior officer, such investigation would be deemed to be one conducted by the officer in charge of the police station — S. 36 is only meant to supplement the powers of the officer in charge of the police station

What is contained in sub-section (3) of Section 156, is the power of a Magistrate to order an "officer in charge of a police station" to conduct an investigation referred to in sub-section (1), because the words "order such an investigation as abovementioned" in sub-section (3) are unmistakably clear as referring to the other sub-section. The two expressions "police station" and "officer in charge of a police station" have been given separate definitions in the Code in Sections 2(o) and 2(s) respectively. A place or post declared by the Government as police station, must have a police officer in charge of it and if he, for any reason, is absent in the station house, the officer who is in the next junior rank present in the police station, shall perform the function as officer in charge of that police station. The primary responsibility for conducting investigation into offences in cognizable cases vests with such police officer. Section 156(3) of the Code empowers a Magistrate to direct such officer in charge of the police station to investigate any cognizable case over which such Magistrate has jurisdiction. Though a Magistrate under Section 156(3) can only direct an officer in charge of a police station to conduct such investigation and not a superior police officer, nevertheless, when such an order is passed, any police officer superior in rank of such officer, can as well exercise the power to conduct an investigation, and all such investigations would then be deemed to be the investigation conducted by the officer in charge of a police station. Section 36 of the Code is not meant to substitute the magisterial power envisaged in Section 156(3) of the Code, though it could supplement the powers of an officer in charge of a police station. It is permissible for any superior officer of police to take over the investigation from such officer in charge of the police station either suo motu or on the direction of the superior officer or even that of the Government. However, the magisterial power cannot be stretched under Section 156(3) beyond directing the officer in charge of a police station to conduct the investigation. A Magistrate cannot direct CBI to conduct investigation in exercise of his powers under Section 156(3) of the Code. (Para 16)

However, powers of the High Court under Article 226 of the Constitution and of the Supreme Court under Article 32 or Article 142(1) of the Constitution can be invoked, though sparingly, for giving such direction to CBI to investigate in certain cases. But the present case is not concerned with that aspect of the matter. (Paras 14 and 16). CBI v. State of Rajasthan, (2001) 3 SCC 333: 2001 SCC (Cri) 524: AIR 2001 SC 668: (2001) 1 KLT 563: 2001 Cri LJ 968.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-1-2001]

State of Kerala v. Kolakkacan Moosa Haji, (1993) 2 KLT 609: 1994 Cri LJ 1288 (Ker), approved

State of W.B. v. Sampat Lal, (1985) 1 SCC 317: 1985 SCC (Cri) 62, distinguished

Kashmeri Devi v. Delhi Admn., 1988 Supp SCC 482: 1988 SCC (Cri) 864; Maniyeri Madhavan v. Sub-Inspector of Police, (1994) 1 SCC 536: 1994 SCC (Cri) 442; Mohd. Anis v. Union of India, 1994 Supp (1) SCC 145: 1994 SCC (Cri) 251, relied on

[1405] — Ss. 156(3) and 154 — Duty of police to register FIR in case S. 156(3) is attracted — Held, registration of an FIR involves only the process of entering the substance of the information relating to commission of the cognizable offence in a book kept by the officer in charge of the police station — Held, it is the duty of the officer in charge of the police station to register an FIR when investigation under S. 156(3) is directed by the Magistrate, even when the Magistrate explicitly does not say so

Any Judicial Magistrate, before taking cognizance of the offence, can order investigation under Section 156(3) CrPC. But if he does so, he is not to examine the complainant on oath because he was not taking cognizance of any offence therein. For the purpose of enabling the police to start investigation it is open to the Magistrate to direct the police to register an FIR. There is nothing illegal in doing so. After all registration of an FIR involves only the process of entering the substance of the information relating to the commission of the cognizable offence in a book kept by the officer in charge of the police station. Even if a Magistrate does not say in so many words while directing investigation under Section 156(3) CrPC that an FIR should be registered, it is the duty of the officer in charge of the police station to register the FIR regarding the cognizable offence disclosed by the complainant because that police officer could take further steps contemplated in Chapter XII CrPC only thereafter. (Para 11). Mohd. Yousuf v. Afaq Jahan, (2006) 1 SCC 627: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 460: AIR 2006 SC 705: (2006) 1 KLT 939: (2006) 2 Guj LR 1742: (2006) 38 AIC 70 (SC): 2006 Cri LJ 788.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-1-2006]

Suresh Chand Jain v. State of M.P., (2001) 2 SCC 628: 2001 SCC (Cri) 377, relied on

Gopal Das Sindhi v. State of Assam, AIR 1961 SC 986: (1961) 2 Cri LJ 39; Narayandas Bhagwandas Madhavdas v. State of W.B., (1960) 1 SCR 93: AIR 1959 SC 1118: 1959 Cri LJ 1368, considered

[1406] — Ss. 156(3), 340 and 195 — Offence under S. 182 IPC — Essential ingredients — Application under S. 156(3) CrPC, moved by the petitioner against the respondents in the Court of Special Sessions Judge (SSJ), not disclosing the fact that a criminal complaint by the petitioner against the respondents was already pending before CJM — Case registered on directions of SSJ — High Court, due to concealment of fact, staying the order of SSJ and enabling the parties to get the dispute decided by SSJ in accordance with law — SSJ initiating proceedings under S. 182 IPC against petitioner — High Court affirming it further directing to proceed and comply with the formalities under S. 340 r/w S. 195 CrPC — Mere failure to mention the pendency of complaint in petition under S. 156(3) CrPC, held, would not be enough to bring home the charge under S. 182 IPC unless all the ingredients set out therein are established — Orders of High Court and SSJ set aside — Order of High Court to be followed if all the ingredients of S. 182 IPC established — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 182. Subhash Chandra v. State of U.P., (2000) 9 SCC 356: 2001 SCC (Cri) 320.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and D.P. Wadhwa, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-1-2000]

[1407] — Ss. 156(3), 190(1), 200 and 4 — "Private complaint" under MCOCA — Taking cognizance of — Prerequisites as to — Compliance with S. 23, MCOCA — Necessity of — Invocation of S. 156(3) CrPC for ordering inquiry/investigation into such private complaint and taking cognizance thereupon, without complying with S. 23, MCOCA — Power as to — Held, although the Special Judge is entitled to take cognizance of offences under MCOCA even on a private complaint, but after due compliance with S. 23(2) thereof — Bar under S. 23(2) continues to remain operative in respect of complaints, either of a private nature or on a police report — Hence, on receipt of a private complaint, Special Judge has to forward the same to the officer indicated in S. 23(1)(a) to have an inquiry conducted into the complaint by a police officer mentioned in S. 23(1)(b) — It is only thereafter that Special Judge can take cognizance of the offence complained of, if sanction is accorded to the Special Court to take cognizance of such offence under S. 23(2) — Special Judge cannot invoke provisions of S. 156(3) CrPC to order a special inquiry on such private complaint and take cognizance thereupon, without traversing the route indicated in S. 23 — Maharashtra Control of Organised Crime Act, 1999 (30 of 1999), Ss. 9(1), 23 and 25. Jamiruddin Ansari v. CBI, (2009) 6 SCC 316.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

(7) Section 157(1) proviso (b) — Sufficient grounds for non-investigation

[1408] — S. 157 — Compliance with S. 157(1) and proviso (b) — Necessity of — Where a preliminary inquiry was conducted on the basis of an anonymous complaint without registering FIR, held, it was not necessary to comply with the provisions of the proviso (b) appended to sub-s. (1) of S. 157 — Further, having regard to the fact that the identity of the appellant was being unknown, the question of complying with the said provisions, even if it be held that the same was applicable, did not arise (Para 26). Shashikant v. CBI, (2007) 1 SCC 630: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 406: AIR 2007 SC 351: (2007) 49 AIC 292 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 995: (2007) 103 Cut LT 511.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-11-2006]

(8) Procedure and Duty and Powers of investigating officer

See also Sections 155 to 159, '(5) Refusal to investigate or Improper investigation — Monitoring of investigation and Role of court', above and

'(10) Defective investigation', and

'(11) Illegal/Partisan/Mala fide investigation — Effect and Quashment', below

[1409] — Ss. 156, 157, 161 and 165 — Investigation — Procedure reiterated — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 27

Per K. Ramaswamy, J.

Section 154 in Chapter XII of the Code, contemplates laying of information of cognizable offences either orally or in writing to an officer of a police station who is enjoined to reduce it into writing, if made orally or under his direction and the substance thereof entered in the book kept in the police station in the manner prescribed by the State Government. The officer in charge of the police station is prohibited to investigate only into non-cognizable cases without an order of the Magistrate concerned under S. 155(2). But if the facts disclose both cognizable and non-cognizable offence, by operation of sub-section (4) of S. 155, CrPC the case shall be deemed to be cognizable case and the police officer shall be entitled to investigate, without any order of the Magistrate, into non-cognizable offence as well. Section 156 gives statutory power to a competent police officer or a subordinate under his direction to investigate into cognizable offences. In cases of cognizable offences receipt or recording of a first information report is not a condition precedent to setting in motion of criminal investigation. Section 157 provides the procedure for investigation. If the police officer in charge of the police station, on receipt of information or otherwise, has reason to suspect the commission of a cognizable offence and is empowered to investigate into, he shall proceed in person or shall depute one of his subordinate officers not below the rank of the prescribed officer to the spot to investigate the facts and circumstances and if necessary to take measures for the discovery and arrest of the offender. The provisos (a) and (b) thereof give power, in cases of minor offences to depute some other subordinate officer or if the investigating officer is of the opinion that there is no sufficient ground for entering on investigation he shall not investigate the case. State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192: AIR 1991 SC 1260.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh[1] and K. Ramaswamy[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 2-4-1991]

[1410] — Ss. 156, 157 and 482 — Fair investigation — Right to — Protected under Arts. 20 and 21 of the Constitution — Investigation must be fair, transparent and judicious — Tainted and biased investigation and consequent prejudice and harassment to any party cannot be permitted to continue — Hence quashed — Constitution of India — Arts. 21 and 20

Not only fair trial but fair investigation is also part of constitutional rights guaranteed under Articles 20 and 21 of the Constitution of India. Therefore, investigation must be fair, transparent and judicious as it is the minimum requirement of rule of law. The investigating agency cannot be permitted to conduct an investigation in a tainted and biased manner. The investigation into a criminal offence must be free from objectionable features or infirmities which may legitimately lead to a grievance on the part of the accused that investigation was unfair and carried out with an ulterior motive. It is also the duty of the investigating officer to conduct the investigation avoiding any kind of mischief and harassment to any of the accused. The investigating officer should be fair and conscious so as to rule out any possibility of fabrication of evidence and his impartial conduct must dispel any suspicion as to its genuineness. The investigating officer "is not merely to bolster up a prosecution case with such evidence as may enable the court to record a conviction but to bring out the real unvarnished truth". (Paras 45 and 32)

Where the court comes to the conclusion that there was a serious irregularity in the investigation that had taken place, the court may direct a further investigation under Section 173(8) CrPC, even transferring the investigation to an independent agency, rather than directing a reinvestigation. Scheme of investigation, particularly, Section 173(8) CrPC provides for further investigation and not reinvestigation. Therefore, if the court comes to the conclusion that the investigation has been done in a manner with an object of helping a party, the court may direct for further investigation and ordinarily not for reinvestigation. The expression "ordinarily" means normally and it is used where there can be an exception. It means in the large majority of cases but not invariably. "Ordinarily" excludes "extraordinary" or "special circumstances". Therefore, unless an extraordinary case of gross abuse of power is made out by those in charge of the investigation, the court should be quite loathe to interfere with the investigation, a field of activity reserved for the police and the executive. In exceptional circumstances, the court in order to prevent the miscarriage of criminal justice, if considers necessary, may direct for investigation de novo wherein the case presents exceptional circumstances. Where non-interference of the court would ultimately result in failure of justice, the court must interfere. In such a situation, it may be in the interest of justice that independent agency chosen by the High Court makes a fresh investigation. Thus, in case of a mala fide exercise of power by a police officer the court may interfere. (Paras 37, 40, 41, 38, 42 and 45)

In the instant case, admittedly, the High Court has given detailed reasons for coming to the conclusion that the investigation has been totally one-sided, biased and mala fide. One party has been favoured by the investigating agency. The natural corollary to this finding is that the other party has been harassed in an unwarranted manner. Thus, the cause of the other party has been prejudiced. Even before the High Court conduct of the party and investigating agency was found to have not been fair. (Paras 43 and 29)

The charge-sheets filed by the investigating agency in both the cases are against the same set of accused. A charge-sheet is the outcome of an investigation. If the investigation has not been conducted fairly, such investigation would ultimately prove to be a precursor of miscarriage of criminal justice. In such a case the court would simply try to decipher the truth only on the basis of guess or conjectures as the whole truth would not come before it. It will be difficult for the court to determine how the incident took place wherein three persons died and so many persons including the complainant and the accused got injured. (Para 44)

Thus, the order of the High Court requires modification to the extent that the charge-sheets in both the cases and any order consequent thereto stand quashed. In case any of the accused could not get bail because of the pendency of these appeals before the Supreme Court, it shall be open to him to apply for bail or any other relief before the appropriate forum. (Para 46). Babubhai v. State of Gujarat, (2010) 12 SCC 254.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-8-2010]

R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; Jamuna Chaudhary v. State of Bihar, (1974) 3 SCC 774: 1974 SCC (Cri) 250; Mahmood v. State of U.P., (1976) 1 SCC 542: 1976 SCC (Cri) 72; State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192; Navinchandra N. Majithia v. State of Meghalaya, (2000) 8 SCC 323: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1510; K. Chandrasekhar v. State of Kerala, (1998) 5 SCC 223: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1291; Ramachandran v. R. Udhayakumar, (2008) 5 SCC 413: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 631; Mithabhai Pashabhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 332: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 1047; Kishan Lal v. Dharmendra Bafna, (2009) 7 SCC 685: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 611; S.N. Sharma v. Bipen Kumar Tiwari, (1970) 1 SCC 653: 1970 SCC (Cri) 258; Kashmeri Devi v. Delhi Admn., 1988 Supp SCC 482: 1988 SCC (Cri) 864; Kailash Chandra v. Union of India, AIR 1961 SC 1346; Eicher Tractors Ltd. v. Commr. of Customs, (2001) 1 SCC 315; State of A.P. v. V. Sarma Rao, (2007) 2 SCC 159: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 535; Nirmal Singh Kahlon v. State of Punjab, (2009) 1 SCC 441: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 523; Manu Sharma v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 6 SCC 1: (2010) 2 SCC (Cri) 1385, relied on

[1411] — S. 157 — Investigation — Requirements of proper investigation — Held, the same must be fair and effective; must proceed in the right direction in consonance with ingredients of the offence and not in a haphazard manner, more so in serious cases based on circumstantial evidence

Proper and fair investigation on the part of the investigating officer is the backbone of rule of law. The job of the investigating officer is to make investigation in right direction. The investigation must be in consonance with the ingredients of the offence. It cannot be haphazard or unmethodical. A proper and effective investigation into a serious offence and particularly in a case where there is no direct evidence assumes great significance as collection of adequate materials to prove the circumstantial evidence becomes essential. Unfortunately, the appellant has not been treated fairly. When a death has occurred in a suspicious circumstance and in particular when an attempt had been made to bury the dead body hurriedly and upon obtaining apparently an incorrect medical certificate, it was expected that upon exhumation of the body, the investigating authorities of the State shall carry out their statutory duties fairly. The appellant alleges that no fair investigation has been conducted. It is clearly a matter of great concern that the authorities did not become alive to the situation. (Paras 15 and 18). Sasi Thomas v. State, (2006) 12 SCC 421: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 72: (2007) 50 AIC 385 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-2006]

[1412] — S. 157 — Need for caution and circumspection on the part of investigating agency and for sincere and dispassionate investigation stressed — Fabrication of record by Investigating Officer deprecated — Introduction of new and scientific methods of investigation suggested

Weaker the person accused of an offence, greater the caution and higher the responsibility of the law enforcement agencies. Before accusing an innocent person of the commission of a grave crime like the one punishable under S. 302, IPC, an honest, sincere and dispassionate investigation has to be made so as to feel sure that the person suspected of the crime alone was responsible to commit the offence. Indulging in free fabrication of the record is a deplorable conduct on the part of an investigating officer which undermines the public confidence reposed in the investigating agency. Therefore, greater care and circumspection are needed by the investigating agency in this regard. It is time that the investigating agencies evolve new and scientific investigating methods, taking aid of rapid scientific development in the field of investigation. It is also the duty of the State, i.e. Central or State Governments to organise periodical refresher courses for the investigating officers to keep them abreast of the latest scientific development in the art of investigation and the march of law so that the real offender would be brought to book and the innocent would not be exposed to prosecution. (Para 12). Kishore Chand v. State of H.P., (1991) 1 SCC 286: 1991 SCC (Cri) 172: AIR 1990 SC 2140: 1990 Cri LJ 2289.

(8) Procedure and Duty and Powers of investigating officer (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.B. Sawant and K. Ramaswamy, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-8-1990]

Distinguished in Gagan Kanojia v. State of Punjab, (2006) 13 SCC 516: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 109

[1413] — Ss. 157 to 173 — Nature and scope of investigation stated

Per K. Ramaswamy, J.

The investigating officer is the arm of the law and plays pivotal role in the dispensation of criminal justice and maintenance of law and order. The police investigation is, therefore, the foundation-stone on which the whole edifice of criminal trial rests — an error in its chain of investigation may result in miscarriage of justice and the prosecution entails (sic) with acquittal. The duty of the investigating officer, therefore, is to ascertain facts, to extract truth from half-truth or garbled version, connecting the chain of events. Investigation is a tardy and tedious process. Enough power, therefore, has been given to the police officer in the area of investigatory process, granting him or her great latitude to exercise his discretionary power to make a successful investigation. It is by his action that law becomes an actual positive force. Often crimes are committed in secrecy with dexterity and at high places. The investigating officer may have to obtain information from sources disclosed or undisclosed and there is no set procedure to conduct investigation to connect every step in the chain of prosecution case by collecting the evidence except to the extent expressly prohibited by the Code or the Evidence Act or the Constitution. In view of the arduous task involved in the investigation he has been given free liberty to collect the necessary evidence in any manner he feels expedient, on the facts and in given circumstances. His/her primary focus is on the solution of the crime by intensive investigation. It is his duty to ferret out the truth. Laborious hard work and attention to the details, ability to sort through mountainous information, recognised behavioural patterns and above all, to co-ordinate the efforts of different people associated with various elements of the crime and the case, are essential. Diverse methods are, therefore, involved in making a successful completion of the investigation.

The function of the judiciary in the course of investigation by the police should be complementary and full freedom should be accorded to the investigator to collect the evidence connecting the chain of events leading to the discovery of the truth, viz., the proof of the commission of the crime. Often individual liberty of a witness or an accused person are involved and inconvenience is inescapable and unavoidable. The investigating officer would conduct in-depth investigation to discover truth while keeping in view the individual liberty with due observance of law. At the same time he has a duty to enforce criminal law as an integral process. No criminal justice system deserves respect if its wheels are turned by ignorance. It is never his business to fabricate the evidence to connect the suspect with the commission of the crime. Trustworthiness of the police is the primary insurance. Reputation for investigative competence and individual honesty of the investigator are necessary to enthuse public confidence. Total support of the public also is necessary. State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192: AIR 1991 SC 1260.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh[1] and K. Ramaswamy[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 2-4-1991]

[1414] — Ss. 157 and 173 — Details of investigation — Investigating officer should adduce evidence in court explaining step by step how investigation proceeded

There are clueless crimes committed. The factum of a cognizable crime having been committed is known but neither the identity of the accused is disclosed nor is there any indication available of the witnesses who would be able to furnish useful and relevant evidence. Such offences put to test the wits of an investigating officer. A vigilant investigating officer, well versed with the techniques of the job, is in a position to collect the threads of evidence finding out the path which leads to the culprit. The ends, which the administration of criminal justice serves, are not achieved merely by catching hold of the culprit. The accusation has to be proved to the hilt in a court of law. The evidence of the investigating officer given in the court should have a rhythm explaining step by step how the investigation proceeded leading to detection of the offender and collection of evidence against him. This is necessary to exclude the likelihood of any innocent having been picked up and branded as a culprit and then the gravity of the offence arousing human sympathy persuading the mind to be carried away by doubtful or dubious circumstances treating them as of "beyond doubt" evidentiary value. (Para 26). Subhash Chand v. State of Rajasthan, (2002) 1 SCC 702: 2002 SCC (Cri) 256.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Ashok Bhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-2001]

[1415] — S. 157 — Investigation — Each and every suggestion of the defence at the investigation need not be followed by Investigating Officer — Suggestion made by defence after recording of FIR that a suspicious was entertained in the village that another person and not the accused had committed the crime — When suggestion not supported by any material it need not be gone into by the Investigating Officer. Kirtan Bhuyan v. State of Orissa, 1993 Supp (1) SCC 558: 1993 SCC (Cri) 351: AIR 1992 SC 1579.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.M. Punchhi, M. Fathima Beevi and S.C. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-1992]

[1416] — Ss. 157 and 161 — Manner in which investigation to be carried out — Held, a fair investigation is expected from the prosecution — Investigation to be carried out not only from the stand of the prosecution, but also the defence, particularly in view of the fact that the onus of proof may shift to the accused at a later stage — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 — S. 17 — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 — S. 5-A (Para 19). State Inspector of Police v. Surya Sankaram Karri, (2006) 7 SCC 172: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 225.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-8-2006]

[1417] — S. 157 — Harassment of victim (harassed with unwelcome amorous advances, stalked and finally raped and murdered) and her parents — Conduct of police officials condemned as reprehensible — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 375 and 376 (Para 80). Santosh Kumar Singh v. State, (2010) 9 SCC 747.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2010]

[1418] — S. 157 — Investigation — Duty of investigation agency to act honestly and fairly and not resort to fabricating false evidence only with a view to secure conviction

"The quality of a nation's civilisation," it is said, "can be largely measured by the methods it uses in the enforcement of criminal law". In every civilised society the police force is invested with the powers of investigation of the crime to secure punishment for the criminal and it is in the interest of the society that the investigating agency must act honestly and fairly and not resort to fabricating false evidence or creating false clues only with a view to secure conviction because such acts shake the confidence of the common man not only in the investigating agency but in the ultimate analysis in the system of dispensation of criminal justice. Let no guilty man go unpunished but let the end not justify the means! The courts must remain ever alive to this truism. Proper results must be obtained by recourse to proper means — otherwise it would be an invitation to anarchy. Rampal Pithwa Rahidas v. State of Maharashtra, 1994 Supp (2) SCC 73: 1994 SCC (Cri) 851: 1994 Cri LJ 2320: (1994) 1 Crimes 1017.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-3-1994]

[1419] — S. 157 — Investigation — Duty of IO — Investigating officer has duty to find out cause of injury sustained by an accused in the course of the same incident in which some of the members of the prosecution party sustained injury

The investigating officer, having found one of the accused having sustained injuries in the course of the same incident in which those belonging to the prosecution party sustained injuries, should have at least made an effort at investigating the cause of, and the circumstances resulting in, injuries on the person of the accused. If only this would have been done, the defence version of the incident would have been before the investigating officer and the investigation would not have been one-sided. Investigation officer having failed to do so the investigation suffers from a serious infirmity which has prejudiced the accused in their defence. (Paras 20 and 22). Kashiram v. State of M.P., (2002) 1 SCC 71: 2002 SCC (Cri) 68: AIR 2001 SC 2902.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and Ashok Bhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-10-2001]

(8) Procedure and Duty and Powers of investigating officer (contd.)

[1420] — S. 157 — Investigation of cases under TADA must be thorough and of high order, having regard to the special features of the Act — Prosecution launched in a cavalier manner deprecated — TADA, 1987 — Ss. 3 and 4. Balbir Singh v. State of Haryana, (1987) 1 SCC 533: 1987 SCC (Cri) 193: AIR 1987 SC 1053: 1987 Cri LJ 853.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-1-1987]

[1421] — S. 157 — Castigation of investigation if justified on acquittal of accused — Courts should while ordering acquittal ordinarily desist from castigating the investigation

Castigation of investigation unfortunately seems to be a regular practice when the trial courts acquit the accused in criminal cases. In our perception it is almost impossible to come across a single case wherein the investigation was conducted completely flawless or absolutely foolproof. The function of the criminal courts should not be wasted in picking out the lapses in investigation and by expressing unsavoury criticism against investigating officers. If offenders are acquitted only on account of flaws or defects in investigation, the cause of criminal justice becomes the victim. Effort should be made by courts to see that criminal justice is salvaged despite such defects in investigation. Courts should bear in mind the time constraints of the police officers in the present system, ill-equipped machinery they have to cope with, and the traditional apathy of respectable persons to come forward for giving evidence in criminal cases which are realities the police force have to confront while conducting investigation in almost every case. Before an investigating officer is imputed with castigating remarks the courts should not overlook the fact that usually such an officer is not heard in respect of such remarks made against them. The court need make such deprecatory remarks only when it is absolutely necessary in a particular case, and that too by keeping in mind the broad realities indicated above. (Para 41). State of W.B. v. Mir Mohammad Omar, (2000) 8 SCC 382: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1516: AIR 2000 SC 2988.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-8-2000]

[1422] — Ss. 157, 172 and 173 — It is unfair to condemn any omission by investigating officer if no opportunity was given to him at the trial to explain it. State of U.P. v. Shanker, 1980 Supp SCC 489: 1981 SCC (Cri) 428: AIR 1981 SC 897: 1981 Cri LJ 23.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-10-1980]

[1423] — Ss. 157 and 156 — Role of the IO — Deprecated — SI refusing to register the offence — Investigation defective and casual — Statements recorded by him cryptic and favourable to the accused — He not even ascertaining the age of the victim — Circumstances suggesting that SI deliberately refused to register the offence in order to help the accused at the cost of prosecutrix — His conduct deprecated and commented upon by trial court and the High Court — Supreme Court while expressing shock at his behaviour observing that conduct of the SI in not registering a grievous offence like rape, despite the fact that the prosecutrix had categorically stated that the accused had forcible sexual intercourse with her, would lead to the losing of confidence of the public in the police establishment (Paras 6, 26 and 27). Vishnu v. State of Maharashtra, (2006) 1 SCC 283: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 217: AIR 2006 SC 508: (2006) 37 AIC 310 (SC): 2006 Cri LJ 303.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-2005]

[1424] — S. 157 — Invocation of relevant law — Discretion of police — Attack on Parliament House on 13-12-2001 — Failure to invoke provisions of special law dealing with terrorist acts (POTA) against accused co-conspirators from very initiation of investigation, having regard to nature and manifestations of the crime — Permissibility and effect — Discretion open to police to invoke said law — Prevention of Terrorism Act, 2002 — Ss. 50 and 3

Though the POTO [POTA] provisions could have been invoked on the very first day having regard to the nature and manifestations of this grave crime there is no justification to characterise the action of the police officers concerned in not having done so as mala fide or motivated. It cannot be disputed that POTA contains drastic and stringent provisions, both substantive and procedural, for dealing with special categories of offences which have bearing on the security and integrity of the country. In view of this special feature of the law, it is necessary to bestow sufficient care and thought before prosecuting an offender under this special law instead of proceeding under the ordinary law. This aspect has been emphasised in more than one decision of the Supreme Court dealing with the TADA provisions. No fault can be found with the investigating officers in going slow in bringing

POTA into picture. At any rate, it may be a case of bona fide error or overcautious approach. Once the action of the police authorities in deferring the invocation of POTA is held to be not mala fide, it is not possible to countenance the contention that the provisions of POTA, especially those contained in Chapter V and Section 52 ought to have been complied with even before 19th December, 2001, when POTA was invoked. There is nothing on record to hold that the investigating officials deliberately and without semblance of justification decided to bypass the provisions of POTO [POTA]. (Paras 21, 22 and 23)

The propriety or otherwise of the action of the investigating agency in adding POTA at a later stage is one thing; whether the offence under POTA is made out, in addition to the offences under IPC, is a distinct point, one shall not be mixed up with the other. (Para 240). State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715: 2005 Cri LJ 3950: (2005) 122 DLT 194.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2005]

Niranjan Singh Karam Singh Punjabi v. Jitendra Bhimraj Bijjaya, (1990) 4 SCC 76: 1991 SCC (Cri) 47; Usmanbhai Dawoodbhai Memon v. State of Gujarat, (1988) 2 SCC 271: 1988 SCC (Cri) 318, relied on

[1425] — S. 157 — Investigation — Interception of communications — Interception of telephone calls — Appreciation of evidence — Call records of (cellular) telephones — Presence of duplicate entries in — Effect — Telegraph Act, 1885 — S. 5 — Prevention of Terrorism Act, 2002 — S. 36

The same call has been recorded two times in the records. The computer, at the first instance, instead of recording the IMEI number of the mobile instrument, had recorded the IMEI and cell ID (location) of the person calling/called by the subscriber. The computer rectified this obvious error immediately and modified the record to show the correct details viz. the IMEI and the cell ID of the subscriber only. The document is self-explanatory of the error. An innocuous error in the computer recording is being magnified to discredit the entire document containing the details without any warrant. The fact that the same call has been recorded twice in the call records of the calling and called party simultaneously, demonstrates beyond doubt that the correctness or genuineness of the call is beyond doubt. (Para 152)

Far from supporting the contention of the defence, the above facts, evident from the perusal of the call records, would clearly show that the system was working satisfactorily and it promptly checked and rectified the mistake that occurred. (Para 152)

It was not suggested nor could it be suggested that there was any manipulation or material deficiency in the computer on account of these two errors. Above all, the printouts pertaining to the call details exhibited by the prosecution are of such regularity and continuity that it would be legitimate to draw a presumption that the system was functional and the output was produced by the computer in regular use, whether this fact was specifically deposed to by the witness or not. Therefore the call records are admissible and reliable and rightly made use of by the prosecution. (Para 152)

The IMEI number of the Nokia phone found in the truck was noted as 350102209452432. That means the last digit '2' varies from the call records wherein it was noted as 350102209452430. Thus, there is a seeming discrepancy as far as the last digit is concerned. This discrepancy stands explained by the evidence of PW 78, a computer engineer working as Manager, Siemens. He stated, while giving various details of the 15 digits, that the last one digit is a spare digit and the last digit, according to GSM specification should be transmitted by the mobile phone as '0'. (Para 195). State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715: 2005 Cri LJ 3950: (2005) 122 DLT 194.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2005]

[1426] — S. 157 — Interception of communications — Interception of telephone calls — Intercepts illegally obtained — Admissibility of — Held, are admissible under S. 7, Evidence Act, 1872 since there is no specific embargo against their admissibility in the Telegraph Act or Rules, which govern the same — In any case, on facts, intercepts in question duly conformed to requirements laid down in Col. Ram Singh case, 1985 Supp SCC 611 — Telegraph Act, 1885 — S. 5 — Telegraph Rules, 1951, R. 419-A — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 7 — Prevention of Terrorism Act, 2002 — S. 45

On the relevant day, the interception of telephone messages was governed by Section 5(2) of the Telegraph Act, 1885 read with Rule 419-A of the Telegraph Rules, 1951. The substantive power of interception by the Government or the authorised officer is conferred by Section 5. The modalities and procedure for interception is governed by the said Rules. (Para 153)

There is warrant for the proposition that even if evidence is illegally obtained it is admissible. It would be a dangerous obstacle to the administration of justice if it were held, because evidence was obtained by illegal means, it could not be used against a party charged with an offence. There is of course always a word of caution. It is that the judge has a discretion to disallow evidence in a criminal case if the strict rules of admissibility would operate unfairly against the accused. That caution is the golden rule in criminal jurisprudence. (Para 154)

(8) Procedure and Duty and Powers of investigating officer (contd.)

Even if the interception did not take place in strict conformity with Rule 419-A that does not affect the admissibility of the communications so recorded. The illegality or irregularity in the interception does not affect its admissibility in evidence, there being no specific embargo against the admissibility in the Telegraph Act or in the Rules. (Para 153)

Unlike the proviso to Section 45 of POTA, Section 5(2) of the Telegraph Act or Rule 419-A does not deal with any rule of evidence. The non-compliance or inadequate compliance with the provisions of the Telegraph Act does not per se affect the admissibility. A contemporaneous tape record of a relevant conversation is a relevant fact and is admissible as res gestae under Section 7 of the Evidence Act. (Para 154)

Deficiencies such as in this case, of the officer concerned of the government who authorised the interception not being of the rank prescribed and the confirmation orders being made prospectively, though unfortunate, cannot preclude the admission of intercepted telephonic communication in evidence. (Para 154)

In the instant case, the tape-recorded conversation which has been duly proved and conforms to the requirements laid down by the Supreme Court in Col. Ram Singh case, 1985 Supp SCC 611, can be pressed into service against the accused concerned in the joint trial for the offences under the Penal Code as well as POTA. (Para 155)

Such evidence cannot be shut out by applying the embargo contained in Section 45 of POTA when on the date of interception, the procedure under Chapter V of POTA was not required to be complied with. Chapter V of POTA governing the procedure for interception and admission of the intercepted communications presupposes that there is an investigation of a terrorist act under POTA which has been set in motion. The procedural requirements of Chapter V have not been complied with when such interceptions took place on 14-12-2001. On that date POTA was not in the picture and the investigation did not specifically relate to the offences under POTA. The non-inclusion of the POTO offences even at the threshold of investigation cannot be legally faulted and that such non-inclusion was not deliberate. The question of applying the proviso to Section 45 of POTA does not, therefore, arise as the proviso applies only in the event of the communications being legally required to be intercepted under the provisions of POTA. The proviso to Section 45 cannot be so read as to exclude such material in relation to the POTA offences if it is otherwise admissible under the general law of evidence. The admissibility or the evidentiary status of the two intercepted conversations should, therefore, be judged dehors the provisions of POTO/POTA. (Paras 153 and 155). State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715: 2005 Cri LJ 3950: (2005) 122 DLT 194.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2005]

Ram Singh v. Col. Ram Singh, 1985 Supp SCC 611, applied

R.M. Malkani v. State of Maharashtra, (1973) 1 SCC 471: 1973 SCC (Cri) 399; R. v. Shephard, 1993 AC 380: (1993) 1 All ER 225: (1993) 2 WLR 102 (HL); Kuruma v. R., (1955) 1 All ER 236: 1955 AC 197: (1955) 2 WLR 223 (PC); Pooran Mal v. Director of Inspection (Investigation), (1974) 1 SCC 345: 1974 SCC (Tax) 114: (1974) 2 SCR 704; State v. N.M.T. Joy Immaculate, (2004) 5 SCC 729: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1722, relied on

[1427] — S. 157 — Call records of (cellular) telephones — Proof of — Burden to be discharged — Experts if necessary — Call records of cellular phones being stored in huge servers that cannot be easily moved and produced in court, held, secondary evidence in respect thereof can be given under Ss. 63 and 65, regardless of compliance with S. 65-B(4) — Further held, nature of evidence to show that there has been no improper use of the computer and that it was operating properly will vary from case to case — It will be very rarely necessary to call an expert — In most cases it will be possible to discharge said burden by calling a witness who is familiar with the operation of the computer concerned — Telegraph Act, 1885 — S. 5 — Prevention of Terrorism Act, 2002 — S. 36 — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 63, 65, 65-B and 45

The information contained in the call records of the cellular phones of the accused is stored in huge servers which cannot be easily moved and produced in the court. Hence, printouts taken from the computers/servers by mechanical process and certified by a responsible official of the service-providing company can be led in evidence through a witness who can identify the signatures of the certifying officer or otherwise speak of the facts based on his personal knowledge. It may be that the certificate containing the details in Section 65-B(4) is not filed in the instant case, but that does not mean that secondary evidence cannot be given even if the law permits such evidence to be given in the circumstances mentioned in the relevant provisions, namely, Sections 63 and 65. Irrespective of the compliance with the requirements of Section 65-B, which is a provision dealing with admissibility of electronic records, there is no bar to adducing secondary evidence under the other provisions of the Evidence Act, namely, Sections 63 and 65. (Para 150)

The nature of the evidence to discharge the burden of showing that there has been no improper use of the computer and that it was operating properly will inevitably vary from case to case. The evidence must be tailored to suit the needs of the case. It will very rarely be necessary to call an expert and in the vast majority of cases it will be possible to discharge the burden by calling a witness who is familiar with the operation of the computer in the sense of knowing what the computer is required to do and who can say that it is doing it properly. (Para 151)

Both the witnesses who were examined in respect of the call records were responsible officials of the companies concerned who deposed to the fact that they were the printouts obtained from the computer records. In fact the evidence of PW 35 shows that he is fairly familiar with the computer system and its output. If there had been some questioning vis-à-vis specific details or specific suggestion of fabrication of printouts, it would have been obligatory on the part of the prosecution to call a technical expert directly in the know of things. But there was no such questioning. (Para 151). State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715: 2005 Cri LJ 3950: (2005) 122 DLT 194.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2005]

R. v. Shephard, 1993 AC 380: (1993) 1 All ER 225: (1993) 2 WLR 102 (HL), followed

[1428] — S. 157 — Applicability — Interception of phone calls — Details of investigation of calls made or received from one of many numbers authorised in sanction order — Non-adduction of — Effect — Held, no adverse inference can be drawn from the same — Telegraph Act, 1885 — S. 5 — Prevention of Terrorism Act, 2002 — S. 36 — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 114(g)

The second circumstance is the frequent telephonic contacts which Afzal had established with Mohammed, the ring-leader of the five terrorists who carried out the attack on Parliament House. Even minutes before the attack, as many as three calls were made by Mohammed to Afzal at 10:43, 11:08 and 11.25 a.m. from his cellular phone recovered from Mohammed's body. The SIM card relating thereto was also found in Mohammed's purse. Not only that, there is clear evidence to the effect that the mobile instruments were being freely exchanged between Afzal and Mohammed and other terrorists. This is the third circumstance. There is unshakeable evidence to this effect [discussed in paras 192 to 201]. (Paras 191 and 202)

No adverse inference can be drawn from the fact that there is no evidence regarding the details of investigation of the calls made or received from one other number for which interception was authorised in the sanction order. It is quite probable that the investigator would have entertained some suspicion in this regard and would have, by way of caution sought permission to intercept. That does not cast a cloud on the prosecution case built up on the basis of the call records pertaining to the phones used by the accused. (Para 203). State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715: 2005 Cri LJ 3950: (2005) 122 DLT 194.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2005]

[1429] — S. 157 — Offence of dacoity and murder — Accused named along with unknown persons in charge-sheet — Enmity between accused and victims admitted — Duty of police to carefully investigate. Ram Lakhan Singh v. State of U.P., (1977) 3 SCC 268: 1977 SCC (Cri) 474: AIR 1977 SC 1936: 1977 Cri LJ 1566.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.K. Goswami, A.C. Gupta and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-1977]

[1430] — S. 157 — Test Identification of photographs of corpses of co-conspirators of accused recovered from site of offence — When not necessary — Identifying witnesses pointed out by accused themselves — Sufficient interaction having taken place between accused, deceased co-conspirators and witnesses identifying them, it not being a case of "fleeting glimpse" — Small time-lag between said interaction and identification of said photographs — Further, photographs being quite clear — Given the above facts, test identification of said photographs, though would have given better assurance of the reliability of identification, failure to do so cannot warrant eschewal of the said evidence — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 9. State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715: 2005 Cri LJ 3950: (2005) 122 DLT 194.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2005]

(8) Procedure and Duty and Powers of investigating officer (contd.)

[1431] — S. 157 — Test Identification parade — When not necessary — Identifying witnesses pointed out by accused themselves — Sufficient interaction having taken place between accused and witnesses identifying them, it not being a case of "fleeting glimpse" — Small time lag between said interaction and identification of accused — Held, all the above were reasons which sufficiently obviated need for holding test identification parade — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 9

Conducting a test identification parade relates to the stage of investigation and the omission to conduct the same will not always affect the credibility of the witness who identifies the accused in the court. (Para 227)

There is no substance in the contentions that test identification should have been conducted to assure credibility of the evidence in the identification of Afzal by the shopkeepers and that the photograph of the deceased Mohammed should have been mixed up with the other photographs in order to impart credibility to the version of witnesses who claimed to have seen him. (Para 226)

In the present case, the accused persons themselves led the witnesses to the shops and the places concerned and pointed out the witnesses. Therefore, the question of holding TIP thereafter does not arise. The evidence of the prosecution witnesses who could identify the two accused persons can be safely relied upon for more than one reason. Firstly, the time lag between the date of the first and next meeting was not much, it was just a few days or at the most two weeks. Secondly, there was scope for sufficient interaction so that the identity of the accused could be retained in their memory. It was not a case of mere "fleeting glimpse". For the same reasons, they could identify Mohammed by his photograph which was quite clear. If the step was taken by the IO to have the test identification of photographs of dead bodies, it would have given better assurance of the reliability of identification. However, the failure to do so cannot be a ground to eschew the testimony of the witnesses whose evidence was concurrently accepted by the trial court and the appellate court. It is not the case of the appellant or any of the accused that the identification by photographs is not permissible under law. (Para 229). State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715: 2005 Cri LJ 3950: (2005) 122 DLT 194.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2005]

Malkhan Singh v. State of M.P., (2003) 5 SCC 746: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1247, relied on

(9) Hearing to accused during investigation

See also under S. 173, below

[1432] — Ss. 157, 173(8) and 166-A — Right, if any, of the accused to be heard at the stage of investigation — Held, accused has no such right — He cannot therefore obstruct further investigation under S. 173(8) on the ground that procedure laid down in S. 166-A for investigation outside India has not been followed — Accused can however assail validity of evidence so collected during the course of trial

The deceased was a Canadian citizen of Indian origin. She was alleged to have been murdered in Mumbai. Her dead body was sent back to Canada where second autopsy was performed and genetic material relating to her was preserved. At the request of husband of the deceased, the Chief Coroner of the Province of Ontario in Canada wrote to Commissioner of Police in Mumbai that they were ready to assist Mumbai Police with the help of genetic material preserved by them. Husband of the deceased also filed a criminal writ petition in the High Court seeking a direction to Mumbai Police to seek the assistance of Chief Coroner in accordance with Section 166-A CrPC. Mumbai Police expressed its inclination to avail of assistance of the Chief Coroner. The High Court directed Mumbai Police to get the material collected in the course of investigation examined in Canada and report so obtained would form part of medical and forensic investigation. Such report would be filed in the trial court under Section 173(8) CrPC. The appellant objected to the High Court order on the ground that requirements of Section 166-A had not been fulfilled. The issue before the Supreme Court was whether accused persons could raise any objection at the stage of investigation.

Dismissing the appeals and affirming the High Court order, the Supreme Court held as above.

Held :

The accused has no right to be heard at the stage of investigation. The prosecution will however have to prove its case at the trial when the accused will have full opportunity to rebut/question the validity and authenticity of the prosecution case. The accused can avail himself of an opportunity to cross-examine and/or otherwise controvert the authenticity, admissibility or legal significance of material evidence gathered in the course of further investigations. Further, in light of the views expressed by the investigating officer in his affidavit before the High Court, it is apparent that the investigating authorities would inevitably have conducted further investigation with the aid of CFS under Section 173(8) of the Code. What is the evidentiary value can be tested during trial. At this juncture it would not be proper to interfere in the matter. (Paras 11 to 13). Narender G. Goel v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 6 SCC 65.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-2009]

Sri Bhagwan Samardha Sreepada Vallabha Venkata Vishwanandha Maharaj v. State of A.P., (1999) 5 SCC 740: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1047, relied on

[Ed.: See also 1993 Supp (4) SCC 260 and (1996) 11 SCC 253.]

[1433] — Ss. 157 to 167 — Role of investigating officer — He is not required to afford any opportunity of hearing to the accused while collecting material against him. K. Veeraswami v. Union of India, (1991) 3 SCC 655: 1991 SCC (Cri) 734.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: B.C. Ray[1], K. Jagannatha Shetty[2], L.M. Sharma[3], M.N. Venkatachaliah[2] and J.S. Verma[4], JJ. [Date of decision: 25-7-1991]

[1434] — Ss. 157 and 173(2) — At the stage of collection of material under S. 157, CrPC to make out a prima facie case for a full-fledged enquiry, the rule of audi alteram partem cannot be invoked by the accused — Accused has no say against manner and method of investigation — Hearing to accused is provided by CrPC under specified circumstances but not under Chap. XII — Constitution of India — Arts. 21 and 22. Union of India v. W.N. Chadha, 1993 Supp (4) SCC 260: 1993 SCC (Cri) 1171: AIR 1993 SC 1082: 1993 Cri LJ 859.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-1992]

(10) Defective investigation

See also Sections 155 to 159, '(5) Refusal to investigate or Improper investigation — Monitoring of investigations and Role of court', and

'(8) Procedure and Duty and Powers of investigating officer', above

'(11) Illegal/Partisan/Mala fide investigation — Effect and Quashment', below

[1435] — Ss. 157 and 155 — Defect in investigation — Effect — Held, does not by itself vitiate the trial based on such defective investigation

Even a defect, if any, found in investigation, however serious, has no direct bearing on the competence or the procedure relating to the cognizance or the trial. A defect or procedural irregularity, if any, in investigation itself cannot vitiate and nullify the trial based on such erroneous investigation. (Para 18). Paramjit Singh v. State of Punjab, (2007) 13 SCC 530: AIR 2008 SC 441.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.P. Naolekar and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-10-2007]

[1436] — S. 157 — Allegation that investigating police officers were prejudiced against the accused based on contempt application moved by the accused — But none of the police officers in charge of the investigation referred to in the complaint — In the circumstances held, allegation of prejudice cannot be sustained merely on ground that brotherhood of the uniform created a prejudice in absence of anything to show that the investigating officers had any prejudice. Darshan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1988) 1 SCC 618: 1988 SCC (Cri) 214: AIR 1988 SC 747.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.L. Oza, B.C. Ray and K. Jagannatha Shetty, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-1-1988]

[1437] — S. 157 — Defective investigation — Effect — Held, criminal justice should not be made a casualty for wrongs committed by IOs — If court is convinced that testimony of witness to occurrence is true, court is free to act on it albeit IO's suspicious role — Hence, even if IO failed to reveal as to how he came to know about presence of PWs 2 to 4 at scene of occurrence, said fact immaterial in face of their clinching evidence. (Paras 36 and 37). Abu Thakir v. State of T.N., (2010) 5 SCC 91.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision : 19-4-2010]

State of Karnataka v. K. Yarappa Reddy, (1999) 8 SCC 715: 2000 SCC (Cri) 61, followed [1438] — Ss. 157 and 162 — Defective investigation — Effect of — Defence case that accused also sustained injury in the same occurrence in which deceased died — IO did not carry out investigation in relation thereto having not felt necessity therefor — Trial court made a caustic remark — Held, that IO performed his statutory duty properly or not may be a subject-matter of comment, but court cannot be swayed by that fact alone (Para 18). Ramappa Halappa Pujar v. State of Karnataka, (2007) 13 SCC 31: (2007) 55 AIC 191 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-2007]

[1439] — Ss. 157 and 174 — Lapses in investigation — Effect — Held, cannot affect credibility of witnesses — Further held, plea that name of accused was not mentioned in inquest report hence adding to vulnerability of prosecution version, clearly unsustainable (Para 18). Aqeel Ahmad v. State of U.P., (2008) 16 SCC 372: AIR 2009 SC 1271: (2009) 2 All LJ 178: (2009) 75 AIC 248 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-12-2008]

Ram Bali v. State of U.P., (2004) 10 SCC 598: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2045, relied on

(10) Defective investigation (contd.)

[1440] — S. 157 — Deficiencies in investigation — When not relevant — Held, cannot be a ground to discard the prosecution version which is authentic, credible and cogent (Para 12). State of M.P. v. Mansingh, (2003) 10 SCC 414.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-2003]

[1441] — Ss. 157 to 159 — Investigation — Mode and manner of investigation — Promptness in intimating Magistrate concerned about commission of cognizable offence — Investigation of unidentified body — Contradictions, inconsistencies, exaggerations or embellishments — Doubtful evidence regarding time of lodging FIR and identity of deceased in doctor's intimation — Murder witnessed (with the help of scooter headlight) by PW 1/complainant at about 9.30 p.m. while returning from office — PW 1 saw A-1 and A-2 stabbing the deceased with knife — PW 1 lodged FIR with the help of G (PW 3, a local Councillor) — PW 4 (police constable) and PW 3 took deceased to hospital — Though PW 4 informed about the identity of the deceased by PWs 1 and 3, he not disclosing the same to doctor — Doctor, in Ext. C-1 (doctor's intimation) stating that body of deceased was unidentified — No evidence/explanation as to why PW 4 chose not to reveal identity of deceased to the doctor — Mode and manner of investigation by police in case of unidentified body, held, is different — PW 17, IO's statement in this regard was full of contradictions — S. 157(1) CrPC intimation/report also delayed by 15 hours — No explanation for the delay caused — PW 1's failure to give details of scooter number, model, etc. held, fatal — On facts, held, prosecution failed to establish the accusations, and so appellants entitled to acquittal (Paras 8 and 10 to 13). N.H. Muhammed Afras v. State of Kerala, (2008) 15 SCC 315: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 982: AIR 2009 SC 731: (2008) 72 AIC 78 (SC): (2009) 2 ECrN 21 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-11-2008]

[1442] — Ss. 157, 161 and 173 — Investigation — Delay in conducting due to giving medical assistance to the injured — On facts, held, not mala fide — Assailants inflicting serious injuries on three victims — Intestines of one of them coming out and a piece thereof even found lying on the spot and blood was found shed all round — In such circumstances, Investigating Officer's anxiety to remove the injured to hospital instead of interrogating the persons present to find out the cause of assault, held, not improper — On facts, held, statements of the injured were recorded on the earliest available opportunity thereafter — Hence, although the Investigating Officer could have acted more promptly, it could not be said that he was guilty of mala fide intention — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302, 307, 326, 324, 323, 342, 452 and 149 (Para 15). Ramanbhai Naranbhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2000) 1 SCC 358: 2000 SCC (Cri) 113: 1999 Cri LJ 5013.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Majmudar and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-11-1999]

[1443] — Ss. 157 and 161 — Defective investigation — Effect of, on proving guilt of accused — Held, the same by itself may not lead to a conclusion that the accused is innocent (Para 60). Acharaparambath Pradeepan v. State of Kerala, (2006) 13 SCC 643: (2007) 49 AIC 49 (SC): (2007) 1 KLT 249.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-12-2006]

Visveswaran v. State, (2003) 6 SCC 73: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1270; State of M.P. v. Mansingh, (2003) 10 SCC 414, relied on [1444] — S. 157 — Defective investigation — Effect — Held, by itself cannot be a ground for acquittal (Para 26). Budh Singh v. State of M.P., (2007) 10 SCC 496: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 64: (2007) 57 AIC 134 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-5-2007]

[1445] — Ss. 157, 162, 160 and 161 — Defective investigation by itself cannot be made a ground for acquittal

The trial court had no reason to hold that the identity of the weapon of offence was doubtful or PW 9 was not the prosecution witness whose statement had been recorded under Section 161 CrPC. The defects in the investigation holding it to be shaky and creating doubts also appears to be the result of the imaginative thought of the trial court. Otherwise also, defective investigation by itself cannot be made a ground for acquitting the accused. Allarakha K. Mansuri v. State of Gujarat, (2002) 3 SCC 57: 2002 SCC (Cri) 519: AIR 2002 SC 1051: 2002 Cri LJ 1489.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.P. Sethi and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-2-2002]

[1446] — Ss. 157, 160 to 168 — Defective investigation — Effect of — Not fatal to prosecution where ocular testimony is found credible and cogent — Court has to be circumspect while evaluating the evidence in a case of such type — Thus, accused cannot be acquitted solely on account of defect in investigation — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 45 — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/34

In the instant case, the High Court found several disturbing features which indicated how the investigating officer had made out a new case to save the accused persons and to implicate the complainant party. Hence, the High Court analysed the evidence of the eyewitnesses with due care and caution. On finding the said evidence to be credible, the High Court upheld the conviction recorded by the trial court.

Before the Supreme Court, the accused- appellants challenged the conviction on the grounds: (i) that the police after thorough investigation had concluded that it was the complainant party which caused the death of the deceased, (ii) that the pellets, wads and cartridges were not recovered from the spot, (iii) that the weapons of assault and the pellets were not sent for ballistic examination, (iv) that the bloodstained earth was not sent for chemical examination, (v) that many persons who could have thrown light on the incident had not been examined, and (vi) that the evidence of PWs 2 and 3 being that of highly interested and inimical persons, should have been discarded.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

Even if the investigation is defective, that pales into insignificance when ocular testimony is found credible and cogent. In the case of a defective investigation the court has to be circumspect in evaluating the evidence. But it would not be right in acquitting an accused person solely on account of the defect; to do so would tantamount to playing into the hands of the investigating officer if the investigation is designedly defective. (Paras 8 and 5)

Both the trial court and the High Court have analysed the evidence of PWs 2 and 3 with due care and caution keeping in view the correct legal principles and have found the accused persons guilty. There is no scope for interference with the said conclusions. (Para 9). Dhanaj Singh v. State of Punjab, (2004) 3 SCC 654: 2004 SCC (Cri) 851: AIR 2004 SC 1920: 2004 Cri LJ 1807.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-3-2004]

Karnel Singh v. State of M.P., (1995) 5 SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 977; Paras Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1999) 2 SCC 126: 1999 SCC (Cri) 104; Ram Bihari Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1998) 4 SCC 517: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1085; Amar Singh v. Balwinder Singh, (2003) 2 SCC 518: 2003 SCC (Cri) 641, followed [1447] — Ss. 156 and 173 — Investigation — Impropriety in, if fatal — Reiterated, conviction not improper if there has not been strict compliance with provisions of PC Act in the matter of investigation by authorised police officer unless accused is shown to have been prejudiced — Function of investigation is merely to collect evidence and any irregularity and illegality in course of collection of evidence can hardly be considered by itself to affect legality of trial by a competent court of the offence so investigated — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 13(1)(e) r/w S. 13(2) and Ss. 17 second proviso & 17(c) (Paras 12 and 11). State of M.P. v. Virender Kumar Tripathi, (2009) 15 SCC 533.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, P. Sathasivam and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-2009]

H.N. Rishbud v. State of Delhi, AIR 1955 SC 196, relied on [1448] — S. 157 — Defective investigation — When fatal — FIR lodged at about 10.50 a.m. however, the inquest report showed that the inquest was started at 10.30 a.m. on the same day — No explanation offered for the discrepancies — Moreover, Magistrate received FIR after four days — Delay not explained — Held, it is true that a faulty investigation cannot be a determinative factor and would not be sufficient to throw out a credible prosecution version — But in the instant case, it was required to be explained by the investigating officer by plausible evidence on record, as to how the inquest was undertaken at a point of time when the FIR was not in existence — Further held, the statutory requirement under S. 157 CrPC is that the report has to be sent forthwith: that itself shows the urgency attached to the sending of the report — If the FIR is timely lodged and investigation is undertaken immediately, in a given case, the delayed receipt of the report by the Magistrate would not be fatal to the prosecution — It would depend upon the facts of each case — In a given case it is open to the prosecution to establish by evidence the reasons for the delayed dispatch or delayed receipt — Therefore, the cumulative effect of the factors highlighted above would show that the prosecution miserably failed to establish the accusations — Hence appellants acquitted — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302, 341, 342, 34, 148 and 149 (Paras 9 to 12). Motilal v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 7 SCC 454: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 444.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2009]

[1449] — Ss. 157, 174 and 173(8) — Investigation — Defective/Negligent investigation — Effect on adjudication, trial and appreciation of evidence — Duty of court — Defective investigation by earlier IOs being ignored by later IO carrying on proper investigation — Defective investigation by earlier IOs, held, not relevant and rightly discarded by subsequent IO — Defect in the investigation by itself cannot be a ground for acquittal — Investigation is not the solitary area for judicial scrutiny in a criminal trial — Legal obligation of court is to examine the prosecution evidence dehors such lapses, carefully, to find out whether the said evidence is reliable or not and to what extent it is reliable and as to whether such lapses affected the object of finding out the truth — If

(10) Defective investigation (contd.)

primacy is given to negligent investigations or to the omissions or lapses by perfunctory investigation, faith and confidence of people in criminal justice administration would be eroded

Defect in the investigation by itself cannot be a ground for acquittal. Investigation is not the solitary area for judicial scrutiny in a criminal trial. Where there has been negligence on the part of the investigating agency or omissions, etc. which resulted in defective investigation, there is a legal obligation on the part of the court to examine the prosecution evidence dehors such lapses, carefully, to find out whether the said evidence is reliable or not and to what extent it is reliable and as to whether such lapses affected the object of finding out the truth. The conclusion of the trial in the case cannot be allowed to depend solely on the probity of investigation. There may be highly defective investigation in a case. However, it is to be examined as to whether there is any lapse by the IO and whether due to such lapse any benefit should be given to the accused. If primacy is given to such designed or negligent investigations or to the omissions or lapses by perfunctory investigation, the faith and confidence of the people in the criminal justice administration would be eroded. (Para 55)

Irregularities committed in the investigation by the earlier IOs in the present case have too little relevance on the merits of the case. The evidence collected by the said three IOs was not worth placing reliance on and has rightly been not relied upon by the subsequent investigating officer. Serious issues have been raised that inquest report was defective. Undoubtedly, three investigating officers PWs 116, 121 and 122 had conducted the investigation at the initial stage. The occurrence was so ugly and awful that the IOs had conducted the investigation under great anxiety and tension. The seizure memos were also prepared in the same state of affairs. Therefore, when the investigation had been conducted in such a charged atmosphere, some irregularities were bound to occur. There is ample evidence on record to show that when the students came to know that three girls had been charred and large number of girl students had suffered burn injuries, they became so violent that they damaged the ambulance which had been brought to take bodies of the deceased girls for conducting autopsy. The State authorities, after keeping all these factors in mind and realising that the investigation had not been conducted in a proper manner, had taken a decision to transfer the investigation to CB CID. (Para 54)

The presence of A-2 to A-4 with the other accused at the place of agitation, where the bus was burnt by them stands established. As it was proved that there was no initial investigation, the allegation of non-disclosure of identity of accused persons to PW 116 (IO initially appointed and subsequently changed) does not arise. Further the initial investigation was conducted in a panicked situation, therefore, the Government thought it proper to scrap it out and hand over to a higher officer through CB CID. (Paras 63 and 64). C. Muniappan v. State of T.N., (2010) 9 SCC 567: (2010) 5 CTC 794 . Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.S. Singhvi and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-8-2010]

Chandrakant Luxman v. State of Maharashtra, (1974) 3 SCC 626: 1974 SCC (Cri) 116; Karnel Singh v. State of M.P., (1995) 5 SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 977; Ram Bihari Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1998) 4 SCC 517: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1085; Paras Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1999) 2 SCC 126: 1999 SCC (Cri) 104; State of Karnataka v. K. Yarappa Reddy, (1999) 8 SCC 715: 2000 SCC (Cri) 61; Amar Singh v. Balwinder Singh, (2003) 2 SCC 518: 2003 SCC (Cri) 641; Allarakha K. Mansuri v. State of Gujarat, (2002) 3 SCC 57: 2002 SCC (Cri) 519; Ram Bali v. State of U.P., (2004) 10 SCC 598: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2045, relied on

[1450] — Ss. 157, 161, 164, 311 and 391 — Defective investigation — Effect of and examination of prosecution evidence in case of — Course to be adopted by court detailed — Court exhorted to adopt active and analytical role and to have recourse to Ss. 391 and 311 CrPC, 1973 and S. 165 Evidence Act, 1872 if necessary, and to evaluate entire evidence — Accused not to be acquitted solely on account of the defect in investigation — To do so would tantamount to playing into hands of investigating officer if investigation is designedly defective and perpetuating the designed mischief — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 165

If the lapse or omission is committed by the investigating agency or because of negligence, the prosecution evidence is required to be examined dehors such omissions, to find out whether the said evidence is reliable or not. The court has to adopt an active and analytical role. The contaminated conduct of officials should not stand in the way of courts getting at the truth by having recourse to Sections 311, 391 CrPC, 1973 and Section 165 of the Evidence Act, 1872 at the appropriate and relevant stages and evaluating the entire evidence. It would not be right in acquitting an accused person solely on account of the defect; to do so would tantamount to playing into the hands of the investigating officer if the investigation is designedly defective and the designed mischief would be perpetuated with a premium to the offenders and justice would not only be denied to the complainant party but also made an ultimate casualty. (Paras 61 and 62)

Right from the beginning, the stand of the appellant Z was that the investigating agency was trying to help the accused persons and so was the Public Prosecutor. If the investigation was faulty, it was not the fault of the victims or the witnesses. If the same was done in a manner with the object of helping the accused persons as it appears to be apparent from what has transpired so far, it was an additional ground just and reasonable as well for accepting the additional evidence. (Paras 60 and 24)

The High Court has come to a definite conclusion that the investigation carried out by the police was dishonest and faulty. That was and should have been per se sufficient justification to direct a retrial of the case. There was no reason for the High Court to come to the further conclusion of its own about false implication without a concrete basis, and that too merely on conjectures. On the other hand, the possibility of the investigating agency trying to shield the accused persons keeping in view the methodology adopted and turn of events, can equally not be ruled out. When the investigation is dishonest and faulty, it cannot be only with the purpose of false implication. (Paras 70, 71 and 20). Zahira Habibulla H. Sheikh v. State of Gujarat, (2004) 4 SCC 158: 2004 SCC (Cri) 999: 2004 Cri LJ 2050.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-4-2004]

Karnel Singh v. State of M.P., (1995) 5 SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 977; Paras Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1999) 2 SCC 126: 1999 SCC (Cri) 104; Ram Bihari Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1998) 4 SCC 517: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1085; Amar Singh v. Balwinder Singh, (2003) 2 SCC 518: 2003 SCC (Cri) 641, relied on

Clarified in Satyajit Banerjee v. State of W.B., (2005) 1 SCC 115

[1451] — Ss. 157 to 173 — Investigation — Failure to collect evidence or failure to produce evidence collected during investigation — Consequences — While the former may entitle the court to hold the investigation to be perfunctory or tainted affecting the entire trial, in case of latter court can draw a presumption in accordance with S. 114 Ill. (g) Evidence Act — Evidence of eyewitnesses coupled with nature of injuries sustained by some of them and the statement in the FIR establishing that one of the miscreants had been assaulted by a vegetable knife — Held, in the circumstances of the case, failure of the Investigating Officer to seize the knife not fatal to the prosecution case — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114 Ill. (g) (Para 23). Chand Khan v. State of U.P., (1995) 5 SCC 448: 1995 SCC (Cri) 915: AIR 1995 SC 2140: 1995 Cri LJ 3675.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and M.K. Mukherjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-7-1995]

[1452] — S. 157 — Defective investigation — Effect — Court should be circumspect in evaluating evidence but prosecution case cannot be rejected solely on that ground — Murder by gunshot firing — Failure on the part of investigating officer to send the firearm and the empties recovered from the spot to Forensic Science Laboratory and failure to take into possession wire gauze of the window of the baithak from where the gunshot was fired — Held, not fatal to the prosecution case when the case is fully established from the testimony of the eyewitnesses

In cases of defective investigation the court has to be circumspect in evaluating the evidence but it would not be right in acquitting an accused person solely on account of the defect. (Para 15)

It would have been certainly better if the investigating agency had sent the firearms and the empties to the Forensic Science Laboratory for comparison. However, the report of the ballistic expert would in any case be in the nature of an expert opinion and the same is not conclusive. The failure of the investigating officer in sending the firearms and the empties for comparison cannot completely throw out the prosecution case when the same is fully established from the testimony of eyewitnesses whose presence on the spot cannot be doubted as they all received gunshot injuries in the incident. (Para 15)

It is not necessary for the investigating officer to take in his possession the wire gauze of the window from where the accused is alleged to have fired. The wire gauze had absolutely no bearing on the prosecution case and the investigating officer was not supposed to cut and take out the same from the window where it was fixed. (Para 15)

The circumstances relied upon by the High Court in holding that the investigation was tainted are not of any substance on which such an inference could be drawn and in a case like the present one where the prosecution case is fully established by the direct testimony of the eyewitnesses, which is corroborated by the medical evidence, any failure or omission of the investigating officer cannot render the prosecution case doubtful or unworthy of belief. (Para 15). Amar Singh v. Balwinder Singh, (2003) 2 SCC 518: 2003 SCC (Cri) 641: AIR 2003 SC 1164: 2003 Cri LJ 1282.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-2003]

Karnel Singh v. State of M.P., (1995) 5 SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 977; Paras Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1999) 2 SCC 126: 1999 SCC (Cri) 104; Ram Bihari Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1998) 4 SCC 517: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1085, relied on

[1453] — S. 157 — Defective investigation — Effect of — Any deficiency or irregularity in investigation need not necessarily lead to rejection of the case of prosecution when it is otherwise proved — The only requirement is of extra caution by courts while evaluating evidence in such cases — Acquittal of accused solely on the ground of defective investigation, held, would not be just — Thus, non-holding of Test identification parade, held on facts, not fatal

(10) Defective investigation (contd.)

Further, it is also required to be kept in view that every defective investigation need not necessarily result in the acquittal. In a case of defective investigation, the only requirement is of extra caution by courts while evaluating evidence. It would not be just to acquit the accused solely as a result of defective investigation. Any deficiency or irregularity in investigation need not necessarily lead to the rejection of the case of prosecution when it is otherwise proved. (Para 12)

The identification of the accused either in test identification parade or in Court is not a sine qua non in every case if from the circumstances the guilt is otherwise established. Many a time, crimes are committed under the cover of darkness when no one is able to identify the accused. The commission of a crime can also be proved by circumstantial evidence. In the present case, there are clinching circumstances unerringly pointing the accusing finger towards the appellant beyond any reasonable doubt. The non-holding of the test identification parade, having regard to the facts of the case, is not fatal and does not create any reasonable doubt in the case of the prosecution. (Paras 11 and 13). Visveswaran v. State, (2003) 6 SCC 73: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1270: AIR 2003 SC 2471: 2003 Cri LJ 2548.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-4-2003]

[1454] — S. 157 — Deficiency in — Effect of — Held, in such a case, the court can arrive at a finding of guilt if it is otherwise found to have been proved — In present case, non-seizure of chappal of deceased and bloodstained clothes of sole eyewitness did not affect the prosecution case (Para 12). Mahendra Singh v. State of M.P., (2007) 9 SCC 796: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 583.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-2007]

Rotash v. State of Rajasthan, (2006) 12 SCC 64: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 382; Acharaparambath Pradeepan v. State of Kerala, (2006) 13 SCC 643, relied on [1455] — S. 157 — Faulty investigation, held, could hardly be a ground for rejection of the testimony of eyewitness which had a ring of truth in it (Para 17). Prithvi v. Mam Raj, 2005 SCC (Cri) 198: AIR 2004 SC 2729.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-2-2004]

Allarakha K. Mansuri v. State of Gujarat, (2002) 3 SCC 57: 2002 SCC (Cri) 519, relied on [1456] — S. 157 — Highly unsatisfactory investigation — Multiple murder case — Occurrence taking place inside a bus — Bus not seized — Absence of proper scene "mahazar" — Many relevant facts not noted by IO — Delay of six days in sending FIR to Magistrate — No reasonable explanation by IO for delay in questioning the material witnesses (fifteen days after the incident) — Failure to produce all material witnesses — Held, a case of this serious nature which resulted in the death of eight persons should have been conducted with more circumspection and seriousness — Failure of police to produce the best evidence before the court casts serious reflection on the system that is followed in investigation of criminal cases (Para 6). Sahdeo v. State of U.P., (2004) 10 SCC 682: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1873: AIR 2004 SC 3508: 2004 Cri LJ 2876.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-4-2004]

[1457] — S. 157 — Defective investigation — Effect — Gun not sent for forensic test — Held, not proper to acquit an accused solely on account thereof — But, court has to be circumspect while evaluating the evidence in a case involving such investigation

The investigation was stated to be defective since the gun was not sent for forensic test. In the case of a defective investigation the court has to be circumspect in evaluating the evidence. But it would not be right in acquitting an accused person solely on account of the defect; to do so would tantamount to playing into the hands of the investigating officer if the investigation is designedly defective. (Para 12). Ram Bali v. State of U.P., (2004) 10 SCC 598: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2045: AIR 2004 SC 2329: 2004 Cri LJ 2490.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-4-2004]

Karnel Singh v. State of M.P., (1995) 5 SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 977; Paras Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1999) 2 SCC 126: 1999 SCC (Cri) 104; Ram Bihari Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1998) 4 SCC 517: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1085; Amar Singh v. Balwinder Singh, (2003) 2 SCC 518: 2003 SCC (Cri) 641, relied on [1458] — S. 157 — Site plan — Lapses or omissions on the part of IO — Investigation conducted in a perfunctory manner — Effect of — Held, on facts, had not materially affected the substratum of prosecution case which stood established by cogent and reliable evidence — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302, 307 and Ss. 148, 323 and 324 r/w S. 149 (Para 15). Dashrath Singh v. State of U.P., (2004) 7 SCC 408: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1932: 2004 All LJ 3256.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-2004]

[1459] — Ss. 157, 161 and 164 — Mere faulty investigation cannot be a ground for acquittal of the accused — For the fault of the prosecution the perpetrators of a ghastly crime cannot be allowed to go scot-free — The testimony of eyewitnesses in the present case, completely proved the prosecution case

Assuming the investigation was faulty, for that reason alone the accused persons cannot be let off or acquitted. For the fault of the prosecution, the perpetrators of such a ghastly crime cannot be allowed to go scot-free. All the accused persons were armed with deadly weapons and they attacked the members of the victims' family who were totally unarmed and were sleeping at night in the open. (Para 8)

The evidence of the eyewitnesses in the present case completely proves the prosecution case. The doubt thrown by the High Court on the presence of the eyewitnesses at the time of occurrence is totally unacceptable. The impugned judgment of the High Court whereby all the accused persons have been acquitted is hereby set aside. (Para 8). State of U.P. v. Jagdeo, (2003) 1 SCC 456: 2003 SCC (Cri) 351: AIR 2003 SC 660.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-12-2002]

[1460] — S. 157 — Faulty investigation, held, could hardly be a ground for rejection of the testimony of eyewitness which had a ring of truth in it (Para 17). Prithvi v. Mam Raj, (2004) 13 SCC 279: 2005 SCC (Cri) 198: AIR 2004 SC 2729.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-2-2004]

Allarakha K. Mansuri v. State of Gujarat, (2002) 3 SCC 57: 2002 SCC (Cri) 519, relied on [1461] — S. 157 — Investigation — Whether defective — Investigating officer mentioned S. 302 IPC in some documents although no case thereunder was made out till recovery of dead bodies — But when that was not done designedly, held, investigation cannot be said to be tainted on that ground — One of the cautions which is required to be applied is to see that actual culprit does not end up getting acquitted (Para 31). Gagan Kanojia v. State of Punjab, (2006) 13 SCC 516: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 109: (2007) 49 AIC 119 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-2006]

Kishore Chand v. State of H.P., (1991) 1 SCC 286: 1991 SCC (Cri) 172, distinguished [1462] — Ss. 157 to 172 and 198 — Investigation into bride burning case — Omission by the IO to send the burnt clothes and other incriminating material for chemical examination — Effect — Held, mere fact that the IO committed irregularity or illegality during the course of investigation would not cast doubt on the prosecution case — Nor trustworthy and reliable evidence can be cast aside to record acquittal on that account. State of Rajasthan v. Kishore, (1996) 8 SCC 217: 1996 SCC (Cri) 646: AIR 1996 SC 3035.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Ramaswamy, S. Saghir Ahmad and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-2-1996]

[1463] — Ss. 157 and 173(2) — Police inaction — Defective investigation — Petition by parents against callous and biased investigation by police into dowry death of daughter — Detailed explanation from police sought — Held, the investigation done by the police did not inspire confidence — CBI investigating the case directed to expedite — No criminal action against delinquent police officials ordered for lack of sufficient evidence — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302 — Constitution of India, Art. 32. Bhagwant Singh v. Commr. of Police, (1983) 3 SCC 344: 1983 SCC (Cri) 637: AIR 1983 SC 826: 1983 Cri LJ 1081.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and R.S. Pathak, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-1983]

[1464] — S. 157 — Cross-case — Incomplete investigation therein — Plea of self-defence — Defence contention that accused D, who received injuries at the hands of deceased L, lodged his report against L, but that case was not investigated by the police otherwise the case of self-defence as taken up by the accused appellant would have clearly been made out — Whether case of self-defence in favour of appellants made out or not, held, was to be examined on the basis of evidence produced by the defence in support thereof — More so, accused D did not pursue the matter on the basis of his FIR — Further, investigation in the instant case had taken note of the fact regarding the injuries caused to D by gunshot fired by L which was also the case of D in his FIR — Hence, the said plea raised by the defence not affecting the prosecution case adversely

To prove its case of private defence the appellants have examined defence witnesses in support of their version. The accused persons including the appellants have also submitted their written statement in defence. They are all placed on record. Therefore, in the present case the merits may have to be examined on the basis of the evidence on record and as to whether facts and circumstances make out a case of self- defence in favour of the appellants or not. Further, D also does not seem to have pursued the matter on the basis of his FIR in the manner whatever may have been available under the law to do so. In the case in hand the investigation has taken note of the fact regarding the injuries caused to D by gunshot fired by L which was also the case of D in his FIR. (Paras 22 and 23). Dharminder v. State of H.P., (2002) 7 SCC 488: 2003 SCC (Cri) 58: AIR 2002 SC 3097.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.C. Lahoti and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-9-2002]

Kashiram v. State of M.P., (2002) 1 SCC 71: 2002 SCC (Cri) 68, distinguished

(10) Defective investigation (contd.)

[1465] — S. 157 — Defective investigation — Negligence of investigating officer — That should not result in acquittal of accused when prosecution case is otherwise established

In a case of defective investigation it would not be proper to acquit the accused if the case is otherwise established conclusively. A criminal trial is meant for doing justice to the accused, the victim and the society so that law and order is maintained. A Judge does not preside over a criminal trial merely to see that no innocent man is punished. A Judge also presides to see that a guilty man does not escape. One is as important as the other. Both are public duties which the Judge has to perform. (Paras 8 and 10). Ambika Prasad v. State (Delhi Admn.), (2000) 2 SCC 646: 2000 SCC (Cri) 522: AIR 2000 SC 718: 2000 Cri LJ 810.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-1-2000]

Karnel Singh v. State of M.P., (1995) 5 SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 977; Paras Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1999) 2 SCC 126: 1999 SCC (Cri) 104; Ram Bihari Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1998) 4 SCC 517: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1085, relied on [1466] — S. 157 — Infirmities/Lapses/Omissions in investigation — Recovery of weapons after a long period and failure to send those weapons for forensic examination — Effect of — Held, the said fact did not dilute the evidentiary value of the prosecution version in any manner — Conviction and sentence upheld — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302 — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 27 and 45 (Paras 16 and 17). Mano v. State of T.N., (2007) 13 SCC 795: 2007 Cri LJ 2736.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-4-2007]

[1467] — S. 157 — Investigation — Failure of IO to seize the firearms or empties for examination by ballistic expert — Effect — Not fatal in view of categorical testimony of eyewitness implicating the accused — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 145 (Para 13). State of Punjab v. Hakam Singh, (2005) 7 SCC 408: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1679: 2005 Cri LJ 4111.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-2005]

[1468] — S. 157 — Dowry death — Failure of Investigating Agency to bring to trial the real accused deprecated. Lichhamadevi v. State of Rajasthan, (1988) 4 SCC 456: 1988 SCC (Cri) 978: AIR 1988 SC 1785.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.L. Oza and K. Jagannatha Shetty, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-8-1988]

[1469] — S. 157 — Failure of investigating officer to smell the firearms at the time of recovery to confirm if freshly used — Held, can assume importance when serious doubt regarding the use of the firearms and in fact of recovery of the accused along with firearms present. Nachhattar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1976) 1 SCC 750: 1976 SCC (Cri) 182: AIR 1976 SC 951: 1976 Cri LJ 691.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, P.K. Goswami and N.L. Untwalia, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-12-1975]

[1470] — S. 157 — Murder case — Footprints — Trail not followed by police — Effect — Held on facts, not fatal to the prosecution case

The accused has tried to draw red herrings to confuse and divert the attention of everyone including the investigating agencies from himself. One of such futile attempts was to highlight the footprints. Merely because the trail was not followed by the police, that is really of no consequence. The investigating officer has clarified this aspect and justifiably explained the reasons as to why that was not considered necessary or possible. (Para 19). State of Rajasthan v. Kheraj Ram, (2003) 8 SCC 224: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1979.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-8-2003]

[1471] — S. 157 — Defective investigation — Doubt regarding prosecution version and testimony of eyewitnesses (PWs 1 and 5) — Long-standing litigation between prosecution party and accused persons — Prosecution story that accused A-1 invited deceased and PWs 1 and 5 for dinner in connection with last rites ceremony of his father and while they were having their meals, accused persons including the appellants attacked them, held on facts, highly improbable — Vital contradiction and improvement in statements of PWs 1 and 5 — IO reaching the spot at about 10 p.m. but neither carrying a torch with him nor trying to procure some other source of light to carry on with the investigation — Copy of FIR not sent to Magistrate — Date and time of receipt of dead body not mentioned in the requisition memo sent by SHO to the hospital and in the post-mortem report — Presence of PWs 1 and 5 at the spot doubtful — No independent witness or corroborative evidence to support the version of PWs 1 and 5 — No specific injury which could cause death in the ordinary course of nature had been attributed to any of the appellants — Main accused with whom the deceased had litigation already acquitted — On facts, conviction and sentence of appellants set aside — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/149, 120-B and 147 (Paras 10 to 13). Jandel Singh v. State of M.P., (2003) 9 SCC 110: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1782: AIR 2003 SC 3991: 2003 Cri LJ 3528.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde, Ashok Bhan and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-2003]

[1472] — S. 157 — Murder trial — Contradictions, inconsistencies, exaggerations or embellishments — Acquittal restored — Allegations of six appellant-accused murdering two deceased, by severely beating them with lathis, lohangis and farsas — Held, on bare perusal of record and findings recorded by trial court present case is not one justifying interference by High Court — Fact that first report was recorded at about 1 p.m. and suppressed by prosecution, ignored by High Court — High Court also ignored fact that there was no evidence to show as to when special report was dispatched to or received by Magistrate, as provided under S. 157 CrPC — Again, High Court despite noting substantial discrepancies in the statements inter se of witnesses, still chose to rely on them — It also ignored statement of PW 1 (doctor performing post-mortem examinations), that injured deceased would have been rendered unconscious within 10 to 15 minutes after receiving injuries (meaning thereby that story of oral dying declarations allegedly made about two hours after receiving injuries is unbelievable) — Even otherwise, oral dying declaration made to an inimical person, should be accepted with a little hesitation and reservation — Further, High Court accepted statement of PW 5 as eyewitness, ignoring his unnatural behaviour, as he claimed to have rushed to village but did not inform his parents and others present there and chose to disappear for a couple of hours on the specious and unacceptable plea that he feared for his own safety — Hence, appellants be acquitted — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/34 (Paras 22 to 26). Gopal Singh v. State of M.P., (2010) 6 SCC 407.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : H.S. Bedi and A.K. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision : 12-5-2010]

[1473] — S. 157 — Defective investigation — Long-standing enmity of serious nature existing between the two eyewitnesses (PWs 3 and 4) and the family of the accused persons — Murder of brother of PW 3 — Conviction of appellants under S. 302 based on testimony of chance witnesses PWs 3 and 4 — Propriety — I and his six sons including the two appellants charged under S. 302 r/w S. 120-B IPC for having hatched a conspiracy to commit murder of P — Trial court disbelieving the part of story related to hatching conspiracy and acquitting all accused persons except the appellants — Testimony regarding the manner in which the gunshots were fired, found inconsistent with medical evidence — Delay in sending FIR to Magistrate not explained — Both the eyewitnesses were chance witnesses — Grave doubt expressed about their presence at the place of the incident — Further, testimony of defence witnesses, held on facts, could not just be thrown overboard — Thus, conviction of appellants set aside — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302. Baldev Singh v. State of M.P., (2003) 9 SCC 45: AIR 2003 SC 2098: 2003 Cri LJ 880.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.C. Lahoti and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-1-2003]

(11) Illegal/Partisan/Mala fide investigation — Effect and Quashment

See also Sections 155 to 159, '(5) Refusal to investigate or Improper investigation — Monitoring of investigation and Role of court',

'(8) Procedure and Duty and Powers of investigating officer', and

'(10) Defective investigation', above

See also under S. 154, above

See also under CrPC, 1973, S. 482 p. 1260 in Vol. 2

See also CONSTITUTION OF INDIA, Arts. 32, 136 and 226 in Vol. 7, Vol. 8 and Vol. 9, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn. respectively

[1474] — S. 156 — Effect and Quashment of malafide investigation — Fair investigation — Right to — Protected under Arts. 20 and 21 of the Constitution — Investigation must be fair, transparent and judicious — Tainted and biased investigation and consequent prejudice and harassment to any party cannot be permitted to continue — Hence quashed — Constitution of India — Arts. 21 and 20 (Para 46). Babubhai v. State of Gujarat, (2010) 12 SCC 254.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-8-2010]

R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; Jamuna Chaudhary v. State of Bihar, (1974) 3 SCC 774: 1974 SCC (Cri) 250; Mahmood v. State of U.P., (1976) 1 SCC 542: 1976 SCC (Cri) 72; State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192; Navinchandra N. Majithia v. State of Meghalaya, (2000) 8 SCC 323: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1510; K. Chandrasekhar v. State of Kerala, (1998) 5 SCC 223: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1291; Ramachandran v. R. Udhayakumar, (2008) 5 SCC 413: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 631; Mithabhai Pashabhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 332: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 1047; Kishan Lal v. Dharmendra Bafna, (2009) 7 SCC 685: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 611; S.N. Sharma v. Bipen Kumar Tiwari, (1970) 1 SCC 653: 1970 SCC (Cri) 258; Kashmeri Devi v. Delhi Admn., 1988 Supp SCC 482: 1988 SCC (Cri) 864; Kailash Chandra v. Union of India, AIR 1961 SC 1346; Eicher Tractors Ltd. v. Commr. of Customs, (2001) 1 SCC 315; State of A.P. v. V. Sarma Rao, (2007) 2 SCC 159: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 535; Nirmal Singh Kahlon v. State of Punjab, (2009) 1 SCC 441: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 523; Manu Sharma v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 6 SCC 1: (2010) 2 SCC (Cri) 1385, relied on

(11) Illegal/Partisan/Mala fide investigation — Effect and Quashment (contd.)

[1475] — Ss. 156, 157 and 190 — Illegal investigation — Investigation by incompetent officer — Effect on competence and jurisdiction of Court — Though non-compliance with mandatory provisions of S. 5-A of Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 renders investigation illegal, but competence and jurisdiction of court for trial after taking cognizance of offence not affected thereby. State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426: AIR 1992 SC 604: 1992 Cri LJ 527.

Bench Strength 2. Coram. S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-11-1990]

[1476] — Ss. 156, 157, 465, 401 and 397 — Investigation by an incompetent police officer — Quashing of investigation and charge by High Court solely on the ground of — Legality — Held, was not justified — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 — Ss. 5-A(1)(d) and 5(1)(d) (Para 6)

The respondent was working as Upper Division Clerk-cum-Storekeeper in the office of the District Education Officer. He was charged under Section 5(1)(d) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947. After the investigation was completed a charge-sheet was submitted on which cognizance was taken and charge was framed against the respondent. Thereafter, the case was fixed for evidence. It is at that stage the respondent moved an application for discharge on the ground that the investigation was not done by a competent police officer as provided under the 1947 Act. The learned Special Judge after considering the application rejected the said application on the ground that no prejudice had been caused to the respondent. It was also noticed that the case was directed to be investigated by the Assistant Inspector General. Aggrieved thereby, the respondent filed a criminal revision petition before the High Court. By the impugned order the High Court quashed the investigation and the charge solely on the ground that the investigation had not been carried on by a competent officer as contemplated under Section 5-A(1)(d) of the Act.

Allowing the appeal, the Supreme Court held as above. State of M.P. v. Ramesh C. Sharma, (2005) 12 SCC 628.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-9-2005]

State of M.P. v. Ram Singh, (2000) 5 SCC 88: 2000 SCC (Cri) 886; Union of India v. Prakash P. Hinduja, (2003) 6 SCC 195: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1314, followed

[1477] — Ss. 156, 157 and 161 — Illegal investigation — Investigation by incompetent police officer — Effect of — Held, proceedings may not be quashed only on the basis of illegal investigation unless miscarriage of justice is shown — In the present case the accused had suffered miscarriage of justice as the investigation conducted was not fair — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 — S. 17 — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 — S. 5-A (Para 21). State Inspector of Police v. Surya Sankaram Karri, (2006) 7 SCC 172: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 225.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-8-2006]

[1478] — Ss. 157, 154 and 482 — Quashing of criminal investigation — Muslim boy marrying Hindu girl — FIR lodged by girl's father — Boy apprehending trouble from his father-in-law seeking police protection — There being a valid marriage, both the spouses being major and living together for about 8 months and the wife being pregnant, held, marriage should be sustained and nothing should be allowed to happen which would affect that position — Ordinarily Supreme Court does not interfere at the investigation stage but in the special facts it would be necessary to quash the pending investigation. Sangita Rani v. State of U.P., 1992 Supp (1) SCC 715: 1992 SCC (Cri) 391.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Ranganath Misra, C.J. and M.H. Kania and Kuldip Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-8-1991]

[1479] — Ss. 157 to 161 and 172(2) — Partisan investigation — Omission of name of the accused in statement of some of the PWs recorded by Investigating Officer, not significant when investigation was partisan and wanted to shield the accused — In such a case statements of witnesses examined during investigation involving the accused would be manipulated (Para 19). E.K. Chandrasenan v. State of Kerala, (1995) 2 SCC 99: 1995 SCC (Cri) 329: AIR 1995 SC 1066: 1995 Cri LJ 2060: (1995) 1 Crimes 421.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and B.L. Hansaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-1-1995]

[1480] — Ss. 157, 161 and 164 — Designedly dishonest and faulty investigation — Possible purposes therefor — Held, the only purpose of such an investigation cannot be false implication, but equally it is possible that the investigating agency was trying to shield the accused — On facts held, High Court's conclusion in this regard not proper

The High Court has come to a definite conclusion that the investigation carried out by the police was dishonest and faulty. That was and should have been per se sufficient justification to direct a retrial of the case. There was no reason for the High Court to come to the further conclusion of its own about false implication without a concrete basis, and that too merely on conjectures. On the other hand, the possibility of the investigating agency trying to shield the accused persons keeping in view the methodology adopted and turn of events, can equally not be ruled out. When the investigation is dishonest and faulty, it cannot be only with the purpose of false implication. (Paras 70, 71 and 20). Zahira Habibulla H. Sheikh v. State of Gujarat, (2004) 4 SCC 158: 2004 SCC (Cri) 999: 2004 Cri LJ 2050.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-4-2004]

Karnel Singh v. State of M.P., (1995) 5 SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 977; Paras Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1999) 2 SCC 126: 1999 SCC (Cri) 104; Ram Bihari Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1998) 4 SCC 517: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1085; Amar Singh v. Balwinder Singh, (2003) 2 SCC 518: 2003 SCC (Cri) 641, relied on

Clarified in Satyajit Banerjee v. State of W.B., (2005) 1 SCC 115

[1481] — Ss. 157 and 173 — Investigation — Whether biased — Police firing in the vicinity of V-C Lodge resulting in death of 20 years' old son of the petitioner — Allegation of manipulation of record by police to cover up its act of commission of unjustified and unprovoked firing — Report of Additional District and Sessions Judge indicating lapses of investigating agency — Earlier Supreme Court directing State Govt. to have the matter enquired by some independent agency/senior officer — But State Govt. appointing Chief Development Officer and Superintendent of Police to enquire into the matter — Hence report submitted by them ignored — Director, CBI directed to hold an enquiry/investigation into the matter through an officer not below the rank of a Senior Superintendent of Police (CBI) — In case the CBI finds that a challan is required to be filed against the culprits it shall do the needful before a competent authority — Petitioner's request for exemplary damages to the family of the deceased shall in that event be decided by the trial court after notice to the parties — Constitution of India, Art. 32 (Paras 11 to 14). Munir Alam v. Union of India, (1999) 5 SCC 248: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1000: AIR 1999 SC 2267: 1999 Cri LJ 3523.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and M. Jagannadha Rao and N. Santosh Hedge JJ. [Date of decision: 7-5-1999]

[1482] — Ss. 157 and 159 — Investigation — Irregularity or illegality during — Effect if any — Held, does not constitute a ground to reject the prosecution case

It is well settled that any irregularity or even an illegality during investigation ought not to be treated as a ground to reject the prosecution case. (Para 8). Leela Ram v. State of Haryana, (1999) 9 SCC 525: 2000 SCC (Cri) 222: AIR 1999 SC 3717.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-1999]

State of Rajasthan v. Kishore, (1996) 8 SCC 217: 1996 SCC (Cri) 646: AIR 1996 SC 3035, relied on [1483] — S. 157 — Investigation — Illegality in, unless shown to have brought about miscarriage of justice, held, not vitiative of the result of the trial — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 — S. 17 (Para 14). State of M.P. v. Ram Singh, (2000) 5 SCC 88: 2000 SCC (Cri) 886: AIR 2000 SC 870: 2000 Cri LJ 1401.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-2-2000]

H.N. Rishbud v. State of Delhi, AIR 1955 SC 196: 1955 Cri LJ 526, followed [1484] — S. 157 — Irregularities or illegalities in the conduct of investigation in a murder case — Held, was of no consequence (Para 14). Bikau Pandey v. State of Bihar, (2003) 12 SCC 616: AIR 2004 SC 997.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-11-2003]

State of Rajasthan v. Kishore, (1996) 8 SCC 217: 1996 SCC (Cri) 646; State of Karnataka v. K. Yarappa Reddy, (1999) 8 SCC 715: 2000 SCC (Cri) 61, relied on

(12) Delay in investigation and Quashment

See also Sections 155 to 159, '(5) Refusal to investigate or Improper investigation — Monitoring of investigation and Role of court',

'(8) Procedure and Duty and Powers of investigating officer', and

'(10) Defective investigation', above

See also under CrPC, 1973, S. 482 p. 1260 in Vol. 2

See also CONSTITUTION OF INDIA, Arts. 32, 136 and 226 in Vol. 7, Vol. 8 and Vol. 9, Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, 2nd Edn., respectively

[1485] — Ss. 157, 173 and 482 — Delay in completing investigation — No time limit can be fixed for completing investigation

There are offences of grave magnitude such as diabolical crimes of conspiracy or clandestine crimes committed by members of the underworld with their tentacles spread over various parts of the country or even abroad. The very nature of such offences would necessarily involve considerable time for unearthing the crimes and bringing the culprits to book. Therefore, it is not possible to formulate inflexible guidelines or rigid principles of uniform application for speedy investigation or to stipulate any arbitrary period of limitation within which investigation in a criminal case should be completed. State of A.P. v. P.V. Pavithran, (1990) 2 SCC 340: AIR 1990 SC 1266: 1990 Cri LJ 1306.

(12) Delay in investigation and Quashment (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-3-1990]

[1486] — S. 157 — Investigation — Delay — Effect of — Triple murder — Members of complainant party had been hunted out and killed and threats had been held out to other members of complainant family as well — Atmosphere of terror in village — Held, if the entire investigation on the crucial day did not proceed with clockwork precision, no adverse inference can reasonably be drawn from this fact — Penal Code, 1860, S. 302 (Para 49). Himmat Sukhadeo Wahurwagh v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 6 SCC 712.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.B. Sinha, H.S. Bedi and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2009]

[1487] — Ss. 157, 173 and 482 — Delay in completing investigation — When should court quash further proceedings

A lethargic and lackadaisical manner of investigation over a prolonged period makes an accused in a criminal proceeding to live every moment under extreme emotional and mental stress and strain and to remain always under a fear psychosis. Therefore, it is imperative that if investigation of a criminal proceeding staggers on with tardy pace due to the indolence or inefficiency of the investigating agency causing unreasonable and substantial delay resulting in grave prejudice or disadvantage to the accused, the court as the protector of the right and personal liberty of the citizen will step in and resort to the drastic remedy of quashing further proceedings in such investigation. State of A.P. v. P.V. Pavithran, (1990) 2 SCC 340: AIR 1990 SC 1266: 1990 Cri LJ 1306.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-3-1990]

[1488] — Ss. 157, 173 and 482 — Delay in completing investigation — Whether resulted in deprivation of fair trial — Factors to be considered in determining

The determination of the question whether the accused has been deprived of a fair trial on account of delayed or protracted investigation would also depend on various factors including whether such delay was unreasonably long or caused deliberately or intentionally to hamper the defence of the accused or whether such delay was inevitable in the nature of things or whether it was due to the dilatory tactics adopted by the accused. The court, in addition, has to consider whether such delay on the part of the investigating agency has caused grave prejudice or disadvantage to the accused. State of A.P. v. P.V. Pavithran, (1990) 2 SCC 340: AIR 1990 SC 1266: 1990 Cri LJ 1306.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-3-1990]

[1489] — Ss. 157 and 173 — Delay in recovery of material objects from place of occurrence — 12 hours' delay in, after the incident, although police station was only 200 ft. away — On facts, held, explained

The evidence of the IO shows that after arranging an escort to guard the dead body of the deceased and the scene of occurrence, he went in search of the accused along with his staff in and around the town for the whole night and next morning at 6.00 a.m., he went to the hospital and till 8.00 a.m., he was there. Thereafter, he came to the place of occurrence and collected the material objects. It is quite natural for the police officer to go in search of the accused person. In addition, he took the precaution of keeping a guard at the place of occurrence. So, the delay of 12 hours has been duly explained. (Para 17). Sheelam Ramesh v. State of A.P., (1999) 8 SCC 369: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1437: AIR 2000 SC 118.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-1999]

[1490] — S. 157 — Delay in arresting the accused — Effect — Accused residing near the houses of solitary eyewitness PW 3 and the deceased — Address of accused known to all — Further, name and address of accused mentioned in FIR — Accused arrested ten days after the incident — On facts, the explanation given by IO that this delay was on account of the fact that the correct address of the accused was not disclosed by the witness, held, not convincing

If really the name of the assailant was known, there was no reason for his being arrested several days after the occurrence. It is not disputed that the accused lived near the house of PW 3, and his house is also very near to the house of the deceased. His address was known to all and in fact in the FIR itself his name and address had been disclosed. Despite this he was arrested 10 days later, and it appears from the deposition of the investigating officer that this delay was on account of the fact that the correct address of the accused-appellant was not disclosed by the witness. This explanation is hardly convincing. (Para 17). Joseph v. State of Kerala, (2003) 11 SCC 223: 2004 SCC (Cri) 93: 2003 Cri LJ 2543: (2003) 2 KLT 756.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-4-2003]

(13) Result of investigation — When evidence

[1491] — S. 157 — Identification of accused/articles — Utility of sniffer dog — Identification by sniffer dog, held, is only for purpose of investigation and not for evidence — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 3 and 5

The services of a sniffer dog may be taken for the purpose of investigation. Its faculties cannot be taken as evidence for the purpose of establishing the guilt of an accused. One of the grounds of conviction was that the sniffer dog had gone near the appellant only and nobody else when he had been inside the house. The evidence of PW 6, PW 8, PW 9 and PW 13 who testified about the sniffer dog's staying near the accused was wrongly relied on. (Paras 40, 27 and 38). Dinesh Borthakur v. State of Assam, (2008) 5 SCC 697: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 39: AIR 2008 SC 2205.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-3-2008]

Abdul Rajak Murtaja Dafedar v. State of Maharashtra, (1969) 2 SCC 234; Gade Lakshmi Mangaraju v. State of A.P., (2001) 6 SCC 205: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1082, relied on [1492] — Ss. 157 to 161 and 173 — Evidence — What is — Result of investigation is not evidence — Evidence of police officers that they perused the case diary, interrogated some of the accused and other persons and found some of the accused innocent, held, not legally admissible — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 3. Dalip Singh v. State of Punjab, (1997) 11 SCC 573: AIR 1997 SC 2985: 1997 Cri LJ 3647.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and K. Venkataswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-7-1997]

Vijender v. State of Delhi, (1997) 6 SCC 171: 1997 SCC (Cri) 857, followed [1493] — Ss. 157, 161 and 173 — Discrepancy between medical report and inquest report — Effect — Relevant/reliable/preferred report — Exclusive preference of medical report over inquest report in case of discrepancy, prescribed — Police officers are not experts as doctors — Hence, discrepancy between medical report and inquest report, not relevant (Paras 29 and 18 to 21). State of U.P. v. Shobhanath, (2009) 6 SCC 600.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-2009]

[1494] — Ss. 157, 161 and 162 — Inquest report — Statement of witnesses, held, not required to be incorporated

It is not at all necessary in law to incorporate the statements of the witnesses in the inquest report. The inquest report is to be made by the Investigating Officer just to indicate the injuries which he has found on the bodies of the deceased persons. It may be witnessed by one or two persons but it is not at all necessary for the Investigating Officer to record the statements of the witnesses or to get the statements of witnesses signed on the inquest report and incorporate the same in it which introduces an element of chaos and confusion and demanding an explanation from the prosecution regarding the statement made therein.

It is recommended that in future the Investigating Officer should not associate any eyewitness with the recovery memos because that partakes of an attempt to make the witness omnibus. Nirpal Singh v. State of Haryana, (1977) 2 SCC 131: 1977 SCC (Cri) 262: AIR 1977 SC 1066: (1977) 2 SCR 901: 1977 Cri LJ 642.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-2-1977]

[1495] — Ss. 157 and 165 — Seizure memo of articles recovered during investigation — Effect of seizure witnesses turning hostile

If the evidence of the investigating officer who recovered the material objects is convincing, the evidence as to recovery need not be rejected on the ground that seizure witnesses do not support the prosecution version. Modan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, (1978) 4 SCC 435: 1979 SCC (Cri) 56: AIR 1978 SC 1511: 1978 Cri LJ 1531.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Jaswant Singh and P.S. Kailasam, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-1978]

[1496] — S. 157 — Investigation — Sealing of articles recovered from place of occurrence — Hair recovered kept in different containers and those containers were later on sealed in a packet, though containers themselves were not sealed — Held, hair having been kept in sealed packets, there was no possibility of tampering (Para 24). M.A. Antony v. State of Kerala, (2009) 6 SCC 220.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-4-2009]

(14) Forwarding and receipt of Section 157 report (Ss. 158-159)

See also Section 154, '(3)(vi)3. Delay in forwarding FIR to Magistrate (i.e. the report as required to be sent to Magistrate under S. 157 r/w S. 158)', above

(14) Forwarding and receipt of Section 157 report (Ss. 158-159) (contd.)

[1497] — S. 158 — Absence of seal on copy of report received by the Magistrate, held, in view of endorsement made by the CJM not material. Sanganabasappa Bheemappa Kaligonnavar v. State of Karnataka, 1994 Supp (1) SCC 583: 1994 SCC (Cri) 727: AIR 1994 SC 848: 1994 Cri LJ 606: (1994) 31 ACC 147: (1994) 1 Crimes 33.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-12-1993]

[1498] — Ss. 159 and 158 — Magistrate while receiving copy of FIR, particularly those relating to heinous crimes such as murder, should not only note the date but also time of receipt

In the instant case, the FIR was registered on 25-8-1991 at about 2.30 a.m. and copy thereof referred to in Section 157 was received by the Magistrate on 27-8-1991. Even though there was a mention in the FIR that its copy was sent through special messenger, yet no date or time of sending the said report was mentioned. The Magistrate, receiving the copy of the report, had also not noted the time of its receipt. The Magistrates receiving reports under Section 157 CrPC, particularly when it relates to the commission of heinous crime are required to note not only the date but also the time of the receipt of the copy thereof. (Para 8). Bijoy Singh v. State of Bihar, (2002) 9 SCC 147: AIR 2002 SC 1949: 2002 Cri LJ 2623.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.P. Sethi and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-4-2002]

[1499] — S. 159 — 'On receiving such report' — Means on receiving report contemplated in S. 157(2)

The expression "on receiving such a report" refers to the receipt of a report contemplated in S. 157(2), because the question of directing an investigation by the Magistrate cannot arise in pursuance of the report referred to under sub-section (1) of S. 157 intimating that the police officer has proceeded with the investigation either in person or by deputing any one of his subordinate officers. State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426: AIR 1992 SC 604: 1992 Cri LJ 527.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-11-1990]

(15) Other

[1500] — Ss. 157 and 159 — Right of private defence — Plea of — Not taken during investigation — Can be taken during trial. Bahadur Singh v. State of Punjab, (1992) 4 SCC 503: 1993 SCC (Cri) 94: AIR 1993 SC 70.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-8-1992]

[1501] — Ss. 157, 160, 161, 170(2) and 171 — Identification of prisoners and method for investigation — Directions for — High Court issuing certain directions intended to meet challenge of impersonation (set out in para 5) — Submission by State that most of these directions were impracticable and in some cases ran counter to the 1920 Act — Held, said directions are subject to provisions of the Act, the Regulations and CrPC — In case of conflict statute will prevail — In case of complainant as well as witnesses, where prosecution wants to protect the identity, reasons therefor must be recorded and in case of rape victims, photographs should not be taken — Further, Directions 8 and 9 modified — M.P. Police Regulations — Regn. 2 — Identification of Prisoners Act, 1920, Ss. 4, 5, 6 and 54-A (Paras 5 and 12 to 14). State of M.P. v. Devendra, (2009) 14 SCC 80: AIR 2009 SC 3009: (2009) 81 AIC 178 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 4130.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, D.K. Jain and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2009]

Devendra Rajendra Lashkari v. J.M.F.C., Mhow, (2002) 3 MPLJ 337, modified

---

— S. 160 See Ss. 154 to 173

See also Ss. 154 to 173 and 482

See also Ss. 157, 156, 154, 159, 160, 161

See also Ss. 157 to 161 and 172(2)

See also Ss. 157 to 161 and 173

See also Ss. 157 to 172 and 198

See also Ss. 157 to 173

See also Ss. 157, 160 and 161

See also Ss. 157, 160 to 168

See also Ss. 157, 160, 167, 170, 190 and 319

See also Ss. 157, 162, 160 and 161

See also Ss. 162 and 160

See also Ss. 164(1) & (5), 154 to 160, 165 to 173(5) & (8) and 311

[1502] — S. 160(1) and proviso thereto — Police officer's power to require attendance of witnesses — Persons applicable to — Accused person not included, though suspects included — Direction by High Court that woman accused/witness should not be summoned or required to attend at any police station under S. 160 but must be enquired only by women police or in the presence of women police, at the places where they reside — Validity of — Held, (per Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, J.), insofar as the direction extended to accused women it was not valid as it was contrary to statutory provision in S. 160 which is applicable only to witnesses and not to accused — Such direction would cause hardship to investigating agency where women are involved as accused

Section 160 CrPC has reference to the persons to be examined as witnesses in the trial or inquiry to be held after the completion of the investigation. As an accused cannot be examined as a witness either for or against himself, he cannot be included in the class of persons referred to in the section. But the police officers are fully authorised to require the personal attendance of the suspects during the investigation. (Para 21)

In the instant case, the High Court has given a direction to the State Government to issue circulars to all the police stations instructing the police officials that the woman accused/witness should not be summoned or required to attend at any police station under Section 160 CrPC but they must be enquired only by women police or in the presence of women police, at the places where they reside. The High Court has committed a serious error in giving such a direction contrary to the statutory provisions under Section 160 CrPC which is applicable only to the witnesses and not the accused. In fact, the learned Judge has erred in expanding the scope of Section 160 CrPC to the accused as well, which might lead to hardship to an investigating agency. If the directions of the learned Single Judge are accepted, no purposeful investigation into any serious offence involving women accused could be conducted successfully. (Paras 22 to 24). State v. N.M.T. Joy Immaculate, (2004) 5 SCC 729: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1722: AIR 2004 SC 2282: 2004 Cri LJ 2515.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu, C.J.[1] and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan[2] and G.P. Mathur[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2004]

2002 MLJ (Cri) 661, reversed

[1503] — S. 160(1) proviso — Police officer's power to require attendance of witnesses before himself — Rape of 13 girls of an Ashram by founder of the Ashram who had dominion/control over the victims — A-1 threatened the victims of dire consequences if they disclosed anything about his misdeeds — Victims removed from the Ashram and examined and interrogated in women police stations so that they may speak the truth without any fear — Held, S. 160 not violated

All the victim girls were the inmates of the Ashram. They were raped by A-1 in the Ashram, A-1 having dominion/control over the Ashram. The victim girls were being threatened not to disclose to anybody about the misdeeds of A-1 or face dire consequences including threat of death. In such circumstances the Ashram cannot be the place of residence for the purposes of Section 160 CrPC and the victim girls were rightly examined and interrogated in women police stations. They were removed from the Ashram to erase the fear psychosis from them. It was for their safety and to serve the interest of justice that they were removed from the clutches of A-1. Section 160 CrPC must be understood and appreciated in the context of the given situation. (Para 42). Kamalanantha v. State of T.N., (2005) 5 SCC 194: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1121: AIR 2005 SC 2132.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-2005]

[1504] — S. 160(1) proviso — Women should not be compelled to appear at police station — Violation must be visited with condign punishment

The insisting on a woman to appear at the police station is a flagrant violation of the proviso to S. 160(1), Criminal Procedure Code. Such deviance must be visited with prompt punishment since policemen may not be a law unto themselves expecting others to obey the law. Nandini Satpathy v. P.L. Dani, (1978) 2 SCC 424: 1978 SCC (Cri) 236: AIR 1978 SC 1025: 1978 Cri LJ 968.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer, Jaswant Singh and V.D. Tulzapurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-4-1978]

Sections 161 and 162 — Examination of witnesses by police

Synopsis

(1) Nature of statement recorded under Ss. 161/162 — Use to which it may be put 461
(2) Use of statement under Ss. 161/162 as basis for detention 474
(3) Right against self-incrimination — S. 161(2)/Confessions made in police custody 475
(4) Confession made in police custody under special statute 478
(5) Effect of taking signatures of witnesses 488
(6) Omissions/Exaggerations/Embellishments/Contradictions/Inconsistencies of S. 161 statement with evidence/FIR 489
(7) Delay in questioning/examining witness/recording of statement under 504
(8) Other issues/infirmities 512
(9) Dying declaration 513
(10) Test Identification Parade 518
(11) Hearsay evidence/Extra-judicial confession 521

—S. 161 See also Ss. 161 & 162, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 1004 et seq. in Vol. 2

— S. 161 See Ss. 100(5), 161 and 162
See also Ss. 154 to 173
See also Ss. 154 to 173 and 482
See also Ss. 154 & 156(3) and Ss. 161 & 162
See also Ss. 154 and 161
See also Ss. 154, 161 and 174
See also Ss. 156, 157 and 161
See also Ss. 156, 157, 161 and 165
See also Ss. 156 and 161
See also Ss. 157, 156, 154, 159, 160, 161
See also Ss. 157 to 161 and 172(2)
See also Ss. 157 to 161 and 173
See also Ss. 157 to 167
See also Ss. 157 to 172 and 198
See also Ss. 157 to 173
See also Ss. 157, 160 and 161
See also Ss. 157, 160 to 168
See also Ss. 157 and 161
See also Ss. 157, 161 and 162
See also Ss. 157, 161 and 164
See also Ss. 157, 161, 164, 311 and 391
See also Ss. 157, 161 and 173
See also Ss. 157, 162, 160 and 161
See also Ss. 162 and 161
See also Ss. 162, 161 and 164
See also Ss. 163 and 161
See also Ss. 163, 161 and 156
See also Ss. 163, 161 and 157
See also Ss. 167(5) (as amended by S. 4 of W.B. Act 24 of 1988), 436, 437, 204, 205, 206 and 161
See also Ss. 172 and 161
See also Ss. 172, 161, 162 and 167
See also Ss. 172, 162 and 161
See also Ss. 190, 161, 165 and 173
See also Ss. 207, 208, 161 and 438
See also Ss. 231(2) and 246(5), 162(1) proviso, Expln. and Ss. 161 & 172
See also Ss. 319, 482 and 161
See also Ss. 439 and 161
See also Ss. 482 and 161

— S. 161(3) See Ss. 154, 161(3) and 162

— S. 162 See Ch. XII (Ss. 154 to 176) and Ss. 162 and 174
See also Ss. 2(h) and 162
See also Ss. 40, 162 and 164
See also Ss. 100(5), 161 and 162
See also Ss. 154 to 173
See also Ss. 154 to 173 and 482
See also Ss. 154, 155, 156, 157, 162, 169, 170 and 173
See also Ss. 154, 156 & 157 and 162
See also Ss. 154, 156 and 162, 177, 178
See also Ss. 154 & 156(3) and Ss. 161 & 162
See also Ss. 154, 161(3) and 162
See also Ss. 154 and 162
See also Ss. 157, 154 and 162 & 2(h)
See also Ss. 157 to 167
See also Ss. 157 to 172 and 198
See also Ss. 157 to 173
See also Ss. 157, 160 to 168
See also Ss. 157, 161 and 162
See also Ss. 157 and 162
See also Ss. 157, 162, 160 and 161
See also Ss. 157, 162, 173(6) and 172
See also Ss. 161 and 162
See also Ss. 161, 162, 91, 172 and 207
See also Ss. 161, 162 and 154
See also Ss. 164 and 162
See also Ss. 164 and 163, 162
See also Ss. 172, 161, 162 and 167
See also Ss. 172 and 162
See also Ss. 172, 162 and 161
See also Ss. 174 and 162
See also Ss. 174(1) and 162
See also Ss. 177, 178, 482, 156, 162 and 154
See also Ss. 178(c) and 177, 162
See also Ss. 190, 204, 173(2), 154, 162 and 319
See also Ss. 386, 374, 303, 304 and 162
See also Ss. 452 and 162
See also Ss. 482 and 154, 155, 156, 157, 162, 169, 170, 173

— S. 162(1) See Ss. 161 and 162(1) & Expln.
See also Ss. 161, 162(1) and 154

— S. 162(1) proviso See Ss. 161 & 162(1) proviso and 319

— S. 162(1) proviso Expln. See Ss. 231(2) and 246(5), 162(1) proviso, Expln. and Ss. 161 & 172

— S. 162(2) See Ss. 161 and 162(2)
See also Ss. 162(1) and (2)

(1) Nature of statement recorded under Ss. 161/162 — Use to which it may be put

[1505] — S. 161 — Statement recorded under — Use of

Though the prosecution witness in his examination-in-chief had supported the prosecution version in all its material particulars regarding identification of the accused, he in his cross examination stated that due to darkness he could not identify the culprits. The High Court, however, placed reliance on his evidence on ground that he in his statement recorded under S. 161 CrPC as well as in the FIR had narrated all the relevant facts and had not whispered in those statements that he could not identify the appellant due to darkness.

Held :

This reasoning of the High Court is erroneous. The statement recorded under S. 161 of the Code of Criminal Procedure shall not be used for any purpose except to contradict a witness in the manner prescribed in the proviso to S. 162(1). Further the first information report is not a substantial piece of evidence. Baldev Singh v. State of Punjab, (1990) 4 SCC 692: AIR 1991 SC 31.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-1990]

[1506] — S. 161 — Person who has knowledge of commission of a crime may not be examined by police in a given case — What remedy is available to such person — Question is of vital interest in administration of criminal justice — Notice issued to Respondents 1 and 2 and Union of India. Jakia Nasim Ahesan v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 17 SCC 615.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-2008]

[1507] — S. 161 — Use of S. 161(3) statements to contradict IO — Held, High Court seriously erred in discarding evidence of PW 20, IO on basis of case diary — It could not have used statements of PWs 2 to 4 recorded under S. 161(3) for contradicting PW 20 IO without giving him opportunity of explaining the same (Paras 5, 14, 17 to 24, 26, 27, 30, 31 and 37). Mohd. Ankoos v. High Court of A.P., (2010) 1 SCC 94.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-11-2009]

[1508] — Ss. 161 & 162(1) proviso and 319 — Statement made under S. 161 — Evidentiary value and use of — Held, it is not a substantive piece of evidence — Said statement can be used only for the limited purpose of contradicting the maker thereof — Hence, High Court committed a manifest error of law in relying upon wholly inadmissible evidence i.e. statements made under S. 161 CrPC, in recording a finding that the person summoned under S. 319 CrPC to face the trial could not have been present at the scene of occurrence — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 145 and 157

The present appeal was preferred against the order of the High Court by which the petition filed by Respondent 2 under Section 482 CrPC was allowed and the order passed by the Sessions Court under Section 319 CrPC summoning him to face trial under Section 302 IPC was set aside.

A first information report was lodged against Respondent 2 and one D in relation to murder of one N who was informant and witness in a triple murder case lodged against Respondent 2 and certain others. It was alleged that the murder of N was committed as Respondent 2 had asked N not to give evidence in the triple murder case but N did not agree to it.

After investigation in the case, the police submitted a charge-sheet only against D and not against Respondent 2. The prosecution then moved an application for summoning Respondent 2 under Section 319 CrPC. The Sessions Judge held that Respondent 2 was named in the FIR and the first informant in his statement had corroborated the version given in the FIR and had assigned the role of exhortation to him. After taking note of the relevant law on the subject, the Sessions Judge allowed the said application and directed that Respondent 2 be summoned to face trial.

Respondent 2 then filed a petition under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the said order. Before the High Court, he placed statements of certain witnesses who had been examined by the investigating officer during the course of investigation. As per the said statements, Respondent 2, who was an officer in Nagar Nigam, was attending a meeting in the Nagar Nigam at the relevant time of the occurrence.

The High Court referred to Ram Kishan Rohtagi, (1983) 1 SCC 1 wherein it was observed that power under Section 319 CrPC is really an extraordinary power which should be used very sparingly and only if compelling reasons exist for taking cognizance against the other person against whom action has not been taken. On the basis of the aforesaid authority, the High Court posed the question whether compelling ground existed or not and whether there was no option but to summon the accused. Thereafter, the High Court referred to the above statements recorded by the investigating officer and allowed the petition under Section 482 CrPC by quashing the order of the Sessions Judge. Hence, the present appeal.

(1) Nature of statement recorded under Ss. 161/162 — Use to which it may be put (contd.)

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Per Mathur, J. (for himself and Balasubramanyan, J.)

The High Court has basically relied upon the statements of six witnesses which had been recorded by the investigating officer under Section 161 CrPC to record a positive finding that Respondent 2 (who was summoned under Section 319 CrPC to face trial) could not have been present at the scene of commission of the crime. A statement under Section 161 CrPC is not a substantive piece of evidence. In view of the proviso to Section 162(1) CrPC, the said statement can be used only for the limited purpose of contradicting the maker thereof in the manner laid down in the said proviso. Therefore, the High Court committed a manifest error of law in relying upon wholly inadmissible evidence in recording a finding that Respondent 2 could not have been present at the scene of commission of the crime. (Paras 7 and 11). Rajendra Singh v. State of U.P., (2007) 7 SCC 378: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 375: AIR 2007 SC 2786: (2007) 5 All LJ 485: (2007) 3 KLT 892: (2007) 57 AIC 69 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.P. Mathur[1] and P.K. Balasubramanyan[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 6-8-2007]

[1509] — S. 161 — Statement recorded under — Value of — Undue importance cannot be given to such statements — Held, cannot be treated as evidence — But may be used for the limited purpose of impeaching the credibility of a witness — High Court erred in treating such statement as substantive evidence — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 155 (Paras 23 and 24). Ram Swaroop v. State of Rajasthan, (2004) 13 SCC 134: 2005 SCC (Cri) 61: AIR 2004 SC 2943: 2004 Cri LJ 5043.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-3-2004]

[1510] — S. 161 — Statement under — Admissibility in evidence — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 307 — Statement given by the injured under S. 161 CrPC against the accused rightly held by High Court to be not admissible in evidence under S. 33 — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 33 (Para 2). Sukhar v. State of U.P., (1999) 9 SCC 507: 2000 SCC (Cri) 419: AIR 1999 SC 3883.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik, M. Srinivasan and N. Santosh Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-10-1999]

[1511] — Ss. 161 and 162 — Statements of witnesses — Duty of police — Scope — Not mandatory for police to record every statement of every witness i.e. law contemplates situation where there might be witnesses who depose in court but whose previous statements have not been recorded (Para 156). Manu Sharma v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 6 SCC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and Swatanter Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision : 19-4-2010]

[1512] — S. 161 — Substance of interrogation recorded by investigating officer cannot be termed to be a statement recorded under S. 161 which could be used for the purposes of contradiction of the witness under S. 162 — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 145 (Para 41). Narayan Chetanram Chaudhary v. State of Maharashtra, (2000) 8 SCC 457: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1546: AIR 2000 SC 3352.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-9-2000]

[1513] — Ss. 161, 172, 173(6) and 207 — Statement of witness recorded under S. 161 by investigating officer required to be made available to accused but gist of such statement recorded in case diary under S. 172 by investigating officer on the basis of his own observations not required to be made available to accused — High Court in the present case taking the view that if gist of interrogation of the witness made by the investigating officer could be regarded as statement under S. 161(3), although in summary form, then the same would be required to be supplied to accused but if the gist recorded by him was his own observation then the same would not be required to be disclosed to accused — However, High Court failed to find out whether the gist could be regarded as statement under S. 161(3) or not — Hence order of High Court remitting the matter back to trial court with the direction to determine the question on examination of case diary, cannot be sustained

In this case the trial court took the view that the gist made by the investigating officer after interrogating the witness was a statement under Section 161 CrPC and the accused was entitled to get a copy of such gist of the statement. This opinion/order of the trial court was questioned by the appellant in revision before High Court on the ground that the gist was not a statement but mere observation of the investigating officer and therefore, the accused-respondent was not entitled to a copy of the same. The High Court observed that if the gist could be regarded as statement under Section 161(3) CrPC, although in summary form, made by the witness then particularly in view of Shamshul Kanwar v. State of U.P., (1995) 4 SCC 430, the same would have to be made over to the accused but if the gist pertained to only observations made by the investigating officer, then the same was not required to be disclosed to the accused. The High Court, therefore, remitted the matter back to the trial court for determination of the issue by examining the case diary.

In the present appeal before the Supreme Court it was submitted on behalf of the appellant that Shamshul Kanwar case on which the High Court relied dealt with cases having composite case diary which includes the statement recorded under Section 161 CrPC as well as the observation of the investigating officer under Section 172 CrPC. It was submitted that in the State of NCT of Delhi the case diary is being maintained separately and hence there was no question of any portion of case diary being looked into to find out whether statement under Section 161 have been recorded therein or not. On the other hand, on behalf of the accused-respondent it was submitted that the statements prayed for by the respondents were statements recorded under Section 161 CrPC and not statements relatable to Section 172 CrPC as projected by the appellants. With reference to Section 172 CrPC it was submitted that it does not contemplate recording of: (a) statement of witnesses; (b) gists of statement of witnesses. Therefore, recording of statement of witnesses in case diary would not confer such statement the protection granted under Section 172 CrPC.

Allowing the State's appeal,

Held :

Section 161 CrPC authorises the police officer to reduce into writing any statement made by a witness. In a given case the investigating officer may record circumstances ascertained during investigation in the case diary in terms of Section 172 CrPC. It is only when the investigating officer decides to record the statements of witnesses under Section 161 CrPC that he becomes obliged to make a true record of the statement which obviously will not include the interpretation of the investigating officer of the statements or the gists of statement. Section 173(6) CrPC authorises the police officer to claim a sort of privilege in respect of any statement recorded under Section 161 CrPC after giving reasons as to why such statement may not be provided to the accused. Such privilege can only be claimed in respect of statement recorded under Section 161 CrPC and not in respect of what the officer records in the case diary i.e. the gist of the statement under Section 172 CrPC. In terms of Section 207 CrPC the Magistrate has to provide to the accused, free of cost, copies of statements recorded under Section 161(3) subject to the exceptions in terms of Section 173(6). However, Section 172(3) CrPC provides that neither the accused nor his agents shall be entitled to call for diary of proceedings in investigation nor shall he or they be entitled to see them merely because they are referred to by the court. (Paras 11 and 12)

In different States case diaries are maintained in different ways. Some States have a composite case diary which includes the statements recorded under Section 161 CrPC as well as the observations of the investigating officer under Section 172 CrPC. The Supreme Court, therefore, in Shamshul Kanwar case held that the statements under Section 161 need to be separated from observations which are recorded under Section 172 in order to make available the statement under Section 161(3) to the accused. The position is entirely different here as it was submitted on behalf of the appellant that in the State of NCT of Delhi the case diary is being maintained separately. (Para 13)

A categorical statement has also been made on behalf of the appellant that the gist of the statement has not been produced by the prosecution to prove the guilt of the accused and the gists of the statements were not recorded in terms of Section 161 CrPC and the accused has no right to ask for the gists of such statements if recorded under Section 172. (Para 11)

The direction of the High Court as contained in the impugned order is not a definite one. It only refers to Shamshul Kanwar case and concludes that if the "gists" can be regarded as statements under Section 161 CrPC although in summary form they would have to be made over to the accused. It does not factually find out that as to whether the gists can be regarded as statements in view of the position of law stated above. It did not take note of the specific stand of the appellant about separate maintenance of case diaries. Therefore, the directions of the High Court are clearly unsustainable and are set aside. (Paras 15 and 16). State of (NCT of Delhi) v. Ravi Kant Sharma, (2007) 2 SCC 764: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 640: AIR 2007 SC 1135: 2007 Cri LJ 1674: (2007) 137 DLT 577: (2007) 53 AIC 98 (SC): (2007) 2 KLT 349.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-2-2007]

Sunita Devi v. State of Bihar, (2005) 1 SCC 608: 2005 SCC (Cri) 435; Sidharth v. State of Bihar, (2005) 12 SCC 545: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 175, relied on

Shamshul Kanwar v. State of U.P., (1995) 4 SCC 430: 1995 SCC (Cri) 753, distinguished

(1) Nature of statement recorded under Ss. 161/162 — Use to which it may be put (contd.)

[1514] — Ss. 161 and 162 — Evidence of a witness cannot be impeached with reference to the statements of other witnesses recorded under S. 161. Betal Singh v. State of M.P., (1996) 8 SCC 205: 1996 SCC (Cri) 571: AIR 1996 SC 2770.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-3-1996]

[1515] — Ss. 161 and 162 — Language of statement recorded under — Held, does not have to be language known to person making statement — Moreover, such person does not have to sign the statement either

It is not a requirement in law that the statement under Section 161 CrPC has to be recorded in the language known to the person giving the statement. As a matter of fact, the person giving the statement is not required to sign the statement as is mandated in Section 162 CrPC. (Para 71). Zahira Habibulla H. Sheikh v. State of Gujarat, (2004) 4 SCC 158: 2004 SCC (Cri) 999: 2004 Cri LJ 2050.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-4-2004]

[1516] — Ss. 161 and 162 — Recording statement given in English, in Hindi — PW 2 making his statement in English which was recorded in Hindi — Held, in absence of any suggestion to contrary it must be presumed that his statement was correctly recorded (Para 97). Manu Sharma v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 6 SCC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and Swatanter Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision : 19-4-2010]

[1517] — Ss. 161 and 162 — Statement recorded by police officer during investigation — Inadmissible in evidence — Cannot be used for the purpose of cross-examination — Can be used only for contradicting the prosecution witnesses under S. 145 of Evidence Act — Held, on facts, trial court as well as High Court erred in using such statements as evidence. State (Delhi Admn.) v. Laxman Kumar, (1985) 4 SCC 476: 1986 SCC (Cri) 2: AIR 1986 SC 250.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.N. Sen and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-9-1985]

[1518] — Ss. 161 and 162 — Statements made under S. 161 — Admissibility in evidence of, in departmental enquiry — Examination of witnesses and recording of evidence — Previous statements of witnesses recorded under S. 161 of CrPC — Admissibility — Such statements read over to the witnesses who admitting the contents thereof — Copies of the statements having already been given to the delinquent well in advance (several months earlier) and the delinquent granted full opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses — Such procedure, held, not vitiative of the disciplinary proceedings

It is now well settled that strict rules of evidence are not applicable and are not required to be followed in domestic inquiry. What has to be ensured is that the principles of natural justice are complied with and the delinquent workman has the opportunity of defending himself.

The statements under Section 161 CrPC may not be admissible in the criminal trial, but the said statements can be produced in a disciplinary inquiry like the present. The person who made the statement has been examined before the inquiry officer. It was open to the witness to have stated orally the entire contents of what was recorded in his statement under Section 161 CrPC. Instead of following this time-consuming procedure, the said statement recorded under Section 161 CrPC was read over to the witness who admitted the contents thereof. In this way the earlier statement under Section 161 CrPC became a part of the examination-in-chief of the witness before the Inquiry Officer. It is not in dispute that the said statements had been given to the respondent in advance and full opportunity was granted to the respondent to cross-examine the said witnesses. This being the case, the High Court erred in holding that the using of the statements recorded under Section 161 of the CrPC had vitiated the inquiry proceedings. State Bank of Bikaner & Jaipur v. Srinath Gupta, (1996) 6 SCC 486: 1996 SCC (L&S) 1464: AIR 1997 SC 243.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.S. Verma and B.N. Kirpal, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-10-1996]

State of Mysore v. S.S. Makapur, (1963) 2 SCR 943: AIR 1963 SC 375: (1964) 1 LLJ 24; Khatri (IV) v. State of Bihar, (1981) 2 SCC 493: 1981 SCC (Cri) 503, relied on

Kesoram Cotton Mills Ltd. v. Gangadhar, (1964) 2 SCR 809: AIR 1964 SC 708: (1963) 2 LLJ 371: (1963) 7 FLR 213, explained and distinguished [1519] — Ss. 161, 162(1) and 154 — Report lodged with police by the witness exhibited as FIR after the witness testified about the facts from his own memory — Said report treated as a statement recorded during investigation and not an FIR — Held, evidence of such witness not inadmissible on ground that he was allowed to refresh his memory from that report — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 157 (Paras 37 to 40). Ranbir Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1995) 4 SCC 392: 1995 SCC (Cri) 728: AIR 1995 SC 1219: 1995 Cri LJ 2665.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and M.K. Mukherjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-3-1995]

[1520] — S. 161 — Need for recording of statements under — When arises — Examination of witness by police — Submission that statements of PWs 9 and 10 were not recorded by IO during the course of investigation and, therefore, their testimony should not be relied upon — Tenability — Held, PWs 9 and 10 were not witnesses to actual occurrence — They were witnesses of recording of dying declaration and the certificate given by the doctor regarding the mental condition of the victim — Moreover, it was not the case of the appellant that dying declaration was not immediately sent to the court of the Magistrate concerned or that its copy was not given to him in accordance with S. 207 CrPC before the commitment of the case — In such circumstances the mere fact that the investigating officer did not record the statement of the aforesaid two witnesses under S. 161 can hardly have any bearing (Paras 17 and 18). Dayal Singh v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 12 SCC 452: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 236: 2007 Cri LJ 3265.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.P. Mathur and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-2007]

Tilkeshwar Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1956 SC 238: 1956 Cri LJ 441, considered

[1521] — S. 161 — Statement of witness recorded under — Can be used at the trial only for contradiction or omissions when the witness is examined in the court — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 145. Omkar Namdeo Jadhao v. Second Additional Sessions Judge, (1996) 7 SCC 498: AIR 1997 SC 331.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-1-1996]

[Ed.: See also State v. Laxman, (1985) 4 SCC 476: 1986 SCC (Cri) 2.]

[1522] — S. 161 — Incriminatory statements of person called to provide information relevant to inquiry under S. 67, NDPS Act, 1985 — Nature of — Held, not the same as statement under S. 161 CrPC — Use of, for basing a conviction — Permissibility — Held, at the stage of inquiry under S. 67 the person concerned is not an accused although he may be in custody and so the bar under Ss. 24 to 27 of the Evidence Act would not operate nor would the provisions of Art. 20(3) of the Constitution, unless the statement is made under threat or coercion — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 24 to 27 — Constitution of India, Art. 20(3) — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — Ss. 67 and 42

The appellant K had appeared before the officer concerned and his statement was taken under Section 67 of the NDPS Act. In his statement the appellant confessed that he too was involved in the smuggling of opium along with other co-accused persons. On the basis of his confessional statement K was arrested and tried under Sections 8 and 18 read with Section 29 along with R and P from whom the opium was recovered. The Special Judge framed several issues and ultimately held that the charges had been fully proved against P. As charges were not proved against R and the appellant, the trial Judge acquitted him.

The High Court allowed the appeal against the acquittal of R and K upon holding that the statement made by R and the appellant under Section 67 of the NDPS Act did not require any corroboration and were sufficient in themselves to convict the said two accused.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

The consistent view which has been taken with regard to confessions made under provisions of Section 67 of the NDPS Act and other criminal enactments, such as the Customs Act, 1962, has been that such statements may be treated as confessions for the purpose of Section 27 of the Evidence Act, but with the caution that the court should satisfy itself that such statements had been made voluntarily and at a time when the person making such statement had not been made an accused in connection with the alleged offence. Even if a person is placed under arrest and thereafter makes a statement which seeks to incriminate him, the bar under Article 20(3) of the Constitution would not operate against him if such statement was given voluntarily and without any threat or compulsion and if supported by corroborating evidence. (Paras 43 and 42)

If a statement under Section 67 of the NDPS Act is made by the accused at a time when he was not under arrest, the bar under Sections 24 to 27 of the Evidence Act would not operate nor would the provisions of Article 20(3) of the Constitution be attracted. It is only after a person is placed in the position of an accused that the bar imposed under the aforesaid provisions will come into play. A parallel may be drawn between the provisions of Section 67 of the NDPS Act and Sections 107 and 108 of the Customs Act and to a large extent Section 32 of the Prevention of Terrorism Act, 2002 and Section 15 of the Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987. These are all special Acts meant to deal with special situations and circumstances. While the provisions of the Prevention of Terrorism Act, 2002 and the TADA Act, 1987, are much more stringent and excludes from its purview the provisions of Sections 24 to 27 of the Evidence Act with regard to confession made before a police officer, the provisions relating to statements made during inquiry under the Customs Act and under the

(1) Nature of statement recorded under Ss. 161/162 — Use to which it may be put (contd.)

NDPS Act are less stringent and continue to attract the provisions of the Evidence Act. In the case of both the latter enactments, initially an inquiry is contemplated during which a person may be called upon to provide any information relevant to the inquiry as to whether there has been any contravention of the provisions of the Act or any rule or order made thereunder. At that stage the person concerned is not an accused although he may be said to be in custody. But on the basis of the statements made by him he could be made an accused subsequently. What is important is whether the statement made by the person concerned is made during inquiry prior to his arrest or after he had been formally charged with the offence and made an accused in respect thereof. (Para 41)

A statement made under Section 67 of the NDPS Act, 1985 by a person directed to appear before the officer concerned may be relied upon as a confessional statement against such person. A conviction can be maintained solely on the basis of such confession. Also, since an officer vested with "powers of an officer in charge of a police station" under Section 53 of the Act is not a "police officer" within the meaning of Section 25 of the Evidence Act, a statement made under Section 67 of the NDPS Act is not the same as a statement made under Section 161 CrPC, unless made under threat or coercion. It is this vital difference, which allows a statement made under Section 67 of the NDPS Act to be used as a confession against the person making it and excludes it from the operation of Sections 24 to 27 of the Evidence Act. (Paras 44 and 45)

Although, an application was made for retracting the confession made by the appellant, neither was any order passed on the said application nor was the same proved during the trial so as to water down the evidentiary value of the said statement. On the other hand, there is the evidence of the Inspector (Narcotics) upon which the High Court has relied in convicting the appellant. Again no question in cross-examination had been put to the Inspector in this regard and the version of the said witness must be accepted as corroborative of the statement having been voluntarily made by the accused. There is nothing on record to suggest that the appellant was compelled under threat to make the statement after he had been placed under arrest which renders such statement inadmissible and not capable of being relied upon in order to convict him. (Paras 46 and 47). Kanhaiyalal v. Union of India, (2008) 4 SCC 668: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 474: AIR 2008 SC 1044.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-1-2008]

Pyare Lal Bhargava v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1963 SC 1094: 1963 Supp (1) SCR 689; Pon Adithan v. Dy. Director, Narcotics Control Bureau, (1999) 6 SCC 1: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1051, followed

Raj Kumar Karwal v. Union of India, (1990) 2 SCC 409: 1990 SCC (Cri) 330, affirmed

A.K. Mehaboob v. Intelligence Officer, Narcotics Control Bureau, (2001) 10 SCC 203: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1035; M. Prabhulal v. Asstt. Director, Directorate of Revenue Intelligence, (2003) 8 SCC 449: 2003 SCC (Cri) 2024; State of Bombay v. Kathi Kalu Oghad, AIR 1961 SC 1808: (1962) 3 SCR 10, relied on

State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715; Bharat v. State of U.P., (1971) 3 SCC 950: 1972 SCC (Cri) 198; Haroom Haji Abdulla v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1968 SC 832: (1968) 2 SCR 641; Pyare Lal Bhargava v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1963 SC 1094: 1963 Supp (1) SCR 689; Haricharan Kurmi v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 1184: (1964) 6 SCR 623, impliedly distinguished

[Ed.: Even if the operation of Sections 24 to 27 of the Evidence Act, 1872 would be excluded in case of confessional statements made under Section 67 NDPS Act, post-arrest confessions which are not voluntary would still attract the bar under Art. 20(3) of the Constitution as brought out in paras 41 to 43 of the judgment. These safeguards are significant for the less stringent special statutes like the Customs Act and the NDPS Act.]

[1523] — S. 161 — Statement made before Customs Officials under S. 108, Customs Act, 1962 is not a statement recorded by a police officer under S. 161, CrPC — It is a material piece of evidence collected by the customs officials under S. 108 — Where such statement made by a person inculpates not only himself but also another person, held, it can be used as substantive evidence against that another person — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 30 — Customs Act, 1962 — S. 108. Naresh J. Sukhawani v. Union of India, 1995 Supp (4) SCC 663: 1996 SCC (Cri) 76: AIR 1996 SC 522.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and B.N. Kirpal, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-11-1995]

[1524] — S. 161 — Statement made during investigation of cross-case inadmissible in present case — CrPC, 1898 — S. 161. Gajendra Singh v. State of U.P., (1975) 4 SCC 241: 1975 SCC (Cri) 499: AIR 1975 SC 1703: 1975 Cri LJ 1494.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N.L. Untwalia and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-4-1975]

[1525] — Ss. 161, 162, 91, 172 and 207 — Use of previous statement of a witness recorded during the course of investigation of another case — Held, court can summon the case diary of such case under S. 91 CrPC for the purpose of contradicting the prosecution witness — Restrictions imposed under sub-ss. (2) and (3) of S. 172 CrPC would not apply to the use of such case diary — S. 172 relates to summoning of the case diary of a case which is under enquiry or trial only — However, restrictions imposed under S. 162 CrPC and S. 145 of Evidence Act would apply — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 145 and 155

In the course of trial of a sessions case it was noticed by the defence that on the very day of the incident which was the subject-matter of the sessions case there was another case and in that case during the course of investigation, a statement of the witness who was being examined in the sessions case as a prosecution witness, was recorded under Section 161 which contradicted the statement made by such witness in the course of the sessions trial. Therefore, for the purpose of establishing the contradiction in the evidence of the witness and in order to impeach the said witness, the defence made an application for summoning the case diary of that case invoking Section 172 of the Code with a consequential prayer for recalling of the witness. Both the Sessions Court and the High Court held that there is no bar in law to summon the case diary of a case even other than the one which is being tried, for the purpose of contradicting the evidence of the prosecution witnesses. Hence they placed reliance on Section 172. Dismissing the appeal by special leave by the State and confirming the judgments of the lower courts though for a different reason,

Held :

In view of Section 145 of the Evidence Act it is the right of a party in a trial to use the previous statements of a witness either for the purpose of establishing a contradiction in his evidence or for the purpose of impeaching the credit of the witness. This right given to a party in a trial under Section 145 of the Evidence Act is somewhat controlled in criminal trials by the provisions made in the Criminal Procedure Code. (Para 5)

On a reading of Section 162 of the Code and bearing in mind the object of the said section and Section 145 of the Evidence Act, it is clear that an accused in a criminal trial has the right to make use of the previous statements of a witness including the statements recorded by the investigating agency during the course of an investigation for the purpose of establishing a contradiction in the evidence of a witness or to discredit the witness. The question then arises, how does the accused confront the previous statement made by a witness in the course of an investigation to establish the contradiction in the evidence given by the witness in the trial? So far as the statements made during the course of investigation of the case being tried is concerned, there is no difficulty because an accused is entitled under Section 207 of the Code for the supply of free copies of the documents referred to in the said section which includes the previous statement recorded under sub-section (3) of Section 161 of the Code. The accused does not have such a right as a matter of course in regard to other previous statements; more so, in regard to the statements recorded by the investigating agency under Section 161 in a case other than the one that is being tried by the court. (Para 8)

The words used in sub-section (2) of Section 172, more particularly "police diaries of a case under enquiry or trial in such court", indicate it is only that police diary in which the investigating officer concerned had made entries of his investigation and which pertains to the case being tried by the court alone can be sent for. Sub-section (3) of Section 172 further imposes restrictions in the manner in which such diaries can be used by the court. It also specifically bars the right of an accused or his agent to call for such diaries. Thus, on a plain language of this section, it is clear that this section cannot be used for the purpose of summoning a case diary which does not pertain to the investigation of the case which is being tried by the court. Section 172 is specifically meant for the contingencies when the court finds it necessary to look into the case diary for the purpose of finding an aid in the trial or for the purpose of assisting the police officer to refresh his memory. Therefore, Section 172 does not contemplate summoning of the case diary for the purpose of assisting the accused to have a look at the previous statements of the witness for using it for his benefit, as contemplated in Section 162 of the Code. (Para 9)

There can be no quarrel with regard to the fact that there is no prohibition in the Criminal Procedure Code against any court from looking into the diary of a counter-case or from using the diary of a counter-case in the trial of another case. But this does not mean that the right of the court to summon the case diary of another case is derived from Section 172 of the Code or by the application of the principles of Section 172 because ex facie Section 172 of the Code does not help the accused in making use of a case diary. Section 172 relates to summoning of the case diary of a case which is under enquiry or trial only. (Para 10)

The very object of enactment of Section 161 of the Code and Section 145 of the Evidence Act is to create a right in the accused to make use of the previous statements of the witnesses for the purpose of contradiction and for impeaching the merit of the witness. This right has not been taken away by Section 172 of the Code and there is no prohibition in regard to this right of the accused either under the Code or under the Evidence Act. But the question for consideration is, how does the accused exercise this right with reference to a previous statement of a witness made in another case which is recorded by the investigating officer in that case under the provisions of Section 161 of the Code? This right certainly does not flow under Section 172 of the Code nor is the accused entitled to these previous statements under Section 207 of the Code. But this does not mean that the accused is denied of his limited benefit of using the said previous statements recorded during the course of another investigation. The answer to this question lies in Section 91(1) of the Code. (Para 11)

(1) Nature of statement recorded under Ss. 161/162 — Use to which it may be put (contd.)

The language of Section 91 is much wider than the language of Section 172 and by no stretch of imagination it could be contended that the case diary maintained under Section 172 of the Code is not a document as contemplated under Section 91(1) of the Code. If that be so and if the court comes to the conclusion that the production of such a document is necessary or desirable then the court is entitled to summon the case diary of another case under Section 91 of the Code dehors the provisions of Section 172 of the Code for the purpose of using the statements made in the said diary for contradicting a witness. When a case diary is summoned under Section 91(1) of the Code then the restrictions imposed under sub-sections (2) and (3) of Section 172 would not apply to the use of such case diary. But while using a previous statement recorded in the said case diary, the court should bear in mind the restrictions imposed under Section 162 of the Code and Section 145 of the Evidence Act because what is sought to be used from the case diary so produced are the previous statements recorded under Section 161 of the Code. (Para 12). State of Kerala v. Babu, (1999) 4 SCC 621: 1999 SCC (Cri) 611: AIR 1999 SC 2161.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and N. Santosh Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-5-1999]

Ahmed Mia v. Emperor, AIR 1944 Cal 243: 46 Cri LJ 28, partly overruled

Khatri (IV) v. State of Bihar, (1981) 2 SCC 493: 1981 SCC (Cri) 503; Tahsildar Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1959 SC 1012, relied on [1526] — S. 161 — Statement made to police during investigation, reiterated, is not evidence — Instant case of brutal murder of college girl inside college campus by running a jeep over her by prime accused-appellant S and co-accused-appellants present in the jeep allegedly exhorting S for the same — Eyewitnesses, all classmates of deceased victim, present with her at the time of incident — They backing out from what was stated during investigation and statement made before police — PW 8 (eyewitness), at the end of her evidence, cried and requested the court not to call her again for evidence since they were disturbed for the entire year — Close reading of evidence showed that PW 8 was under tremendous pressure not to speak the truth — Held, unfortunately, in cases involving influential people, common experience is that witnesses do not come forward because of fear and pressure — Herein, plight of eyewitness girls, who were under pressure, depicts tremendous need for witness protection in the country if criminal justice administration has to be a reality — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 302 and 34 (Paras 15 to 18). Javed Alam v. State of Chhattisgarh, (2009) 6 SCC 450.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-2009]

[1527] — S. 162 — Scope — Held, does not exclude evidence relating to conduct of an accused person (not amounting to a statement) when confronted or questioned by a police officer during the course of an investigation — Further held, identification by a person in custody of another does not amount to making a statement falling within the embargo of S. 162 — It would be admissible under S. 8, Evidence Act, 1872 — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 8 — Applicability — Scope of bar under S. 162, CrPC, 1973

The conduct, in order to be admissible under Section 8 of the Evidence Act, 1872 must be such that it has close nexus with a fact in issue or relevant fact. Explanation 1 to Section 8 makes it clear that the mere statements as distinguished from acts do not constitute "conduct" unless those statements "accompany and explain acts other than statements". Such statements accompanying the acts are considered to be evidence of res gestae. The evidence of the circumstance, simpliciter, that the accused pointed out to the police officer, the place where stolen articles or weapons used in the commission of the offence were hidden, would be admissible as "conduct" under Section 8 irrespective of the fact whether the statement made by the accused contemporaneously with or antecedent to such conduct, falls within the purview of Section 27. (Paras 205 and 206)

The first circumstance against the accused Afzal is that Afzal knew who the deceased terrorists were. He identified the dead bodies of the deceased terrorists. On this aspect, the evidence remained unshattered. What is excluded by Section 162, CrPC is the statement made to a police officer in the course of investigation and not the evidence relating to the conduct of an accused person (not amounting to a statement) when confronted or questioned by a police officer during the course of an investigation. Identification by a person in custody of another does not amount to making a statement falling within the embargo of Section 162 CrPC. It would be admissible under Section 8 of the Evidence Act as a piece of evidence relating to the conduct of the accused person in identifying the dead bodies of the terrorists. (Para 190). State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715: 2005 Cri LJ 3950: (2005) 122 DLT 194.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2005]

Prakash Chand v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1979) 3 SCC 90: 1979 SCC (Cri) 656; H.P. Admn. v. Om Prakash, (1972) 1 SCC 249: 1972 SCC (Cri) 88, relied on [1528] — S. 162 — Held, fairness in investigation and trial is a human right of an accused — Prosecution must also be fair to accused — State cannot suppress any vital document from court only because the same would support the case of the accused — On that ground acquittal upheld — Constitution of India — Art. 21 (Para 12). Samadhan Dhudaka Koli v. State of Maharashtra, (2008) 16 SCC 705: AIR 2009 SC 1059: (2009) 76 AIC 242 (SC): (2009) 2 ECrN 497 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-12-2008]

Mehiboobsab Abbasabi Nadaf v. State of Karnataka, (2007) 13 SCC 112: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 287, relied on [1529] — S. 162 — Fard bayan of first informant on the basis of which formal FIR entered could not in the circumstances be said to be a statement recorded during the investigation — Hence not hit by S. 162. Sk. Ishaque v. State of Bihar, (1995) 3 SCC 392: 1995 SCC (Cri) 534: 1995 Cri LJ 2682.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K.S. Paripoornan, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-3-1995]

[1530] — S. 162 — Letter addressed by prosecution witness to police officer during the course of investigation corroborating oral testimony — Held, not admissible in evidence. Vinod Chaturvedi v. State of M.P., (1984) 2 SCC 350: 1984 SCC (Cri) 250: AIR 1984 SC 911: 1984 Cri LJ 814.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-1984]

Kali Ram v. State of H.P., (1973) 2 SCC 808: 1973 SCC (Cri) 1048, followed

[1531] — S. 162 — List of stolen articles not given in the FIR — First informant later on giving a written statement containing such list to the IO — Held, such statement was hit by S. 162 — Trial court not justified in entertaining that statement as an exhibit. Mohd. Aman v. State of Rajasthan, (1997) 10 SCC 44: 1997 SCC (Cri) 777: AIR 1997 SC 2960: 1997 Cri LJ 3567.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and K. Venkataswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-1997]

[1532] — S. 162 — Site plan — Things noted therein by IO on the basis of statements made by witnesses, held, not admissible in evidence

The High Court has extensively relied upon the site plan prepared by the IO for discarding the prosecution case and for this purpose has referred to the place from where the accused are alleged to have entered the nohara, the place from where they are alleged to have fired upon the deceased. Many things mentioned in the site plan have been noted by the IO on the basis of the statements given by the witnesses. Obviously, the place from where the accused entered the nohara and the place from where they resorted to firing is based upon the statement of the witnesses. These are clearly hit by Section 162 CrPC. What the IO personally saw and noted alone would be admissible. Therefore, the findings recorded by the High Court on the basis of the site plan prepared by the IO whereby it discarded the prosecution case is clearly illegal being based upon inadmissible evidence and has to be set aside. (Paras 11 and 12). State of Rajasthan v. Bhawani, (2003) 7 SCC 291: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1628: AIR 2003 SC 4230.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu, K.G. Balakrishnan and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-7-2003]

Tori Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1962 SC 399: (1962) 1 Cri LJ 469, relied on

[1533] — S. 162 — Site plan prepared by the IO — Admissibility in evidence — Time, place and manner of incident indicated by the IO on the basis of statement of witnesses not admissible in evidence being hearsay — His observations based on his personal knowledge can be used as substantive evidence — Statement of witness on the basis of whose statement the site plan was prepared cannot be used to corroborate the maker thereof being hit by S. 162(1) — His statement can be used only to contradict him in accordance with proviso to S. 162(1) — However, site plan prepared by a draftsman would be admissible as corroborative evidence — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 157 and 60

While preparing a site plan an Investigating Police Officer can certainly record what he sees and observes, for that will be direct and substantive evidence being based on his personal knowledge; but, as he was not obviously present when the incident took place, he has to derive knowledge as to when, where and how it happened from persons who had seen the incident. When a witness testifies about what he heard from somebody else it is ordinarily not admissible in evidence being hearsay, but if the person for whom he heard is examined to give direct evidence within the meaning of Section 60 of the Evidence Act, 1872 the former's evidence would be admissible to corroborate the latter in accordance with Section 157 Evidence Act. However such a statement made to a Police Officer, when he is investigating into an offence in accordance with Chapter XII of the Code of Criminal Procedure cannot be used to even corroborate the maker thereof in view of the embargo in Section 162(1) CrPC appearing in that chapter and can be used only to contradict him (the maker) in accordance with the proviso thereof, except in those cases where sub-section (2) of the section applies.

(1) Nature of statement recorded under Ss. 161/162 — Use to which it may be put (contd.)

If in a given case the site plan is prepared by a draftsman — and not by the Investigating Officer — entries therein regarding the place from where shots were fired or other details derived from other witnesses would be admissible as corroborative evidence. Jagdish Narain v. State of U.P., (1996) 8 SCC 199: 1996 SCC (Cri) 565: AIR 1996 SC 3136.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and M.K. Mukherjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-3-1996]

Tori Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1962 SC 399: (1962) 1 Cri LJ 469: (1962) 3 SCR 580, followed

[Ed.: See also Sat Kumar v. State of Haryana, (1974) 3 SCC 643: 1974 SCC (Cri) 173]

[1534] — S. 162 — Sketch/map of the place of occurrence prepared by investigating officer — No evidence adduced with reference to the sketch by the witnesses — Held, even if it is admissible in evidence and is not hit by S. 162, still it cannot be of much use unless some of the witnesses state as to the state of affairs at the scene (Para 9). State of H.P. v. Prem Chand, (2002) 10 SCC 518: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1475: AIR 2003 SC 708: 2003 Cri LJ 872.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and P. Venkatarama Reddi, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-12-2002]

Tori Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1962 SC 399: (1962) 1 Cri LJ 469, relied on [1535] — S. 162 — Statement made before police officer during investigation — Use of — Held, it cannot be used for any purpose except when it attracts S. 27 or S. 32(1) of Evidence Act — However, such a statement may be used to contradict the maker thereof in accordance with S. 145 of Evidence Act — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 27, 32(1) and 145. Vijender v. State of Delhi, (1997) 6 SCC 171: 1997 SCC (Cri) 857.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and B.N. Kirpal, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-2-1997]

[1536] — Ss. 162, 154, 157 and 2(h) — Investigation when commences — Telephonic FIR

The question as to at what stage the investigation commences has to be considered and examined on the facts of each case, especially, when the information of a cognizable offence has been given on telephone. If the information given on telephone is not cryptic and on basis of that information, the officer in charge, is prima facie satisfied about the commission of a cognizable offence and he proceeds from the police station after recording such information, to investigate such offence then any statement made by any person in respect of the said offence including about the participants, shall be deemed to be a statement made by a person to the police officer "in the course of investigation", covered by S. 162 of the Code. Ramsinh Bavaji Jadeja v. State of Gujarat, (1994) 2 SCC 685: 1994 SCC (Cri) 609: 1994 Cri LJ 3067: (1994) 2 Punj LR 671: (1994) 1 MWN (Cri) 130: (1994) 1 GLH 329.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-3-1994]

[1537] — S. 162 — Statement made to Investigating Officer is not substantive evidence which can be relied upon. Modan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, (1978) 4 SCC 435: 1979 SCC (Cri) 56: AIR 1978 SC 1511: 1978 Cri LJ 1531.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Jaswant Singh and P.S. Kailasam, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-1978]

[1538] — S. 162 — Statement made to the police during investigation — Held, cannot be used to discredit him/her unless that statement had been put to the witness while deposing in the court. Delhi Administration v. Tribhuvan Nath, (1996) 8 SCC 250.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.L. Hansaria and K. Venkataswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-4-1996]

[1539] — S. 162 — Statement of a PW recorded during investigation of the case registered on the basis of FIR and sent to investigating officer — Held, statement hit by S. 162. Kapildeo Singh v. State of Bihar, 1993 Supp (3) SCC 372: 1993 SCC (Cri) 1034.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-4-1993]

[1540] — S. 162 — Statements made by witnesses in the course of investigation cannot be used as substantive evidence — Definition of 'proved' in S. 3 of Evidence Act will not enable the court to take into consideration such statements. Hazari Lal v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1980) 2 SCC 390: 1980 SCC (Cri) 458: AIR 1980 SC 873: 1980 Cri LJ 564: 1980 MLJ (Cri) 756.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-2-1980]

[1541] — Ss. 162, 174 and 175 — Statement of witness recorded during inquest and enclosed with inquest report cannot be used as evidence — Statement made by person summoned under S. 175 is a 'previous statement' within the meaning of S. 162 — It shall not be signed and S. 145 of Evidence Act is attracted

Section 162 was conceived to protect an accused creating an absolute bar against the previous statement made before the police officer being used for any purpose whatsoever. The obvious reason is that the previous statement under the circumstances was not made inspiring confidence. It enables the accused to rely thereon only to contradict the witnesses in the manner provided by S. 145 drawing attention of the witness to that part of the statement intended to be used for contradiction. It cannot be used for corroboration of a prosecution or defence witness or even a court witness, nor can it be used for contradicting a defence or a court witness. The investigating officer is enjoined to forward the inquest report to the Magistrate along with the statement recorded at the inquest, so that the court would see the record, at the earliest of the circumstances leading to the cause of the death of the deceased and the witness examined during the inquest. Therefore, the statement of PW recorded during inquest is not evidence. It is a previous statement reduced to writing under S. 162 of the Code and enclosed with the inquest report and cannot be used by the prosecution for any purpose including to show the names of the accused except to contradict the maker thereof, or to explain the same by prosecution. (Para 12). Malkiat Singh v. State of Punjab, (1991) 4 SCC 341: 1991 SCC (Cri) 976.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, V. Ramaswami and K. Ramaswamy, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-4-1991]

[1542] — Ss. 162 and 154 — Report of the same incident intended as FIR received by police after commencement of investigation, held, not admissible in evidence — Failure of prosecution to bring this report on record, therefore, not fatal. B. Subba Rao v. Public Prosecutor, High Court of A.P., (1997) 11 SCC 478: AIR 1997 SC 3427: 1997 Cri LJ 4072.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-1997]

[1543] — Ss. 162 and 154 — Statements made to S.H.O. at the police station though leads to investigation is not statement made to an Investigating Officer — Officer recording the statement does not possess the capacity of Investigating Officer at that time. Munnu Raja v. State of M.P., (1976) 3 SCC 104: 1976 SCC (Cri) 376: AIR 1976 SC 2199: (1976) 2 SCR 764: 1976 Cri LJ 1718.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud and A.C. Gupta, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-11-1975]

[1544] — Ss. 162 and 154 — Supplementary statement of the first informant recorded by the IO — Use of — Such statement cannot be used for comparing it with FIR — Merely because the IO elicited more details during subsequent interrogation informants' evidence does not become suspect

The reason advanced by the trial court against the evidence of the first informant was that when he was interrogated by the Investigating Officer subsequently, he gave more details regarding the occurrence. Firstly, the said supplementary statement recorded by the Investigating Officer could only have been used to contradict the witness in view of the interdict contained in Section 162 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Secondly, that statement cannot be used for comparing it with the FIR. That apart, if the Investigating Officer elicited more details from the same person during any subsequent interrogation his evidence does not become suspect. It is not advisable to throw the evidence of the informant overboard merely because the Investigating Officer succeeded in eliciting further details or even fuller details during subsequent interrogation. Harpal Singh v. Devinder Singh, (1997) 6 SCC 660: 1997 SCC (Cri) 981: AIR 1997 SC 2914: 1997 Cri LJ 3561.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-7-1997]

[1545] — Ss. 162 and 161 — Applicability — Govt. official assisting investigating officer, submitting his report to Anti-Corruption Bureau, the investigating agency, during course of investigation in a case of alleged commission of fraud and forgery by govt. engineers — Official examined by investigating officer after submission of his report and the report forming part of his statement recorded by the Bureau under S. 161 — Official not qualified as an expert within the meaning of S. 45 of Evidence Act — Held, his report would attract S. 162 and would be inadmissible in evidence to fasten criminal liability of the accused. C. Chenga Reddy v. State of A.P., (1996) 10 SCC 193: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1205: AIR 1996 SC 3390.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and Dr. A.S. Anand, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-7-1996]

[1546] — Ss. 162 and 161 — Bar under S. 162 — Scope — Statement made/given by witness under S. 161 and signed by him, held, hit by bar under S. 162 — However, evidence deposed in court by said witness admissible (Para 111). Manu Sharma v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 6 SCC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and Swatanter Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision : 19-4-2010]

(1) Nature of statement recorded under Ss. 161/162 — Use to which it may be put (contd.)

Mehr Vajsi Deva v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1965 Guj 143; Zahiruddin v. Emperor, AIR 1947 PC 75; Supdt. and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs v. Ram Ajudhya Singh, AIR 1965 Cal 348, referred to

Ranbir Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1995) 4 SCC 392: 1995 SCC (Cri) 728, considered

[1547] — Ss. 162 and 161 — Bar of S. 162 — Applicability where statement sought to be used in a different case — Statement of a person recorded under S. 161 during investigation of a case relating to abduction of a boy implicating appellant — Subsequently that person murdered — Held, statement made by that person under S. 161 earlier could be used in the subsequent investigation relating to his murder

Bar of Section 162 CrPC is in regard to the admissibility of the statement recorded of a person by the police officer under Section 161 CrPC and by virtue of Section 162 CrPC would be applicable only where such statement is sought to be used at any inquiry or trial in respect of any offence under investigation at the time when such statement was made. If the statement made before a police officer in the course of an investigation under Chapter XII is sought to be used in any proceeding, inquiry or trial in respect of an offence other than which was under investigation at the time when such statement was made, the bar of Section 162 will not be attracted. When the statement of K was recorded by the police officers under Section 161 CrPC during the investigation of abduction case of a boy, K was alive and thus that statement could be used in the subsequent investigation that was being made with respect to the alleged murder of K. (Paras 14 to 16). Vinay D. Nagar v. State of Rajasthan, (2008) 5 SCC 597: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 666: AIR 2008 SC 1558: 2008 Cri LJ 1907.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.P. Naolekar and L.S. Panta, JJ [Date of decision: 3-3-2008]

Khatri (IV) v. State of Bihar, (1981) 2 SCC 493: 1981 SCC (Cri) 503, relied on [1548] — Ss. 162 and 161 — Statement made to the police during investigation — Use of — No question put to the witness with reference to his statement recorded under S. 161 — Court cannot use such statement later even for drawing any adverse impression regarding the evidence of that witness — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 155 (Para 20). Dandu Lakshmi Reddy v. State of A.P., (1999) 7 SCC 69: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1176: AIR 1999 SC 3255.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-8-1999]

[1549] — Ss. 162 and 172 — Applicability — Bar under, against production or use in evidence of statement made before a police officer in the course of investigation or case diary prepared by the police officer, held, would not apply where court calls for such statement or diary in a civil proceeding or in a proceeding under Art. 32 or 226 provided the statement or diary is otherwise relevant under the Evidence Act, 1872

Section 162 has been enacted for the benefit of the accused. The bar created by this section is a limited one and has no application if the statement made before a police officer in the course of an investigation under Chap. XII is sought to be used in any proceeding other than an inquiry or trial or even at an inquiry or trial but in respect of an offence other than that which was under investigation at the time when such statement was made. Thus the section does not apply to a civil proceeding or a proceeding under Art. 32 or 226 and as such a statement made before a police officer during investigation can be produced and used in evidence in a writ petition under Art. 32 or 226 provided it is relevant under the Evidence Act.

The bar against production and use of case diary enacted in S. 172 is intended to operate only in an inquiry or trial for an offence and even this bar is a limited bar, because in an inquiry or trial, the bar does not operate if the case diary is used by the police officer for refreshing his memory or the criminal court uses it for the purpose of contradicting such police officer. This bar also can have no application where a case diary is sought to be produced and used in evidence in a civil proceeding or in a proceeding under Art. 32 or 226 of the Constitution and particularly when the party calling for the case diary is neither an accused nor his agent in respect of the offence to which the case diary relates.

The present writ petition under Art. 32 to enforce the fundamental right guaranteed under Art. 21 is neither an 'inquiry' nor a 'trial' for an offence nor is the Court hearing the writ petition a criminal court nor are the petitioners, accused or their agents so far as the offences arising out of their blinding are concerned. Therefore, even if the reports submitted by the police officer as a result of his investigation could be said to form part of 'case diary' their production and use in evidence in the present petition could not be said to be barred under S. 172. Khatri (IV) v. State of Bihar, (1981) 2 SCC 493: 1981 SCC (Cri) 503: AIR 1981 SC 1068: 1981 Cri LJ 597: 1981 MLJ (Cri) 456: (1981) 29 BLJR 425.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and Baharul Islam, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-3-1981]

[1550] — Ss. 162 and 174 — Statement made by a witness during inquest proceedings — Held, cannot be used as substantive evidence in view of embargo of S. 162. Harkirat Singh v. State of Punjab, (1997) 11 SCC 215: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1068: AIR 1997 SC 3231.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-7-1997]

[1551] — Ss. 162 and 174 — Statement of the witness recorded in inquest report — Held, hit by S. 162 — It cannot be used for any purpose except to contradict its author. Periasami v. State of T.N., (1996) 6 SCC 457: 1997 SCC (Cri) 121.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-9-1996]

[1552] — S. 162 proviso — Statement made to police during investigation can be used only for the purpose of contradicting the prosecution witnesses under S. 145, Evidence Act — Held, cannot be used for purposes of corroboration. Sat Paul v. Delhi Admn., (1976) 1 SCC 727: 1976 SCC (Cri) 160: AIR 1976 SC 294: 1976 Cri LJ 295.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and R.S. Sarkaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-9-1975]

[1553] — S. 162 — Former statement by witness made during police investigation may be used to contradict him — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 145 & 155. Prakash Chand v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1979) 3 SCC 90: 1979 SCC (Cri) 656: AIR 1979 SC 400: 1979 Cri LJ 329: 1979 MLJ (Cri) 419.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-11-1978]

[1554] — S. 162 — Only prosecution witnesses can be contradicted by reference to their statements made to police and not court witnesses or defence witnesses — CrPC, 1898 — S. 162. Shakila Khader v. Nausheer Cama, (1975) 4 SCC 122: 1975 SCC (Cri) 379: AIR 1975 SC 1324: 1975 Cri LJ 1105.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A. Alagiriswami and N.L. Untwalia, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-3-1975]

[1555] — S. 162 — Statements recorded during preliminary enquiry — If can be used as an evidence against the charged employee — Respondent, a police officer, alleged to have kept two women at police station at night in violation of S. 160(1) proviso of CrPC and of departmental instructions, and also indulged in an outrageous behaviour — During pendency of disciplinary enquiry, respondent convicted by trial court but acquitted by appellate court on the ground that the two women did not support the prosecution case — Respondent's dismissal from service set aside by the Tribunal on two grounds: (i) the respondent had been acquitted on similar facts, (ii) findings of disciplinary enquiry were based on the statement recorded during preliminary enquiry which the two women had contradicted at regular enquiry — On facts, however, found that presence of two women at police station at night was proved during trial — Held, it was permissible to appreciate evidence given by the women before Enquiry Officer in the light of their earlier statements made during preliminary enquiry — The Administrative Tribunal's conclusion that it was a case of no evidence, therefore held, not sustainable — The Administrative Tribunal's view that if the witnesses had contradicted themselves during regular enquiry, their previous statements could be used only for discrediting them but not for the purpose of appreciation of evidence against respondent, also, held, not sustainable — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 166, 354, 365 and 366. State of T.N. v. M.A. Waheed Khan, (1998) 8 SCC 723.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-8-1996]

[1556] — Ss. 162 and 2(n) — Statement contemplated in S. 162 — Admissibility of, in departmental enquiry — Confession made in police custody — Evidentiary value of — Bar against admissibility of such confession contained in Ss. 25 and 26, Evidence Act and S. 162 CrPC, held, not applicable to departmental enquiry — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 25 and 26

The respondent was a Constable in the Delhi Police. Pursuant to an FIR lodged against him under Sections 308/34 of the Penal Code, he was arrested. Subsequently, certain firearms from the armoury were found with certain persons accused therefor. The said persons made confessions stating that the respondent had committed theft of the said arms. The respondent was arrested on the basis of that confessional statement. While in police custody he also made a confession as regards his involvement in the said offence. He also led the investigating team to the room of the armoury and pointed out the place wherefrom, he while working as a sentry on the date specified, had stolen the said firearms. Since apart from that confession there was no material on record, the respondent was discharged from the criminal case. Thereafter, a departmental enquiry was initiated against the respondent on the basis of the said confessional statement made by him. The departmental enquiry culminated in his dismissal from service. Setting aside the dismissal order CAT held, inter alia, that there was no embargo against applying the provisions of Section 25, Evidence Act and Section 162 CrPC to departmental proceedings. After unsuccessfully approaching the High Court, the department filed the present appeal.

(1) Nature of statement recorded under Ss. 161/162 — Use to which it may be put (contd.)

Before the Supreme Court, the appellant department contended, inter alia, that the embargo contained in Section 25, Evidence Act and Section 162 CrPC were not applicable to departmental proceedings.

On the other hand, the respondent contended that even in a disciplinary proceeding the provisions contained in Section 26 of the Evidence Act, or at least principles analogous thereto, were attracted as such confessions in police custody were ordinarily extracted by force. The respondent added that since he was discharged from the criminal case, having regard to the provisions contained in Rule 12 of the Delhi Police (Punishment and Appeal) Rules, 1980 (hereinafter referred to as "the 1980 Rules"), the order of punishment was not sustainable.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The embargo contained in Section 25, Evidence Act and Section 162 CrPC regarding admissibility of a confession in a criminal trial has per se no application in departmental proceedings. CAT as also the High Court were not correct in holding that the said confession was not admissible even in a departmental proceeding. (Paras 21 and 23). Commr. of Police v. Narender Singh, (2006) 4 SCC 265: 2006 SCC (L&S) 686: AIR 2006 SC 1800: (2006) 128 DLT 801: (2006) 3 SLR 31: (2006) 3 LLN 104.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-2006]

Kuldip Singh v. State of Punjab, (1996) 10 SCC 659: 1997 SCC (L&S) 346; Depot Manager, A.P. SRTC v. Mohd. Yousuf Miya, (1997) 2 SCC 699: 1997 SCC (L&S) 548; Lalit Popli v. Canara Bank, (2003) 3 SCC 583: 2003 SCC (L&S) 353; N. Rajarathinam v. State of T.N., (1996) 10 SCC 371: 1997 SCC (L&S) 90; State of A.P. v. Chitra Venkata Rao, (1975) 2 SCC 557: 1975 SCC (L&S) 349; State of Haryana v. Rattan Singh, (1977) 2 SCC 491: 1977 SCC (L&S) 298, relied on [1557] — S. 162 — An officer of RPF making enquiry under, held, is not affected — Railway Property (Unlawful Possession) Act, 1966 — S. 8(1). State of U.P. v. Vyas Tewari, 1980 Supp SCC 433: 1981 SCC (Cri) 361: AIR 1981 SC 635: 1981 Cri LJ 38.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-1980]

[1558] — S. 162 — Enquiry officer obtaining signature on statements made by persons called for enquiry under S. 8(1) Railway Property Act, 1966 — Not hit by S. 162, CrPC— Railway Property (Unlawful Possession) Act, 1966 — S. 8(1)

Statements made during the enquiry under S. 8(1) of the Act are not on a par with statements made during the course of an investigation. S. 162 of the Code does not apply with full force to the enquiry proceedings and in taking signatures of witnesses on the statements made by them the enquiry officer had not committed a flagrant violation of S. 162 of the Code. State of U.P. v. Durga Prasad, (1975) 3 SCC 210: 1974 SCC (Cri) 828: AIR 1974 SC 2136: (1975) 1 SCR 881: 1974 Cri LJ 1465.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.R. Khanna and Y.V. Chandrachud, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-8-1974]

[1559] — Ss. 162 and 160 — Statements recorded under, compared to that under S. 108, Customs Act, 1962 — Scope and status of person summoned under, compared with provisions of CrPC — Held, a person called upon to make a statement before the Customs Authorities cannot be said to be an accused of an offence — S. 108 of Customs Act does not contemplate magisterial intervention — Customs Act, 1962 — S. 108

Section 108 of the Customs Act does not contemplate magisterial intervention. The statements recorded under Section 108 of the Act are distinct and different from the statements recorded by the police officers during the course of investigation under CrPC. A person called upon to make a statement before the Customs Authorities cannot be said to be an accused of an offence. It is, therefore, clear that if a person is called upon to make a statement under Section 108 of the Act and summons is issued for the said purpose, he is bound to comply with such direction. (Paras 39, 41 and 40). Union of India v. Padam Narain Aggarwal, (2008) 13 SCC 305: (2008) 231 ELT 397.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-10-2008]

Ramesh Chandra Mehta v. State of W.B., AIR 1970 SC 940: (1969) 2 SCR 461; CCE v. Duncan Agro Industries Ltd., (2000) 7 SCC 53: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1275, relied on

(2) Use of statement under Ss. 161/162 as basis for detention

[1560] — S. 161 — Statement of detenu recorded under S. 161 CrPC accepting allegations against himself — Can be relied upon for the purposes of preventive detention

The detenu's statement recorded under S. 161 CrPC accepting allegations against himself may not be a legally recorded confession which can be used as substantive evidence against the accused in the criminal case, but it cannot be completely brushed aside on that ground for the purpose of his preventive detention. K. Aruna Kumari v. Govt. of A.P., (1988) 1 SCC 296: 1988 SCC (Cri) 116: AIR 1988 SC 227: 1988 Cri LJ 411.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and L.M. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-11-1987]

[1561] — Ss. 161 and 162(1) — Primary reliance on accused's statement made to an investigating officer — Validity of — Held, not sufficient to form subjective satisfaction of the detaining authority — Statements under S. 161 CrPC cannot be taken as sufficient grounds in absence of any supportive or corroborating grounds

Insofar as the documents on which reliance is placed, none of these documents provide any reasonable basis for passing the detention order. The primary reliance has been on the accused's own statement made to an investigating officer. This cannot be said to be sufficient to form the subjective satisfaction of the detaining authority. Statements under Section 161, Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 cannot be taken as sufficient grounds in the absence of any supportive or corroborating grounds. Section 161 statements are not considered substantive evidence, but can only be used to contradict the witness in the course of a trial. The same is clear from the wording of Section 162(1) CrPC. (Para 30). Pebam Ningol Mikoi Devi v. State of Manipur, (2010) 9 SCC 618.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-9-2010]

Mohd. Yousuf Rather v. State of J&K, (1979) 4 SCC 370: 1979 SCC (Cri) 999; Rajendra Singh v. State of U.P., (2007) 7 SCC 378: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 375, relied on [1562] — S. 162 — Accused alleged to have killed his wife by administering cyanide in bottle of Limca — PW 6 owner of store from where bottle was allegedly purchased, and stating about alleged purchase — Held, it was little unusual for a busy shopkeeper to recall someone who was not a regular customer — Besides, PW 6 was familiar with police and appellant was presented before him after his confession "for a simple confirmation" — Thus, testimony of PW 6 unreliable (Paras 33 to 35). M. Nageshwar Rao v. State of A.P., (2011) 2 SCC 188.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Aftab Alam and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-1-2011]

(3) Right against self-incrimination — S. 161(2)/Confessions made in police custody

See also under CRIMINAL TRIAL in Vol. 3

See also Ss. 24 to 31, EVIDENCE ACT, 1872

[1563] — S. 161(2) — Right against self-incrimination — Nature and scope of — Comparison and relationship between the constitutional and the legal right — A person likely to be accused, a suspect accused also entitled to the protection — Bar against self-incrimination extends also to other pending or potential accusations other than that under investigation — The constitutional protection also available at the stage of police investigation — Nature and meaning of compulsion in Art. 20(3) — When is an answer said to incriminate — Relevancy of the fact situation — Relevance of Miranda Rule of United States to India — Guidelines to police and State to prevent coercion and duress on accused — Constitution of India — Art. 20(3)

Under S. 161, 'any person' includes the accused. Section 161, Criminal Procedure Code, enables the police to examine the accused during investigation but, the prohibitive sweep of Art. 20(3) goes to the stage of police investigation not commencing in court only. In fact, the provisions of Art. 20(3) and S. 161(2) substantially cover the same area so far as police investigations are concerned. The ban on self- accusation and the right to silence, while an investigation or a trial is under way, goes beyond that case and protects the accused in regard to other offences pending or imminent, which may deter him from voluntary disclosure of criminatory matter.

'Compelled testimony' is evidence procured not merely by physical threats or violence but by psychic torture, atmospheric pressure, environmental coercion, tiring interrogative prolixity, overbearing and intimidatory methods and the like. A police officer is clearly a person in authority and insistence on answering is a form of pressure especially in the atmosphere of the police station unless certain safeguards erasing duress are adhered to.

Legal penalty for refusing to answer or answer truthfully may by itself not amount to duress. It cannot be regarded as compulsion under Art. 20(3). But frequent threats of prosecution if there is failure to answer may take on the complexion of undue pressure violating Art. 20(3). The manner of mentioning it to the victim of interrogation may introduce an element of tension and tone of command perilously hovering near compulsion.

(3) Right against self-incrimination — S. 161(2)/ Confessions made in police custody (contd.)

All matters 'relevant' are not self-incriminatory nor do they have a tendency to expose the person answering, to a criminal charge. But to be self-incriminating, they need not be confessional. When relevant questions are loaded with guilty inference, in the event of an answer being supplied, the tendency to incriminate springs into existence. The accused cannot be forced to answer questions merely because the answers thereto are not implicative when viewed in isolation and confined to the particular case under investigation. He is entitled to keep his month shut if the answer sought has a reasonable prospect of exposing him to guilt in some other accusation actual or imminent. In determining the incriminatory character of an answer the accused is entitled to consider — and the Court, while judging will take note of — the setting, totality of circumstances, the equation, personal and social, which have a bearing on making an answer substantially innocent but in effect guilty of import. However, fanciful claims, unreasonable apprehensions and vague possibilities cannot be the hiding ground for an accused person. Nandini Satpathy v. P.L. Dani, (1978) 2 SCC 424: 1978 SCC (Cri) 236: AIR 1978 SC 1025: 1978 Cri LJ 968.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer, Jaswant Singh and V.D. Tulzapurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-4-1978]

[1564] — Ss. 161(2), 161(1), 313(3) and 315(1) proviso (b) — Right against self-incrimination — Comparison of right under Art. 20(3) of Constitution and under Ss. 161(2), 313(3) and 315(1) proviso, CrPC — Protection under S. 161(2), held, is wider than that under Art. 20(3) — Formal accusation is necessary to attract Art. 20(3) whereas S. 161(2) r/w S. 161(1) CrPC protects suspects and witnesses also, subject to obligation of witness under S. 132, Evidence Act to answer questions in suit or proceedings — Further held, protection afforded to witness is narrower compared to protection afforded to accused during trial under Ss. 313(3) and 315(1) proviso (b) CrPC — Constitution of India — Art. 20(3) — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 132 proviso

While there is a requirement of formal accusation for a person to invoke Article 20(3), protection contemplated by Section 161(2) CrPC is wider. Section 161(2) read with Section 161(1) protects any person supposed to be acquainted with the facts and circumstances of a case in the course of examination by police. Right against self-incrimination protects persons who have been formally accused as well as those who are examined as suspects in criminal cases. It also extends to cover witnesses who apprehend that their answers could expose them to criminal charges in ongoing investigation or even in cases other than the one being investigated. (Paras 121 and 122)

Even though Section 161(2) CrPC casts a wide protective net to protect the formally accused persons as well as suspects and witnesses during the investigative stage, Section 132 of the Evidence Act limits the applicability of this protection to witnesses during the trial stage. The latter provision provides that witnesses cannot refuse to answer questions during a trial on the ground that answers could incriminate them. However, proviso to this section stipulates that content of such answers cannot expose the witness to arrest or prosecution, except for a prosecution for giving false evidence. Therefore, the protection accorded to witnesses at the stage of trial is not as wide as the one accorded to accused, suspects and witnesses during investigation [under Section 161(2) CrPC]. It is narrower than the protection given to accused during trial stage [under Section 313(3) and proviso (b) to Section 315(1) CrPC]. The legislative intent is to preserve the fact-finding function of a criminal trial. (Para 123). Selvi v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 7 SCC 263.

Bench Strength 3. Coram : K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and R.V. Raveendran and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision : 5-5-2010]

M.P. Sharma v. Satish Chandra, AIR 1954 SC 300: 1954 Cri LJ 865: 1954 SCR 1077; State of Bombay v. Kathi Kalu Oghad, AIR 1961 SC 1808: (1961) 2 Cri LJ 856: (1962) 3 SCR 10; Miranda v. Arizona, 16 L Ed 2d 694: 384 US 436 (1965); Raja Narayanlal Bansilal v. Maneck Phiroz Mistry, AIR 1961 SC 29: (1961) 1 SCR 417; Ramesh Chandra Mehta v. State of W.B., AIR 1970 SC 940: 1970 Cri LJ 863: (1969) 2 SCR 461; Balkishan A. Devidayal v. State of Maharashtra, (1980) 4 SCC 600: 1981 SCC (Cri) 62, relied on

Escobedo v. Illinois, 12 L Ed 2d 977: 378 US 478 (1963), referred to

79 Harvard Law Review 21, 37 (1965), referred to

[1565] — Ss. 161(2), 313(3), 315 proviso (b) — Statements made by a person in custody — Unreliability of statement — Reasons for unreliability indicated — Doctrine of "excluding the fruit of a poisonous tree", held, is incorporated in Ss. 24 to 26, Evidence Act — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 24, 25 and 26

Statements made in custody are considered to be unreliable unless they have been subjected to cross-examination or judicial scrutiny. Scheme created by the Code of Criminal Procedure and the Evidence Act also mandates that confessions made before police officers are ordinarily not admissible as evidence and it is only statements made in the presence of a Judicial Magistrate which can be given weightage. The doctrine of "excluding the fruit of a poisonous tree" has been incorporated in Sections 24, 25 and 26 of the Evidence Act, 1872. (Para 132). Selvi v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 7 SCC 263.

Bench Strength 3. Coram : K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and R.V. Raveendran and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision : 5-5-2010]

[1566] — S. 161(2) — Right to remain silent — Scope of protection under S. 161(2) — Whether protection available in non-criminal proceedings also — Held, protection flows from provisions of CrPC and is therefore available in proceedings under CrPC — Non-criminal proceedings, even though resulting in some punitive action are not covered

Since extension of the right against self-incrimination to suspects and witnesses has its basis in Section 161(2) CrPC, it is not readily available to persons who are examined during proceedings that are not governed by CrPC. There is a distinction between proceedings of a purely criminal nature and those proceedings which can culminate in punitive remedies and yet cannot be characterised as criminal proceedings. Ordinarily Article 20(3) cannot be invoked by witnesses during proceedings that cannot be characterised as criminal proceedings. In administrative and quasi-criminal proceedings, the protection of Article 20(3) becomes available only after a person has been formally accused of committing an offence. (Para 125). Selvi v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 7 SCC 263.

Bench Strength 3. Coram : K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and R.V. Raveendran and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision : 5-5-2010]

Raja Narayanlal Bansilal v. Maneck Phiroz Mistry, AIR 1961 SC 29: (1961) 1 SCR 417; Ramesh Chandra Mehta v. State of W.B., AIR 1970 SC 940: 1970 Cri LJ 863: (1969) 2 SCR 461; Balkishan A. Devidayal v. State of Maharashtra, (1980) 4 SCC 600: 1981 SCC (Cri) 62, relied on

[1567] — S. 161(2) — Personal liberty — Wider dimensions of — Non-penal consequences like custodial violence, increased police surveillance and harassment — Held, such vices though not covered by protective shield of Art. 20(3) and S. 161(2) CrPC, yet are prohibited by Art. 21 — One of the reasons for declaring narcoanalysis, polygraph and BEAP tests as invalid is that a test subject who refuses to undergo these tests may be exposed to such non-penal consequences — Constitution of India — Arts. 21 and 20(3)

A person who refuses to undergo the impugned tests during investigative stage could face non-penal consequences which lie outside the protective scope of Article 20(3). A person who refuses to undergo these tests could face risk of custodial violence, increased police surveillance or harassment thereafter. Even a person who is compelled to undergo these tests could face such adverse consequences on account of the contents of test results if they heighten the investigators' suspicions. Each of these consequences, though condemnable, fall short of requisite standard of "exposure to criminal charges and penalties" that has been enumerated in Section 161(2) CrPC. Even though Article 20(3) will not be applicable in such circumstances, reliance can be placed on Article 21 if such non-penal consequences amount to a violation of personal liberty as contemplated under the Constitution. The Court has recognised rights of prisoners (under-trials as well as convicts) as well as individuals in other custodial environments to receive fair, just and equitable treatment. In circumstances where persons who refuse to answer questions during the investigative stage are exposed to adverse consequences of a non-penal nature, the inquiry should account for expansive scope of Article 21 rather than the right contemplated by Article 20(3). (Paras 143 and 144). Selvi v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 7 SCC 263.

Bench Strength 3. Coram : K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and R.V. Raveendran and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision : 5-5-2010]

Sunil Batra v. Delhi Admn., (1978) 4 SCC 494: 1979 SCC (Cri) 155, relied on [1568] — S. 161(2) — Taking of specimen signature of accused during investigation does not amount to giving a statement under S. 161 CrPC nor Art. 20(3) of the Constitution — Constitution of India — Art. 20(3). State of U.P. v. Boota Singh, (1979) 1 SCC 31: 1979 SCC (Cri) 115: AIR 1978 SC 1770: 1979 MLJ (Cri) 290: (1979) 1 SCR 298: 1978 ALJ 1156.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-8-1978]

[1569] — S. 162 — Right against self-incrimination — Incriminatory statement — How to ascertain whether statement is incriminatory — Depends upon the use to which it is put — Direct use, derivative use and transactional use of statement also explained — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 24 to 27 — Constitution of India — Article 20(3)

Where a person in custody is compelled to reveal information which aids investigation efforts, the information so revealed can prove to be incriminatory in the following ways: (1) statements made in custody could be directly relied upon by prosecution to strengthen their case. However, if it is shown that such statements were made under circumstances of compulsion, they will be excluded from evidence. (2) Another possibility is that of "derivative use" i.e. when information revealed during questioning leads to discovery of independent materials, thereby furnishing a link in the chain of evidence gathered by investigators. (3) Yet another possibility is that of "transactional use" i.e. when information revealed can prove to be helpful for investigation and prosecution in cases other than the one being investigated. (4) A common practice is that of extracting materials or information, which are then compared with materials that are already in the possession of investigators. For instance, handwriting samples and specimen signatures are routinely obtained for the purpose of identification or corroboration. (Para 128). Selvi v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 7 SCC 263.

(3) Right against self-incrimination — S. 161(2)/ Confessions made in police custody (contd.)

Bench Strength 3. Coram : K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and R.V. Raveendran and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision : 5-5-2010]

Nandini Satpathy v. P.L. Dani, (1978) 2 SCC 424: 1978 SCC (Cri) 236; Hoffman v. United States, 95 L Ed 1118: 341 US 479 (1950); State of Bombay v. Kathi Kalu Oghad, AIR 1961 SC 1808: (1961) 2 Cri LJ 856: (1962) 3 SCR 10, relied on

[1570] — Ss. 162, 163 and 164 — Right against self-incrimination under Art. 20(3) vis-à-vis theory of confirmation by subsequent facts, as incorporated in S. 27, Evidence Act, 1872 — Held, right against self-incrimination arises when incriminating statement is made out of compulsion — In the absence of compulsion, information received from accused in custody can be proved under S. 27, Evidence Act — Further held, there is no automatic presumption in India that custodial statement has been extracted through compulsion — There is therefore no requirement of additional diligence similar to Miranda warnings in USA — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 24 to 27 — Miranda Warnings (USA) — Constitution of India — Art. 20(3)

Sections 162, 163 and 164 CrPC lay down procedural safeguards in respect of statements made by persons during the course of investigation. However, Section 27 of the Evidence Act incorporates the "theory of confirmation by subsequent facts" i.e. statements made in custody are admissible to the extent that they can be proved by the subsequent discovery of facts. It is quite possible that the content of custodial statements could directly lead to subsequent discovery of relevant facts rather than their discovery through independent means. Hence such statements could also be described as those which "furnish a link in the chain of evidence" needed for a successful prosecution. Section 27 permits derivative use of custodial statements in the ordinary course of events. In Indian law, there is no automatic presumption that the custodial statements have been extracted through compulsion. There is no requirement of additional diligence akin to administration of Miranda warnings. However, in circumstances where it is shown that a person was indeed compelled to make statements while in custody, relying on such testimony as well as its derivative use will offend Article 20(3). (Paras 133 and 134). Selvi v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 7 SCC 263.

Bench Strength 3. Coram : K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and R.V. Raveendran and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision : 5-5-2010]

State of Bombay v. Kathi Kalu Oghad, AIR 1961 SC 1808: (1961) 2 Cri LJ 856: (1962) 3 SCR 10, followed

Miranda v. Arizona, 16 L Ed 2d 694: 384 US 436 (1965), limited

[1571] — S. 162 — Complaint made by accused before police during the course of investigation, held, hit by this section — CrPC, 1898 — S. 162. Soma Bhai v. State of Gujarat, (1975) 4 SCC 257: 1975 SCC (Cri) 515: AIR 1975 SC 1453: 1975 Cri LJ 1201.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N.L. Untwalia and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-4-1975]

[1572] — S. 162 — Confessions made in police custody — Inadmissibility of — Constitution of India — Art. 20(3) — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 25 and 26

Under the general law of the land as reflected in the Evidence Act, no confession made to a police officer can be proved against an accused. Confessions leading to discovery of a fact which is dealt with under Section 27 is an exception to the rule of exclusion of confession made by an accused in the custody of a police officer. (Para 27). State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715: 2005 Cri LJ 3950: (2005) 122 DLT 194.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2005]

(4) Confession made in police custody under special statute

[1573] — S. 162 — Confessions made in police custody — When admissible — Special statutes — Confessions made in police custody under — Admissibility of — Need for testing of voluntariness and reliability of confession by court — Safeguards built into S. 32, especially Ss. 32(4) & (5), POTA, 2002 — Need for strict compliance — Held, words "admissible only" used in S. 32(1) without being followed by words "in evidence" do not deprive the confession recorded under S. 32(1) of its evidentiary value — Further held, breach of any of the safeguards in Ss. 32(2) to (5) would have a vital bearing on the admissibility and evidentiary value of confession recorded under S. 32(1) — However, reservations against and undesirability of provisions like S. 32, discussed in extenso — Ground realities of police investigation and violation of human rights obtaining in India compared with that in UK and USA — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 25 and 26 — Prevention of Terrorism Act, 2002 — S. 32

The confession recorded by the police officer under Section 32(1) of POTA is admissible in evidence. The voluntariness and reliability of confession can of course be tested by the court. The admission of such confession would also be subject to the observance of the other provisions of Section 32 of POTA which are in the nature of procedural safeguards aimed at ensuring that the confessions are made by the accused in an atmosphere free from threat and inducement. The most important safeguards in Section 32 are provided in sub-sections (4) and (5). (Paras 64, 42, 43 and 156)

If the confessional statement is properly recorded, satisfying the mandatory provisions of Section 32 of POTA and if the same is found by the court as having been made voluntarily and truthfully then the said confession is sufficient to base a conviction on the maker of the confession. The mere fact that the expression "admissible only" is used without being followed by the words "in evidence", does not, by any canon of construction, deprive the confession recorded under Section 32 of POTA its evidentiary value; otherwise Section 32(1), more especially the expression "admissible" contained therein will become ineffectual and senseless. (Paras 45 and 65)

The various safeguards enshrined in Section 32 are meant to be strictly observed as they relate to personal liberty of an individual. The requirements and safeguards laid down in Sections 32(2) to (5) are an integral part of the scheme providing for admissibility of confession made to the police officer. The breach of any one of these requirements would have a vital bearing on the admissibility and evidentiary value of the confession recorded under Section 32(1) and may even inflict a fatal blow on such confession. However, the strict enforcement of the provision as to judicial remand under Section 32(5) and the invalidation of the confession merely on the ground of its non-compliance may present some practical difficulties at times. Situations may arise that even after the confession is made by a person in custody, police custody may still be required for the purpose of further investigation. Sending a person to judicial custody at that stage may retard the investigation. Sometimes, the further steps to be taken by the investigator with the help of the accused may brook no delay. An attempt shall however be made to harmonise this provision in Section 32(5) with the powers of investigation available to the police. At the same time, it needs to be emphasised that the obligation to send the confession maker to judicial custody cannot be lightly disregarded. Police custody cannot be given on the mere asking by the police. It shall be remembered that sending a person who has made the confession to judicial custody after he is produced before the CJM is the normal rule and this procedural safeguard should be given its due primacy. The CJM should be satisfied that it is absolutely necessary that the confession maker shall be restored to police custody for any special reason. Such a course of sending him back to police custody could only be done in exceptional cases after due application of mind. Most often, sending such person to judicial custody in compliance with Section 32(5) soon after the proceedings are recorded by the CJM subject to the consideration of the application by the police after a few days may not make material difference to the further investigation. The CJM has a duty to consider whether the application is only a ruse to get back the person concerned to police custody in case he disputes the confession or it is an application made bona fide in view of the need and urgency involved. Therefore non-compliance with the judicial custody requirement does not per se vitiate the confession, though its non-compliance should be one of the important factors that must be borne in mind in testing the confession. (Paras 157 and 158)

The lofty purpose behind the mandate of Section 32(5) that the maker of the confession shall be sent to judicial custody by the CJM before whom he is produced, is to provide an atmosphere in which he would feel free to make a complaint against the police, if he so wishes. The feeling that he will be free from the shackles of police custody after production in court will minimise, if not remove, the fear psychosis by which he may be gripped. The same objective seems to be at the back of Section 164(3) CrPC, though the situation contemplated therein is somewhat different. The question of sending to judicial custody under Section 32(5) cannot arise only if there was any complaint of torture and a medical examination prima facie supporting such allegation. The clear words of the provision do not admit of an interpretation that the judicial custody should be ordered by the Chief Judicial Magistrate only when there is a complaint from the "confession maker" and there appears to be unfair treatment of such person in custody. The obligation to send the person whose alleged confession was recorded to judicial custody is a rule and the deviation could at best be in exceptional circumstances. (Paras 157, 178, 179 and 182)

(4) Confession made in police custody under special statute (contd.)

A formidable doubt lingers which pertains to the rationale and reason behind the drastic provision in Section 32(1) making the confession to a police officer admissible in evidence in a trial for POTA offences. If a person volunteers to make a confession, why should he be not produced before the Judicial Magistrate at the earliest and have the confession recorded by a Magistrate? The Magistrate could be reached within the same time within which the empowered police officer could be approached. The doubt becomes more puzzling when it is noticed that in practical terms, a greater degree of credibility is attached to a confession made before the judicial officer. Then, why should not the investigating officer adopt the straightforward course of having resort to the ordinary and age-old law? If there is any specific advantage of conferring power on a police officer to record the confession receivable in evidence, if the intendment and desideratum of the provision indisputably remains to be to ensure an atmosphere free from threats and psychological pressures? Why the circuitous provision of having confession recorded by the police officer of the rank of SP (even if he be the immediate superior of the IO who oversees the investigation) and then requiring the production of the accused before the Chief Metropolitan or Judicial Magistrate within 48 hours? It makes some sense if the accused is in a remote area with no easy means of communication and the Magistrate is not easily accessible. Otherwise, is there real expediency or good reason for allowing an option to the IO to have the confession recorded either by the superior police officer or a Judicial Magistrate? The comparative ease with which the confession could be extracted from the accused cannot be pleaded as justification. If it is so, should the end justify the means? Should the police officer be better trusted than a Magistrate? Does the magnitude and severity of the offence justify the entrustment of the job of recording confession to a police officer? Does it imply that it is easier to make an accused confess the guilt before a police officer so that it could pave the way for conviction in a serious offence no direct answer to these questions can be found either in Kartar Singh case, (1994) 3 SCC 569, or the latest case of People's Union for Civil Liberties, (2004) 9 SCC 580. The quality of a nation's civilisation can be largely measured by the methods it uses in the enforcement of its criminal law. (Discussed in Paras 54 and 55)

In regard to the admissibility of confessions made to the police it is not apt to compare the position obtaining in the UK and the USA to that in India. The ground realities cannot be ignored. It is an undeniable fact that the police in our country still resort to crude methods of investigation, especially in mofussil and rural areas and they suffer many handicaps, such as lack of adequate personnel, training, equipment and professional independence. These features, by and large, are not so rampant in those advanced countries. Considered from the standpoint of scientific investigation, intensity of training and measure of objectivity, the standards and approaches of police personnel are much different in those countries. The evils which the framers of the Evidence Act had in mind to exclude confessions to the police, are still prevalent though not in the same degree. (Para 58)

After independence, no doubt, some positive steps have been taken to improve the working pattern, utility and image of the police force, but, much desires to be achieved in this direction. Complaints of violation of human rights by resorting to dubious methods of investigation, politicisation of the police establishment and victimisation of the straightforward and honest officers are some of the criticisms that are being heard day in and day out. Even many amongst the public tacitly endorse the use of violence by the police against criminals. In this scenario it is seriously doubtful whether it would be safe to concede the power of recording confessions to the police officers to be used in evidence against the accused making the confession and the co-accused. (Paras 58 and 59)

The violation of procedural safeguards under Section 52 does not stand on the same footing as the violation of the requirements of Sections 32(2) to (5). Sections 32(2) to (5) have an integral and inseparable connection with the confession recorded under Section 32(1). They are designed to be checks against involuntary confessions and to provide an immediate remedy to the person making the confession to air his grievance before a judicial authority. These safeguards are, so to say, woven into the fabric of Section 32 itself and their observance is so vital that the breach thereof will normally result in eschewing the confession from consideration, subject to what has been said about the judicial custody. The prescriptions under Section 52, especially those affording an opportunity to have the presence of the legal practitioner, are no doubt supplemental safeguards as they will promote the guarantee against self-incrimination even at the stage of interrogation; but these requirements laid down in Section 52 cannot be projected into Section 32 so as to read all of them as constituting a code of safeguards of the same magnitude. To hold that the violation of each one of the safeguards envisaged by Section 52 would lead to automatic invalidation of the confession would not be in consonance with the inherent nature and scheme of the respective provisions. However, the denial of the safeguards under Sections 52(2) to (4) will be one of the relevant factors that would weigh with the court to act upon or discard the confession. To this extent they play a role vis-à-vis the confessions recorded under Section 32, but they are not as clinching as the provisions contained in Sections 32(2) to (5). (Para 164)

Afzal's confession made to DCP — Admissibility

The steps required to be taken under Sections 32(4) and (5) were taken. However, the accused Afzal was not sent to judicial custody thereafter, but, on the request of the IO, PW 80, the ACMM sent back Afzal to police custody. Such remand was ordered by the ACMM pursuant to an application made by PW 80 that the presence of Afzal in police custody was required for the purpose of further investigation. Thus, the last and latter part of Section 32(5) was undoubtedly breached. In the present case, it does not appear that the ACMM (PW 63) had in mind the requirement of Section 32(5) as to judicial custody. At any rate, the order passed by him on 22-12-2001 on the application filed by PW 80 does not reflect his awareness of such requirement or application of mind to the propriety of police remand in the face of Section 32(5) of POTA. Compelling circumstances to bypass the requirement of judicial custody are not apparent from the record. (Paras 177 and 179)

There is no hard-and-fast rule regarding grant of time for reflection before recording a confession and the rules and guidelines applicable to a confession under Section 164 CrPC do not govern, but in the present case, the time of 5 or 10 minutes is, by all standards, utterly inadequate. Granting reasonable time for reflection before recording a confession is one way of ensuring that the person concerned gets the opportunity to deliberate and introspect once again when he is brought before the prescribed authority for recording the confession. That it is one of the relevant considerations in assessing the voluntariness of the confession. (Para 184)

Sufficient time was not given for reflection after the accused (Afzal/Shaukat) were produced before PW 60 recording the confession. PW 60 stated in the evidence that he gave only 5 to 10 minutes time to the accused for thinking/reflection. (Para 184)

Furthermore, it cannot be held that there was abnormal delay in disowning the confession, the effect of which would be to impart credibility to the confessional statement. The fact that there is an alleged inconsistency in the grounds on which the confessional statement was refuted by Afzal will not give rise to an inference that the confessional statement was true and voluntary. It is the substance of what the accused said while refuting the statement that has to be seen rather than building up a case on the basis of some inconsistencies in the defence plea. (Paras 187 and 188)

All these lapses and violations of procedural safeguards guaranteed in the statute itself impel the conclusion that it is not safe to act on the alleged confessional statement of Afzal and place reliance on this item of evidence on which the prosecution places heavy reliance. (Para 185)

Shaukat's confession made to DCP — Admissibility

The difference between the case of Afzal and Shaukat in regard to the confessional statement is that the retraction was done by Shaukat much earlier i.e. within a month after it was recorded by the DCP. The other point of difference is that Shaukat was sent to judicial custody unlike Afzal who was sent to police custody after they were produced before the ACMM. The same reasons given for excluding the confessional statement of Afzal, hold good in the case of Shaukat as well except with respect to the breach of requirement as to judicial custody. The procedural safeguards incorporated in Sections 50(2), 50(3) and 50(4) are violated in this case also. True, Shaukat was sent to judicial custody after his statement was recorded by the Magistrate. But in the absence of legal advice and the opportunity to interact with a lawyer, there is reason to think that he would not have been aware of the statutory mandate under Section 32(5) and therefore the lurking fear of going back to police custody could have been present in his mind. Moreover the learned ACMM did not apprise him of the fact that he would no longer be in police custody. There is also nothing to show that the confessional statement was read over to him or at least a gist of it has been made known to him. (Paras 302 and 303)

There is one additional point which deserves serious notice. According to Shaukat's version in the confession statement, his wife Afsan Guru

(4) Confession made in police custody under special statute (contd.)

(A-4) was also having knowledge of their plans. It is not really believable that he would go to the extent of implicating his pregnant wife in the crime. It casts a serious doubt whether some embellishments were made in the confessional statement. No final opinion is expressed on this point as the confession is being excluded from consideration on the ground of violation of procedural safeguards and the utterly inadequate time given by PW 60 for reflection. (Para 304). State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715: 2005 Cri LJ 3950: (2005) 122 DLT 194.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2005]

Jameel Ahmed v. State of Rajasthan, (2003) 9 SCC 673: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1853, explained and followed

State v. Nalini, (1999) 5 SCC 253: 1999 SCC (Cri) 691; Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1994) 3 SCC 569: 1994 SCC (Cri) 899; People's Union for Civil Liberties v. Union of India, (2004) 9 SCC 580, discussed

Nandini Satpathy v. P.L. Dani, (1978) 2 SCC 424: 1978 SCC (Cri) 236; Firozuddin Basheeruddin v. State of Kerala, (2001) 7 SCC 596: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1341, relied on [1574] — Ss. 161 and 162 — Admissibility of confession recorded under S. 15 TADA in case of offences under RPC or IPC — Reiterated, the same is admissible, if the confession stands acid test of credibility, voluntariness and truthfulness — In instant case, confession was recorded in language of accused, original document pertaining thereto was brought on record and procedural safeguards duly observed while recording it — Moreover, merely because the guidelines in Kartar Singh, (1994) 3 SCC 569, were not fully followed, that by itself does not wipe out the confession recorded — Hence, conviction of appellant under S. 302 RPC on basis of confession recorded under S. 15 TADA, sustainable — In any case, facts relating to S. 3(3) of TADA and facts relating to S. 302 RPC were completely intermixed in this matter — They were part of same transaction — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302 — Ranbir Penal Code, 1989 Smvt., S. 302 — TADA (Prevention) Act, 1987, Ss. 15 & 3(3) and S. 302, RPC, 1989 Smvt.

Due to the popularity of the assassinated victim, Mirwaiz Moulvi Farooq (the deceased), two terrorists outfits, namely, Jamat-e-Islami and Hizbul Mujahideen were apprehensive that deceased would eventually assume leadership of Kashmir. They also viewed the deceased as an agent of GoI working against interests of militants. Hence, conspiracy to eliminate him was hatched between K, J, M, A and Z. Pursuant thereto appellant-accused M, accused A and Z armed with loaded pistols visited deceased. They were met at the gate by PW 16 (gatekeeper) who instructed the gardener to take them to PW 17 (personal assistant of deceased). Fake name given by the accused was written on a slip of paper by PW 17 and the slip was sent inside the room of the deceased. When the accused were called in, as per the determined plan, accused Z fired at the deceased while the appellant and accused A provided cover to him. They all managed to escape though there was scuffle between them and the gardener in which accused Z sustained injury below his right eye.

Thus, originally five accused were tried for murder. Accused A and K expired during pendency of trial, while accused J and Z were untraceable. Instant appeal, hence, was limited only to appellant M. The appellant was charged under Section 302 RPC and Section 3(3) of TADA, 1987. The trial court convicted him under aforesaid provisions and sentenced him to imprisonment for life (subject to confirmation by the appellate court as per Section 374, J&K CrPC, 1989), and fine of Rs 6000 with default stipulation for offence under Section 302 RPC and imprisonment of five years and fine of Rs 5000 under Section 3(3) of TADA.

Dismissing the appeal, the Supreme Court held as above.

Held:

The conviction of accused on sole basis of his confession is sustainable and the only test which the court has to apply is whether the confession was voluntary and free of coercion, threat or inducement and whether sufficient caution was taken by the police officer who recorded the confession. Once the confession passes that test, it can become the basis of the conviction. The confession in this case was free from all the aforementioned defects and was voluntary. (Paras 64 and 65)

If the confession statement stands to the acid test on credibility, voluntariness and truthfulness, then that would be sufficient to pin the guilt of the accused. The confession was voluntarily made by appellant on his own free will and was recorded after complying with all procedural safeguards as evidenced from testimony of PW 2. The criticism against the confession that it was not recorded in the language of the accused is not justified. It was also established that the original confession was very much available on the record and not the carbon copy as asserted by the defence. The accused was given sufficient time for reflection and at no point of time accused complained of any coercion. Moreover, merely because the guidelines in Kartar

Singh, (1994) 3 SCC 569, were not fully followed, that by itself does not wipe out the confession recorded. (Paras 38, 47 to 52 and 59)

Moreover, if the confession made by accused is voluntary and truthful and relates to the accused himself, then no further corroboration is necessary and conviction of the accused can be solely based on it. Such confessional statement is admissible as a substantive piece of evidence and need not be tested for the contradictions to be found in the confession of the co-accused. It is for that reason that even if the other oral evidence goes counter to the statements made in the confession, one's confession can be found to be voluntary and reliable and it can become the basis of the conviction. (Para 60)

In this case, there is ample corroboration to the confession in the oral evidence as well as the documentary evidence in shape of a chit, which is referred to in the said confession. There is a clear reference that PW 17 had sent a slip inside. Ultimately, that slip was found by the police, which corroborates the contents in the confession. Thus, there is sufficient corroboration to the confession. (Para 61)

The denial by the appellant of having made the confession is also without any basis since the appellant had relied on part thereof praying that at best he could be convicted for abetting murder and not for committing murder. (Paras 72 to 74)

The issue whether confession under Section 15 of TADA, can be used for non-TADA offence like Section 302 RPC is no more res integra and is decided against defence. (Paras 66 and 67 and 37 to 41). Mohd. Ayub Dar v. State of J&K, (2010) 9 SCC 312: AIR 2010 SC 2864: (2010) 93 AIC 88 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-7-2010]

Abdulvahab Abdul Majid Shaikh v. State of Gujarat, (2007) 9 SCC 293: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 126, considered

S.N. Dube v. N.B. Bhoir, (2000) 2 SCC 254: 2000 SCC (Cri) 343, relied on

State v. Nalini, (1999) 5 SCC 253: 1999 SCC (Cri) 691; Lokeman Shah v. State of W.B., (2001) 5 SCC 235: 2001 SCC (Cri) 829, referred to

Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1994) 3 SCC 569: 1994 SCC (Cri) 899; Abdulvahab Abdul Majid Shaikh v. State of Gujarat, (2007) 9 SCC 293: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 126; State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715; Mohd. Ayub Dhar v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2000) 10 SCC 296: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1368; Prakash Kumar v. State of Gujarat, (2007) 4 SCC 266: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 285, distinguished

Ravinder Singh v. State of Maharashtra, (2002) 9 SCC 55: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1062; State v. Nalini, (1999) 5 SCC 253: 1999 SCC (Cri) 691, followed

[Ed.: See also Prakash Kumar v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 2 SCC 409, wherein a five-Judge Bench has affirmed Nalini case.]

[1575] — S. 162 — Conviction of accused on basis of confessional statement recorded under S. 15, TADA Act — Admissibility of such confessional statement in evidence against accused in prosecution for offences under any other law, which were tried along with TADA offences under S. 12 — Held, confessional statement duly recorded under TADA Act and Rules would continue to remain admissible for offences under any other law which were tried along with TADA offences under S. 12 r/w S. 15, notwithstanding that accused was acquitted of offences under TADA Act in the same trial — However, herein, allegation was mainly for offences under IPC and some offences under TADA Act were also incorporated initially but later on same were dropped — Consequently, charges were framed only for offences under IPC and not under TADA Act and trial was also only for offences under IPC and not under TADA Act — Therefore, such confessional statement made under TADA Act, in a different case, cannot be used or utilised by prosecution in present case, as charges were framed only for offences under IPC — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 25 — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987, Ss. 15 and 12 (Paras 19 and 20). Sunderlal Kanaiyalal Bhatija v. State of Maharashtra, (2010) 4 SCC 414.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : Dr. M.K. Sharma and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision : 31-3-2010]

Prakash Kumar v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 2 SCC 409: 2005 SCC (Cri) 518; State of Gujarat v. Mohd. Atik, (1998) 4 SCC 351: 1998 SCC (Cri) 936, relied on

State v. Nalini, (1999) 5 SCC 253: 1999 SCC (Cri) 691, cited

[1576] — S. 162 — Nature of — Held, S. 15, TADA Act is an exception to general rule contained in S. 25, Evidence Act or S. 162 CrPC — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 25 — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987, S. 15 (Para 14). Sunderlal Kanaiyalal Bhatija v. State of Maharashtra, (2010) 4 SCC 414.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : Dr. M.K. Sharma and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision : 31-3-2010]

[1577] — Ss. 162, 163 and 313 — Admissibility of confession made to police under special statute — Need for confession to have been made in full knowledge and nature of consequence of confession — Need for giving of time for reflection — Almost 45 days of police custody but only 15 to 30 minutes of reflection time given to each accused before recording of confession — Held, sufficient cooling-off time had not been given to the accused — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 24 — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987 — S. 15

(4) Confession made in police custody under special statute (contd.)

TADA is a harsh penal statute. Its provisions must, therefore, be construed in that perspective. Section 15 is a clear departure from the general law that a statement made to a police officer is not permissible in evidence. In Kartar Singh, (1994) 3 SCC 569 the Supreme Court while upholding the constitutional validity of the Act served a note of caution and laid down certain guidelines in applying the statute to individual cases. The provisions of the Act and the Rules must be scrupulously observed with particular reference to the provisions relating to the recording of confessions. It had, therefore, to be seen at the very initial stage as to whether the case would fall within the mischief of Sections 3(3) and 4(1) of the Act. It would naturally be difficult to lay down any hard-and-fast rule as to the time which should be allowed to an accused person in any given case. The accused had been in police custody for almost 45 days in each case. The record of confessions of the accused shows that 15 to 30 minutes time was given for reflection before the actual confessions were recorded. Therefore, sufficient cooling-off time had not been given to the accused, in the background that they had been in police custody over a long period of time. (Paras 5, 10, 12 and 13). State of Rajasthan v. Ajit Singh, (2008) 1 SCC 601: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 287: 2008 Cri LJ 364.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2007]

Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1994) 3 SCC 569: 1994 SCC (Cri) 899, relied on

[1578] — S. 162 — Confession made to police during investigation — Requirements for admissibility of, under S. 15(1), TADA, 1987 — Confessional statement of accused recorded in accordance with the requirements of S. 15 during investigation of a crime, if covers another crime involving the accused, held, it would be admissible and can be used in the case in which the other crime is under trial — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 25 and 24 — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987 — S. 15

Under Section 15 of TADA a confessional statement recorded in accordance with the requirements contained in the section becomes admissible in spite of the ban contained in Section 25 of the Evidence Act or Section 162 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The requirements stipulated in Section 15(1) of the TADA for admissibility of a confession made to a police officer are (1) the confession should have been made to a police officer not lower in rank than a Superintendent of Police (2) it should have been recorded by the said police officer (3) the trial should be against the maker of the confession (4) such trial must be for an offence under TADA or the Rules thereunder. If the above requirements are satisfied the confession becomes admissible in evidence and it is immaterial whether the confession was recorded in one particular case or in a different case.

When there is no statutory inhibition for using such confession on the premise that it was not recorded during the investigation of the particular offence which is under trial there is no need or reason for the Court to introduce a further fetter against the admissibility of the confessional statement. It often happens that a confessor would disclose very many acts and events including different facets of his involvement in the preparation, attempt and commission of crimes including the acts of his co-participators therein. But to expel every other incriminating disclosure than that under investigation of a particular crime from the ambit of admissibility is not mandated by any provision of law.

It must, therefore, be held that a confession, if usable under Section 15 of the TADA, would not become unusable merely because the case is different or the crime is different. If the confession covers that different crime it would be a relevant item of evidence in the case in which that crime is under trial and it would then become admissible in the case. State of Gujarat v. Mohd. Atik, (1998) 4 SCC 351: 1998 SCC (Cri) 936: AIR 1998 SC 1686: 1998 Cri LJ 2251.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-4-1998]

State of Rajasthan v. Bhup Singh, (1997) 10 SCC 675: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1032, applied

[1579] — Ss. 162 and 161 — Confessional statement — Whether voluntary — Determination of — Contention that statement recorded without granting proper time for reflection — Held, though desirable that sufficient time gap should be given to the declarant, in addition to telling him that the statement could be used in law against him, there is no rigid formula as to what would be an adequate time — It would depend upon circumstances of each case — On facts, time given was neither very long nor too short — No challenge to statement at any point of time — Also, not shown that accused was prejudiced by non-granting of longer time — Accused inculpated himself giving details which were within his personal and special knowledge — Held, no reason to discard the confessional statement and evidence of PW 4 who recorded it — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Rules, 1987, R. 15 — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987 — S. 15

Though it is desirable that sufficient time gap should be given to the declarant, in addition to telling him that the statement could be used in law against him, there is no rigid formula as to what would be an adequate time. It would depend upon the circumstances of each case. On the facts of the present case, the time though was not very long, yet cannot be said to be too short to cast doubt on the voluntariness of the statement. At no point of time there was any challenge made that the statement which was produced in the court in presence of the accused was not voluntary and/or was the result of coercion or undue influence or threat. In fact there was no denial of the fact that the statement was recorded. It has not been shown as to in what manner the accused has been prejudiced by non-granting of longer time. The statement recorded is very elaborate and the accused has inculpated himself with the details like the source of purchase of the articles which were within his personal and special knowledge. There is no reason to discard the evidence of PW 4, and the confessional statement. (Para 30). Durga Prasad Gupta v. State of Rajasthan, (2003) 12 SCC 257: (2004) 97 Cut LT 489.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-9-2003]

S.N. Dube v. N.B. Bhoir, (2000) 2 SCC 254: 2000 SCC (Cri) 343, followed

[1580] — Ss. 162 and 164 — Recording of confession under S. 15, TADA — Guidelines laid down by Bombay High Court for recording confession under S. 164 CrPC and/or principles of fairness laid down by Supreme Court in Kartar Singh case (1994) 3 SCC 569 — Failure to follow, while recording confession under S. 15, held, not fatal to such confession — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987 — S. 15(2)

It was submitted that though Section 164 CrPC does not strictly apply to confessions recorded under Section 15 of the TADA Act, the provisions contained in Section 15(2) of the TADA Act and Sections 162(2) and 164(4) CrPC are similar and that would imply that the requirements of law regarding the procedure for recording a confession are the same. Both the provisions require that before recording the confession the accused must be told that he is not bound to make a confession and that if he makes it then it can be used as evidence against him. Both these provisions require that before recording the confession the recording officer has to question the accused in order to satisfy himself that he is making the confession voluntarily and after recording it to issue a certificate and memorandum to the effect that the accused was explained about his right to be informed that he was not bound to make the confession and that it could be used against him, that he believed that the confession was made voluntarily, that it was taken down in his presence and was read over to him, that it was admitted as correct by him and that it contains a full and true account of the statement made by him. It was, therefore, submitted that the guidelines issued by the High Court for recording a confession under Section 164 CrPC are also required to be followed by the police officer recording a confession under the TADA Act. Otherwise a situation may arise where in the same trial there may be a confession of an accused recorded by a Magistrate without following the guidelines contained in the High Court Manual and a confession made by another accused and recorded by a police officer under the TADA Act who has not followed those guidelines while the one recorded by the Magistrate may not be recorded as evidence, the other one will be treated as evidence and can be used against him. In the alternative, it was submitted that even if it is held that the guidelines issued under Section 164 CrPC by the High Court are not required to be followed while recording a confession under Section 15 of the TADA Act at least the well-recognised principles pointed out by the Supreme Court in Kartar Singh case are required to be followed. The said guidelines have been suggested by the Supreme Court as well-recognised principles of fairness to be followed to ensure that the confession obtained in the pre-indictment interrogation by a police officer not lower in rank than a Superintendent of Police is not tainted with any vice.

Held :

While recommending those guidelines it was made clear by the Supreme Court that it is really for the court trying the offence to decide the question of admissibility or reliability of a confession by using its judicial wisdom. From what has been observed in the said decision it does not follow that if the suggested guidelines are not followed then the confession must be discarded as inadmissible or bad on that score or on the ground that it is not in conformity with Section 15(2) of the TADA Act and Rule 15 of the TADA Rules. The police officer recording a confession under Section 15 is really not bound to follow any other procedure. The rules or the guidelines framed by the Bombay High Court for recording a confession by a Magistrate under Section 164 CrPC do not by themselves apply to recording of a confession under Section 15 of the TADA Act. Therefore, merely because some of those guidelines were not followed while recording the confessions it cannot for that reason be held that the said confessions have lost their evidentiary value. If while recording the confessions the police officer had followed all those guidelines also then that would have been a circumstance helpful in inferring that the confessions were made after full understanding and voluntarily. In this case there is nothing on record to show, except that the confessions were recorded by the officer in the police station, that they were not recorded in a free atmosphere. No other person was allowed to remain present at that time and all the accused were given time to reconsider their willingness. After they were produced again the officer had ascertained whether they were still willing to make confessions. All the accused were previously told that they were not bound to make a confession. Each one of them was warned that if he made a confession then it could be used against him. Merely because the police officer while recording the confessions had told the accused persons that he was the Superintendent of Police, it cannot be said that he had stated so to impress the accused. He had done nothing wrong in disclosing his identity as he was really required to do so before recording the confessions. He had tried to ascertain if any threat or inducement was given to them or whether they were ill-treated or pressurised. All the accused had categorically stated that no such thing had happened. From the answers given by the accused it can be said that the officer had good reason to believe that the accused were making confessional statements voluntarily. In his evidence also he has stated so and nothing has been brought out in his cross-examination from which it can be said that he was not so satisfied or that he did not really believe that the confessions were made by the accused voluntarily. It was not even the case of the accused that they were not taken to the officer for recording their confessions. The only suggestion that was made in his cross-examination was that he had obtained those confessions after exerting influence, coercion and physical and mental torture. In the absence of any specific act suggested by the defence it is not possible to accept the belated allegation made by those accused that their confessions were obtained in that manner. (Paras 32, 26 and 33). S.N. Dube v. N.B. Bhoir, (2000) 2 SCC 254: 2000 SCC (Cri) 343: AIR 2000 SC 776: 2000 Cri LJ 830.

(4) Confession made in police custody under special statute (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-1-2000]

Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1994) 3 SCC 569: 1994 SCC (Cri) 899, explained

[1581] — Ss. 162 and 164 — Recording of confession by police officer under special statute — Procedure — Police Officer recording the confession neither giving any certificate in accordance with R. 15(3) TADA Rules, of his satisfaction or belief about the voluntariness of confessions after the same were recorded nor did he certify about his such satisfaction or belief while being examined as a witness — Held, such confessions cannot be used against the accused persons — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987 — S. 15(2) read with R. 15(3)(b) of TADA Rules. Sharafat Hussain Abdul Rahaman Shaikh v. State of Gujarat, (1996) 11 SCC 62: 1997 SCC (Cri) 48.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-11-1996]

Chandran v. State of T.N., (1978) 4 SCC 90: 1978 SCC (Cri) 528, followed

[1582] — Ss. 162 and 164 — Recording of confession by a police officer — Typewritten confession — Words "recorded in writing" in S. 15, TADA — Interpretation of — Held, wider meaning should be given so as to include typewriting — Confessional statement need not be recorded by the Superintendent of Police in his own handwriting — He can take the help of another person or an instrument like a typewriter — But he cannot leave the work of recording the confession to his subordinates — Confession must be recorded in his presence and hearing and under his direct control — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Rules, 1987, R. 15 — Words and phrases — 'Record in writing', 'typewriting' — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 3, 58, 65, 73, 91 to 93, 99 and 144 — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Rules, 1987 — S. 15

The expression "record in writing" in Section 15 has a wider meaning. It would include writing down by one's own hand and also writing by other means. Unless the context so requires it would not be proper to give that expression a narrow meaning. In Section 15 the words "recorded in writing" are used to indicate a mode or form of recording the confession. Though the nature of the provision would justify strict compliance with each of the conditions mentioned therein there is no compelling reason to give a narrow interpretation to those words. Though Superintendent of Police must himself explain to the person making the confession that he is not bound to make a confession and that it may be used as evidence against him if he makes it and though he has himself to question the person making it to form a reasonable belief that he is making it voluntarily, it was not intended by the legislature that the Superintendent of Police should himself write down the confession without taking any help of another person or an instrument like a typewriter. What appears to have been intended by the legislature is that the Superintendent of Police should not leave the work of recording the confession to any of his subordinates and that everything in connection with the confession should be done in his presence and hearing and under his direct supervision and control. Therefore, there is no justification for interpreting the words "recorded by such police officer in writing" to mean recorded by such police officer in his own handwriting. There is no reason why a Superintendent of Police who, for some reason, is unable to write down the confession, cannot take help of another person for writing the same. Why cannot a Superintendent of Police, whose handwriting is not good, record the confession by using a typewriter? Typewriting is also writing. A typewritten thing is also a writing prepared with the help of a typewriter. In the instant case the Sessions Judge erred in treating the confessions as inadmissible on the ground that they were not recorded in accordance with the requirement of Section 15. State of T.N. v. Sivarasan, (1997) 1 SCC 682: 1997 SCC (Cri) 362.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-10-1996]

State v. S.J. Choudhary, (1996) 2 SCC 428: 1996 SCC (Cri) 336, relied on [1583] — Ss. 162 and 164 — Confession of accused — Voluntary nature of — Determination of — Retraction at later stage — Effect of — Held, merely because the confession was retracted later, that does not mean that the confession was not voluntary in nature — Whether the accused was willing to give confession voluntarily or not is to be determined from his mental state at the time when he gave the confession — In the present case, confession of accused recorded by Dy. Commissioner of Police (DCP) under TADA Act — Accused had expressed his willingness to make the confession — DCP took all precautions to ascertain that the confession was voluntary — Confession recorded after complying with all procedural formalities and these facts incorporated in confessional statement — Before the Magistrate, accused had no case that he was put under pressure or third-degree methods had been used against him to extract confession — In view of the said facts, held, the above confession was voluntary, truthful and admissible in evidence — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987 — S. 15 — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 24

Merely because the confession was retracted later, that does not mean that the confession was not voluntary in nature. All confessions are invariably retracted at a later stage, therefore, the retraction by itself is not a ground to discard the confession by holding that it was not voluntarily made. Whether the accused was willing to give a confession voluntarily or not is to be determined from his mental state at the time when he gave the confession. (Paras 13 and 8)

In the present case, the accused was arrested by the police and as he expressed his willingness to make a confession, he was produced before the DCP and told that he was not legally bound to give a voluntary statement and that in case any statement is found to be false, it would be used against him. The DCP had taken all precautions to ascertain that the confession was voluntary. All formalities had been complied with and these facts are incorporated in the confessional statement. There is nothing on record to show that the accused was under pressure to give any confession. When he was produced before the Magistrate, he had no case that he was put under pressure or third-degree methods had been used against him to extract the confession. When he was questioned under Section 313 CrPC, he had only stated that he had not given any confession as recorded by DCP. The facts indicate that the confession was voluntary and was recorded by DCP after apprising him that he was not bound to give a confession and in case he gave the confession, it would be used against him. Therefore, there is no force in the contention of the accused-appellants regarding the inadmissibility of the confession. There is ample evidence to show that the confession was truthful and gained support from other items of evidence. (Paras 8 and 13). Abdulvahab Abdulmajid Shaikh v. State of Gujarat, (2007) 4 SCC 257: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 276: (2007) 55 AIC 204 (SC): (2007) 3 Guj LR 1841.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-4-2007]

[1584] — Ss. 162 and 164 — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Rules, 1987 — R. 15 — Recording of confession — Infirmity in — Confession not shown to be voluntary in nature — Nor the police officer who recorded the confession certifying that he believed the confession to have been voluntarily recorded — Held, confession so recorded not admissible in evidence — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 25 — Constitution of India — Art. 20(3) — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987 — S. 15

(5) Effect of taking signatures of witnesses

In the instant case the confession made by the accused-appellants does not indicate that the same was voluntary in nature and the police officer who recorded the same has not certified that he believed that the confession was voluntarily made. If there is no certificate by the police officer who is recording confession, in accordance with sub-rule (3)(b) of Rule 15 of the TADA Rules, 1987, the same is not admissible in evidence. (Para 15)

Section 15 of the TADA Act altered the fundamental rules of evidence given in the Evidence Act, which stood the test of time for over a century. Under Section 25 of the Evidence Act, a confession made to a police officer by a person accused of an offence shall not be proved against him. The power to record judicial confession is given to the Magistrate and strict and rigorous guidelines have been laid down in Section 164 CrPC. That apart, many High Courts also have framed rules giving detailed procedure for recording confession. Confession is an admission of guilt. Normally, nobody would like to admit his guilt as he is fully aware that the same would be used against him. That apart, there is constitutional right for the accused that he shall not be subjected to any "testimonial compulsion". Under Article 20(3) of the Constitution, the accused person has a protection from being compelled to be a witness against himself. As the confession made under Section 15 of the TADA Act is made admissible in evidence, the strict procedure laid down therein for recording confession is to be followed. Any confession made in defiance of these safeguards cannot be accepted by the court as reliable evidence. The confession should appear to have been made voluntarily and the police officer who records the confession should satisfy himself that the same had been made voluntarily by the maker of that statement. The recorded confession must indicate that these safeguards have been fully complied with. In this case, the recorded confession statements do not show that the officer who recorded the statement had followed those guidelines. Therefore, it is inadmissible in evidence. (Para 18). Ayyub v. State of U.P., (2002) 3 SCC 510: 2002 SCC (Cri) 673: AIR 2002 SC 1192.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.P. Sethi and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-2-2002]

Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1994) 3 SCC 569: 1994 SCC (Cri) 899; Sharafat Hussain Abdul Rahaman Shaikh v. State of Gujarat, (1996) 11 SCC 62: 1997 SCC (Cri) 48, relied on

(5) Effect of taking signatures of witnesses

[1585] — S. 162 — Taking of signatures of witnesses on their statements by police despite ban under S. 162 held does not invariably lead to inference that the witnesses were not considered reliable by the police — It is a question of fact to be determined in the light of circumstances of each case — Where three witnesses were the mother, sister and son of the deceased who were otherwise considered to be reliable, held, there was no question of the police taking their signatures in order to make them stick to their statements. Gurnam Kaur v. Bakshish Singh, 1980 Supp SCC 567: 1981 SCC (Cri) 496: AIR 1981 SC 631: 1981 Cri LJ 34.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-10-1980]

[1586] — S. 162 — Police Inspector during investigation getting statement signed by the maker contrary to S. 162, CrPC — Held, not substantive evidence — Can be used to corroborate or contradict the maker at the trial — Cannot be used for corroborating testimony of other witnesses — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 157. Razik Ram v. Jaswant Singh Chouhan, (1975) 4 SCC 769: AIR 1975 SC 667.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A. Alagiriswami and R.S. Sarkaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-2-1975]

[1587] — S. 162 — Bar on signature of disclosure by accused under — Effect of contravention of — Information in disclosure statement signed by accused in contravention of S. 162, CrPC — Effect on admissibility of such information, otherwise admissible under S. 27 — Held, fact of signature does not detract from admissibility of disclosure statement to the extent it is relevant under S. 27 — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 27

By virtue of the embargo in Section 162(1) CrPC, the disclosure statement is not required to be signed. However the fact that the signature of the accused Afzal was obtained on the disclosure statement does not, however, detract from its admissibility to the extent it is relevant under Section 27. (Para 207). State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715: 2005 Cri LJ 3950: (2005) 122 DLT 194.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2005]

[1588] — S. 162 — Obtaining signature on the statement recorded by police would not render the evidence inadmissible — But court must evaluate the evidence more carefully in such case

Section 162, CrPC does not provide that evidence of a witness given in the court becomes inadmissible if it is found that the statement of the witness recorded in course of the investigation was signed by the witness at the instance of the investigating officer. It merely puts the court on caution and may necessitate in-depth scrutiny of the evidence. State of U.P. v. M.K. Anthony, (1985) 1 SCC 505: 1985 SCC (Cri) 105: AIR 1985 SC 48: 1985 Cri LJ 493.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.A. Desai and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-11-1984]

[1589] — S. 162 — Signed statements of alleged eyewitnesses annexed to the inquest report — Held, can be a device to get around the bar of S. 162. Datar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1975) 4 SCC 272: 1975 SCC (Cri) 530: AIR 1974 SC 1193: 1974 Cri LJ 908: (1974) 11 ACC 262.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.H. Beg and Y.V. Chandrachud, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-12-1973]

[1590] — Ss. 162(1) and (2) — Prohibition of taking of signature of person whose statement reduced to writing — Contravention of — Effect — Held, merely because a statement is recorded by a police personnel and the thumb impression of the deceased was affixed it cannot straightaway be rejected (Para 11). State of Rajasthan v. Wakteng, (2007) 14 SCC 550: AIR 2007 SC 2020.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-6-2007]

State of Rajasthan v. Teja Ram, (1999) 3 SCC 507: 1999 SCC (Cri) 436; Razik Ram v. Jaswant Singh Chouhan, (1975) 4 SCC 769; Tahsildar Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1959 SC 1012, relied on

[1591] — Ss. 162(1) and (2) — Prohibition of taking of signature of person whose statement reduced to writing — Contravention of — Effect — Recovery of axe pursuant to statement made by the accused under S. 27, Evidence Act — Obtaining signature of accused on seizure memo — Held, does not vitiate the seizure or testimony of such witness in court — That apart, S. 162(1) does not as per S. 162(2) apply to proceedings made as per S. 27 of Evidence Act — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 27 — Non-application of S. 162, CrPC

Section 162(1) prohibits collecting of signature of the person whose statement was reduced to writing during interrogation. No doubt the aforesaid prohibition is in peremptory terms. It is more a direction to the investigating officer than to the court because the policy underlying the rule is to keep witnesses free to testify in court unhampered by anything which the police claim to have elicited from them. But if any investigating officer, ignorant of the said provision, secures the signature of the person concerned in the statement, it does not mean that the witness's testimony in the court would thereby become contaminated or vitiated. The court will only reassure the witness that he is not bound by such statement albeit his signature finding a place thereon.

That apart, the prohibition contained in sub-section (1) of Section 162 is not applicable to any proceedings made as per Section 27 of the Evidence Act, 1872. It is clearly so provided in sub-section (2) of Section 162.

The resultant position is that the investigating officer is not obliged to obtain the signature of an accused in any statement attributed to him while preparing seizure-memo for the recovery of any article covered by Section 27 of the Evidence Act. But if any signature has been obtained by an investigating officer, there is nothing wrong or illegal about it. State of Rajasthan v. Teja Ram, (1999) 3 SCC 507: 1999 SCC (Cri) 436: AIR 1999 SC 1777.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-3-1999]

Tahsildar Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1959 SC 1012: 1959 Cri LJ 1231; Razik Ram v. Jaswant Singh Chouhan, (1975) 4 SCC 769: AIR 1975 SC 667, relied on

(6) Omissions/Exaggerations/Embellishments/Contradictions/Inconsistencies of S. 161 statement vis-à-vis evidence/FIR

[1592] — Ss. 161 and 162(1) & Expln. — Omission in statement under S. 161 whether amounted to contradiction — Determination of — Context under which the statement was made, held, material — Hence, in a case under Ss. 302/34, IPC when the statement related only to the incident of the actual attack by the assailants of the deceased and not to the eyewitnesses thereto, omission in the statement of one of the two eyewitnesses to mention the name of the other as an eyewitness, held, did not amount to contradiction — Even otherwise, such omission could not justify an inference of absence of the other accused — In view of the evidence of eyewitnesses, corroborating each other and also corroborated by promptly lodged FIR and medical evidence, acquittal set aside and the accused convicted under Ss. 302/34, IPC — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/34. S. Kaur v. Baldev Singh, (1997) 11 SCC 292: 1998 SCC (Cri) 161: AIR 1999 SC 1581.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and B.N. Kirpal, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-1997]

(6) Omissions/Exaggerations/Embellishments/Contradictions/Inconsistencies of S. 161 statement vis-à-vis evidence/FIR (contd.)

[1593] — Ss. 161 and 162 Expln. — Failure of PWs to mention in statement under S. 161 about involvement of accused — Held, their versions not reliable insofar as they relate to the involvement of that accused (Para 16). Rudrappa Ramappa Jainpur v. State of Karnataka, (2004) 7 SCC 422: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1954: AIR 2004 SC 4148.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-8-2004]

[1594] — S. 161 — Contradictions and improvements — Witness stating that he had gone to the spot on hearing the sound of a gunshot and tried to snatch away the gun from the accused — But in his police statement he not stating anything regarding snatching of the gun — Held, this omission amounts to contradiction creating a serious doubt about the truthfulness of the witness — Another witness also making material improvement before the court in order to make his evidence acceptable — Medical evidence also belying the version given by the eyewitnesses regarding injuries caused to the deceased by gunshots — Acquittal upheld. State of Rajasthan v. Rajendra Singh, 1998 SCC (Cri) 1605: AIR 1998 SC 2554.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-7-1998]

[1595] — S. 161 — Minor contradictions between evidence before court and statement recorded under S. 161, CrPC — Not sufficient to discard the evidence — Eyewitness stating that deceased fell on a gunny bag after being attacked — The fact that blood stains were found also on the ground, not a reason to discredit the witness — Considering the weapons used and the number and nature of injuries inflicted it could legitimately inferred that blood spurted out to an area beyond the gunny bag on which the deceased fell. Pandappa Hanumappa Hanamar v. State of Karnataka, (1997) 10 SCC 197: 1997 SCC (Cri) 811: AIR 1997 SC 3663: 1997 Cri LJ 2493.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-2-1997]

[1596] — S. 161 — High Court rejecting evidence of PWs 9, 10 and 11 on the ground of contradictions — But contradictions pointed out insignificant and minor — Further the said witnesses not shown their case diary statements recorded under S. 161, CrPC from which they were sought to be contradicted — Nor the said contradictions exhibited and placed on record — Held, the High Court erred in rejecting their evidence and setting aside the conviction for murder imposed by the trial court on A-1 and A-2 — Accordingly order of trial court convicting A-1 and A-2 under S. 302 IPC restored — However, death sentence imposed on A-1 commuted to life imprisonment and the sentence of life imprisonment imposed on A-2 confirmed — As regards A-3 his acquittal by the High Court was well founded, in the absence of any cogent evidence against him — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302. Mahendra Rai v. Mithilesh Rai, (1997) 10 SCC 605: 1997 SCC (Cri) 899.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-12-1996]

[1597] — Ss. 161 and 162 Expln. — Omission to state a fact or circumstance — An omission in order to be significant must depend upon whether the specific question, the answer to which was omitted, was put to the witness — Where investigating officer was not asked as to whether he had put questions to the eyewitness regarding details of the injuries inflicted or of persons who had caused the injuries, held, omission of such details in the testimony of the eyewitness would not render his/her testimony unreliable particularly when the courts below believed the testimony of that witness and that the omissions were not contradictions in the peculiar context (Paras 47 to 51). Jaswant Singh v. State of Haryana, (2000) 4 SCC 484: 2000 SCC (Cri) 991: AIR 2000 SC 1833: 2000 Cri LJ 2212.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Wadhwa and Ruma Pal, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-4-2000]

[1598] — Ss. 161 and 164 — Successive statements made under — Improvements made in statements under Ss. 161 and 164 subsequent to the initial statement under S. 161 (made after 25 days of the incident) — Held on facts, subsequent statements unreliable — Such statements may raise inference that maker of the statements was himself a party to conspiracy — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 120-A

Per Oza, J.

Delays in making statement under S. 161 is said to be dangerous and if a person who is an important witness does not open his mouth for a long time his evidence is always looked upon with suspicion. Where a witness who after 25 days gave his first statement and said nothing against the present accused and even waited for one more month and then he suddenly chose to come out with the allegations against this accused, he cannot be relied upon. There was no explanation why he should keep on giving statement after statement, that too after 25 days of the incident. It clearly shows that he was a convenient witness available to State. That he appears to have become wiser day by day and remembered bit by bit, is certainly interesting to note. The only other inference is that this witness was himself a party to that conspiracy.

But delay in recording statement of a witness can be justified in case of death of his or her near and dear one as a result of the incident. In this case the incident of assassination in which one of the accused (Beant Singh) had also died took place on October 31, 1984 and the statement of the widow of the deceased-assassin was recorded on January 16 and 19, 1985. But as she was placed in a situation where it would have been very difficult for her to compose herself in a manner in which she could give her statement immediately, the delay in her case was justified.

Per Shetty, J. (concurring)

As regards the first witness, the discrepancies between his first version and the evidence in court are substantial and on material points. As regards the second witness viz. widow of the deceased Beant Singh, though police had not recorded her statement immediately, but as she had lost her husband and was in immeasurable grief, she had been allowed time to compose herself. Kehar Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1988) 3 SCC 609: 1988 SCC (Cri) 711: AIR 1988 SC 1883.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.L. Oza[1], B.C. Ray[2] and K. Jagannatha Shetty[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 3-8-1988]

[Ed.: Ray, J. concurred with the above views of Oza, J. and Shetty, J.]

[1599] — Ss. 161, 154 and 164 — Corroboration of prosecutrix's evidence — Sufficiency of — Conviction confirmed — Medical corroboration, when not mandatory — Lacunae in prosecution case when not material — Rape of minor aged 12 years — Lacunae in prosecution that: (1) prosecutrix initially turning hostile, (2) doctor examining prosecutrix was not examined (meaning prosecution story not being corroborated by medical examination), and (3) examination report of doctor reporting that hymen of prosecutrix was intact — On the other hand prosecutrix though initially turning hostile giving credible and consistent statement in FIR, in S. 161 CrPC statement, before medical officer and in S. 164 CrPC statement — PW 3, IO catching the accused red-handed during rape and also recovering autorickshaw in which prosecutrix was kidnapped the same day, thereby fully corroborating statement of PW 1 (prosecutrix) — PW 3 having no past enmity with accused — Prosecutrix categorically deposing that appellant-accused removed her underwear, laid on her, put his male organ into her private part and was moving up and down — According to prosecutrix, accused committed "bad act" with her — Effect — On facts, held, offence of rape has been proved from all angles, despite the hymen being found intact. Wahid Khan v. State of M.P., (2010) 2 SCC 9.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Panchal and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-12-2009]

[1600] — Ss. 161, 162, 374 and 386(b) — Improvements in Court deposition vis-à-vis statement recorded under S. 161 — Effect — Trial court, by placing reliance on the evidence of PW 1 (mother of the deceased), convicting respondent-accused under S. 302 for allegedly committing murder of his wife — High Court recording acquittal of respondent-accused — Sustainability — Held, there were many improvements in evidence of PW 1 i.e. what she had made during investigation when compared with that recorded in court — Moreover, there was no effort made to match blood group of deceased with blood found on MO 1 (murder weapon) — Hence, acquittal justified (Paras 12 and 13). State of A.P. v. V.V. Panduranga Rao, (2009) 15 SCC 211: 2009 Cri LJ 2972: (2009) 2 APLJ 171 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-5-2009]

Ramsinh Bavaji Jadeja v. State of Gujarat, (1994) 2 SCC 685, relied on [1601] — Ss. 161 and 313 — Conviction justified — Improvements — Although several improvements made by three primary witnesses (PWs 5 to 7), but they had absolutely no reason to involve appellant in a false case, as admittedly he was a stranger to the locality and they bore him no ill will — No explanation by appellant in S. 313 CrPC statement what he was doing in the locality where he committed rape and murder — On the contrary, he admitted his presence by stating that he was caught by neighbours on suspicion of murder and beaten up, and had suffered several injuries in the process (Paras 11 to 19). Sebastian v. State of Kerala, (2010) 1 SCC 58.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-10-2009]

(6) Omissions/Exaggerations/Embellishments/Contradictions/Inconsistencies of S. 161 statement vis-à-vis evidence/FIR (contd.)

[1602] — Ss. 162 & 161 and 154 — Irrelevancy of statements made before police but not proved in court — PWs 1 and 3 not examined in court — PW 7 IO filing FIR — FIR not mentioning about the statements of PWs 1 and 3 — Effect — Held, FIR is hit by S. 162 CrPC — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987, S. 3(2)(i)

It is clear from the statement of PW 7 that investigation in the case had already commenced and once investigation commences, the FIR is hit by Section 162 CrPC and no value can be attached to the same. PW 7, who was initially investigating the case, recorded the statements of PWs 1 and 3. But they were not examined in court. PW 7 in his cross-examination deposed that in the FIR filed by him, he did not specifically mention the involvement of the appellant nor did he mention anything about the statement of PW 3. (Paras 17 and 16). Ganesh Gogoi v. State of Assam, (2009) 7 SCC 404: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 421: (2009) 80 AIC 267 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-7-2009]

[1603] — S. 161 — Statement of PW recorded in police station under S. 161 and deposition made by him before trial court — Some variation between — Held, that would not result in rejection of the entire evidence — Portion of evidence in favour of prosecution or accused can be accepted after a close scrutiny

In this case, there was some variation in the statements of the PW recorded under Section 161 CrPC in the police station and that made by him in the witness box. It was submitted that the statement recorded under Section 161 should be preferred to the other evidence available from the PW.

Held :

It is now well settled that in the event of a portion of evidence not being consistent with the statements given under Section 161 and the witness stands declared hostile, that does not, however, mean and imply total rejection of the evidence. The portion which stands in favour of the prosecution or the accused may be accepted but the same shall be subjected to close scrutiny. (Para 19). Gurpreet Singh v. State of Haryana, (2002) 8 SCC 18: AIR 2002 SC 3217.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and Y.K. Sabharwal, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-9-2002]

State of U.P. v. Ramesh Prasad Misra, (1996) 10 SCC 360: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1278, relied on

[1604] — S. 161 — Statement of witness recorded by police — Improvement in statement while testifying before court — When unreliable — Rules relating to — Restated — Nature of contradiction — Material or minor — Held, court has to judge whether contradiction/omission is of such a magnitude that it materially affects trial — Minor contradictions, inconsistencies, embellishments or improvements on trivial matters which do not affect core of prosecution case, cannot be a ground to reject evidence entirely — Marginal variation between statement made to police and evidence given in court, held, need not necessarily be improvement in real sense — Such variation may in fact be elaboration of statement made earlier by witness — The omission which in effect amounts to contradiction in material particulars and goes to root of the case, renders the evidence unreliable — On facts held, testimony of a doctor who improved his statement while giving evidence in court involved material contradictions and inconsistencies and hence was not reliable

While appreciating the evidence, the court has to take into consideration whether the contradictions/omissions had been of such magnitude that they may materially affect the trial. Minor contradictions, inconsistencies, embellishments or improvements on trivial matters without effecting the core of the prosecution case should not be made a ground to reject the evidence in its entirety. The trial court, after going through the entire evidence, must form an opinion about the credibility of the witnesses and the appellate court in normal course would not be justified in reviewing the same again without justifiable reasons. (Para 30)

Where the omission(s) amount to a contradiction, creating a serious doubt about the truthfulness of a witness and other witness also makes material improvements before the court in order to make the evidence acceptable, it cannot be safe to rely upon such evidence. (Para 31)

The discrepancies in the evidence of eyewitnesses, if found to be not minor in nature, may be a ground for disbelieving and discrediting their evidence. In such circumstances, witnesses may not inspire confidence and if their evidence is found to be in conflict and contradiction with other evidence or with the statement already recorded, in such a case it cannot be held that the prosecution proved its case beyond reasonable doubt. (Para 32)

In case the complainant in the FIR or the witness in his statement under Section 161 CrPC, has not disclosed certain facts but meets the prosecution case first time before the court, such version lacks credence and is liable to be discarded. (Para 33)

The courts have to label the category to which a discrepancy belongs. While normal discrepancies do not corrode the credibility of a party's case, material discrepancies do so. (Paras 6 and 7)

While deciding such a case, the court has to apply the aforesaid tests. Mere marginal variations in the statements cannot be dubbed as improvements as the same may be elaborations of the statement made by the witness earlier. The omissions which amount to contradictions in material particulars i.e. go to the root of the case/materially affect the trial or core of the prosecution case, render the testimony of the witness liable to be discredited. (Para 37)

There had been a lot of improvements and contradictions in the third doctor, PW 10's statements. The witness deposed for the first time in the court during the trial, that when he went to examine the deceased, she was found in an unkept room/storeroom and that he was introduced to the deceased as a Psychiatrist and that the deceased had asked him whether he treated his wife in the same way as she had been treated by her husband. None of this was mentioned in his statement recorded by the police. Nor had it been recorded therein that the deceased had told him that she was harassed by the appellants and her ornaments were taken away/worn by her mother-in-law (A-3). More so, he had not stated in his police statement that the deceased was merely mentally disturbed and not suffering from a gross psychological problem. Nor had he stated therein that the deceased had told him that she was not having any faith in any of her family members and she was deprived of their love, affection and sympathy. Such contradictions in his statements cannot be held to be mere explanations or elaborations of his version, but are tantamount to material contradictions or vital omissions. (Para 44)

The rules of appreciation of evidence require that the court should not draw conclusions by picking up an isolated sentence of a witness without adverting to the statement as a whole. In such a fact situation, it is not safe to rely on his testimony for the simple reason that he had made a lot of improvements/embellishments while deposing in court and vital contradictions exist with his earlier recorded statement. Thus, no reliance can be placed on his depositions to hold that the appellants had ill-treated the deceased or that Appellant 3 had taken away/worn her ornaments or that she had been deprived of their love and affection or that she was not suffering from epilepsy, etc. (Para 45). Sunil Kumar Sambhudayal Gupta (Dr.) v. State of Maharashtra, (2010) 13 SCC 657.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-11-2010]

State v. Saravanan, (2008) 17 SCC 587: (2010) 4 SCC (Cri) 580; State of Rajasthan v. Rajendra Singh, (2009) 11 SCC 106: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1605; Mahendra Pratap Singh v. State of U.P., (2009) 11 SCC 334: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1352; State v. Sait, (2008) 15 SCC 440: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1037; State of Rajasthan v. Kalki, (1981) 2 SCC 752: 1981 SCC (Cri) 593; Syed Ibrahim v. State of A.P., (2006) 10 SCC 601: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 34; Arumugam v. State, (2008) 15 SCC 590: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1130; Bihari Nath Goswami v. Shiv Kumar Singh, (2004) 9 SCC 186: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1435, relied on

[1605] — S. 161 — Variations in testimony from statement under — Effect — Improvement in the version of PW — Marginal variations on certain aspects as between his statement recorded under S. 161 CrPC and the testimony given in court, cannot be said to be improvements made with any sinister motive

The marginal variations between the statement of the prosecution witness recorded under Section 161 CrPC and the testimony given in court, cannot be dubbed as improvements made with any sinister motive. They are elaborations elicited by the Public Prosecutor during the examination-in-chief. It is the prerogative of the Public Prosecutor to elicit such points from a witness as he deems necessary for the case. No Public Prosecutor can be nailed to the statement recorded under Section 161 of the Code. (Para 6). Chandrasekhar Sureshchandra Bhatt v. State of Maharashtra, (2000) 10 SCC 582: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1504.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-3-2000]

[1606] — S. 161 — Witness not stating a particular fact to the police in the course of investigation — Prosecution seeking to prove the said fact through that witness — Evidence of that witness regarding the said fact held to be of no significance (Para 16). Vimal Suresh Kamble v. Chaluverapinake Apal S.P., (2003) 3 SCC 175: 2003 SCC (Cri) 596: AIR 2003 SC 818: 2003 Cri LJ 910.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-1-2003]

[1607] — S. 161 — Enquiry — Non-examination of informant — Effect — Appellants, accused of selling drugs, nabbed while talking to informant — No contraband found in their possession — Prosecution accepting that no deal had taken place — Informant not questioned — Officer had also not heard any conversation — Held, accused persons and informant were only talking amongst themselves — Hence conversation unsustainable — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985, S. 67 (Para 17). Raju Premji v. Customs, NER, Shillong Unit, (2009) 16 SCC 496.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

Kanhaiyalal v. Union of India, (2008) 4 SCC 668: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 474, followed

(6) Omissions/Exaggerations/Embellishments/Contradictions/Inconsistencies of S. 161 statement vis-à-vis evidence/FIR (contd.)

[1608] — Ss. 161 and 207 — Copy of statement of witness made under S. 161 furnished to the accused in compliance with S. 207 — Omissions in it with regard to role played by some of the accused — No such omissions found in original statement recorded by the IO under S. 161 and brought to the notice of the Court by him in his evidence — Held, if the statement of the IO is believed then the accused cannot take advantage of the omissions in copy of the statement furnished to him — But if the copy of report as furnished to the accused is correct one then the defence was legitimately entitled to bring those material omissions on record and rely upon the same. Golla Jalla Reddy v. State of A.P., (1996) 8 SCC 565: 1996 SCC (Cri) 713: AIR 1996 SC 3244.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-4-1996]

[1609] — S. 161 — Practice of allowing public prosecutor to explain omissions or contradictions in disposition of witness with reference to his statement under S. 161 — Held, such concession for proof of contradictions or omission lacks support of law. Muthu Naicker v. State of T.N., (1978) 4 SCC 385: 1979 SCC (Cri) 14: AIR 1978 SC 1647: 1978 Cri LJ 1713: (1979) 1 MLJ 10 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Shinghal and D.A. Desai, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-8-1978]

[1610] — S. 161 — Discrepancy or variance — Effect — Discrepancy and contradiction — Distinguished — Whether a particular discrepancy is a minor one or one amounting to contradiction — Test to determine, stated — Minor discrepancy or variance in evidence, held, does not make the prosecution's case doubtful — It may rather lend credential to the deposition — Where the prosecutrix, subjected to rape, stated the place of occurrence to be 20 feet away from the road but the FIR lodged by an advocate, after hearing the narration of the prosecutrix (whom he had found then to be scared, nervous and hesitant) mentioned the road as the place of occurrence, held, there was no major discrepancy amounting to contradiction under the circumstances of the case — More so when in her statement under S. 161 CrPC the prosecutrix had stated that the accused persons had taken her to a place 20 feet away from the road — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 376

The prosecutrix, a 55-year-old widow who was the mother of two grown-up children, was while coming back to her house after attending the marriage of a relation, criminally assaulted and subjected to forcible intercourse by the respondents. The first information report was submitted by her on the next day against the respondents. She was medically examined and her torn salwar was sent for chemical analysis. On medical examination various injuries were found on her person. The doctor was of the opinion that they reflected the signs of a struggle. The trial court convicted the accused persons under Sections 376(2)(g) and 323 IPC and sentenced them to undergo rigorous imprisonment for five years and to pay a fine of Rs 5000 each under Section 376 IPC and six months' rigorous imprisonment under Section 323 with a fine of Rs 500 each. The High Court reversed that decision. It acquitted Respondent 2 on the ground that his identity could not be established by the prosecution at the trial. It further held that the case against Respondent 1 was not proved beyond doubt as the medical evidence and the finding showed that no dead or alive spermatozoa was seen. Another circumstance which weighed with the High Court was that the sealing of the salwar was not properly established. Moreover, before the Supreme Court the respondent attempted to point out some discrepancies in the statement of the prosecutrix and other witnesses for discrediting the prosecution version. One of such discrepancies was that the prosecutrix had stated the place of occurrence to be 20 feet away from the road while in the FIR the place of occurrence was mentioned as the road. Upholding the acquittal of Respondent 2 but setting aside the acquittal of Respondent 1 and restoring his conviction by the trial court,

Held :

Discrepancy has to be distinguished from contradiction. Whereas contradiction in the statement of the witness is fatal for the case, minor discrepancy or variance in evidence will not make the prosecution's case doubtful. The normal course of the human conduct would be that while narrating a particular incident there may occur minor discrepancies, such discrepancies in law may render credential to the depositions. Parrot-like statements are disfavoured by the courts. In order to ascertain as to whether the discrepancy pointed out was minor or not or the same amounted to contradiction, regard is required to be had to the circumstances of the case by keeping in view the social status of the witnesses and environment in which such witness was making the statement. (Para 7)

The prosecutrix has categorically stated that she was dragged from the road down the path which was about 20 feet away from the road and raped there. The discrepancy or contradiction pointed out is that in the FIR which was submitted in writing and was in the English language, the place of occurrence was mentioned as road. Such mention was based upon recording of the complaint by an advocate after hearing the narration of the prosecutrix whom he found at that time to be scared, nervous and hesitant. Such a discrepancy cannot be held to be a major discrepancy amounting to contradiction under the circumstances of this case. It is not disputed that the statement of the prosecutrix under Section 161 CrPC was recorded immediately and in that statement she had not alleged to have stated that the occurrence had taken place on the road and not away from the road. (Para 9). State of H.P. v. Lekh Raj, (2000) 1 SCC 247: 2000 SCC (Cri) 147: AIR 1999 SC 3916: 2000 Cri LJ 44.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-11-1999]

Ousu Varghese v. State of Kerala, (1974) 3 SCC 767: 1974 SCC (Cri) 243; Jagdish v. State of M.P., 1981 Supp SCC 40: 1981 SCC (Cri) 676; State of Rajasthan v. Kalki, (1981) 2 SCC 752: 1981 SCC (Cri) 593; Leela Ram v. State of Haryana, (1999) 9 SCC 525, relied on [1611] — S. 161 — Contradictions and improvements — When material — Acquittal upheld — Witness stating that he had gone to the spot on hearing the sound of a gunshot and tried to snatch away the gun from the accused — But in his police statement he not stating anything regarding snatching of the gun — Held, this omission amounts to contradiction creating a serious doubt about the truthfulness of the witness — Another witness also making material improvement before the court in order to make his evidence acceptable — Medical evidence also belying the version given by the eyewitnesses regarding injuries caused to the deceased by gunshots — Acquittal upheld (Para 7). State of Rajasthan v. Rajendra Singh, (2009) 11 SCC 106.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-7-1998]

Distinguished on facts in Hari v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 11 SCC 96 at p. 105

[1612] — Ss. 161 and 162 — Material contradictions — PWs 2 and 10, father and brother of deceased, claimed that oral dying declarations made to them by deceased — This significant fact had been omitted in their statements under S. 161 CrPC — No explanation for omission — Held, if a significant omission is made in statement of a witness recorded under S. 161 CrPC, same may amount to a contradiction — Whether it so amounts is a question of fact in each case — Statements of PWs 2 and 10, inspire no confidence — Possibility that deceased had been burnt in an accident cannot be ruled out — Conviction of appellant set aside (Paras 15 to 17). Subhash v. State of Haryana, (2011) 2 SCC 715.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-12-2010]

[1613] — S. 161 — Belated disclosure of name of another witness at the stage of statement under — Held on facts, does not amount to such an infirmity or improvement as would make the testimony of the eyewitness wholly or even partly untrue. Public Prosecutor, Govt. of A.P. v. Boya Jaggapuram Venkateswarlu, 1980 Supp SCC 480: 1981 SCC (Cri) 444: AIR 1980 SC 1876: 1980 Cri LJ 1301.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-1980]

[1614] — S. 161 — A relevant fact not mentioned in statement under S. 161 but stated before court by PW — Held, that would not be a ground for rejecting the evidence of PW on that aspect if his evidence is otherwise creditworthy and acceptable — Omission on the part of police official would not take away nature and character of the evidence (Para 12). Alamgir v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2003) 1 SCC 21: AIR 2003 SC 282.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-11-2002]

[1615] — Ss. 161 and 174 — Fact stated in statement under omitted in inquest — Effect — Appellant and co-accused M seen by PW 3 fleeing from near the place where dead body of deceased was found and hurriedly entering house of appellant's sister DW 1 — No major contradiction and/or omission, or any false claim/exaggeration found in PW 3's deposition to impeach his credibility — Fact that PW 3 maintained silence as to factum of seeing accused flee, at time of inquest inconsequential, because appropriate time therefor was during his examination under S. 161 CrPC by IO (Paras 19 to 30, 32 to 38, 45, 46, 48 to 51, 56 and 57). Aftab Ahmad Anasari v. State of Uttaranchal, (2010) 2 SCC 583.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Panchal and T.S. Thakur, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-1-2010]

[1616] — S. 161 — PW stating that appellant came to his house and he agreed to place his demand for additional dowry before the parents of the wife and that he did go to the parents — Omission of these facts in statement under S. 161, CrPC — Effect — Held, even if the omission amounted to material contradiction, still it did not impair his unrebutted evidence that the appellant came to his house with the demand for additional dowry. Rajayyan v. State of Kerala, (1998) 4 SCC 85: 1998 SCC (Cri) 811: AIR 1998 SC 1211: 1998 Cri LJ 1633.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-1998]

(6) Omissions/Exaggerations/Embellishments/Contradictions/Inconsistencies of S. 161 statement vis-à-vis evidence/FIR (contd.)

[1617] — S. 161 — Entitlement of defence to point out improvements in subsequent statements under S. 161 CrPC vis-à-vis FIR — Although statements under S. 161 CrPC were not part of FIR, held, defence is entitled to show improvements vis-à-vis the allegations in the FIR — Penal Code, 1860, S. 377

The subsequent statement may not be a part of the first information report being a statement under Section 161 of the Code; but the defence is entitled to show that improvements have been made therein vis-à-vis the allegations made in the first information report. That there exists some improvement is not in dispute. Immediately, a purported statement was taken after the first information report was lodged. A further statement was recorded that PW 1, the victim complainant had himself written the first information report. But the contents of the first information report clearly demonstrate that the same has been drafted by a person who is well versed in legal language. A bare perusal of the first information report itself shows that it cannot be in the handwriting of a student studying in Class IX i.e. the victim. It was in very good handwriting. It was written systematically. There was no mistake. There was no hesitation in writing. It was absolutely neat and clean. (Para 23). Gowrishankara Swamigalu v. State of Karnataka, (2008) 14 SCC 411.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-2008]

[1618] — S. 161 — Prosecution story regarding use of lathis and danda omitted in S. 161 statement of prosecution witnesses — Effect

The High Court also came to the conclusion that PWs 3 and 4 (SD and NY) cannot be said to be totally independent witnesses as the defence had filed documentary evidence to show that L, the father of the accused persons had lodged an FIR against these witnesses for an offence under Section 308 IPC. These witnesses were, therefore, also somewhat inimical to the accused persons and their evidence cannot be given due weight especially with regard to the use of lathi and danda by the prosecution witnesses, particularly when such an important fact had not been stated by them in their statements recorded under Section 161 CrPC and the statements being contradictory to each other with regard to the use of danda. (Paras 22 and 23). State of U.P. v. Banne, (2009) 4 SCC 271.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-2-2009]

[1619] — S. 161 — Witness stating that his statement was recorded by IO a day after the inquest proceedings were conducted — Whereas IO stating that he recorded the same during inquest proceedings — Held, it was a material contradiction as to time and date of incident — Prosecution failed to clarify the same — Hence, it was fatal to the prosecution case (Para 5). State of T.N. v. Sundar, (2003) 12 SCC 695: AIR 2004 SC 1216: 2004 Cri LJ 913.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-12-2003]

[1620] — S. 161 — Circumstantial evidence — Minor omissions in the statement of witnesses — Ignoring of, by courts below — Propriety — A lady and her daughter residing in the adjoining quarter deposing that on hearing the shrieks of the victim from the victim's quarter at the specified time they went towards the victim's quarter but noticing nothing unusual there, returned — A third witness, who was playing cricket nearby, stating that he heard the shrieks at the relevant time but on coming near the victim's quarter found nobody around the quarter and therefore returned — In cross-examination nothing found to discredit any one of them — In such circumstances the omission on the part of the former two witnesses to state before the police that after hearing the shrieks they had come out of their quarter, held, rightly ignored by the courts below — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/34, 376(2)(g) and 201 (Para 10). Molai v. State of M.P., (1999) 9 SCC 581: AIR 2000 SC 177.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.P. Kurdukar, K.T. Thomas and N. Santosh Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-10-1999]

State of M.P. v. Molai, 1999 Cri LJ 2698 (MP), affirmed

[1621] — S. 161 — Bride burning — Credibility of oral dying declaration evidenced by PW 1 (father of deceased) and PW 2 — Discarding of evidence of witness deliberately favouring the defence — PW 1 correcting himself in a calculated manner so as to oblige the accused for some unknown reason — Recording of S. 161 statements of near relatives of the deceased being normal, the allegation of PW 1 that police did not record his statement was untrustworthy — High Court after examination of documentary evidence and depositions concluding that PW 1 and PW 2 had given false statements regarding oral dying declaration — On facts, held, High Court was right in discarding the evidence PW 1 and PW 2 who were favouring the defence and deliberately did not support the case of the prosecution

On the fateful day i.e. on 16-5-2001, at about 11.00 a.m., A-1 started quarrelling with his wife (deceased). A-3 and A-4, parents of A-1 also participated in the quarrel. All of them, according to the prosecution, poured kerosene on the deceased. A-1 ignited matchstick and set the deceased on fire. All the accused then closed the door from outside and ran away. The deceased cried for help. On hearing the shouts, neighbours reached the place, opened the door, poured water on her, extinguished the fire and took her to the hospital. In order to establish offence against the accused, prosecution examined seven witnesses. The father of the victim (PW 1) and the panch witness (PW 2) did not support the case of the prosecution and were declared "hostile". The prosecution, in the circumstances, mainly relied upon two witnesses, the Special Judicial Magistrate (PW 5) who recorded the dying declaration of the deceased between 11.30 and 11.52 a.m. on 17-5-2001 i.e. the next day of the incident and PSI (PW 7) who also recorded dying declaration between 1230 to 1300 hrs on 18-5-2001. So far as A-2 (brother of A-1) was concerned, the trial court acquitted him presumably on the ground that he was not present at the time of incident and was also not staying in the same village and lived elsewhere. A-1, A-2 and A-4 were convicted for offences punishable under Sections 498-A, 302 and 342 read with Section 34 IPC. The High Court came to the conclusion that from two dying declarations, it was clearly established that the accused had committed offences punishable under Sections 302 and 342 read with Section 34 IPC. Accordingly, the order of conviction and sentence recorded by the trial court was held proper and the said order was confirmed by the High Court. As to the offence punishable under Section 498-A read with Section 34 IPC, however, the High Court held that since it was not the case of the prosecution that the deceased was driven to death by committing suicide due to demand of dowry, it could not be said that the offence was established. All the accused persons were, therefore, acquitted of offence punishable under Section 498-A read with Section 34 IPC.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held:

It is no doubt true that PW 1 (father of deceased) did not support the prosecution. But it is equally true that the High Court considered the evidence of the said witness in detail and came to the conclusion that for some unknown reasons, he wanted to oblige the accused. PW 1 had the audacity to depose before the Court on oath that his statement was never recorded by the police. The High Court was right in observing that in such cases, police would normally record statements of all persons who are near relatives of the deceased. PW 1 was one such person and police would not fail to record his statement. Again, PW 1 had stated on oath that it was A-1 who brought injured deceased to the hospital. That was clearly false and it was proved from documentary evidence of the hospital. Ext. 41, which is an intimation received by Topkhana Police Station on telephone from Civil Hospital, Ahmednagar, dated 1-6-2001 revealed that the deceased was injured due to burns, and was admitted by one B on 16-5-2001 at 1500 hrs for treatment. The High Court also dealt with the evidence of panch witness (PW 2) and observed that for some reason, he wanted to oblige the accused. He stated that the accused brought the deceased to the hospital, which was obviously incorrect since as per the hospital record, she was taken to the hospital by B. The deposition of PW 1 repeated the exonerating dying declaration by saying that A-1 told him that he poured water from the mud pot to extinguish the fire of the deceased. Thereafter, he switched over to correct himself that this was told by the deceased and not by A-1. It clearly indicated that PW 1 was making exonerating statements in a calculated manner. So far as oral dying declarations were concerned, the High Court was right in discarding them observing that PW 1 and PW 2 were favouring the defence and deliberately did not support the case of the prosecution in the Court. The question thus was confined to evidentiary value of dying declarations of the deceased given to Special Judicial Magistrate (PW 5) and PSI (PW 7). (Paras 17 to 22 and 27)

The High Court was right in relying upon evidence of Special Judicial Magistrate (PW 5) and the dying declaration of deceased. PW 5 was a retired gazetted officer of armed forces aged about 76 years. Where a dying declaration is recorded by a competent Magistrate, it would stand on a "much higher footing". A competent Magistrate has no axe to grind against the person named in the dying declaration of the victim and in absence of circumstances showing anything to the contrary, he should not be disbelieved by the court. In the present case both the dying declarations i.e. dying declaration recorded by PW 5 and dying declaration recorded by PW 7 the deceased clearly and unequivocally attributed burn injuries caused to her to the appellants (A-1, A-2, and A-3). Therefore there is no ground to interfere with the order of conviction and sentence recorded by the trial court and confirmed by the High Court. (Paras 23, 24, 46, 48, 27 and 53). Vikas v. State of Maharashtra, (2008) 2 SCC 516: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 486.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-1-2008]

Khushal Rao v. State of Bombay, AIR 1958 SC 22: 1958 SCR 552; Ravi Chander v. State of Punjab, (1998) 9 SCC 303: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1004; Harjit Kaur v. State of Punjab, (1999) 6 SCC 545: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1130, applied

(6) Omissions/Exaggerations/Embellishments/Contradictions/Inconsistencies of S. 161 statement vis-à-vis evidence/FIR (contd.)

[1622] — S. 161 — Name mentioned in FIR but statement recorded about 16 days later — IO clarifying that the witness was not available when he tried to be contacted — In such circumstances, merely because the said witness had deposed that during all those days he was in the village and had not gone out, held, it could not be inferred that the IO was not telling the truth and that the witness concerned was a got-up witness. Hari Singh v. State of Rajasthan, (1996) 11 SCC 551: AIR 1997 SC 1505.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-10-1996]

[1623] — S. 161 — Credibility of witnesses — Murder of three persons — Appellant convicted by courts below under Ss. 302/34 and sentenced to death while co-accused absconded and declared proclaimed offender — Sole eyewitness was a girl aged 7 years injured in the same incident who deposed before the trial court 5 years after the incident — Her evidence regarding involvement of appellant was doubtful in absence of anything to show that she had ever seen or known him prior to the occurrence and in view of unexplained delay of 3 days in examining her under S. 161 CrPC and in view of non-mention by her as to how the third deceased was killed when appellant had no motive to kill him — As regards evidence of father of the child witness, not only most of his statements made in examination-in-chief were not stated when he was examined under S. 161 CrPC, assertions made by him in the course of his deposition were also false, hence his evidence must be discarded — Another PW was declared hostile and though he had lodged FIR but nothing much turned on his evidence as he was not an eyewitness — Though a motorcycle and a wristwatch were seized from the place of occurrence, but no evidence produced to connect appellant with those items — Held, it would be unsafe to convict the appellant on the sole testimony of the child witness — Though the girl might have witnessed the occurrence, she did not know the appellant — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 118 — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/34 (Paras 24 to 29). Jagjit Singh v. State of Punjab, (2005) 3 SCC 689: 2005 SCC (Cri) 893: AIR 2005 SC 913: 2005 Cri LJ 955.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-2005]

[1624] — S. 161 — Discrepancies between S. 161 statement and statement in court — Effect — Burn injuries cause of death — Prosecution case that appellants had set deceased on fire by pouring kerosene on his body — Deceased's father claiming to have given a written report in police station disclosing the entire incident after getting the deceased admitted in hospital — Though the sequence of events narrated by deceased's father indicated that the written report would be the first contemporaneous document putting on record the true facts of the incident, but that document was not produced by prosecution despite trial court's order for production thereof — Evidence of deceased's father as an eyewitness also not credible in view of inconsistencies between his statement to the police under S. 161 CrPC and his statement before court — Who took deceased to hospital also shrouded in mystery — Doubts arising from the eyewitness accounts leaving too many question marks and too many unexplained circumstances, which contraindicated their acceptance without corroboration — Dying declaration recorded by Executive Magistrate itself indicating that the deceased had started to make a statement which was suggestive of his having poured kerosene on himself and set himself on fire but according to the Magistrate he later changed his statement — Medical case papers placed on record also raising some further doubts inasmuch as at one place there was history of "accidental burns" and another place there was history of "self-inflicted burns" — Held, evidence of deceased's father and the dying declaration not credible so as to bring home charge of murder against the appellants beyond reasonable doubt — Reasonable doubt arose on evidence led by prosecution and its conduct in suppressing the vital document (viz. the written report given by deceased's father to police) and witnesses — Therefore, appellants entitled to benefit of doubt — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 32 (Paras 7 to 10, 13, 14, 16, 17 and 18). Sk. Meheboob v. State of Maharashtra, (2005) 10 SCC 387: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1544: AIR 2005 SC 1805: 2005 Cri LJ 2136.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-3-2005]

[1625] — S. 161 — Case diary — Interpolation — Statements of PW 6 and other witnesses were available on record when bail application of accused was considered by the trial Judge — Same vanishing from police records for which no explanation given — PW 6 had also informed the authorities that he was being threatened by the relatives of the appellants not to disclose their names

— Despite this the same not forming part of case diary — Grave doubts expressed as to whether information given by PW 2 to officer in charge of police station over phone was recorded and possibility expressed that it may not have been done only to benefit the accused — Strongly deprecating such practice, held, in case of defective investigation normally the benefit must be given to accused, but in the instant case, statements made before police at the earliest possible opportunity were available on record to fasten guilt on accused under Ss. 302/149 IPC — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/149 (Paras 29 to 33). Vikram v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 12 SCC 332: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 362: AIR 2007 SC 1893: 2007 Cri LJ 3193.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-5-2007]

[1626] — S. 161 — Material fact deposed to by PW 7 in cross-examination, but not narrated in statement under S. 161 — Effect — PW 7 was examined only to prove recovery — In his cross-examination, he stating that he was present at the scene of occurrence and, thus, giving evidence in favour of accused that the deceased had told that she had committed suicide — Held, if at all there was any truth in his statement, it was obligation of PW 7 to have disclosed this to police — PW 7 must have been won over by accused — Such testimony of PW 7, held could not be relied on

There is no hesitation in rejecting that part of the testimony of PW 7 which appears to have found its way on the record so convenient for the accused. If at all there was any truth in his statement that he was present at the time of occurrence and that the deceased had made any statement before him, it was the obligation of PW 7 to have disclosed this to the police. Had he done so, he would have been treated as a material witness and examined by the police with regard to the so-called statement made before him. The fact that no such disclosure was ever made by him to the police, and his attempt to come out with crucial material facts pertaining to the occurrence, although he was being examined only as a witness to the panchnama, do not lend credence to his testimony. It appears that PW 7 must have been won over by the accused and made bold to give convenient evidence under cross-examination. (Para 23). Sohan Lal v. State of Punjab, (2003) 11 SCC 534: 2004 SCC (Cri) 226: AIR 2003 SC 4466.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-10-2003]

[1627] — S. 161 — Omission on the part of prosecution witness to state a particular fact in the statement under — If on facts, fatal to the prosecution — Source of light — Accused, members of Peoples' War Group (for short "PWG") armed with firearms, at about 7.00 p.m. in the month of January, firing at, and injuring, one of the three ex-members of PWG, who were sitting in front of a hair-cutting saloon — The injured dying at hospital — Due to membership of PWG, the assaulting persons were already known to the ex-members — One of the ex-members deposing that he could identify the accused due to the street light and light coming from neighbouring shops and the other one (PW 2 herein) deposing that he could identify the accused in the lights of the area — Similar deposition by two partners of the hair-cutting saloon who identified the accused persons also in the Court — The fact of so identifying the accused although not mentioned in PW 2's statement under S. 161 CrPC, held, could not be rejected as there was clear evidence of his colleague — Hence, the defence contention that there was no sufficient light for the identification of the accused, rejected — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302 and 34 — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987 — Ss. 3(2)(i) & (ii) and 5 — Arms Act, 1959 — S. 27 (Para 12). Sheelam Ramesh v. State of A.P., (1999) 8 SCC 369: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1437: AIR 2000 SC 118.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-1999]

[1628] — S. 161 — Statement made to police — Making improvement upon — Effect — Material facts not stated to police — Improvements made in evidence by sole eyewitness PW 4, the mother of the deceased R — Presence of PW 4 at the scene doubted — Conviction of appellant for causing the death of his wife his wife R by setting her on fire her — No incriminating evidence against appellant — Allegations that appellant was a person of bad character and that he did not have cordial relationship with R — Courts below brushed aside the improvements made by PW 4 in her evidence by holding that while making statement to police she was not required to give elaborate description of the incident — No possibility that appellant would have permitted PW 4 to stay with him — Held, the mere fact that the appellant was not proved to be a good husband or father would not ipso facto lead to the conclusion that he would commit the murder of his wife — Further, in absence of any material to corroborate the evidence of PW 4, which contained material improvements, held, it would be unsafe to base the appellant's conviction upon it — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302 — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 155(3)

(6) Omissions/Exaggerations/Embellishments/Contradictions/Inconsistencies of S. 161 statement vis-à-vis evidence/FIR (contd.)

The improvements found in the evidence of PW 4 being material, the courts below erred in relying upon the same to convict the appellant. (Para 11)

It is true that there is material to show that the relationship between the appellant and his deceased wife was not cordial and their marital life was marred by frequent quarrels. But, the mere fact that the appellant is proved not to be a good husband or father would not ipso facto lead to the conclusion that he would commit the murder of his wife. (Paras 8 and 10)

PW 4 has made material improvements in her evidence to prove her presence in the house where the incident in question took place. She had stated in her evidence that at the time of the incident, she was residing with her daughter in the house, where the appellant was also residing, for about one month prior to the date of the incident. It has come in evidence that the son of PW 4, who was once residing with the appellant in his house, was thrown out of the house by the appellant for his interference in the dispute between the appellant and his wife. Therefore, it is highly improbable that the appellant would have permitted PW 4 to reside in his house while he was not willing to keep PW 4's son in his house. It is also highly improbable that PW 4 would have stayed along with the appellant and the deceased for about one month when her son, who was working independently, was also residing at a nearby place in Panchkula itself. (Paras 8 and 10)

The delay of three hours after the incident in recording of the statement of PW 4 by the police, subsequent to the information given by the son of PW 4, also contributes to the doubt as to the presence of PW 4 at the time of incident. (Para 8)

The incident in question took place in a house where a tenant was living in one portion of the house and there were other houses nearby which were all occupied. Still the prosecution has not been able to cite any one of these persons to support its case or at least to show that the incident in question took place at a time when PW 4 was present at the scene of occurrence. (Para 9)

The fact that PW 4 suffered no injury in the process of protecting her daughter from burning to death, further enhances the suspicion as to her presence at the time of the incident. (Para 9)

No person other than PW 4 claims to have seen the appellant at the scene of occurrence. No incriminating evidence e.g. any material like burns or even soot from the burning of the body to which the appellant must have suffered standing close, was noticed on the person or the clothes of the appellant. In the absence of any such material which would corroborate the evidence of PW 4, which contains material improvements, it would be highly unsafe to rely on the sole testimony of PW 4 to convict the appellant. (Para 10). Hasan Murtza v. State of Haryana, (2002) 3 SCC 1: 2002 SCC (Cri) 498: AIR 2002 SC 762: 2002 Cri LJ 1022.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and Doraiswamy Raju, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-1-2002]

Hassan Murtaza v. State of Haryana, 1999 Cri LJ 3446 (P&H), reversed

[1629] — S. 161 — Statement recorded by the police under — Failure to give manner of user of weapon (axe) — Held, does not amount to material omission amounting to contradiction (Para 9). Sat Pal v. State of Punjab, 1995 Supp (4) SCC 1: 1996 SCC (Cri) 11.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and K.S. Paripoornan, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-10-1995]

[1630] — S. 161 — Statement recorded by the police under — Minor omissions not amounting to contradictions — Trial court erred in permitting the defence to bring them on record. State of Karnataka v. Moin Patel, (1996) 8 SCC 167: 1996 SCC (Cri) 632: AIR 1996 SC 3041.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and B.N. Kirpal, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-2-1996]

[1631] — S. 161 — Unwarranted delay in recording statement of witness and non-mentioning of names of accused allegedly seen by him in said statement — Effect — PW 3 (injured witness) not mentioning the names of appellants in his statement to police — Further, his statement recorded on the next day of the incident — Considering the said omission and the unwarranted delay in recording the statement, held, testimony of PW 3 not liable to be relied on (Para 7). Maruti Rama Naik v. State of Maharashtra, (2003) 10 SCC 670: AIR 2003 SC 3884: 2003 Cri LJ 4326.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-9-2003]

[1632] — Ss. 161, 162 and 154 — Statement allegedly made by important eyewitness to A.S.I. during investigation in variance with the FIR lodged by her and at the inquest — Witness denying having made such statement — Prosecution also alleging such statement to be false and mischievous — Inquest report also suppressed — Held, such supplementary was false and statement in FIR true. Bhajan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1978) 4 SCC 77: 1978 SCC (Cri) 515: AIR 1978 SC 1759: 1979 Cri LJ 7.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Jaswant Singh and P.S. Kailasam, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-1978]

[1633] — Ss. 161 and 162 — Omission to mention any important circumstance while making a statement under S. 161 CrPC — Effect — Prosecution witness, the deceased's brother, in his examination-in-chief stating that while pressurising him and his brother to transfer the property in question to them the accused persons threatened that without signing the transfer deed they (the said witness and his brother) would not reach downstairs alive — In cross-examination, he reiterating the said statement — However, such allegation not finding place in his statement under S. 161 and when confronted therewith, the prosecution witness remaining unable to explain the reason therefor — Investigating officer in his cross-examination stating that no such allegation had been made before him — Such an omission in the statement of the prosecution witness under S. 161, held, amounted to contradiction — Hence, the allegation made by the prosecution witness, held, not sufficient to hold the accused persons guilty of murder — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 145 — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302, 307, 120-B, 23 & 114 (Paras 50 to 52). State of Maharashtra v. Bharat Chaganlal Raghani, (2001) 9 SCC 1: AIR 2002 SC 409.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-7-2001]

Tahsildar Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1959 SC 1012: 1959 Cri LJ 1231, relied on [1634] — S. 161 — In view of inconsistencies in testimony of witnesses as also inconsistency between such testimony and statements made under S. 161(3), CrPC accused-appellant entitled to benefit of doubt — Hence his conviction under Ss. 302/34 and 436/34 set aside. Sukhram v. State of M.P., 1989 Supp (1) SCC 214: 1989 SCC (Cri) 357: AIR 1989 SC 772: 1989 Cri LJ 838.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-1-1989]

[1635] — Ss. 162, 161 and 164 — Two of five witnesses retracting from their statements during investigation — Effect — Consideration of other evidence on record — Discovery of material objects (MOs 1 and 2) based on disclosures made in the statements of A-1 and A-2 — PW 1's dying declaration recorded — In TI parade, PW 1 to 3 identified A-1 to A-3 — PWs 1 to 5 were eyewitnesses though PWs 4 and 5 retracted from their statements — No discrepancy or deficiency being found in the evidence of PWs 1 to 3, rejection of their evidence, held, not warranted — Trial court and High Court rightly relied on their testimony — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 32(1), 27, 21 and 145

So far as the evidence of PWs 1, 2 and 3 are concerned, counsel for the appellant was not able to point out any discrepancy or deficiency in their evidence to warrant rejection of their evidence. The trial court and the High Court have rightly relied upon their testimony. 17 witnesses were examined to further the prosecution version. PW 1 was the injured complainant. PW 2 was also an eyewitness who removed K to the hospital along with others. It was also stated that PW 3 is an eyewitness. PWs 3, 4 and 5 were eyewitnesses to the occurrence. The trial court placed reliance on the evidence of PWs 1, 2 and 3 because PWs 4 and 5 resiled from their statement during investigation. PW 7 took up investigation and effected arrest of A-1 and A-2 and recovered MOs 1 and 2 in pursuance of their disclosure statements. Exts. P-8 and P-9 are the admissible portions in their confessional statements. In the test identification parade PWs 1 to 3 identified A-1 to A-3 as the assailants of the deceased. The trial court found the evidence of PWs 1 to 3 to be credible and cogent and, therefore, recorded conviction and sentence. (Paras 11, 8 and 7). Kotikalapudi Subba Rao v. State of A.P., (2008) 5 SCC 390: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 621.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2008]

[1636] — S. 162 — Minor variations in prosecution evidence — Probative value of such evidence and acceptability thereof — Held, once the trustworthiness of evidence stated in a case stands satisfied, the court should not hesitate in accepting the same — If the evidence in its entirety appears to be trustworthy, it cannot be discarded merely on the ground of presence of minor variations in evidence — Despite minor discrepancies in prosecution evidence, conviction and sentence awarded to appellants under S. 302 IPC not interfered with by the Supreme Court — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302 — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 3 and 155

The accused-appellants, who were convicted and sentenced under Section 302 IPC by the Sessions Court as well as the High Court, challenged their conviction in instant appeal by contending that there has been a serious divergence of evidence as regards the place of occurrence which in turn completely displaces the prosecution case and the High Court erred in not taking note of such a divergent view pertaining to the place of occurrence. Further, the appellants pointed out the suppression of earliest version of occurrence by submitting that the chowkidar, who visited the place of occurrence and thereafter informed the investigating officer about the incident, was deliberately withheld, thereby making the prosecution case doubtful. The presence of the shoes of the deceased by the side of his head along with a bag was another ground taken by the appellants for creating the doubt about the place of occurrence.

(6) Omissions/Exaggerations/Embellishments/Contradictions/Inconsistencies of S. 161 statement vis-à-vis evidence/FIR (contd.)

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

It is now well settled that the court can sift the chaff from the grain and find out the truth from the testimony of the witnesses. The evidence is to be considered from the point of view of trustworthiness and once the same stands satisfied, it ought to inspire confidence in the mind of the court to accept the stated evidence. (Para 1)

There would hardly be a witness whose evidence does not contain some amount of exaggeration or embellishment. Sometimes there is a deliberate attempt to offer the exaggerated evidence and sometimes the witnesses in their overanxiety to do better from the witness box detail out an exaggerated account. (Para 3)

The evidence on record does not, however, lend any credence to the submissions made by the appellants. There may be some variations but there exists no major contradiction on record. The fact that the deceased was surrounded by the appellants and the firing was done at the instance of Appellant 1 stands uncontradicted. If on a perusal of the evidence in its entirety, it appears to be otherwise trustworthy, question of the evidence being non-trustworthy would not arise. The court can sift the chaff from the grain and find out the truth from the evidence itself. The evidence tendered lends credence to the prosecution case as regards the involvement of the appellant herein in the murder. (Para 12)

It is on record that the chowkidar happened to visit the place of occurrence before he came again with the investigating officer, but the positive evidence of the investigating officer is to the effect that the latter reached the village on hearing a rumour about the murder of the deceased. It so happened as there was no cross-examination on this score and in the absence of which the statement of the investigating officer cannot but be accepted. The chowkidar may or may not be there or it may be a sheer coincidence that both the investigating officer and the chowkidar came together but that by itself does not affect the veracity of the prosecution case. (Para 13)

In absence of any question having been put to either the investigating officer or any other witness in regard to the shoes found kept by the side of the head of the deceased, the factum of placement of shoes at a particular place would not vitiate the entire trial. (Para 17)

Although there are lapses in the case, but the issue has to be considered from the point of view of the prejudice to the accused. If in any case, like the one present herein before the Supreme Court, no prejudice can be said to have been caused to the accused, the question of the trial being vitiated on the ground of lapses would not arise at all. The eyewitnesses' account as available on record cannot but be termed to be trustworthy and by reason therefor, the lapses stand overshadowed by the testimony of the eyewitnesses. The instant appeal is devoid of merit and there is no reason to interfere with the impugned judgment of the High Court. (Para 15).
Sukhdev Yadav v. State of Bihar, (2001) 8 SCC 86: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1416: AIR 2001 SC 3678.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and N. Santosh Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-2001]

Baleshwar Mandal v. State of Bihar, (1997) 7 SCC 219: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1042: AIR 1997 SC 3471, relied on

Leela Ram v. State of Haryana, (1999) 9 SCC 525: 2000 SCC (Cri) 222; Rammi v. State of M.P., (1999) 8 SCC 649: 2000 SCC (Cri) 26; Appabhai v. State of Gujarat, 1988 Supp SCC 241: 1988 SCC (Cri) 559, considered

[1637] — S. 162 — Impeaching credit of witness — Inconsistent statement — When amounts to contradiction — Minor variation with former statement not enough — Former statement if to be used to discredit the particular version of the witness must be done in compliance with S. 145 — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 155 and 145

When an eyewitness is examined at length it is quite possible for him to make some discrepancies. No true witness can possibly escape from making some discrepant details. Perhaps an untrue witness who is well tutored can successfully make his testimony totally non-discrepant. But courts should bear in mind that it is only when discrepancies in the evidence of a witness are so incompatible with the credibility of his version that the court is justified in jettisoning his evidence. But too serious a view to be adopted on mere variations falling in the narration of an incident (either as between the evidence of two witnesses or as between two statements of the same witness) is an unrealistic approach for judicial scrutiny. (Para 24)

It is a common practice in trial courts to make out contradictions from the previous statement of a witness for confronting him during cross-examination. Merely because there is inconsistency in evidence it is not sufficient to impair the credit of the witness. No doubt Section 155 of the Evidence Act provides scope for impeaching the credit of a witness by proof of an inconsistent former statement. But a reading of the section would indicate that all inconsistent statements are not sufficient to impeach the credit of the witness. (Para 25)

A former statement though seemingly inconsistent with the evidence need not necessarily be sufficient to amount to contradiction. Only such of the inconsistent statement which is liable to be "contradicted" would affect the credit of the witness. Section 145 of the Evidence Act also enables the cross-examiner to use any former statement of the witness, but it cautions that if it is intended to "contradict" the witness the cross-examiner is enjoined to comply with the formality prescribed therein. Section 162 of the Code also permits the cross-examiner to use the previous statement of the witness (recorded under Section 161 of the Code) for the only limited purpose i.e. to "contradict" the witness. (Para 26)

To contradict a witness, therefore, must be to discredit the particular version of the witness. Unless the former statement has the potency to discredit the present statement, even if the latter is at variance with the former to some extent it would not be helpful to contradict that witness. (Para 27)

In the present case the evidence of the conductor and the driver of the bus evinces credibility. They are the most natural witnesses for the murder which took place inside the bus. The minor variations which the defence counsel discovered from their former statements did not amount to discredit the core of their evidence. The strained reasoning of the Sessions Judge for side-stepping their evidence is too fragile for judicial countenance. The Division Bench of the High Court has rightly reversed the finding regarding the credibility of their evidence. (Para 28). Rammi v. State of M.P., (1999) 8 SCC 649: AIR 1999 SC 3544.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and A.P. Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-9-1999]

Tahsildar Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1959 SC 1012: 1959 Cri LJ 1231, relied on

[1638] — Ss. 162 and 161 — Insignificant omissions in their statements to the police, held, no ground for disbelieving them. Matadin v. State of U.P., 1980 Supp SCC 157: 1979 SCC (Cri) 627: AIR 1979 SC 1234: 1979 Cri LJ 1027: 1980 MLJ (Cri) 60.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-3-1979]

[1639] — S. 162 and Expln. — Contradictions — Meaning — What constitutes — Minor discrepancies do not amount to contradiction

The word "contradiction" is of a wide connotation which takes within its ambit all material omissions and under the circumstances of a case, a court can decide whether there is one such omission as to amount to contradiction. The Explanation to Section 162 CrPC is relevant. "Contradiction" means the setting of one statement against another and not the setting up of a statement against nothing at all. All omissions are not contradictions. The Explanation to Section 162 CrPC itself makes it clear that whether any omission amounts to contradiction in the particular context is a question of fact. Minor discrepancies cannot be termed as contradictions unless it affects the credibility of the evidence tendered by a witness. In the instant case the discrepancies highlighted on behalf of the accused-appellant were merely trivial in nature. (Paras 12 and 11). Shashidhar Purandhar Hegde v. State of Karnataka, (2004) 12 SCC 492: AIR 2004 SC 5075.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-10-2004]

State of Maharashtra v. Bharat Chaganlal Raghani, (2001) 9 SCC 1: 2002 SCC (Cri) 377; Tahsildar Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1959 SC 1012: 1959 Cri LJ 1231, relied on

[1640] — S. 162 Expln. — Discrepancy — Elaboration of case — Making of statements for the first time in court and not during investigation — When not fatal

Though it is true that some statements were made for the first time in court and not during investigation, it has to be seen as to what extent they diluted the testimony of PWs 16 and 32 used to bring home the accusations. A mere elaboration cannot be termed as discrepancy. When the basic features are stated, unless the elaboration is of such nature that it creates a different contour or colour of the evidence, the same cannot be said to have totally changed the complexion of the case. (Para 23). Esher Singh v. State of A.P., (2004) 11 SCC 585: AIR 2004 SC 3030.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-3-2004]

[1641] — S. 162 — Statement of the deceased that the witness was one of the persons who had taken him to the hospital corroborating his presence at the scene of the occurrence — Witness having no enmity with the accused persons — Accused persons being brother and close relatives of the deceased conduct of the witness in not going to the police station to lodge the complaint not unnatural — Delay of 7 days in recording his statement by police properly explained — Held, in the circumstances of the case, High Court not justified in rejecting his evidence. G.S. Walia v. State of Punjab, (1998) 5 SCC 150: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1283: AIR 1998 SC 2857.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and V.N. Khare, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-3-1998]

(6) Omissions/Exaggerations/Embellishments/Contradictions/Inconsistencies of S. 161 statement vis-à-vis evidence/FIR (contd.)

[1642] — S. 162 — Omission to send bloodstained earth collected from the place of occurrence to the Chemical Examiner — Held, does not vitiate the investigation. State of U.P. v. Harban Sahai, (1998) 6 SCC 50: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1412.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.M. Punchhi, C.J. and K.T. Thomas and S. Rajendra Babu, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-4-1998]

[1643] — S. 162 Expln. — Allegation made for the first time during trial — Effect — Father of the deceased alleging in court about torture of his daughter by accused mother-in- law — Statement of father recorded by police one year after the occurrence — No mention about such treatment therein — Held, such allegation made for the first time in the course of trial was not acceptable (Para 15). Meera v. State of Rajasthan, (2004) 11 SCC 231: AIR 2004 SC 1879.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-3-2004]

[1644] — S. 162 Expln. — PWs did not specifically name any accused person during investigation, and only said that followers of A-7 were the assailants — But definite names stated by them in court — Held, that was not an elaboration of a statement already made — On the contrary, it was a vital omission (Para 13). Gorle S. Naidu v. State of A.P., (2003) 12 SCC 449: AIR 2004 SC 1169: 2004 Cri LJ 924.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-12-2003]

See also (2003) 11 SCC 271: 2004 SCC (Cri) 135

[1645] — S. 162 Expln. — Omission by PWs to state before the police about exhortations by all the accused — In the facts and circumstances of the case, such omission would amount to contradiction (Para 19). Shri Gopal v. Subhash, (2004) 13 SCC 174: 2005 SCC (Cri) 98: AIR 2004 SC 4900: 2004 Cri LJ 3349.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-1-2004]

(7) Delay in questioning/examining witness/ recording of statement under

[1646] — S. 161 — Delayed examination of witnesses — Held, there could be no rule of universal application that if there is any delay in examination of a particular witness the prosecution version becomes suspect — If the explanation offered for such delay is plausible and acceptable and the court accepts the same as plausible, there is no reason to interfere with the conclusion — Further, the IO has to be specifically asked as to the reasons for the delayed examination where the accused raised a plea that there was unusual delay in the examination of the witnesses

It cannot be laid down as a rule of universal application that if there is any delay in examination of a particular witness the prosecution version becomes suspect. It would depend upon several factors. If the explanation offered for the delayed examination is plausible and acceptable and the court accepts the same as plausible, there is no reason to interfere with the conclusion. In this case, it was explained as to why there was delay. Important witnesses were examined immediately. Further statements were recorded subsequently. Reasons necessitating such examination were indicated. It has been recorded that there was a valid reason for the subsequent and/or delayed examination. Such conclusion has been arrived at after analysing the explanation offered. Further, the IO has to be specifically asked as to the reasons for the delayed examination where the accused raised a plea that there was unusual delay in the examination of the witnesses. However, the said situation does not arise in this case. (Paras 33 and 34). Bodhraj v. State of J&K, (2002) 8 SCC 45: AIR 2002 SC 3164.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ruma Pal and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-9-2002]

Ranbir v. State of Punjab, (1973) 2 SCC 444: 1973 SCC (Cri) 858, followed

[1647] — S. 161 — Delayed examination of witnesses — Effect — Evidence so obtained when inadmissible — Effect on evidence tendered by other witnesses

Unless the investigating officer is categorically asked as to why there was delay in examination of the witnesses the defence cannot gain any advantage therefrom. It cannot be laid down as a rule of universal application that if there is any delay in examination of a particular witness the prosecution version becomes suspect. It would depend upon several factors. If the explanation offered for the delayed examination is plausible and acceptable and the court accepts the same as plausible, there is no reason to interfere with the conclusion. On the other hand, if the explanation is found to be implausible, certainly the court can consider it to be one of the factors to affect credibility of the witnesses who were examined belatedly. It may not have any effect on the credibility of the prosecution's evidence tendered by the other witnesses. (Paras 18 and 20)

During trial no question was raised about the delayed examination of PWs 3 and 5 by the IO and not even a plea was raised before the trial court that the delayed examination of PWs 3 and 5 affected credibility of the prosecution version. The cross-examination was only on the aspect of the recovery of the underwear and undergarment of the accused and the deceased respectively. (Paras 7 and 21). State of U.P. v. Satish, (2005) 3 SCC 114: 2005 SCC (Cri) 642: AIR 2005 SC 1000: 2005 Cri LJ 1428.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-2-2005]

Ranbir v. State of Punjab, (1973) 2 SCC 444: 1973 SCC (Cri) 858; Bodhraj v. State of J&K, (2002) 8 SCC 45: 2003 SCC (Cri) 201; Banti v. State of M.P., (2004) 1 SCC 414: 2004 SCC (Cri) 294, followed

Ganesh Bhavan Patel v. State of Maharashtra, (1978) 4 SCC 371: 1979 SCC (Cri) 1, distinguished [1648] — S. 161 — Delayed examination of witnesses — Effect — Held, unless IO is categorically asked as to why there was delay in examination of the witnesses, the defence cannot gain any advantage therefrom (Para 14). Ramanand Yadav v. Prabhu Nath Jha, (2003) 12 SCC 606: AIR 2004 SC 1053: 2004 Cri LJ 640.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-10-2003]

Ranbir v. State of Punjab, (1973) 2 SCC 444: 1973 SCC (Cri) 858: AIR 1973 SC 1409; Bodhraj v. State of J&K, (2002) 8 SCC 45: 2003 SCC (Cri) 201, relied on [1649] — S. 161 — Ipso facto cannot be a ground to doubt veracity of prosecution case in all circumstances — If explanation offered therefor is plausible and possible and court accepts the same, there is no reason to interfere with said conclusion — In instant case, accused were arrested after about eight months of occurrence and their photographs thereafter published — PWs 3 and 4 after identifying them came to police station of their own accord and gave statements — They were independent witnesses and it would be absurd to hold that IO erred in recording their statements — If really as contended, prosecution wanted to tamper with witnesses they could have immediately done so after occurrence — Besides, no question was put to IO as regards purported delay, hence, defence cannot get any advantage therefrom (Paras 28 to 31). Abuthagir v. State, (2009) 17 SCC 208: AIR 2009 SC 2797: 2009 Cri LJ 3987: (2009) 3 ECrN 1077 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-2009]

Ranbir v. State of Punjab, (1973) 2 SCC 444: 1973 SCC (Cri) 858; Bodhraj v. State of J&K, (2002) 8 SCC 45: 2003 SCC (Cri) 201; Banti v. State of M.P., (2004) 1 SCC 414: 2004 SCC (Cri) 294; State of U.P. v. Satish, (2005) 3 SCC 114: 2005 SCC (Cri) 642, relied on [1650] — S. 161 — Delay in recording statement of eyewitness, effect of — Name of eyewitness not named in FIR, held, not a significant omission but what is material is the content of statement of eyewitness — Eyewitness constantly in touch with the investigation officer but his statement recorded after one-and-half months — Held, if his statement is not recorded on the date of incident or within reasonable time therefrom, it has to be viewed with caution (Paras 11 to 13 and 15). Prem Narain v. State of M.P., (2007) 15 SCC 485.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-11-2006]

[1651] — S. 161 — Delay in recording statements of witnesses under — Credibility of such statements — Held, unless investigating officer is asked questions about delay in recording statements and explanation is sought from witnesses as to why their statements were recorded late, statements by themselves would not become suspicious or concocted (Para 55). Vijay Kumar Arora v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 2 SCC 353.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-1-2010]

[1652] — S. 161 — Examination of witness — Delay — Effect — High Court rejecting evidence of PW 2 only on the ground that there was delay in recording his statement under S. 161, and that he had criminal antecedents — Held, High Court erred in observing so — PW 2 was named in FIR which supported the fact that he was present there during occurrence — Thus, even when he was of criminal character, and his statement was recorded later, his evidence was inspiring confidence, hence keeping caution in mind, same could not be rejected — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 54 (Para 27). Murli v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 9 SCC 417: (2009) 81 AIC 43 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-8-2009]

[1653] — S. 161 — Examination of witnesses by IO — Delay — Effect — Held, unless the investigating officer is categorically asked as to why there was delay in examination of the witness, the defence cannot take advantage therefrom — In the instant case, no question had been asked to the investigating officer, PW 53 regarding the reason for delay — There was even no suggestion that PW 2 was not present in the house when the incident took place (Para 12). Gunnana Pentayya v. State of A.P., (2009) 16 SCC 59.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-8-2008]

State of U.P. v. Satish, (2005) 3 SCC 114: 2005 SCC (Cri) 642, followed

(7) Delay in questioning/examining witness/recording of statement under (contd.)

[1654] — S. 161 — Examination of witnesses by police — Necessity of promptness — Statement of PW 7 who was an eyewitness and was sitting near the dead body of deceased recorded next day at about 12 p.m.; hence possibility expressed that he must have been influenced and that there was no explanation for not recording his statement at night itself — Held, delay in recording the statement is undoubtedly a circumstance which has to be taken into consideration, but at the same time, the courts must be reasonable also and should see as to whether late recording of the statement in the dead of night of a tender aged boy of 13 was possible and feasible — Further, it needs to be considered whether such delay has affected his testimony or whether there was any real apprehension of the boy being influenced by any other person or the police — In the absence of any such possibility, the evidence of the boy could not be thrown out, more particularly, when the boy had faced the ordeal of the cross-examination in a very efficient manner — Moreover, usual police apathy to record statements in the late hours can also be another factor to be considered (Paras 18, 23 and 24). Mallappa Siddappa Alakanur v. State of Karnataka, (2009) 14 SCC 748: AIR 2009 SC 2959: (2009) 80 AIC 233 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-7-2009]

[1655] — S. 161 — Delayed examination of witnesses — Effect — Admissibility — Held, is normally looked down upon but each case has to be considered on its own facts — In the instant case, however, there is no reason to disbelieve testimonies of PWs 3 to 6 so far as A-1 is concerned (Paras 59 and 60). Achara-parambath Pradeepan v. State of Kerala, (2006) 13 SCC 643: (2007) 49 AIC 49 (SC): (2007) 1 KLT 249.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-12-2006]

State of U.P. v. Satish, (2005) 3 SCC 114: 2005 SCC (Cri) 642, relied on

[1656] — Ss. 161 and 154 — Delay in giving statement by sole surviving victim in (caste related) mass murder — When not fatal — Hiding and saving oneself till police protection available, as the reason

Similarly, the High Court has failed to appreciate the circumstances in which PW 14 has survived by jumping into the river and hiding at certain places. In a genocide and massacre which was witnessed by him, wherein all his seven close relatives including his wife were killed one after the other in his presence and were thrown in River Ganges, his escaping death was a miracle. Hiding and saving his life from a mighty cruel upper caste group was a normal human instinct. Any reasonable or prudent person would have behaved in the same manner. Immediately after his escape, he tried to make a complaint but he did not succeed. Ultimately when he wrote to Smt Indira Gandhi and Shri Jagjivan Ram, perhaps at the intervention of someone, the police seriously investigated the matter and he was brought to his village under police protection. The delay in giving his statement is fully explained and in the facts and circumstances of the case delay was quite natural. (Para 40). State of U.P. v. Ram Sajivan, (2010) 1 SCC 529.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and A.K. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-12-2009]

[1657] — Ss. 161 and 162 — Delay in recording statement of witness — When material — Conviction on basis of last seen together theory — Proof of — High Court by impugned judgment acquitting respondent-accused finding evidence against him inadequate to sustain conviction — Prosecution case resting primarily on circumstantial evidence — PWs 3 and 8 claiming that they had seen the accused last in the company of deceased — But both claiming to have seen the accused at the same time and to have carried him on the motorcycle, which itself was an impossibility — Additionally, neither of them claiming to have seen the other witness with the accused at the relevant time — Deceased had gone missing on 1-3-1998, his dead body at instance of accused was recovered on 2-3-1998, while FIR was lodged on 3-3-1998 — Statement of accused was also recorded on 2-3-1998 and discovery panchnama of dead body prepared on that day — But, statement of PW 3, in spite of he being available in the police station on 2-3-1998 not recorded on that day — Stand of State that FIR was registered at 1.30 a.m. on 3-3-1998 and thereafter investigation started, and therefore statement of PW 3 was recorded afterwards, rejected, taking into consideration that police was already treating respondent as accused on 2-3-1998 and had obtained his signature on panchnama as such, and had started investigation — There was thus no difficulty in recording statement of PW 3 on 2-3-1998 itself — Considering parameters relating to appeal against acquittal, conviction based on circumstantial evidence, and last seen together theory, held, no interference with impugned judgment called for (Paras 12 to 20). State of Goa v. Pandurang Mohite, (2008) 16 SCC 714: AIR 2009 SC 1066: (2009) 73 AIC 100 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-12-2008]

[1658] — Ss. 161 and 164 — Delay — There was unexplained delay in recording statements of PWs 3 & 6 and their statements under S. 164 were recorded much before their statements under S. 161 (Paras 2 to 10, 13 to 18 and 20 to 23). State of A.P. v. S. Swarnalatha, (2009) 8 SCC 383: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 873: (2009) 81 AIC 60 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2009]

[1659] — S. 161 — Examination of witnesses by police — Delay in, when explained, not fatal to the prosecution

Mere delay in examination of the witnesses for a few days cannot in all cases be termed to be fatal so far as the prosecution is concerned. There may be several reasons. When the delay is explained, whatever be the length of the delay, the court can act on the testimony of the witness if it is found to be cogent and credible. (Para 12)

In the present case as due to bomb blasts on 16-3-1993, just before midnight, 69 persons died and a large number of persons suffered injuries on account of falling of debris of buildings, the first priority was rendering assistance to those who had suffered injuries and were lying under the debris of the demolished buildings. Therefore, statement of the PW that he was busy in attending to the injured and collecting dead bodies till 18-3-1993 cannot be said to be improbable. When a large number of persons were being brought to the hospital, the foremost duty of the doctors and other members of the staff was to provide immediate treatment, and not to go about collecting information as to who had brought the injured to the hospital for treatment. That would be contrary to the normal human conduct. Looked at from any angle, the evidence of PWs cannot be said to be suffering from any infirmity. Their statements along with the confessional statements of the co-accused lend a definite assurance to the prosecution version. (Para 12). Mohd. Khalid v. State of W.B., (2002) 7 SCC 334.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.N. Kirpal, C.J. and K.G. Balakrishnan and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-9-2002]

[1660] — Ss. 161 and 173(8) — Fresh examination/re-examination of witnesses — Permissibility — Investigating officer, who took over investigation at subsequent stage upon transfer of investigation to CID, examining witnesses afresh — Prejudice caused to accused, if any

It is a settled principle of law that the statements under Section 161 CrPC recorded during the investigation are not substantive piece of evidence but can be used primarily for a very limited purpose, that is for confronting the witnesses. If some earlier statements were recorded under Section 161 CrPC then they must be on the police file and would continue to be part of police file. However, if they have been filed on judicial record they would always be available to the accused and as such no prejudice is caused to anyone. Secondly, when the case was transferred to CID for investigation, it obviously meant that in the normal course, the authorities were not satisfied with the conduct of the investigation by PW 31 (previous investigating officer) and considered it appropriate to transfer the investigation to a specialised branch i.e. CID. Once the direction was given to PW 30 to conduct the investigation afresh and in accordance with law, there is no error of jurisdiction or otherwise committed by PW 30 in examining the witnesses afresh and filing the charge-sheet under Section 173 CrPC stating that the appellants and other accused had committed the offence and were liable to face trial under Sections 304-B and 498-A IPC. (Para 17). Uday Chakraborty v. State of W.B., (2010) 7 SCC 518.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : Dr. B.S. Chauhan and Swatanter Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision : 8-7-2010]

[1661] — S. 161 — Delay in recording statement under — Effect — Information about a fact relating to the incident and within the knowledge of PW 21, disclosed by him to the investigating agency after about 39 days of the incident — Held, merely because the evidence of a witness is recorded by the police under S. 161 CrPC belatedly, by itself, does not make the evidence unacceptable provided there is some logical or acceptable explanation for the same — On facts, held, there was no such explanation in the instant case — Hence, evidence of PW 21 disbelieved. Kantilal v. State of Gujarat, (2002) 10 SCC 39: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1408: AIR 2003 SC 684: 2003 Cri LJ 850.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-12-2002]

[1662] — Ss. 161 and 154 — Delayed recording of statement of witnesses — Effect — Dacoity with murder at night — Appreciation of evidence — Infirmities in prosecution case — Manner of dacoity and participation of accused doubtful — Long-standing dispute between parties — False implication — Likelihood of — Discrepancy between alleged eyewitness' version regarding weapons used by accused in the crime and medical evidence, according to which the corresponding injuries sustained by the victims not caused by those weapons — Discrepancy between evidence of alleged eyewitnesses and investigating officer regarding manner in which door was opened by the accused for entering into victims' room — Delay in recording statements of two PWs by police, on facts, created a strong doubt to accept their evidence that they were eyewitnesses — Though these PWs claimed to have suffered injuries in the incident, investigating officer did not say that next morning when he visited the place of occurrence, he found any injury on them — Identification of accused persons in light of a lantern was doubtful — Accused persons included an old man aged about 74 years as well as a boy aged 13 years — Accused neighbours of the informant with whom family of the informant having long-standing dispute — Held, possibility of false implication of accused persons on account of long-standing enmity utilising the incident of dacoity cannot be ruled out — High Court rightly acquitted the accused (Paras 12 to 21). Shrishti Narain Jha v. Bindeshwar Jha, (2009) 6 SCC 457.

(7) Delay in questioning/examining witness/recording of statement under (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2009]

[1663] — S. 161 — Investigation — Delay in examining witness — When presence of the witness at the time and scene of occurrence and his scribing the dying declaration are not in doubt, held, lapse on the part of the investigating officer in recording the statement of the eyewitness will not render outright rejection of the prosecution evidence — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302, 395, 396 and 397. Nanhau Ram v. State of M.P., 1988 Supp SCC 152: 1988 SCC (Cri) 342: AIR 1988 SC 912: (1988) 2 Crimes 936.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and B.C. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-2-1988]

[1664] — Ss. 161 and 154 — Delay in offering statement for being recorded by the police — Circumstances stated by the witnesses concerned for such delay whether correct — Finding recorded by the courts below in this regard being one of fact, held, not subject to interference by the Supreme Court in an appeal under Art. 136 — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302 and S. 34

Statements of both the witnesses under Section 161 CrPC were recorded on 8-1-1984, although, the first information report was lodged on 6-1-1984 at about 7.55 p.m. within the shortest possible time. Both these witnesses in their evidence on oath had stated that they were scared of the appellant and his associates who had identified them at the time of the incident. They admitted that they quietly went to their respective houses and did not disclose the fact of assault caused on R to anybody. They further admitted that although they attended the funeral and were in the company of the bereaved members of the family yet they did not disclose the fact of assault by the appellant on R to anybody. They then stated that only when the appellant came to be arrested on 8-1-1984, they came forward for recording of their statements under Section 161 CrPC. Both the courts below have considered these circumstances very carefully and concurrently held that the apprehension expressed by both these witnesses could not be said to be untrue. This being a finding of fact, it would not be possible for the Supreme Court to interfere with the said finding in an appeal filed under Section 136 of the Constitution. Naresh Mohanlal Jaiswal v. State of Maharashtra, (1996) 11 SCC 547: AIR 1997 SC 1523.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-10-1996]

[1665] — S. 161 — Delay in making statement under, may render evidence unreliable. Kehar Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1988) 3 SCC 609: 1988 SCC (Cri) 711: AIR 1988 SC 1883.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.L. Oza[1], B.C. Ray[2] and K. Jagannatha Shetty[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 3-8-1988]

[1666] — S. 161 — Delay in recording statement — If explained, held, not fatal

In the instant case, the incident occurred on the night of 14-8-1993/15-8-1993. But the IO recorded the statement of injured eyewitness PW 31 on 29-8-1993. The IO stated that when he arrived at the spot, PW 31 was unable to speak except making moaning noises. PW 31 was thereafter moved to a hospital. Despite various efforts, the IO was not allowed to record the statement of PW 31 as he was semi-conscious. The IO periodically sent his constable to the hospital to find out the condition of PW 31. As soon as he came to know on 28-8-1993 that PW 31 was discharged, the IO recorded his statement on 29-8-1993.

Held :

Unexplained delay in recording the statement may render it suspect, but the High Court cannot make a fetish out of a rule of prudence. Delay in recording the statement of the witness can occur due to various reasons and can have several explanations. It is for the court to assess the explanation and if satisfied, accept the statement of the witness. The facts in the instant case more than adequately explain the delay in recording the statement of PW 31. (Paras 10 and 22). Prithvi v. Mam Raj, (2004) 13 SCC 279: 2005 SCC (Cri) 198: AIR 2004 SC 2729.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-2-2004]

Balakrushna Swain v. State of Orissa, (1971) 3 SCC 192: 1971 SCC (Cri) 313; State of Orissa v. Brahmananda Nanda, (1976) 4 SCC 288: 1976 SCC (Cri) 596, considered and explained

Mohd. Khalid v. State of W.B., (2002) 7 SCC 334: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1734, relied on

State of Rajasthan v. Mamraj, 1996 Cri LJ 1823 (Raj), reversed

[1667] — S. 161 — Examination of witness by police — Delay — Whether fatal to prosecution — Held, there is no fixed rule to determine credibility if prosecution case has been affected by delay in recording statements of witnesses by police — This aspect has to be measured in background of facts and circumstances (Para 23). Narinder Kumar v. State of J&K, (2010) 9 SCC 259: AIR 2010 SC 3015: 2010 Cri LJ 3905.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Aftab Alam and T.S. Thakur, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-7-2010]

[1668] — S. 161 — Delay in recording statement of the witness — Effect — Statement of the sole eyewitness, a child aged 7 years, recorded by the IO three days after occurrence and by the Judicial Magistrate six days after the occurrence — Non-explanation for the delay — Trial court taking the view that she was under a great shock and hence her statement was recorded later — Held, such reasoning cannot be sustained in view of the medical certificate certifying her fitness and the prosecution itself stating that after regaining consciousness the following day, she remained fully conscious thereafter (Para 30). Jagjit Singh v. State of Punjab, (2005) 3 SCC 689: 2005 SCC (Cri) 893: AIR 2005 SC 913: 2005 Cri LJ 955.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-2005]

[1669] — S. 161 — Delay in recording statement of witness — Effect — Prosecution relying on evidence of two police officials whose statements under S. 161 CrPC were recorded after about 4-1/2 months — No explanation offered for such a long delay — Both the witnesses even after knowing that the deceased left along with the appellants and was admitted in the hospital in an injured condition not coming forward to tell about this fact — Held, in the circumstances of the case, it is not safe to accept their evidence on the circumstance that the deceased was last seen alive in the company of the appellants. Paramjit Singh v. State of Punjab, (1997) 4 SCC 156: 1997 SCC (Cri) 486: AIR 1997 SC 1614: (1997) 34 ACC 272.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-12-1996]

[1670] — S. 161 — Delay in recording statement of witnesses — No question put to investigating officer specifically as to why there was delay — On the contrary, witnesses themselves indicated why there was delay — Held, plea regarding delay in recording statement had no substance (Para 14). Sunil Kumar v. State of Rajasthan, (2005) 9 SCC 283: AIR 2005 SC 1096: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1230: 2005 Cri LJ 1402.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-1-2005]

[1671] — S. 161 — Delay in questioning of witness by police — Though this would not by itself render the evidence unreliable, but while testing its credibility and intrinsic worth court should scrutinise the evidence strictly — When witness was available to the police since the time of occurrence, non-examination of such witness at the earliest casts reflection on the conduct of investigation

Merely because a witness was examined after a considerable period from the date of occurrence his evidence need not be discarded on that ground alone but at the same time while testing the credibility and assessing the intrinsic worth of such witnesses the delay in their examination by the police has to be borne in mind and their evidence would require a stricter scrutiny before being accepted.

When a witness who happened to be a resident of the locality where the incident occurred and took an active part in rescuing the injured persons from the burnt house in the presence of the police and then accompanied them to the hospital and was also available at the hospital when the police had come but for some mysterious reasons the police did not choose to ask him anything about the occurrence, then this conduct on the part of the investigation is highly reprehensible and indicates the callousness on the part of the investigating agency in carrying out the investigation in the case. Mohd. Iqbal M. Shaikh v. State of Maharashtra, (1998) 4 SCC 494: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1064: AIR 1998 SC 2864.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-1998]

[Ed.: See also (1996) 7 SCC 194.]

[1672] — S. 161 — Delay in examination of PW 4, an injured witness — Defence plea that incident occurred on 29-1-1977 but PW 4 was examined on 30-1-1977 and, therefore, injury said to have been sustained by him was manufactured — In view of the fact that the FIR was lodged on 29-1-1977 itself without any delay and it was mentioned therein that the accused T attacked PW 4 with a lathi, held, the said contention was liable to be rejected

(7) Delay in questioning/examining witness/recording of statement under (contd.)

The FIR was lodged on 29-1-1977 itself and it is mentioned in the FIR that the accused T attacked PW 4 with a lathi. It is noticed that the FIR was lodged with no loss of time and, therefore, it cannot be said that since the injured PW 4 was examined on 30-1-1977, the injury was manufactured by the prosecution subsequently. (Para 16)

Both the trial court and the High Court also found that the accused party was the aggressor. (Para 17). Mohar v. State of U.P., (2002) 7 SCC 606: 2003 SCC (Cri) 121: AIR 2002 SC 3279.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-2002]

[1673] — S. 161 — Delay in examination of witnesses — By itself does not render prosecution case suspect — Unless explanation for delay is called for, defence cannot derive any advantage from delay — Explanation for the delay if accepted by court as plausible, interference with such conclusion not called for

Unless the investigating officer is categorically asked as to why there was delay in examination of the witnesses the defence cannot gain any advantage therefrom. It cannot be laid down as a rule of universal application that if there is any delay in examination of a particular witness, the prosecution version becomes suspect. It would depend upon several factors. If the explanation offered for the delayed examination is plausible and acceptable and the court accepts the same as plausible, there is no reason to interfere with the conclusion. There is no justifying reason or ground substantiated on behalf of the appellants to interfere with the concurrent findings recorded by both the courts based on relevant, cogent and trustworthy evidence adduced by the prosecution to prove the guilt of the appellants beyond reasonable doubt. (Para 17). Banti v. State of M.P., (2004) 1 SCC 414: 2004 SCC (Cri) 294: AIR 2004 SC 261: 2004 Cri LJ 372.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-2003]

Ranbir v. State of Punjab, (1973) 2 SCC 444: 1973 SCC (Cri) 858; Bodhraj v. State of J&K, (2002) 8 SCC 45: 2003 SCC (Cri) 201, relied on [1674] — S. 161 — Delay in examining eyewitnesses — Effect — Held, that by itself cannot be a ground to discard their testimony, more so, when in the cross-examination of the witnesses, nothing tangible had been brought out to impeach their testimony (Para 6). Ramesh v. State of M.P., (2000) 1 SCC 243: 2000 SCC (Cri) 206: AIR 1999 SC 3759: 1999 Cri LJ 4603.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and N. Santosh Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-1999]

[1675] — S. 161 — Delay in examining eyewitnesses by the Investigating Officer, can on the peculiar facts of a case, amount to serious infirmity in the prosecution case. Ganesh Bhavan Patel v. State of Maharashtra, (1978) 4 SCC 371: 1979 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 1979 SC 135: 1979 Cri LJ 51.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and R.S. Sarkaria and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-10-1978]

[1676] — S. 161 — Delay in recording statement of eyewitness (PW 31, a child of about 13 years) who sustained a serious head injury — Explanation that after the incident, PW 31 was unable to speak except making moaning noises — Non-production of record from hospital to show inability of PW 31 to speak — Effect — Doctor, IO and neighbours unanimously saying that PW 31 was unable to communicate, though he was able to comprehend what was being asked — Held, High Court erred in disbelieving IO due to non-production of the said record — Though witness was in a position to write, held, in the circumstances of the case it was inhuman to expect IO to interrogate the child at that stage and ask him to write down what he knew — Hence, High Court erred in finding fault with IO on the ground that he did not take a statement in writing from PW 31 (Paras 12 to 14). Prithvi v. Mam Raj, (2004) 13 SCC 279: 2005 SCC (Cri) 198: AIR 2004 SC 2729.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-2-2004]

[1677] — S. 161 — Statement of witness — Delay in recording of, by police — Reliability of statement — Held on facts, was still reliable because delay was due to utter confusion which prevailed at initial stages of investigation

The trial court acquitted the appellant on the ground that prosecution could not establish its case beyond reasonable doubt. However, the High Court in appeal convicted the appellant of rape and murder. The appellant filed appeal in the Supreme Court.

Dismissing the appeal insofar the appellant's conviction under Sections 302 and 376 IPC, was concerned,

Held :

Right from the year 1994 to January 1996, that is, a few days before the murder, the appellant had been continuously harassing the deceased and that this allegation has been proved by ocular and documentary evidence. The appellant had been seen in the Faculty of Law, University of Delhi on the morning of the incident and had no business to be present at that place as he had passed out in the year 1994. He was also seen by PW 2 Shri Kuppuswami outside the house of the deceased at about 5 p.m. and was carrying a helmet with an intact fixed visor, and was seen moving out of Vasant Kunj Colony by two witnesses soon after 5 p.m. (though these witnesses ultimately turned hostile). The only argument against PW 2 is that his statement under Section 161 of the Code of Criminal Procedure had been recorded after three days. There is nothing adverse in this matter as there was utter confusion in the investigation at the initial stage. Moreover, PW 2 was a next neighbour and a perfectly respectable witness with no bias against the appellant. (Para 50)

In addition, the recovery of the helmet with a broken visor and the recovery of glass pieces apparently of the visor from near the dead body and the fact that the appellant himself sustained injuries while mercilessly beating the deceased with his helmet and causing 19 injuries including three fractured ribs, are other circumstances with regard to the murder. Assuming, therefore, for a moment, that there was some uncertainty about the rape, the culpability of the appellant for the murder is nevertheless writ large. (Para 51). Santosh Kumar Singh v. State, (2010) 9 SCC 747.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2010]

[1678] — S. 161 — Delay in recording statements of witnesses under — On facts held not fatal — The fact that on account of lack of fairness on the part of the investigating officer the supervising officer transferred the investigation to another officer who after taking charge recorded the statements under S. 161, rightly held by High Court to be a sufficient explanation of 5 or 6 days' gap between the date of the incident and the date of recording of the statements. Dukhmochan Pandey v. State of Bihar, (1997) 8 SCC 405: AIR 1998 SC 40.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-9-1997]

[1679] — S. 161 — Delay (of 2 1/2 months) in recording statement of a witness — Does not invariably render the testimony of the witness doubtful though evidence has to be scanned carefully — Each case has to be considered on its own facts — If witness is found to be natural and truthful his evidence need not be doubted due to delay. Ganeshlal v. State of Maharashtra, (1992) 3 SCC 106: 1992 Cri LJ 1545.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N.M. Kasliwal and K. Ramaswamy, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-4-1992]

[1680] — S. 161 — Delay of about 24 days in examining the witness due to IO's involvement in other duties relating to the upkeep of law and order — Held, on facts, inconsequential. State of U.P. v. Sikandar Ali, (1998) 4 SCC 298: 1998 SCC (Cri) 926: AIR 1998 SC 1862: 1998 All LJ 1310.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.M. Punchhi, C.J. and K.T. Thomas and S. Rajendra Babu, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-4-1998]

[1681] — S. 161 — Delay of about 50 days in recording the statement of witnesses after the incident — Absence of any acceptable explanation therefor — Effect — Conviction based on the testimony of two eyewitnesses (PWs 1 and 7) who did not support the prosecution case — No statement of PW 1 regarding actual participation of appellants in attack and absence of identification of accused persons by PW 7 — No acceptable explanation for the delay of about 50 days in recording the statement of PWs 1 and 7 after the incident — There was hardly any evidence worth acceptance regarding identification of the dead body — Thus, the findings of the courts below that the prosecution through the evidence of PWs 1 and 7 succeeded in establishing beyond reasonable doubt that the appellants were responsible for the murder of the deceased, held, could not be sustained — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/149, 307/149 and S. 148 (Paras 4 to 6). Jai Pal v. State of U.P., (2003) 9 SCC 41: AIR 2003 SC 1012: 2003 Cri LJ 1243.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-2003]

[1682] — S. 161 — Delay of about 56 days in recording police statement — Clear, cogent and satisfactory explanation for the delay given by prosecution — Trial court and High Court accepting the explanation — In the circumstances, held, concurrent findings need not be interfered with. Lalli v. State of W.B., (1986) 2 SCC 409: 1986 SCC (Cri) 174: AIR 1986 SC 990: 1986 Cri LJ 1083: 1986 ALJ 768.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Madon and B.C. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-1986]

[1683] — S. 161 — Unwarranted delay in recording statement of witness and non-mentioning of names of accused allegedly seen by him in said statement — Effect — PW 3 (injured witness) not mentioning the names of appellants in his statement to police — Further, his statement recorded on the next day of the incident — Considering the said omission and the unwarranted delay in recording the statement, held, testimony of PW 3 not liable to be relied on (Para 7). Maruti Rama Naik v. State of Maharashtra, (2003) 10 SCC 670: AIR 2003 SC 3884: 2003 Cri LJ 4326.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-9-2003]

(7) Delay in questioning/examining witness/recording of statement under (contd.)

[1684] — S. 161 — Delay of two days in questioning the eyewitnesses (son and widow of deceased) by IO — Held, was a serious mistake on the part of the prosecution — High Court did not err in disbelieving these witnesses (Para 6). Vijaybhai Bhanabhai Patel v. Navnitbhai Nathubhai Patel, (2004) 10 SCC 583: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2032: 2004 Cri LJ 3832.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-3-2004]

[1685] — S. 161 — Delayed recording of statements of young witnesses after 3/4 days, held, cannot be doubted simply because they took help rather than themselves immediately helping their injured relations — Eyewitnesses A (19 years of age) and RP (14 years of age) being close relatives of deceased SU left her injured body unattended and went to inform SR (the grandfather of SU) and their statement was recorded after three/four days — This conduct of A and RP, on facts held, is not suspicious or unnatural even if there was no independent corroboration — At the time of the occurrence of the crime, A was about 19 years of age whereas RP was hardly 14 years of age

Though Section 161 CrPC statements of A and RP was recorded three or four days after the incident, they had not taken the injured/deceased persons immediately to the hospital inspite of being close relatives of deceased SU and there was no independent corroboration of their statements, the conduct of these two children (A and RP), in the circumstances, was not suspicious or unnatural. At the time of the occurrence of the crime, A was about 19 years of age whereas RP was hardly 14 years of age. Both these witnesses, as earlier stated, on seeing the appellant giving repeated knife-blows on some parts of neck, head and back of SU and inflicting severe injuries to SA and N, they immediately rushed to the house of SR and promptly reported the entire incident to him. These witnesses have withstood the cross-examination with courage and boldness and their testimony could not be impeached by the defence in regard to the genesis of the incident. The eyewitnesses have no animus against the appellant to implicate him in a false case and leaving the real assailant from the clutches of law. In the circumstances, no fault can be found in regard to the conduct of these witnesses. This contention raised deserves to be rejected. (Paras 43, 44, 53 and 65). Mahesh v. State of Maharashtra, (2008) 13 SCC 271: (2008) 67 AIC 219 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 3602.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.P. Naolekar and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-4-2008]

[1686] — S. 161 — Inordinate delay in examination of witness by police — Delay not explained — Simply on that ground the convincing and reliable evidences given by the eyewitnesses cannot be discarded. Krishna Pal (Dr.) v. State of U.P., (1996) 7 SCC 194: 1996 SCC (Cri) 249: AIR 1996 SC 733.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-11-1995]

[1687] — S. 161 — Three months' delay in recording statement of witness — Adverse effect of (Para 13). Dasari Siva Prasad Reddy v. Public Prosecutor, High Court of A.P., (2004) 11 SCC 282: AIR 2004 SC 4383.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-8-2004]

Prabhakar Jasappa Kanguni v. State of Maharashtra, (1982) 1 SCC 426: 1982 SCC (Cri) 240, distinguished on facts

[1688] — S. 161 — Unexplained delay of three months in recording statement of witness — Adverse effect of (Para 13). Harjinder Singh v. State of Punjab, (2004) 11 SCC 253: AIR 2004 SC 3962: (2004) 21 AIC 887 (SC): 2004 Cri LJ 3854.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2004]

(8) Other issues/infirmities

[1689] — S. 161 — Delay in sending statements of eyewitnesses recorded by IO to court — Effect — Held, mere delay would not per se make their evidence unacceptable unless something glaring is brought on record to doubt their presence at place of occurrence — Effect of delay in sending vital documents to court would have to be assessed and appreciated on facts and circumstances of each case — In the instant case, two consecutive murders had rocked the entire city and widespread bandobasth was arranged in surrounding areas — In such circumstances, IO cannot be faulted for such delay — Moreover, IO was in charge of maintaining law and order in the area, which fact satisfactorily explained the delay (Paras 27 to 34). Abu Thakir v. State of T.N., (2010) 5 SCC 91.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision : 19-4-2010]

Thulia Kali v. State of T.N., (1972) 3 SCC 393: 1972 SCC (Cri) 543; Marudanal Augusti v. State of Kerala, (1980) 4 SCC 425: 1980 SCC (Cri) 985, distinguished on facts

Karunakaran, In re, 1975 Cri LJ 798 (Mad): 1974 Mad LW (Cri) 190, considered

[1690] — S. 161 — Failure of IO to put the date on which statement of witness was taken — Effect of, on testimony of that witness — IO explaining that he had forgotten to mention the same — Held, High Court erred in giving importance to the said fact while disbelieving the said witness (Para 19). Prithvi v. Mam Raj, (2004) 13 SCC 279: 2005 SCC (Cri) 198: AIR 2004 SC 2729.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-2-2004]

[1691] — S. 161 — Deliberate non-examination of S who was present at scene of offence alleged — S examined during course of investigation, his statement under S. 161 CrPC recorded, and he was even cited as PW — Moreover, during trial summons also issued to him which could not be served as he had left India — Police while filing charge-sheet naming him in list of witnesses — Held, clearly shows that prosecution had every intention of examining him — To contend that S was deliberately not examined by prosecution is absolutely baseless (Para 229). Manu Sharma v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 6 SCC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and Swatanter Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision : 19-4-2010]

Varkey Joseph v. State of Kerala, 1993 Supp (3) SCC 745: 1993 SCC (Cri) 1117, distinguished [1692] — Ss. 161 and 482 — Date of recording statement of witness missing — Before recording a finding on such omission the investigating agency must be given opportunity to explain — High Court not justified in putting its assessment under S. 482. Radhey Shyam v. Kunj Behari, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 572: 1990 SCC (Cri) 194: AIR 1990 SC 121.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: E.S. Venkataramiah, C.J. and K.N. Singh and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-10-1989]

Mohd. Akbar Dar v. State of J&K, 1981 Supp SCC 80, relied on [1693] — S. 162 — Statement recorded in language not known to the accused (English), but read over, translated and explained to the maker in the language know to him (Tamil) — In the circumstances held, no infirmity caused. CCE v. C. Fernandes, (1982) 3 SCC 512: 1983 SCC (Cri) 109.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: O. Chinnappa Reddy, A.P. Sen and Baharul Islam, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-7-1981]

[1694] — Ss. 162 and 313 — Circumstantial evidence — Defective investigation — Co-accused not examined under S. 313 CrPC but his statement only was recorded by police — Held, not admissible — Terrorist And Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987, S. 3(2)(i)

The so-called statement of the co-accused that D was kidnapped by the appellant-accused is not at all admissible having been made before a police officer while in custody and in the course of alleged interrogation by PW 4. The deposition of PW 4 about the alleged occurrence is also not admissible in evidence because he also admitted that he did not send the said co-accused to any Magistrate for recording his statement. (Para 14). Ganesh Gogoi v. State of Assam, (2009) 7 SCC 404: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 421: (2009) 80 AIC 267 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-7-2009]

(9) Dying declaration

See also under S. 164

See also under CRIMINAL TRIAL in Vol. 3

See also S. 32, EVIDENCE ACT, 1872

[1695] — S. 161 — Dying declaration — Meaning of — Principles governing and reasons behind its admission in evidence, restated — Reliance upon — Propriety — On facts, Head Constable (PW 20) testifying that deceased was fully conscious when brought to police station and it was deceased who lodged complaint which was recorded by him — PW 20 also recorded statement of deceased under S. 161 CrPC — Bed-head ticket of hospital showed that when deceased was brought he was conscious and his general condition was satisfactory — These materials, held, were sufficient to discard stand of accused persons that deceased was unconscious when brought to hospital — As deceased died, relying on evidence of PW 20, trial court and High Court treated first information report to be in the nature of dying declaration along with statement of deceased — In both these statements the three accused persons were named as assailants — Trial court and High Court analysed evidence in great detail and found that prosecution established its stand because of dying declaration — Hence, in view of factual scenario as analysed and principles set out, held, trial court and High Court were justified in finding accused persons guilty — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 304 Pt. I r/w S. 34 — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 32(1). Dashrath v. State of M.P., (2007) 12 SCC 487: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 254: AIR 2008 SC 316.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-10-2007]

P.V. Radhakrishna v. State of Karnataka, (2003) 6 SCC 443: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1679, relied on [1696] — S. 161 — Inconsistencies between dying declaration and evidence of eyewitnesses — Omissions in statement of eyewitnesses — Effect — Accused assaulting deceased with rifles, guns and lathis — Out of the four persons who died from prosecution side, one rushing in injured position to police station and after getting himself examined under S. 161 CrPC, dying the next day in hospital — Statement made by deceased to police, which was treated as dying declaration, and evidence of sole eyewitness forming basis for conviction by Sessions Court and its subsequent affirmation by High Court — On facts, held, detailed account of occurrence could not be expected from a severely injured person, particularly, when he died the next day — Omissions in

(9) Dying declaration (contd.)

statement of eyewitness under S. 161 CrPC not found so material as to impeach the version of the prosecution — Prosecution case proved beyond reasonable doubt — Impugned order not interfered with — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/34 — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 32. Laljit Singh v. State of U.P., 2000 SCC (Cri) 1501: AIR 2000 SC 3594.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik, R.P. Sethi and Shivaraj V. Patil, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-4-2000]

[1697] — S. 161 — PWs not mentioning about dying declaration in their statement under — Effect — Fact that the deceased made a dying declaration implicating the appellant as assailant stated by PWs for the first time in court — Veracity of the said fact, held on facts, doubtful — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 32(1)

The important fact that the deceased did make a statement implicating the appellant as the assailant, was not made to IO when their statements were first recorded. Their stating for the first time before the court this fact raises some doubts as to the veracity of the said fact. Taking into consideration the nature of injuries suffered and the prosecution evidence itself that the deceased while being taken to the hospital had become unconscious, it is not safe to rely upon the evidence of these witnesses who have made this important statement as to the dying declaration for the first time before the court. While holding so, it has been kept in mind that all these witnesses are very closely related to the deceased. (Para 6). Khalil Khan v. State of M.P., (2003) 11 SCC 19: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1052: AIR 2003 SC 4670.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2003]

[1698] — Ss. 161 and 162(2) — Statement made under S. 161 can be used under S. 32(1) of the Evidence Act — Dying declaration — Deceased woman mentioning part of the name of the accused in FIR wrongly — Clarificatory statement made by her under S. 161 CrPC — Admissibility of such clarificatory statement under S. 32(1) — Held, words "statement as to any of the circumstances" under S. 32(1) are by themselves capable of expanding the width and contours of the scope of admissibility of dying declaration — Anything which has nexus with the death of the deceased, proximate or distant, direct or indirect, can also fall within the purview of S. 32(1) — Further, held that after the death of a person, the endeavour should be how to include his statement within the sweep of S. 32(1) and not how to exclude it therefrom — Identity of accused proved on record — Correction in name of accused made by deceased under S. 161 CrPC, held, admissible under S. 32(1) — Words and Phrases — "Statement as to any of the circumstances" — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 32

There is little dispute on the fact situation that one assailant had set the deceased ablaze at the time and place mentioned in her statements. The name of the appellant, his scooter No. and the name of the father-in-law are the three specifications regarding the identity of the appellant accused which could be discerned from the statements made by the deceased to PW 5 (husband), PW 1 (Executive Magistrate) and PW 3, a pedestrian. The Prosecution was able to place materials to show that all the above three identifying features are referring to the appellant. (Paras 12 and 22)

The statement made by the deceased woman in the FIR, where she wrongly mentioned the second part of the name of the accused, had been clarified by her by giving a clarificatory statement under S. 161 CrPC, which is inextricably intertwined with the episode in which she was burnt and eventually died of such burns. (Para 32)

The provisions under S. 32(1) relates to the statement made by a person before his death. Two categories of his statements are made admissible in evidence and further made as substantive evidence. They are: (1) his statement as to the cause of his death; (2) his statement as to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death. The second category can envelop a far wider amplitude than the first category. The words "statement as to any of the circumstances" are by themselves capable of expanding the width and contours of the scope of admissibility. When the word "circumstances" is linked to "transaction which resulted in his death" the sub-section casts the net in a very wide dimension. Anything which has a nexus with his death, proximate or distant, direct or indirect, can also fall within the purview of the sub-section. As the possibility of getting the maker of the statements in flesh and blood has been closed once and for all, the endeavour should be how to include the statement of a dead person within the sweep of the sub-section and not how to exclude it therefrom. Admissibility is the first step and once it is admitted the court has to consider how far it is reliable. Once that test of reliability is found positive the court has to consider the utility of that statement in the particular case. (Para 29)

Therefore, having regard to the aforesaid facts and reasons, the clarificatory statement made by the deceased to the investigating officer under Section 161 CrPC would fall within the ambit of Section 32(1) of the Evidence Act. (Para 32). Patel Hiralal Joitaram v. State of Gujarat, (2002) 1 SCC 22: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 2001 SC 2944: (2002) 1 Guj LR 248.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-10-2001]

Sharad Birdhichand Sarda v. State of Maharashtra, (1984) 4 SCC 116: 1984 SCC (Cri) 487; Rattan Singh v. State of H.P., (1997) 4 SCC 161: 1997 SCC (Cri) 525, relied on

[1699] — Ss. 161, 162 and 164 — Recording of dying declaration — Mode of — IO recording statements in hospital of two injured persons sustaining burn injuries — Answers not in question-answer form, doctors certifying they were in a fit state of health to have their statements recorded only at the end of recording the statements — Also statements not recorded in presence of Magistrate — Effect — Held, treating the said statements as dying declarations, questionable — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 32(1) (Paras 33, 34 and 36). C. Magesh v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 5 SCC 645.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision : 30-4-2010]

[1700] — S. 161 — Dying declaration recorded by police officer — Whether deceased was in conscious and fit condition at the time of recording her statement — Vital organs of the body not affected in the attack on the deceased — Having regard to the nature of injuries sustained by the deceased, medical evidence also confirming possibility of the deceased remaining fully conscious at the time of recording the statement — Medical evidence also corroborating deceased's statement as regards how she was attacked, the weapons used in the attack and the injuries inflicted — Police officers also confirming the conscious state of the deceased at the time of recording the statement — Initial registration of the case under S. 307, IPC on the basis of FIR lodged by the deceased herself and subsequent alteration of the case to that under S. 302, IPC lending further support to the prosecution case — Held, dying declaration acceptable and High Court erred in rejecting the same relying on a stray statement of a witness — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 32(1). State of U.P. v. Chet Ram, (1989) 2 SCC 425: 1989 SCC (Cri) 388: AIR 1989 SC 1543: 1989 Cri LJ 1785.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and A.M. Ahmadi, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-3-1989]

Padam Meher v. State of Orissa, 1980 Supp SCC 434: 1981 SCC (Cri) 362; Darshan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1983) 2 SCC 411: 1983 SCC (Cri) 523, distinguished [1701] — Ss. 162 and 164 — Evidentiary value of dying declaration where the maker survives — Held, when a witness making a dying declaration survives, said dying declaration does not remain substantive evidence — However, where such dying declaration is recorded by Magistrate, it can be used to corroborate oral evidence of such witness — But where such statement is recorded by a police officer, its user is barred under S. 162 CrPC — On facts held, dying declaration of PW 1 was voluntary, truthful and uninfluenced by any other factor and can be used for corroborating her oral evidence — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 32(1) and 157 (Paras 20, 21 and 31). Sunder Singh v. State of Uttaranchal, (2010) 10 SCC 611.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and A.K. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-2010]

Ramprasad v. State of Maharashtra, (1999) 5 SCC 30: 1999 SCC (Cri) 651, followed [1702] — S. 161 — Statement of the injured recorded under S. 161 CrPC in hospital during course of investigation — After death of the injured that statement admitted under S. 32(1), Evidence Act, 1872 — Some portions of the statement verbatim reproduction of statement of the deceased's companion recorded by police prior to recording of the statement of the deceased — Both the statements containing minute details such as registration number of the jeep of the accused, though the deceased was unconscious throughout the previous day — Errors such as wrong name of accused's father mentioned in the earlier statement of the deceased's companion also crept in the latter statement of the deceased — Held, the alleged dying declaration cannot be relied upon nor can any conviction be based upon it. Baldev Singh v. State of Punjab, (1990) 4 SCC 692: AIR 1991 SC 31.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-1990]

[1703] — S. 161 — Dowry death — Conviction reversed — Appellants allegedly sprinkled kerosene on deceased and set her ablaze — Dying declarations recorded by doctor and by investigating officer (IO) — Dying declaration made to IO supported by evidence of PWs 3 and 7 — High Court in appeal against conviction by trial court discarded dying declaration recorded by doctor, available in form of a xerox copy — High Court discarding the same as there was no evidence to show that original had been destroyed and thus said, document could not be taken in evidence as secondary evidence — High Court, however, confirmed conviction relying on dying declaration recorded by IO, supported by PWs 3 and 7 — Dying declaration recorded by IO, not endorsed by doctor present there — Statement of doctor treating the injured, regarding fitness to make a statement, also not recorded therein — Statements of PWs 3 and 7, allegedly supporting said dying declaration, found doubtful — Lastly, capacity of injured to make a statement found doubtful — Hence, held, no reliance can be placed on such dying declaration recorded by IO — No presumption in favour of prosecution arises in case of murder — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 32(1) and 65 — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/34, 304-B/34 and 498-A (Paras 9 to 14). Brundaban Moharana v. State of Orissa, (2010) 13 SCC 381.

(9) Dying declaration (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-9-2010]

[1704] — S. 162 — Bride-burning — Dying declaration — Veracity of — Declarant and recorder of dying declaration not speaking the same language and said declaration being recorded with aid of translator — Declaration if vitiated thereby — Presence of someone (the doctor in this case) other than translator, knowing both languages concerned, confirming correctness of translation — Appellant-accused not contending that recorder of said declaration recorded statement wrongly and no suggestion was put to said recorder to show that translator had in any way interfered with truthful recording of statement — Hence, held, veracity of dying declaration established — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302 and 498-A — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961 — Ss. 3 and 6 — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 32

PW 8 who recorded the first dying declaration deposed before the court that he asked the questions in Kannada and PW 21 translated the same and explained it to deceased S and thereafter she gave the answers in Telugu and the answers were repeated by PW 21 and confirmed by the doctor who was present and who knew both Kannada and Telugu. The appellants had no case that PW 8 recorded the statement wrongly and no suggestion was put to this witness to show that PW 21 had in any way interfered with the truthful recording of the statement of PW 8. (Para 5)

The second dying declaration Ext. P-13 was recorded on the next day and at that time burn injuries must have aggravated and she must have not been in a position to put her signature therefore there is no merit in the allegation that Ext. P-4, the first dying declaration contains signatures of deceased S whereas in Ext. P-13 statement recorded by PW 18, the signature of the deceased S does not find a place. (Paras 6 and 5). Srinivasa v. State, (2005) 9 SCC 327: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1249.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-2004]

[1705] — S. 162(2) — Dying declaration — Credibility — Police personnel, if may record — Held, there is no mandatory requirement that dying declaration has to be recorded by any designated or particular person — It is only to eliminate chances of any doubt or false implication by prosecution, that such declaration should be recorded by a Magistrate or by a doctor — Dying declaration recorded by Head Constable — Head Constable received intimation from hospital and went to hospital — Dying declaration recorded by him after victim was declared fit to make statement by doctor — Mere fact that doctor had declared victim fit to make a statement does not mean that there was no imminent danger of death — Explanation rendered by prosecution as to non-recording by Magistrate was that condition of victim was worsening at Government Hospital, Palwal, therefore, he shifted to Safdarjung Hospital, New Delhi, where he died — Held, Head Constable was competent to record dying declaration — Statement read over to injured, his signatures were obtained after he found statement as correct — He was able to specify role of each accused in the occurrence — Dying declaration was clear and unambiguous about role of appellant and fully corroborated by medical evidence — There was no reason for deceased to make a false statement — Conviction confirmed — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 32(1) (Paras 14 to 20 and 22 to 25). Dhan Singh v. State of Haryana, (2010) 12 SCC 277.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. B.S. Chauhan and Swatanter Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-7-2010]

Dalip Singh v. State of Punjab, (1979) 4 SCC 332: 1979 SCC (Cri) 968, relied on

Cherlopalli Cheliminabi Saheb v. State of A.P., (2003) 2 SCC 571: 2003 SCC (Cri) 659; Kanti Lal v. State of Rajasthan, (2004) 10 SCC 113: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1760, distinguished

State (Delhi Admn.) v. Laxman Kumar, (1985) 4 SCC 476: 1986 SCC (Cri) 2, cited

[1706] — S. 162 — Dying declaration — Evidentiary value of — If conviction can be based solely on

It is well settled that if the truthfulness or otherwise of the dying declaration cannot be doubted, the same alone can form the basis of conviction of an accused and the same does not require any corroboration, whatsoever, in law. (Para 3). Ravi v. State of T.N., (2004) 10 SCC 776.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-7-2004]

[1707] — S. 162 — Dying declaration — Veracity and reliability of — State of mind of the declarant — Mode of attestation of — Literate declarant not signing declaration but only putting thumb impression — Held, veracity of recording of dying declaration cannot be doubted in any manner on the ground of dying declaration not having been signed even though the declarant was literate — On facts, doctor concerned had not only certified the fitness of the state of mind of declarant at foot of said declaration, but on a specific query pertaining thereto raised by Magistrate in court, had answered in the affirmative, that the declarant was fully conscious and in a state to answer questions put to him (Paras 4 and 6). Ravi v. State of T.N., (2004) 10 SCC 776.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-7-2004]

Paparambaka Rosamma v. State of A.P., (1999) 7 SCC 695: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1361, held to have been overruled

Laxman v. State of Maharashtra, (2002) 6 SCC 710: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1491, relied on [1708] — S. 161 — Multiple dying declarations — Second dying declaration — Credibility — Recorded by police officer — Effect — High Court rejected dying declaration for reason of appellant's presence — No evidence of appellant's presence — Dying declaration was recorded in presence of brother and husband of deceased and they had attested this document as well — A statement recorded under S. 161 CrPC would be treated as dying declaration after death of the maker — High Court's observation that such dying declaration had no evidentiary value, held, erroneous — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 32(1) (Paras 16, 17 and 19). Mukeshbhai Gopalbhai Barot v. State of Gujarat, (2010) 12 SCC 224: AIR 2010 SC 3692.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2010]

[1709] — S. 162 — Dying declaration — Veracity of, when doubtful — Detailed narration of facts and meticulous attention to detail — Effect — Three dying declarations recorded — First declaration recorded on date of occurrence, in which case of accidental fire disclosed — Second declaration recorded next day of date of occurrence, in which again case of accidental fire disclosed — Third declaration recorded after more than twenty-four hours of occurrence, running into more than two pages, wherein entire history from date of marriage till date of occurrence given in great detail, and it disclosing case of victim being set on fire after being doused with kerosene — Held, it is not possible to believe such a dying declaration where there is so much narration of facts with meticulous details of everything by a dying person — Third declaration therefore highly doubtful, and an afterthought, especially in view of case disclosed in the earlier two declarations (Para 3). Mannulal Sahu v. State of M.P., (2005) 10 SCC 259: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1510.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-8-2004]

[Ed.: See also 2000 SCC (Cri) 1501.]

[1710] — Ss. 162, 161 and 164 — Dying declaration — Omissions and lapses on the part of I.O. — Statement of the deceased recorded by the Police Sub-Inspector in a routine manner as a complaint and not as a dying declaration — Such statement taken as dying declaration after death of the deceased — Deceased found in a fit state of health to make statement but no dying declaration recorded by the I.O. or the doctor — Evidence of witnesses not suffering from any infirmity which would render the dying declaration as doubtful or unworthy of credence — Held, in the circumstances, lapses on the part of the I.O. should not be taken in favour of the accused — Prosecution evidence should be examined dehors such omissions to find out whether the said evidence is reliable or not — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 32

It is true that there is negligence on the part of the investigating officer. On occasions, such negligence or omission may give rise to reasonable doubt which would obviously go in favour of the accused. But in the present case, the evidence of the prosecution witnesses clearly establishes beyond reasonable doubt that the deceased was conscious and he was removed to hospital by bus. All the witnesses deposed that the deceased was in a fit state of health to make the statements on the date of the incident. He expired only after more than 24 hours. No justifiable reason is pointed out to disbelieve the evidence of the number of witnesses who rushed to the scene of offence. Their evidence does not suffer from any infirmity which would render the dying declaration as doubtful or unworthy of the evidence. In such a situation, the lapse on the part of the investigating officer should not be taken in favour of the accused. It may be that such lapse is committed designedly or because of negligence. Hence, the prosecution evidence is required to be examined dehors such omissions to find out whether the said evidence is reliable or not. Paras Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1999) 2 SCC 126: 1999 SCC (Cri) 104: AIR 1999 SC 644: 1999 Cri LJ 1122.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-1-1999]

Ram Bihari Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1998) 4 SCC 517: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1085, relied on

(9) Dying declaration (contd.)

[1711] — Ss. 162 and 154 — Discrepancy between dying declaration and FIR as to number of accused persons — Two accused (the ones in this appeal) named in both FIR and dying declaration, but the other two named only in dying declaration — Relevance of — Held, this would have been relevant for considering conviction of the other accused persons (already acquitted) — Appellant-accused cannot take advantage thereof, as their names were very much there in both documents (Para 5). Ravi v. State of T.N., (2004) 10 SCC 776.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-7-2004]

[1712] — S. 162(2) — Dying declaration recorded by police officer during investigation — Admissibility of — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 32

Although a dying declaration recorded by a police officer during the course of investigation is admissible under S. 32 of the Indian Evidence Act in view of the exception provided in sub-section (2) of S. 162 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, it is better to leave such dying declaration out of consideration until and unless the prosecution satisfies the court as to why it was not recorded by a Magistrate or by a doctor.

The practice of the Investigating Officer himself recording a dying declaration during the course of investigation ought not to be encouraged. It is not that such dying declarations are always untrustworthy, but better and more reliable methods of recording dying declaration of an injured person should be taken recourse to and the one recorded by the police officer may be relied upon if there was no time or facility available to the prosecution for adopting any better method. Dalip Singh v. State of Punjab, (1979) 4 SCC 332: 1979 SCC (Cri) 968: AIR 1979 SC 1173: 1979 Cri LJ 700.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N.L. Untwalia and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-1-1979]

(10) Test Identification Parade

See also CRIMINAL TRIAL — 'Test Identification Parade' in Vol. 3

See also S. 9, EVIDENCE ACT, 1872

[1713] — S. 162 — Investigation — Includes holding of TI parade — Evidentiary value of TI parade — TI parade — Object of — Held, is (i) to enable witnesses to satisfy themselves that the person whom they suspect is really the one who was seen by them committing the offence; and (ii) to satisfy investigating authorities that suspect is the real person whom witnesses had seen in connection with said occurrence

A-1 to A-6 were alleged to have entered house of T at about 10.30 p.m. on 5-6-2003 and threatened family members demanding money and valuables from them. The accused also snatched ornaments worn by them. Thereafter they went out of hut and consumed liquor. After some time they re-entered the hut, armed variously to rob further. They started assaulting the family members, and tied hands and legs of all, except PWs 1 and 8. Three of the dacoits then dragged S, a young girl aged fifteen years out of the hut to a guava garden and gang-raped her. She was brought back dead in naked condition with injuries on her body. PW 8 was also dragged towards the well and raped by one. She was brought back grievously injured. The dacoits thereafter raised the volume of recorder, put on their shoes and walked on the injured, who were unconscious, thinking that all of them were dead. However, PWs 1 and 8 survived, who were eyewitnesses to occurrence. In the occurrence five persons were murdered and two raped.

The accused were convicted under Section 307 read with Section 34, Section 397 read with Sections 395 & 396 and sentenced to death. The High Court by impugned judgment while upholding conviction and death sentence of A-1, A-2 & A-4, sentence in respect of A-3, A-5 & A-6 was altered to life imprisonment with fine. A-1, A-2 & A-4 were also convicted under Section 376(2)(g), while A-3, A-5 & A-6 were acquitted thereunder. High Court held that those who were guilty of rape and murder deserved death sentence, while those who were convicted for murder only were to be awarded life sentence. The High Court noted that the whole incident was extremely revolting, shocking the collective conscience of the community, and the aggravating circumstances outweighed the mitigating circumstances in case of Accused 1, 2 and 4; but held that in the case of others the sentence was to be altered to life sentence.

The accused filed criminal appeals, while State filed appeals challenging alteration of sentence from death to life imprisonment, and also acquittal of three accused under Section 376(2)(g).

Dismissing appeals filed by accused, and allowing appeals filed by the State,

Held :

TI parade of A-1 to A-5 was held on 25-7-2003. PW 1 had identified all the five accused persons, PW 8 had identified A-1, A-3, A-4 and A-5. Subsequently, A-6 was arrested on 7-10-2004 and the TI parade was held immediately thereafter where PWs 1 and 8 identified him. It is to be noted that first TI parade was held on 25-7-2003 in the jail premises where all the five accused persons were made to stand in a queue in the parade hall. PW 25 who was the Magistrate and conducted the TI parade clearly stated that he found the dummies to be acceptable and respectable persons selected by the police, and they were assessed by him and found to be reliable. There is no reason discernible to discredit their evidence. (Paras 19 and 20)

Further, if potholes were to be ferreted out from the proceedings of the Magistrate holding such parades, possibly no TI parade could escape from one or two lapses. If a scrutiny is made from that angle alone and the result of the parade is treated as vitiated every TI parade would become unusable. TI parades are not primarily meant for the court. They are meant for investigation purposes. The object of conducting TI parade is twofold. First is to enable the witnesses to satisfy themselves that the person whom they suspect is really the one who was seen by them in connection with the commission of the crime. Second is to satisfy the investigating authorities that the suspect is the real person whom the witnesses had seen in connection with the said occurrence. (Para 21)

Further, PWs 1 and 8 were the two eyewitnesses to the occurrence. Few discrepancies of trivial and minor nature in their evidence cannot be a reason to discard their evidence. Evidence of PWs 9 and 15 (medical officers) clearly establish allegations of rape. PWs 1 and 8 were grievously injured and were under medical treatment for one and one-and-a-half months respectively. The medical evidence clearly shows that if they had not received medical treatment, both of them would have died. (Paras 22 and 24 to 26)

The murders were not only cruel, brutal but were diabolic. Five members of a family were brutally murdered, they were not known to the accused and there was no animosity towards them. Four of the victims were of tender age, defenceless and the attack was without any provocation. Some of them were so young that they could not resist any attack by the accused. A minor girl of about fifteen years was dragged to the open field, gang-raped and done to death. Hence, there can be no doubt that the case at hand falls under the rarest of rare category. There was no reason to adopt a different yardstick for A-2, A-3 and A-5. In fact, A-3 was the main person. He assaulted PW 1 and took the money from the deceased. Therefore, A-2, A-3 & A-5 also awarded death sentence. In essence all the six accused persons deserve death sentence. (Paras 32, 33 to 35). Ankush Maruti Shinde v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 6 SCC 667.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-4-2009]

Amitsingh Bhikamsingh Thakur v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 2 SCC 310: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 582; Malkhan Singh v. State of M.P., (2003) 5 SCC 746; Devender Pal Singh v. State of (NCT of Delhi), (2002) 5 SCC 234: 2002 SCC (Cri) 978; State of M.P. v. Munna Choubey, (2005) 2 SCC 710: 2005 SCC (Cri) 559; Bantu v. State of U.P., (2008) 11 SCC 113: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 353; Union of India v. Devendra Nath Rai, (2006) 2 SCC 243, relied on

Bachan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1980) 2 SCC 684: 1980 SCC (Cri) 580, followed

[1714] — S. 162 — TI parade — Evidentiary value — Held, photo identification/TIP are all aids in investigation and do not form substantive evidence — Substantive evidence is evidence of witness in court on oath — To say that photo identification is hit by S. 162 CrPC is wrong — Even TIP before Magistrate would otherwise be hit by S. 162 CrPC — Logic behind TIP/photo identification is that where an accused is not known to witnesses, IO conducts TIP to ensure that he has got the right person as accused — Practice is not borne out of procedure, but out of prudence — At best TIP can be brought under S. 8, as evidence of conduct of witness in identifying accused in presence of IO or Magistrate during investigation — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 9 and 8 (Paras 252 to 254 and 259). Manu Sharma v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 6 SCC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and Swatanter Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision : 19-4-2010]

Umar Abdul Sakoor Sorathia v. Narcotic Control Bureau, (2000) 1 SCC 138: 2000 SCC (Cri) 200; Mullagiri Vajram v. State of A.P., 1993 Supp (2) SCC 198: 1993 SCC (Cri) 496, relied on

Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1994) 3 SCC 569: 1994 SCC (Cri) 899, held, distinguished

N.J. Suraj v. State, (2004) 11 SCC 346: 2004 SCC (Cri) Supp 85; Laxmipat Choraria v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1968 SC 938: 1968 Cri LJ 1124; Kanan v. State of Kerala, (1979) 3 SCC 319: 1979 SCC (Cri) 621; Dana Yadav v. State of Bihar, (2002) 7 SCC 295: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1698; Vijayan v. State of Kerala, (1999) 3 SCC 54: 1999 SCC (Cri) 378; George v. State of Kerala, (1998) 4 SCC 605: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1232; Hari Nath v. State of U.P., (1988) 1 SCC 14: 1988 SCC (Cri) 14, distinguished [1715] — S. 162 — Evidentiary value and importance of TIP — Held, does not constitute substantive evidence — Substantive evidence is the evidence of identification in court — Said tests however have immense corroborative value — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 9 (Paras 17 and 16). Munshi Singh Gautam v. State of M.P., (2005) 9 SCC 631: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1269: AIR 2005 SC 402: 2005 Cri LJ 320.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-11-2004]

[1716] — S. 162 — Test Identification Parade — When necessary — If obligatory — Held, failure to hold a test identification parade would not make inadmissible the evidence of identification

(10) Test Identification Parade (contd.)

in court — Weight to be attached to such identification is a matter for court of fact — It would depend on how reliable testimony as to identification is, uncorroborated by a test identification parade — Prosecution has to be cautious to ensure that there is no scope for accused to allege that evidence of identification is vitiated due to non-holding of (a timely) TI parade — If, however, circumstances are beyond control of the prosecution and there is some delay, it cannot be said to be fatal to the prosecution — Position where accused previously known to witness concerned, not known and seen only once, and not known and seen a number of times, distinguished — On facts, a TI parade would have made no difference as one witness did not claim to have seen the accused and the other's evidence was in any case unreliable as it was full of unexplained contradictions — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 9

The substantive evidence is the evidence of identification in court. Apart from the clear provisions of Section 9 of the Evidence Act, the position in law is well settled by a catena of decisions of the Supreme Court. The facts which establish the identity of the accused persons are relevant under Section 9 of the Evidence Act. Identification tests do not constitute substantive evidence. They are primarily meant for the purpose of helping the investigating agency with an assurance that their progress with the investigation into the offence is proceeding on the right lines. The identification can only be used as corroborative of the statement in court. The identification proceedings are in the nature of tests and significantly, therefore, there is no provision for them in the Code and the Evidence Act. The identification parades belong to the stage of investigation, and there is no provision in the Code which obliges the investigating agency to hold or confers a right upon the accused to claim a test identification parade. These parades are essentially governed by Section 162 CrPC. (Paras 17 and 16)

The evidence of mere identification of the accused person at the trial for the first time is from its very nature inherently of a weak character. The purpose of a prior test identification, therefore, is to test and strengthen the trustworthiness of that evidence. It is, accordingly, considered a safe rule of prudence to generally look for corroboration of the sworn testimony of witnesses in court as to the identity of the accused. This rule of prudence, however, is subject to exceptions, when, for example, the court is impressed by a particular witness on whose testimony it can safely rely, without such or other corroboration. Therefore, failure to hold a test identification parade would not make inadmissible the evidence of identification in Court. The weight to be attached to such identification should be a matter for the Courts of fact. In appropriate cases it may accept the evidence of identification even without insisting on corroboration for instance, on the basis of the identification in Court corroborated by other circumstantial evidence. The necessity for holding an identification parade can arise only when the accused are not previously known to the witnesses. The whole idea of a test identification parade is that witnesses who claim to have seen the culprits at the time of occurrence are to identify them from the midst of other persons without any aid or any other source. The test is done to check upon their veracity and also to enable the prosecution to decide whether all or any of them could be cited as eyewitnesses of the crime. (Paras 16, 17 and 19)

When the accused person is not previously known to the witness concerned then identification of the accused by the witness soon after his arrest is of great importance because it furnishes an assurance that the investigation is proceeding on right lines in addition to furnishing corroboration of the evidence to be given by the witness later in court at the trial. From this point of view it is a matter of great importance, both for the investigating agency and for the accused and a fortiori for the proper administration of justice that such identification is held without avoidable and unreasonable delay after the arrest of the accused. This becomes necessary to eliminate the possibility of the accused being shown to the witnesses prior to the test identification parade. This is a very common plea of the accused and, therefore, the prosecution has to be cautious to ensure that there is no scope for making such an allegation. If, however, circumstances are beyond control and there is some delay, it cannot be said to be fatal to the prosecution. It is in adopting this course alone that justice and fair play can be assured both to the accused as well as to the prosecution. But the position may be different when the accused or a culprit who stands trial had been seen not once but for quite a number of times at different points of time and places which fact may do away with the necessity of TI parade. (Paras 17 and 22)

In the present case test identification parade would have been of no consequence in view of PW 14's evidence that he did not know the physical description of the accused-appellants as he had not seen them on the date of occurrence. What remains is the evidence of PW 12. The latter's evidence is full of unexplained contradictions. Therefore, the evidence of PW 12 and PW 14 are not sufficient to fasten guilt on the accused persons. (Para 27). Munshi Singh Gautam v. State of M.P., (2005) 9 SCC 631: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1269: AIR 2005 SC 402: 2005 Cri LJ 320.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-11-2004]

Matru v. State of U.P., (1971) 2 SCC 75: 1971 SCC (Cri) 391; Santokh Singh v. Izhar Hussain, (1973) 2 SCC 406: 1973 SCC (Cri) 828; Kanta Prashad v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1958 SC 350: 1958 Cri LJ 698; Vaikuntam Chandrappa v. State of A.P., AIR 1960 SC 1340: 1960 Cri LJ 1681; Budhsen v. State of U.P., (1970) 2 SCC 128: 1970 SCC (Cri) 343; Rameshwar Singh v. State of J&K, (1971) 2 SCC 715: 1971 SCC (Cri) 638; Jadunath Singh v. State of U.P., (1970) 3 SCC 518: 1971 SCC (Cri) 124; Parkash Chand Sogani v. State of Rajasthan, Criminal App. No. 92 of 1956, decided on 15-1-1957 (SC); Harbajan Singh v. State of J&K, (1975) 4 SCC 480: 1975 SCC (Cri) 545; Ram Nath Mahto v. State of Bihar, (1996) 8 SCC 630: 1996 SCC (Cri) 726; Suresh Chandra Bahri v. State of Bihar, 1995 Supp (1) SCC 80: 1995 SCC (Cri) 60; State of U.P. v. Boota Singh, (1979) 1 SCC 31: 1979 SCC (Cri) 115; Ramanbhai Naranbhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2000) 1 SCC 358: 2000 SCC (Cri) 113; Maikhansingh v. State of M.P., (2003) 5 SCC 746: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1247, relied on

(11) Hearsay evidence/Extra-judicial confession

See also under S. 164, below

See also under CRIMINAL TRIAL in Vol. 3

[1717] — S. 162 — Extra-judicial confession — In view of discrepancies regarding persons to whom and the occasion when the confession was made and the precise statement made by the accused, held, such confession is unreliable — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 24 and 26. State of M.P. v. Dayaram, 1981 Supp SCC 14: 1981 SCC (Cri) 601: AIR 1981 SC 2007.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: O. Chinnappa Reddy and Baharul Islam, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-2-1981]

[1718] — S. 162 — Hearsay — Cross-examination of hostile witness bringing out by way of a contradiction that the said witness stated before police that people of locality knew that accused was a hired contract-killer — Held, such statement not substantive evidence — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 60 and 145. Bullu Das v. State of Bihar, (1998) 8 SCC 130.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-11-1998]

— S. 163 See also S. 163, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 1023 in Vol. 2

— S. 163 See Ss. 154 to 173
See also Ss. 154 to 173 and 482
See also Ss. 157 to 167
See also Ss. 157 to 172 and 198
See also Ss. 157 to 173
See also Ss. 157, 160 to 168
See also Ss. 162, 163 and 313
See also Ss. 164 and 163, 162

[1719] — S. 163 — Human rights — Third-degree treatment by police offends human rights concept — State urged to take adequate measures — Constitution of India — Art. 21. Raghbir Singh v. State of Haryana, (1980) 3 SCC 70: 1980 SCC (Cri) 526: AIR 1980 SC 1087: (1980) 6 ALR 266: 1980 Cri LJ 801.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer and E.S. Venkataramiah, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-1980]

[1720] — S. 163 — Third-degree treatment by investigating officer causing death in lock-up — No error in appreciation of evidence and concurrent findings of courts below on commission of offence under S. 302 by the accused officer — No interference by Supreme Court under Art. 136 called for. Raghbir Singh v. State of Haryana, (1980) 3 SCC 70: 1980 SCC (Cri) 526: AIR 1980 SC 1087: (1980) 6 ALR 266: 1980 Cri LJ 801.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer and E.S. Venkataramiah, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-1980]

[1721] — Ss. 163, 161 and 156 — Practice of police using third degree method in investigational works deprecated — Police should insist more on thorough investigation than on obtaining confessions from witnesses or suspects by hook or crook — Court's duty in this respect pointed out. Dagdu v. State of Maharashtra, (1977) 3 SCC 68: 1977 SCC (Cri) 421: AIR 1977 SC 1579: (1977) 3 SCR 636: 1977 Cri LJ 1206.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud[1], P.K. Goswami[2] and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-4-1977]

[1722] — Ss. 163 and 161 — Third degree treatment to arrested person by police deprecated — Police must adopt some scientific method instead of resorting to the barbaric method of physical torture

It may be a legitimate right of any police officer to interrogate or arrest any suspect on some credible material but such an arrest must be in accordance with the law and the interrogation does not mean inflicting injuries. It should be in its true sense purposeful, namely, to make the investigation effective. Torturing a person and using third degree methods are of medieval nature and they are barbaric and contrary to law. The police would be accomplishing behind their closed doors precisely what the demands of our legal order forbid. They must adopt some scientific methods than resorting to physical torture. If the custodians of law themselves indulge in committing crimes then no member of the society is safe and secure. If police officers who have to provide security and protection to the citizens indulge in such methods they are creating a sense of insecurity in the minds of the citizens. It is more heinous than a game-keeper becoming a poacher. Bhagwan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1992) 3 SCC 249: 1992 SCC (Cri) 629: AIR 1992 SC 1689: 1992 Cri LJ 3144.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and R.C. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-1992]

Dagdu v. State of Maharashtra, (1977) 3 SCC 68: 1977 SCC (Cri) 421, relied on

[1723] — Ss. 163, 161 and 157 — Third-degree treatment by police to prosecutrix to elicit information — If justified to remove fear psychosis of the victims to encourage them to speak out about the misdeeds committed by the accused — Allegation of torture and beating of rape victims by police — Victims, inmates of an Ashram, reluctant to disclose about rape committed by accused head of the Ashram out of fear because of threat of dire consequences given by the accused to them — Beating given by police to the victims to shake off their fear and make them free to speak truth — Held on facts and circumstances, such beating not fatal to the prosecution case

All the victim girls were in one voice that because of fear of A-1, ladies in the Ashram did not tell the police that A-1 had sexual contact with them. They further stated that just one hour before the arrest of A-1, he called all the Ashram ladies and threatened that nobody should tell the police that he had sexual contact with them. The victim girls were also in one voice that A-1 had given a press statement that he would come out on bail in two days and the victim girls were frightened that if the accused really came out on bail he would take stern action against them. Keeping in view the trauma and agony suffered by all the victim girls at the hands of A-1, it is expected that the victim girls were reluctant to disclose the misdeeds of A-1 for fear of reprisals. Moreover, there was no complaint of torture or coercion of the prosecutrix by police before the High Court in certain habeas corpus proceedings initiated by some DWs. On the other hand, one of the prosecutrix had admitted that they had started disclosing the facts after the police beat them. It is in that context the High Court held that the so-called beating could have meant to shake off their inhibition and fear, to make them free to say what they wanted to say. In the given facts and circumstances of this case, beating will mean to remove the fear psychosis and to come out with truth. There is no infirmity in the concurrent findings recorded by both the courts below on this count. (Paras 52 to 56). Kamalanantha v. State of T.N., (2005) 5 SCC 194: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1121: AIR 2005 SC 2132.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-2005]

[1724] — Ss. 163 and 161 — Interrogation — Third-degree methods — Use of, by police during interrogation — Reasons behind such practice — Tackling of custodial violence — Improvements to be made and measures to be taken for — Custodial violence/torture — Third-degree methods — Use of, by police during interrogation — Reasons behind such practice — Tackling of custodial violence — Improvements to be made and measures to be taken for — Held, lack of training in scientific investigation methods, lack of modern equipment and adequate police personnel and lack of a mindset respecting human rights are general reasons for the said illegal practice — Further, expectation of public (and men in power) regarding quick results from police builds enormous pressure on police leading them to resort to third-degree methods — Therefore, need is of attitudinal change not only in minds of police but also on the part of the public — Difficulties in criminal investigation and the time required for such investigation should be recognised — Police should be allowed to function methodically without interferences or unnecessary pressures — Duties of public, Govt. and men in power for better police performances, indicated — Custodial violence to be tackled by taking measures that are remedial and preventive — Award of compensation is one of the remedial measures — Preventive measures like reorientation of police training to bring change in mindset and attitude of police as regards human rights, adoption of scientific investigation methods and modern techniques of record maintenance, compliance with requirements enumerated in D.K. Basu, (1997) 1 SCC 416, continuous monitoring and supervision of lower level police officers, etc. commended — Emphasis laid on a balanced functioning where police respect human rights, adhere to law and take confidence-building measures and also firmly deal with serious crimes — Constitution of India — Art. 21

Unfortunately, police in the country have given room for an impression in the minds of public that whenever there is a crime investigation usually means rounding up all persons concerned (say all servants in the event of a theft in the employer's house, or all acquaintances of the deceased, in the event of a murder) and subjecting them to third-degree interrogation in the hope that someone will spill the beans. This impression may not be correct, but instances are not wanting where police have resorted to such a practice. Lack of training in scientific investigative methods, lack of modern equipment, lack of adequate personnel and lack of a mindset respecting human rights, are generally the reasons for such illegal action. One other main reason is that the public (and men in power) expect results from police in too short a span of time, forgetting that methodical and scientific investigation is a time-consuming and lengthy process. Police are branded as inefficient even when there is a short delay in catching the culprits in serious crimes. The expectation of quick results in high-profile or heinous crimes builds enormous pressure on the police to somehow "catch" the "offender". The need to have quick results tempts them to resort to third-degree methods. They also tend to arrest "someone" in a hurry on the basis of incomplete investigation, just to ease the pressure. Time has come for an attitudinal change not only in the minds of the police, but also on the part of the public. Difficulties in criminal investigation and the time required for such investigation should be recognised, and police should be allowed to function methodically without interferences or unnecessary pressures. If police are to perform better, the public should support them, Government should strengthen and equip them, and men in power should not interfere or belittle them. The three wings of the Government should encourage, insist and ensure thorough scientific investigation under proper legal procedures, followed by prompt and efficient prosecution. (Para 48)

Custodial violence requires to be tackled from two ends, that is, by taking measures that are remedial and preventive. Award of compensation is one of the remedial measures after the event. Effort should be made to remove the very causes which lead to custodial violence so as to prevent such occurrences. Following steps, if taken, may prove to be effective preventive measures:

(a) Police training should be reoriented, to bring in a change in the mindset and attitude of the police personnel in regard to investigations, so that they will recognise and respect human rights, and adopt thorough and scientific investigation methods.

(b) The functioning of lower level police officers should be continuously monitored and supervised by their superiors to prevent custodial violence and ensure adherence to lawful standard methods of investigation.

(c) Compliance with the eleven requirements enumerated in D.K. Basu, (1997) 1 SCC 416, should be ensured in all cases of arrest and detention.

(d) Simple and foolproof procedures should be introduced for prompt registration of first information reports relating to all crimes.

(e) Computerisation, video-recording and modern methods of records maintenance should be introduced to avoid manipulations, insertions, substitutions and antedating in regard to FIRs, mahazars, inquest proceedings, post-mortem reports and statements of witnesses, etc. and to bring in transparency in action.

(f) An independent investigating agency (preferably the respective Human Rights Commissions or CBI) may be entrusted with adequate power, to investigate complaints of custodial violence against police personnel and take stern and speedy action followed by prosecution, wherever necessary. (Para 49)

Thus, the endeavour should be to achieve a balanced level of functioning, where police respect human rights, adhere to law, and take confidence-building measures (CBMs), and at the same time, firmly deal with organised crime, terrorism, white-collared crime, deteriorating law and order situation, etc. (Para 49). Sube Singh v. State of Haryana, (2006) 3 SCC 178: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 54: AIR 2006 SC 1117: (2006) 102 Cut LT 19.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal, C.J. and B.N. Srikrishna and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-2-2006]

[1725] — S. 163 — Police investigation — Third-degree treatment by police to accused criticised — Remedy is specialised training must be given to the investigating agency

Long-run recipes must be innovated whereby fists are replaced by wits, ignorance by awareness, 'third degree' by civilised tools and technology. Special training, special legal courses, technological and other detective updating are important. An aware policeman is the best social asset towards crimelessness. The consciousness of the official as much as of the community is the healing hope for a crime-ridden society. Judge-centred remedies don't work in the absence of community-centred rights. Investigatory personnel must be separated from the general mass and given in-service specialisation of many hues on a scientific basis. The policemen must be released from addiction to coercion and sensitized to constitutional values. Nandini Satpathy v. P.L. Dani, (1978) 2 SCC 424: 1978 SCC (Cri) 236: AIR 1978 SC 1025: 1978 Cri LJ 968.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer, Jaswant Singh and V.D. Tulzapurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-4-1978]

[1726] — S. 163 — Police protection — Held, should be provided to witnesses in cases of gruesome murders, so that witnesses can depose freely

In a case of gruesome murder, police protection should be given to witnesses so that they can depose freely. Unless that is done the result would be that justice would not be done to the victim. The accused persons with money and power can trample on any witness who dares to depose against them. The victor will be injustice and it would be a slur on the criminal justice system if it so happens. (Para 32). State of Maharashtra v. Mangilal, (2009) 15 SCC 418: (2009) 76 AIC 1 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-3-2009]

Section 164 — Confessions and Statements before Magistrate

— S. 164 See also S. 164 Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 1023 et seq. in Vol. 2

See also under CRIMINAL TRIAL in Vol. 3

See also Ss. 24 to 31, EVIDENCE ACT, 1872

Synopsis

(1) Generally 524

(2) Manner of recording confession — Compliance with precautions under S. 164 526

(3) Who can record confession under S. 164 538

(4) Person who may get statement recorded under S. 164 540

(5) Admissibility of confession/statement recorded under S. 164 — Voluntariness 541

(6) Reliability of judicial confession: basing of conviction thereon 546

(7) Retracted judicial confession 551

(8) Confession/Statement of co-accused/approver 558

(9) Extra-judicial confession/Hearsay evidence 560

(10) Dying declaration 562

(11) Dying declarant surviving 564

(12) Statements of witnesses recorded under S. 164 564

(13) Confession recorded under S. 164 at instance of police 566

— S. 164 See Ss. 40, 162 and 164

See also Ss. 154 to 173

See also Ss. 154 to 173 and 482

See also Ss. 154 and 164

See also Ss. 154 and 173

See also Ss. 157 to 167

See also Ss. 157 to 172 and 198

See also Ss. 157, 160 to 168

See also Ss. 157, 161 and 164

See also Ss. 157, 161, 164, 311 and 391

See also Ss. 157 and 173

See also Ss. 161 and 164

See also Ss. 162, 161 and 164

See also Ss. 162 and 164

See also Ss. 307, 306(1) & (4) and 164

See also Ss. 374, 386 and 164

— S. 164(4) See Ss. 164(2) and (4)

— S. 164(5) See Ss. 164(1) & (5), 154 to 160, 165 to 173(5) & (8) and 311

(1) Generally

See also S. 164, '(2) Manner of recording confession — Compliance with precautions under S. 164',

'(5) Admissibility of confession/statement recorded under S. 164 — Voluntariness', and

'(6) Reliability of judicial confession: basing of conviction thereon', below

[1727] — S. 164 — Recording of confession by Magistrate — Nature and object of the provision — Provision mandatory — Procedure — Precautions to be taken

Per K. Ramaswamy, J.

The Magistrate before recording the confession should properly question the accused, as far as may be necessary, elicit from him whatever facts he is willing to state; to understand exactly what his meaning is and how far he intends his confession or admission to go. The confession must be recorded with great care and circumspection. The Magistrate must record the questions put to the accused to ascertain whether the confession was of voluntary nature, that he will not have to go back to the police custody after statement was recorded; to warn the accused of the consequences which would ensue if the confession is false or if he has in the hope of release implicated himself and to ask the accused whether the police or any other person had subjected him to ill-treatment etc. No hard and fast rule could or should be laid down as to the procedure which would be adopted when an accused is brought before the Magistrate to record his confession. Confession extracted while in custodial interrogation excites suspicion of its voluntariness. But when it is recorded by the Judicial Magistrate it removes the stains and assures voluntariness. The object of keeping the accused/suspect in judicial custody and giving him sufficient time for reflection and necessary warnings reinforces it since sufficient time given the accused frees himself from the pressure of police interrogation and for reflection before making confession. It will have sobering effect on the accused/suspect. Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1994) 3 SCC 569: 1994 SCC (Cri) 899: 1994 Cri LJ 3139.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian[1], M.M. Punchhi[1], K. Ramaswamy[2], S.C. Agrawal[1] and R.M. Sahai[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-1994]

[1728] — S. 164 — "Confession" — What is — Relationship with admissions — Probative value of — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 24 and 17

A confession must either admit in terms the offence, or at any rate substantially all the facts which constitute the offence. An admission of a gravely incriminating fact, even a conclusively incriminating fact is not of itself a confession. "Confessions", which is a terminology used in criminal law is a species of "admissions" as defined in Section 17 of the Evidence Act. An admission is a statement, oral or documentary which enables the court to draw an inference as to any fact in issue or relevant fact. It is trite to say that every confession must necessarily be an admission, but, every admission does not necessarily amount to a confession. (Paras 28 and 27)

Confessions are considered highly reliable because no rational person would make an admission against his interest unless prompted by his conscience to tell the truth. (Para 29). State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715: 2005 Cri LJ 3950: (2005) 122 DLT 194.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2005]

Pakala Narayana Swami v. Emperor, AIR 1939 PC 47: 40 Cri LJ 364, relied on

Taylor's Treatise on the Law of Evidence, Vol. I, referred to [1729] — S. 164 — Confession — Whether the statement recorded by Judicial Magistrate is a confessional statement — Test

The test of discerning whether a statement recorded by a Judicial Magistrate under Section 164 from an accused is confessional or non-confessional is not by dissecting the statement into different sentences and then to pick out some as not inculpative. The statement must be read as a whole and then only the court should decide whether it contains admissions of his incriminatory involvement in the offence. If the result of that test is positive then the statement is confessional, otherwise not. Applying that test it must be held that the confessional statement attributed to the accused LS, does incriminate him very much. At any rate it is not exculpative despite the possibility of reading one or two sentences culled out separately from the rest of it, in order to say that they are not tantamounting to inculpative nature. (Para 12). Lokeman Shah v. State of W.B., (2001) 5 SCC 235: 2001 SCC (Cri) 829: AIR 2001 SC 1760: 2001 Cri LJ 2196.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.T. Thomas, R.P. Sethi and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-4-2001]

[1730] — S. 164 — Confession must be considered so as to buttress other evidence and not vice versa (Para 133). Aloke Nath Dutta v. State of W.B., (2007) 12 SCC 230: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 264.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-12-2006]

[1731] — Ss. 164, 154 and 276 — Contradiction/corroboration of statements in FIR and/or under S. 164 — Proper procedure, stated — Defence not having drawn prosecutrix's attention to her statements in FIR, held, cannot find contradictions in her statements made in FIR with those recorded by court under S. 276

FIR or statement recorded under Section 164 CrPC does not constitute substantive evidence of truth of the facts. But it may be used for contradiction or corroboration of a witness who made it. However previous statement in FIR cannot be used unless the attention of witness has first been drawn to those parts by which it is proposed to contradict the witness. (Paras 15 and 16)

It is for the defence to invite the victim's attention as to what she stated under Sections 154 or 164 CrPC for the purposes of bringing out the contradictions, if any, in her evidence. In the absence of the same the court cannot read the Section 164 statement and compare the same with her evidence. The attention of the prosecutrix (PW 14) has not been drawn to those parts of the FIR which according to the appellants are not in conformity with her evidence. The contents of the first information report were never put to the victim. (Paras 14 to 16). Utpal Das v. State of W.B., (2010) 6 SCC 493.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : B. Sudershan Reddy and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision : 7-5-2010]

(2) Manner of recording confession — Compliance with precautions under S. 164

See also S. 164, '(5) Admissibility of confession/statement recorded under S. 164 — Voluntariness', and

'(6) Reliability of judicial confession: basing of conviction thereon' below

[1732] — S. 164 — Recording of confession "in the course of investigation" under Ch. XII — Procedure and requirements for — An accused can himself appear before a Magistrate, instead of being produced by police, and ask for recording his confession — But unless the Magistrate has reason to believe that investigation has commenced and the person asking for recording of his confession is concerned in such case, he cannot record confession on his mere asking — If any person appears before a Magistrate and the Magistrate does not know that the appearance is in the course of investigation, he should inform the police about it so that police may take steps required under Ch. XII

The confession of A-1 having not been recorded by the Magistrate (PW 2) "in the course of an investigation", cannot be brought under Section 164 CrPC. No doubt, an accused person can appear before a Magistrate and it is not necessary that such accused should be produced by the police for recording the confession. But it is necessary that such appearance must be "in the course of an investigation" under Chapter XII of the Code. If the Magistrate does not know that he is concerned in a case for which investigation has been commenced under the provisions of Chapter XII, it is not permissible for him to record the confession. If any person simply barges into the court and demands the Magistrate to record his confession as he has committed a cognizable offence, the course open to the Magistrate is to inform the police about it. The police in turn has to take the steps envisaged in Chapter XII of the Code. It may be possible for the Magistrate to record a confession if he has reason to believe that investigation has commenced and that the person who appeared before him demanding recording of his confession is concerned in such case. Otherwise the court of a Magistrate is not a place into which all and sundry can gatecrash and demand the Magistrate to record whatever he says as self-incriminatory. (Para 21). Mahabir Singh v. State of Haryana, (2001) 7 SCC 148: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1262: AIR 2001 SC 2503.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-7-2001]

Jogendra Nahak v. State of Orissa, (2000) 1 SCC 272: 2000 SCC (Cri) 210, relied on

[1733] — S. 164 — Confession — Recording of — Compliance with procedure under — Principles, stated — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 30

The following principles emerge with regard to recording of confessional statements under Section 164 CrPC:

(i) The provisions of Section 164 CrPC must be complied with not only in form, but in essence.

(ii) Before proceeding to record the confessional statement, a searching enquiry must be made from the accused as to the custody from which he was produced and the treatment he had been receiving in such custody in order to ensure that there is no scope for doubt of any sort of extraneous influence proceeding from a source interested in the prosecution.

(iii) A Magistrate should ask the accused as to why he wants to make a statement which surely shall go against his interest in the trial.

(iv) The maker should be granted sufficient time for reflection.

(v) He should be assured of protection from any sort of apprehended torture or pressure from the police in case he declines to make a confessional statement.

(vi) A judicial confession not given voluntarily is unreliable, more so, when such a confession is retracted, the conviction cannot be based on such retracted judicial confession.

(vii) Non-compliance with Section 164 CrPC goes to the root of the Magistrate's jurisdiction to record the confession and renders the confession unworthy of credence.

(viii) During the time of reflection, the accused should be completely out of police influence. The judicial officer, who is entrusted with the duty of recording confession, must apply his judicial mind to ascertain and satisfy his conscience that the statement of the accused is not on account of any extraneous influence on him.

(ix) At the time of recording the statement of the accused, no police or police official shall be present in the open court.

(x) Confession of a co-accused is a weak type of evidence.

(xi) Usually the court requires some corroboration from the confessional statement before convicting the accused person on such a statement. (Para 64). Dara Singh v. Republic of India, (2011) 2 SCC 490.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-1-2011]

Bhagwan Singh v. State of M.P., (2003) 3 SCC 21: 2003 SCC (Cri) 712; Shivappa v. State of Karnataka, (1995) 2 SCC 76: 1995 SCC (Cri) 323; Dagdu v. State of Maharashtra, (1977) 3 SCC 68: 1977 SCC (Cri) 421; Davendra Prasad Tiwari v. State of U.P., (1978) 4 SCC 474: 1979 SCC (Cri) 95; Kalawati v. State of H.P., AIR 1953 SC 131: 1953 Cri LJ 668: 1953 SCR 546; State v. Nalini, (1999) 5 SCC 253: 1999 SCC (Cri) 691; State of Maharashtra v. Damu, (2000) 6 SCC 269: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1088, relied on

[1734] — S. 164 — Recording of confession — Precautions to be taken by the Magistrate

The Magistrate had taken all necessary precautions to ensure that the appellant had sufficient time to reflect before he made his confessional statement and that he was under no fear or threat or allurement before appearing in the court to make the statement. The various questions put by the learned Magistrate to the appellant indicate that he had taken all reasonable precautions to remove any trace of fear from the appellant before he made the confessional statement. The caution envisaged by S. 164 CrPC was properly administered to him and he was told in no uncertain terms that he was not bound to make the statement and that if he did make one, it could be used against him. Bheru Singh v. State of Rajasthan, (1994) 2 SCC 467: 1994 SCC (Cri) 555: (1994) 1 Crimes 630: (1994) 1 ALT (Cri) 695: (1994) 31 ACC 240.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-2-1994]

[1735] — S. 164 — Recording of confession by Magistrate — Nature and object of the provision — Provision mandatory — Procedure — Precautions to be taken

Per K. Ramaswamy, J.

The Magistrate before recording the confession should properly question the accused, as far as may be necessary, elicit from him whatever facts he is willing to state; to understand exactly what his meaning is and how far he intends his confession or admission to go. The confession must be recorded with great care and circumspection. The Magistrate must record the questions put to the accused to ascertain whether the confession was of voluntary nature, that he will not have to go back to the police custody after statement was recorded; to warn the accused of the consequences which would ensue if the confession is false or if he has in the hope of release implicated himself and to ask the accused whether the police or any other person had subjected him to ill-treatment etc. No hard and fast rule could or should be laid down as to the procedure which would be adopted when an accused is brought before the Magistrate to record his confession. Confession extracted while in custodial interrogation excites suspicion of its voluntariness. But when it is recorded by the Judicial Magistrate it removes the stains and assures voluntariness. The object of keeping the accused/suspect in judicial custody and giving him sufficient time for reflection and necessary warnings reinforces it since sufficient time given the accused frees himself from the pressure of police interrogation and for reflection before making confession. It will have sobering effect on the accused/suspect. Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1994) 3 SCC 569: 1994 SCC (Cri) 899: 1994 Cri LJ 3139.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian[1], M.M. Punchhi[1], K. Ramaswamy[2], S.C. Agrawal[1] and R.M. Sahai[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-1994]

[1736] — Ss. 164, 281 and 463 — Judicial confession — Recording of — Procedure for — Compliance with — Defect in recording confession — Curability of — Defect of failure of Judicial Magistrate to record the question as to whether there was any pressure on maker of confession i.e. SA to give confessional statement — Held, the said defect was cured by S. 463 CrPC as the mandatory requirement provided under S. 164(2) CrPC, namely, explaining to accused that he was not bound to make a statement and if a statement is made the same might be used against him had been complied with — Statement was recorded after the doctor under whose care SA was at the relevant time opined that SA was fit to make statement — Magistrate stated in his certificate appended to statement (i) that the confession was read over to SA and admitted by her to be correct and it contained a full and true account of statement made by SA, and (ii) that he believed that the confession was made voluntarily — Except Magistrate and doctor, no one was present in room while statement was recorded — Evidence of Magistrate in court that he had asked the question to SA which he failed to record — No prejudice caused to SA in her defence due to the said omission — Thus, the confession of SA having been recorded according to procedure set out in S. 164 r/w S. 281 CrPC and the defect in question being curable under S. 463 CrPC, the said confession was admissible in evidence — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 91

As regards the judicial confession of SA, it is to be seen whether it has been recorded according to the procedure prescribed by Section 164 CrPC. When the Judicial Magistrate i.e. PW 62 reached the hospital, before recording the statement of SA he sought opinion of the doctor (PW 32) as to the fitness of SA to make the statement. As in the opinion of PW 32, SA was fit to make the statement, PW 62 proceeded to record it. PW 62 warned SA that she was not bound to make any confessional statement and in case she did so, it might be used against her as evidence. In spite of the said warning, SA volunteered to make the statement and only thereafter the statement was recorded by PW 62. In the certificate that was appended to the said confessional statement PW 62 has very categorically stated that he had explained to SA that she was not bound to make a confession and that if she did so, any confession she would make, might be used as evidence against her and that he believed that the confession was voluntarily made. He further stated that he read over the statement to the person making it and admitted by her to be correct and that it contained a full and true account of the statement made by her. PW 62 has stated that SA had given the statement after taking due time after understanding each aspect. It also appears that he was satisfied that she was not under any pressure from any corner. Therefore, it is evident from the certificate appended to the confessional statement by PW 62 that the confessional statement was made by the accused voluntarily. Of course, he failed to record the question that was put by him to the accused whether there was any pressure on her to give a statement, but PW 62 has stated in his evidence before the court that he had asked the accused orally whether she was under any pressure, threat or fear and he was satisfied that SA was not under any pressure from any corner, that in the room in which the said confessional statement was recorded it was only he and PW 32 who were present and none else and that no police officer was available even within the precincts of the hospital. The failure of PW 62 to record the question put and the answer given in the confessional statement has not caused prejudice to the accused in her defence. The said defect is cured by Section 463 CrPC as the mandatory requirement provided under Section 164(2) CrPC, namely, explaining to the accused that he was not bound to make a statement and if a statement is made the same might be used against him has been complied with and the same is established from the certificate appended to the statement and from the evidence of PW 62. In the light of above, there is no hesitation in holding that the judicial confession having been recorded according to the procedure set out in Section 164 read with Section 281 and the defect made while recording the same being curable by Section 463, it is admissible in evidence. (Paras 22 to 26 and 33). Ram Singh v. Sonia, (2007) 3 SCC 1: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 2007 SC 1218: 2007 Cri LJ 1642.

(2) Manner of recording confession — Compliance with precautions under S. 164 (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-2-2007]

State of U.P. v. Singhara Singh, AIR 1964 SC 358: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 263 (2), relied on

Nazir Ahmad v. King Emperor, (1935-36) 63 IA 372: AIR 1936 PC 253 (2); Preetam v. State of M.P., (1996) 10 SCC 432: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1343; Tulsi Singh v. State of Punjab, (1996) 6 SCC 63: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1118; Babu Singh v. State of Punjab, (1963) 3 SCR 749: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 566, distinguished on facts

[1737] — S. 164 — Confession — Precautions needed in recording — Accused brought before Magistrate handcuffed in police custody — Magistrate must ask specific question to ensure that no physical or mental pressure was put on him by investigating agency — Magistrate must also ask why he wants to make the confessional statement which may incriminate him — Magistrate should give sufficient time to accused and also assure him of protection from any apprehended torture or pressure in case of his refusal to make confession — Confession must also be recorded in question-answer form

The first precaution that a Judicial Magistrate is required to take is to prevent forcible extraction of confession by the prosecuting agency. The provisions of Section 164 CrPC must be complied with not only in form, but in essence. Before proceeding to record the confessional statement, a searching enquiry must be made from the accused as to the custody from which he was produced and the treatment he had been receiving in such custody in order to ensure that there is no scope for doubt of any sort of extraneous influence proceeding from a source interested in the prosecution. In this case the acquitted accused who was arrested along with the co-accused was produced handcuffed before the Judicial Magistrate in police custody for recording his confession. The Judicial Magistrate also admitted in his statement that he was produced by the police through the police station and after recording his statement, he was given back to the custody of the police. If the acquitted accused P was in police custody, in accordance with the requirement of Section 164 CrPC the Magistrate should have taken care to ascertain that there had been no third-degree methods used by the police against him to extract a confession. The Magistrate in deposition as PW 1 said that he questioned the accused and the latter confirmed that he was making a statement voluntarily without any pressure. But the record of confession does not show that any specific questions were put to the accused whether any physical or mental pressure was put on him by the investigating agency. There was, therefore, every possibility for the accused to have been physically and mentally pressurised for giving a judicial confession on an assurance that he would be made a prosecution witness as an approver. (Paras 27 and 29)

The Magistrate in particular should ask the accused as to why he wants to make a statement which surely shall go against his interest in the trial. He should be granted sufficient time for reflection. He should also be assured of protection from any sort of apprehended torture or pressure from the police in case he declines to make a confessional statement. Unfortunately, in this case, the evidence of the Judicial Magistrate (PW 1) does not show that any such precaution was taken before recording the judicial confession. (Para 28)

The confession is also not recorded in question-and-answer form which is the manner indicated in the criminal court rules. (Para 29). Bhagwan Singh v. State of M.P., (2003) 3 SCC 21: 2003 SCC (Cri) 712: AIR 2003 SC 1088: 2003 Cri LJ 1262: (2003) 3 MPLJ 297.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu, D.M. Dharmadhikari and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-1-2003]

State of U.P. v. Singhara Singh, AIR 1964 SC 358: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 263(2); Shivappa v. State of Karnataka, (1995) 2 SCC 76: 1995 SCC (Cri) 323, relied on

[1738] — S. 164 — Non-compliance with while recording confessions under, not met — Effect — Held, non-compliance with S. 164 procedures impairs evidentiary value of confession and casts a doubt on nature and voluntariness of confession on which no reliance can be placed, as in case of most accused in this case

Dock identification or photo identification though is admissible evidence, cannot be given credence without further corroborative evidence. Though some of the witnesses identified some of the accused in the dock, without corroborative evidence dock identification alone cannot be treated as substantial evidence, though it is permissible. No importance needs to be attached on the testimony of the eyewitnesses regarding the persons acquitted by the High Court (i.e. accused persons other than A-1 and A-3) because the acquitted persons were identified for the first time before the trial court without any corroboration by previous TI parade held by the Magistrate in accordance with the procedure established. As rightly observed by the High Court, for a long number of days, many of these eyewitnesses never came forward to claim that they had seen the occurrence before the IOs and the police personnel visiting the village from time to time. (Paras 50 and 40 to 45)

Though an explanation was offered that out of fear the eyewitnesses did not name the offenders, as a safe rule of prudence, generally it is desirable to look for corroboration of the sworn testimony of witnesses in court as to the identity of the accused who are strangers to them, in the form of earlier TIP. Though some of them were identified by the photographs except A-1 and A-3, no other corroborative material was shown by the prosecution. (Para 43)

There is no material to prove conspiracy charge against any of the other accused. (Para 98)

In the absence of definite assertion from the prosecution side, about their specific role and involvement, as rightly observed by the High Court, it is not safe to convict the other accused. (Para 95)

Finally, insofar as the appeals filed by CBI against the order of acquittal by the High Court in respect of certain persons, it was pointed out that when two views are possible, the one in favour of the accused should be accepted. Presumption of innocence is a fundamental principle of criminal jurisprudence. (Para 94)

Section 164 CrPC requires strict and faithful compliance with sub-sections (2) to (4). The failure to observe safeguards not only impairs the evidentiary value of confession but casts a doubt on the nature and voluntariness of confession on which no reliance can be placed. As rightly observed by the High Court, no exceptional circumstances could be brought to notice by the prosecution in respect of the appellants other than A-1 and A-3, to explain away the procedural lapses. (Para 72)

The analysis of evidence of PWs 29 and 34, Judicial Magistrates shows that many of the confessional statements were recorded immediately after production of the maker after long CBI custody and in some cases after such statements were made and recorded by the Judicial Magistrate, the maker was remanded to police custody. Though the Magistrates have deposed that the procedure provided under Section 164 CrPC has been complied with, various warnings/cautions required to be given to the accused before recording such confession, have not been fully adhered to by them. In the certificate, there is no specific reference about the nature of the custody from which these persons were produced nor about the assurance that they would not be remanded to police custody if they declined. (Paras 71 and 72)

As rightly observed by the High Court, the possibility of coercion, threat or inducement to the accused A-9 to make the confession cannot be ruled out. Remanding A-9 to police custody after his statement was recorded under Section 164 CrPC is not justified. As per Section 164(3) if any accused refuses to make any confessional statement, such Magistrate shall not authorise detention of the accused in police custody. (Para 68)

(2) Manner of recording confession — Compliance with precautions under S. 164 (contd.)

A-12 was not cautioned that if he made any confession, the same may be used against him in evidence and on that basis he may be sentenced to death or imprisonment for life. Equally he was not cautioned by PW 29 that if he refused to make the confessional statement, he would not be remanded to police custody. (Para 69)

The confessional statement of A-11 was recorded immediately after his production before him from the police custody. He was given only 10 minutes' time for reflection after his production from police custody. (Para 70)

Both A-9 and A-12 in their confessional statements, made exculpatory statements. The entire confessional statement of A-14 is exculpatory and he also retracted from the confession. It was further found that this confessional statement was made long after the charge-sheet was filed i.e. on 22-6-1999. (Paras 69 and 70)

Hence, the reasoning and conclusion of the High Court with regard to acquittal of certain accused persons is justified. In the absence of acceptable materials and in view of the various infirmities in the prosecution case as pointed out by the High Court, the order of acquittal of others (except A-1 and A-3) who are all poor tribals is confirmed. (Paras 95 and 98). Dara Singh v. Republic of India, (2011) 2 SCC 490.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-1-2011]

Manu Sharma v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 6 SCC 1: (2010) 2 SCC (Cri) 1385; Umar Abdul Sakoor Sorathia v. Narcotic Control Bureau, (2000) 1 SCC 138: 2000 SCC (Cri) 200; Dana Yadav v. State of Bihar, (2002) 7 SCC 295: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1698; Malkhansingh v. State of M.P., (2003) 5 SCC 746; State of U.P. v. Nandu Vishwakarma, (2009) 14 SCC 501: (2010) 1 SCC (Cri) 1429; Sambhaji Hindurao Deshmukh v. State of Maharashtra, (2008) 11 SCC 186: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 464; Raghunath v. State of Haryana, (2003) 1 SCC 398: 2003 SCC (Cri) 326; Allarakha K. Mansuri v. State of Gujarat, (2002) 3 SCC 57: 2002 SCC (Cri) 519, relied on [1739] — S. 164 — Confession recorded by the magistrate in question-answer form by putting leading questions to and cross-examining the accused and recording whatever the accused stated in answer, held, must be rejected. State of M.P. v. Dayaram, 1981 Supp SCC 14: 1981 SCC (Cri) 601: AIR 1981 SC 2007.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: O. Chinnappa Reddy and Baharul Islam, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-2-1981]

[1740] — S. 164 — Judicial confession — Compliance with statutory provisions in S. 164 — Necessity and importance of — Held, compliance with the statutory provision is mandatory which should be in letter and spirit and not in a routine or mechanical manner — Sufficient time must be given to the accused to decide whether he was willing to make a confession — In the instant case, Magistrate recorded two judicial confessions of the appellant in two different cases within a very short span of time — First confession was recorded in 15 minutes which included the questions which were required to be put to the appellant by the learned Magistrate for arriving at his satisfaction that the confession was voluntary in nature, truthful and free from threat, coercion or undue influence — Held, both the cases involved serious offences resulting in extreme penalty — Magistrate, therefore, should have allowed some more time to the appellant to make his statement — He should have satisfied himself as regards the voluntariness and truthfulness of the confession of the appellant — Moreover, appellant was produced from judicial custody but he was in police custody for 16 days, which fact should have been noticed by the Magistrate — Non-compliance with the statutory provision in letter and spirit — Hence, conviction, relying principally on the said judicial confession unsustainable — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 24 (Paras 15, 16, 17 and 18). Babubhai Udesinh Parmar v. State of Gujarat, (2006) 12 SCC 268: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 702: AIR 2007 SC 420: (2007) 49 AIC 618 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 786: (2007) 1 Guj LR 742.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-2006]

Devendra Prasad Tiwari v. State of U.P., (1978) 4 SCC 474: 1979 SCC (Cri) 95; Kashmira Singh v. State of M.P., 1952 SCR 526: AIR 1952 SC 159: 1952 Cri LJ 839; Parmananda Pegu v. State of Assam, (2004) 7 SCC 779: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2081, relied on

State of Gujarat v. Babubhai Udesing Parmar, (2005) 3 Guj LH 769, reversed

[1741] — S. 164 — Magistrate recording dying declaration must put a direct question to the injured whether he was mentally capable of making the statement — Certificate by doctor that the injured was in a fit state of mind to make the statement not conclusive — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 32. K. Ramachandra Reddy v. Public Prosecutor, (1976) 3 SCC 618: 1976 SCC (Cri) 473: AIR 1976 SC 1994: 1977 MLJ (Cri) 1: 1976 Cri LJ 1548.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.C. Gupta and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-1976]

[1742] — Ss. 164, 273 and 327(2) — Recording of statement of a victim of sexual abuse — Precautions in, and protection to — Use of a screen to shield the victim, or the use of videotaping or closed-circuit camera to record evidence —

Recording of evidence in the presence of the accused — Does not necessarily imply that the accused should have full view of the victim or the witness — Held, rules of procedure are the handmaiden of justice, meant to advance not obstruct justice — Therefore courts can enlarge the meaning of such provisions in order to elicit the truth and do justice — Recording of evidence by way of video-conferencing vis-à-vis S. 273 has been held to be permissible

The petitioner requested that the below-mentioned precautions be followed while recording statements of victims of sexual abuse, since mere sight of the accused may induce an element of extreme fear in the mind of the victim or the witnesses, or can put them in a state of shock and since questions put in cross-examination are purposely designed to embarrass or confuse the victims of rape and child abuse.

The petitioner requested that especially in the cases of the child sexual abuse the following precautions be followed:

(i) Permitting use of a videotaped interview of the child's statement by the judge (in the presence of a child-support person).

(ii) Allow a child to testify via closed-circuit television or from behind a screen to obtain a full and candid account of the acts complained of.

(iii) The cross-examination of a minor should only be carried out by the judge based on written questions submitted by the defence upon perusal of the testimony of the minor.

(iv) Whenever a child is required to give testimony, sufficient breaks should be given as and when required by the child.

Allowing this request,

Held :

The whole inquiry before a court being to elicit the truth, it is absolutely necessary that the victim or the witnesses are able to depose about the entire incident in a free atmosphere without any embarrassment. Section 273 CrPC merely requires the evidence to be taken in the presence of the accused. The section, however, does not say that the evidence should be recorded in such a manner that the accused should have full view of the victim or the witnesses. Recording of evidence by video-conferencing has already been upheld. Moreover, there is major difference between substantive provisions defining crimes and providing punishment for the same and procedural enactment laying down the procedure of trial of such offences. Rules of procedure are handmaiden of justice and are meant to advance and not to obstruct the cause of justice. It is, therefore, permissible for the court to expand or enlarge the meanings of such provisions in order to elicit the truth and do justice with the parties. (Para 31)

Recording of evidence by way of video-conferencing vis-à-vis Section 273 CrPC has been held to be permissible. (Para 31)

The writ petition be disposed of with the following directions:

* * *

(2) In holding trial of child sex abuse or rape:

(i) a screen or some such arrangements may be made where the victim or witnesses (who may be equally vulnerable like the victim) do not see the body or face of the accused;

(ii) the questions put in cross-examination on behalf of the accused, insofar as they relate directly to the incident, should be given in writing to the presiding officer of the court who may put them to the victim or witnesses in a language which is clear and is not embarrassing;

(iii) the victim of child abuse or rape, while giving testimony in court, should be allowed sufficient breaks as and when required. (Para 34)

These directions are in addition to those given in State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh. (Para 34) . Sakshi v. Union of India, (2004) 5 SCC 518: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1645: AIR 2004 SC 3566: (2004) 98 Cut LT 491: (2004) 112 DLT 457.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu, C.J. and G.P. Mathur, J. [Date of decision: 26-5-2004]

State of Maharashtra v. Dr Praful B. Desai, (2003) 4 SCC 601: 2003 SCC (Cri) 815; State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 384: 1996 SCC (Cri) 316, followed

[1743] — S. 164(2) — Compliance with the requirements under, is sine qua non for recording a confession under S. 164(1)

Since the confession recorded by the Magistrate, PW 2, cannot be brought under Section 164 of the Code, it is an idle exercise to consider whether it was voluntary or true. PW 2 has not stated that before taking down the confession he explained to A-1 that he was not bound to make the confession, and that if he did so, such confession might be used as evidence against him. This is the sine qua non for recording a confession. Further, a Magistrate is forbidden from recording any such confession until he gets satisfaction that the person is going to make a voluntary confession. There is nothing in the evidence of PW 2 that he had adopted such precaution. For all those reasons that document has to be kept out of the ken of consideration in this case. (Para 22). Mahabir Singh v. State of Haryana, (2001) 7 SCC 148: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1262: AIR 2001 SC 2503.

(2) Manner of recording confession — Compliance with precautions under S. 164 (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-7-2001]

[1744] — S. 164 — Confession — Admissibility — Requisites — Statement by A-1 to PW 46 (Executive Magistrate) in hospital implicating appellant that he was given contract killing — Held, for admissibility as confession such statement must be voluntarily made with full statutory compliance — In instant case, statement of A-1 neither recorded by Judicial Magistrate, nor procedural requirements including that of a certificate to be appended by Magistrate fulfilled — Moreover, there was doubt regarding voluntariness of said statement — Hence, inadmissible as confession (Paras 41 to 46). S. Arul Raja v. State of T.N., (2010) 8 SCC 233.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : Dr. M.K. Sharma and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision : 30-7-2010]

Aloke Nath Dutta v. State of W.B., (2007) 12 SCC 230: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 264; Babubhai Udesinh Parmar v. State of Gujarat, (2006) 12 SCC 268: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 702; State of U.P. v. Singhara Singh, AIR 1964 SC 358: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 263 (2): (1964) 4 SCR 485, relied on

Shankaria v. State of Rajasthan, (1978) 4 SCC 453: 1979 SCC (Cri) 74, cited

[1745] — S. 164 — Recording of confession — Confessional statement must be shown to have been voluntarily made — Question intended to be put under sub-s. (2) should not be allowed to become a matter of a mere casual and mechanical enquiry — Magistrate should be fully satisfied that it is in fact and in substance voluntary (Para 16). Ayyub v. State of U.P., (2002) 3 SCC 510: 2002 SCC (Cri) 673: AIR 2002 SC 1192.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.P. Sethi and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-2-2002]

Sarwan Singh Rattan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 637: 1957 Cri LJ 1014; Shivappa v. State of Karnataka, (1995) 2 SCC 76: 1995 SCC (Cri) 323, relied on [1746] — S. 164 — Recording of confession — Adequate time to be given to accused for reflection prior to — Two hour's time given to accused — Contention that the said time was not sufficient in view of the decision in Sarwan Singh, 1957 SCR 953, held, not sustainable (Para 13). Sidharth v. State of Bihar, (2005) 12 SCC 545: AIR 2005 SC 4352.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-9-2005]

Sarwan Singh v. State of Punjab, 1957 SCR 953: AIR 1957 SC 637: 1957 Cri LJ 1014, explained

Distinguished in Aloke Nath Dutta v. State of W.B., (2007) 12 SCC 230*

[1747] — S. 164 — Recording of confession — Administering of oath is prohibited (Para 10). Babubhai Udesinh Parmar v. State of Gujarat, (2006) 12 SCC 268: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 702: AIR 2007 SC 420: (2007) 49 AIC 618 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 786: (2007) 1 Guj LR 742.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-2006]

[1748] — S. 164 — Recording of confession — Inquiry by Magistrate to ascertain voluntary character of the confession — Procedure to be followed — Magistrate must comply not merely in the form but also in essence with provisions of S. 164 and the rules and guidelines framed by the High Court — Non-compliance thereof renders the confession unworthy of credence — Magistrate must also leave such material on record as would show that the confession was voluntary and statutory provisions were complied with — On facts held, confession was not voluntary and could not be acted upon — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 24

From the plain language of Section 164 CrPC and the rules and guidelines framed by the High Court regarding the recording of confessional statements of an accused under Section 164 CrPC, it is manifest that the said provisions emphasise an inquiry by the Magistrate to ascertain the voluntary nature of the confession. This inquiry appears to be the most significant and an important part of the duty of the Magistrate recording the confessional statement of an accused under Section 164 CrPC. The failure of the Magistrate to put such questions from which he could ascertain the voluntary nature of the confession detracts so materially from the evidentiary value of the confession of an accused that it would not be safe to act upon the same. Full and adequate compliance not merely in form but in essence with the provisions of Section 164 CrPC and the rules framed by the High Court is imperative and its non-compliance goes to the root of the Magistrate's jurisdiction to record the confession and renders the confession unworthy of credence. Before proceeding to record the confessional statement, a searching enquiry must be made from the accused as to the custody from which he was produced and the treatment he had been receiving in such custody in order to ensure that there is no scope for doubt of any sort of extraneous influence proceeding from a source interested in the prosecution still lurking in the mind of an accused. In case the Magistrate discovers on such enquiry that there is ground for such supposition he should give the accused sufficient time for reflection before he is asked to make his statement and should assure himself that during the time of reflection, he is completely out of police influence. An accused should particularly be asked the reason why he wants to make a statement which would surely go against his self-interest in course of the trial, even if he contrives subsequently to retract the confession. Besides administering the caution, warning specifically provided for in the first part of sub-section (2) of Section 164 namely, that the accused is not bound to make a statement and that if he makes one it may be used against him as evidence in relation to his complicity in the offence at the trial, that is to follow, he should also, in plain language, be assured of protection from any sort of apprehended torture or pressure from such extraneous agents as the police or the like in case he declines to make a statement and be given the assurance that even if he declined to make the confession, he shall not be remanded to police custody. (Para 6)

The Magistrate who is entrusted with the duty of recording confession of an accused coming from police custody or jail custody must appreciate his function in that behalf as one of a judicial officer and he must apply his judicial mind to ascertain and satisfy his conscience that the statement the accused makes is not on account of any extraneous influence on him. That indeed is the essence of a 'voluntary' statement within the meaning of the provisions of Section 164 CrPC and the rules framed by the High Court for the guidance of the subordinate courts. Moreover, the Magistrate must not only be satisfied as to the voluntary character of the statement, he should also make and leave such material on the record in proof of the compliance with the imperative requirements of the statutory provisions, as would satisfy the court that sits in judgment in the case, that the confessional statement was made by the accused voluntarily and the statutory provisions were strictly complied with. (Para 7)

In the present case the Magistrate did not disclose to the appellant that he was a Magistrate and that the confession was being recorded by him in that capacity nor made any enquiry to find out whether he had been influenced by anyone to make the confession. It is further revealed that the Magistrate did not lend any assurance to the appellant that he would not be sent back to the police custody in case he did not make the confessional statement. That apart the Magistrate did not question the appellant as to why he wanted to make the confession or as to what had prompted him to make the confession. The failure of the Magistrate to make a real endeavour to ascertain the voluntary character of the confession, impels us to hold that the evidence on the record does not establish that the confessional statement of the appellant recorded under Section 164 CrPC was voluntary. The cryptic manner of holding the enquiry to ascertain the voluntary nature of the confession has left much to be desired and has detracted materially from the evidentiary value of the confessional statement. It would, thus, neither be prudent nor safe to act upon the confessional statement of the appellant. (Para 8). Shivappa v. State of Karnataka, (1995) 2 SCC 76: 1995 SCC (Cri) 323: AIR 1995 SC 980: (1995) 1 Crimes 138.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and M.K. Mukherjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-11-1994]

[1749] — S. 164 — Murder trial — Investigation — Taking of specimen signature of accused for examination by expert to corroborate confessional letters written by him — Court below adopting proper procedure in appreciating this evidence — Such confessional letters relied on to confirm conviction — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 45 and 30 — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302

One G, a Christian missionary from Australia, was working among the tribal people especially lepers of the State of Orissa and was engaged in propagating and preaching Christianity in the tribal areas. On 22-1-1999, his missionary team as usual conducted different programmes in the village near the church and retired for the day. G and his two minor sons slept in their vehicle parked outside the church. In the midnight, a mob came to the spot and set fire to the vehicle in which the deceased persons were sleeping. The mob prevented the deceased to get themselves out of the vehicle as a result of which all the three persons got burnt in the vehicle.

The local police was informed the next day. But since the local police and CID were unable to proceed with the investigation satisfactorily, CBI took over the investigation on 3-5-1999.

The trial court convicted all the accused and sentenced them for offences punishable under various sections. The death sentence was passed against A-1 and others were awarded sentence of life imprisonment.

The High Court by the impugned judgment awarded life imprisonment to A-1 and A-3 and acquitted the rest.

Dismissing the appeals filed by A-1, A-3 and CBI,

Held :

All the eyewitnesses examined by the prosecution consistently stated that during occurrence the miscreants raised slogans in the name of A-1 as "Dara Singh zindabad". The story of this slogan was also mentioned in the FIR lodged soon after the occurrence. This slogan in the name of A-1, corroborates the identification before the trial court for the first time. In addition to the same, some of the witnesses identified A-1 by photo identification. Photo and dock identification coupled with the other corroborative evidence are permissible. In addition to the same, all the witnesses mentioned about the blowing of whistle by A-1. (Para 89)

(2) Manner of recording confession — Compliance with precautions under S. 164 (contd.)

Identification of A-3 for the first time in the trial court is an exceptional case and even in the absence of further corroboration by way of previously held TIP, his involvement in the crime is amply corroborated by the letters written by him. There were three types of evidence against A-3 i.e. (a) confession; (b) testimony of eyewitnesses/identification in court/PW 23; and (c) absconding of the accused. (Paras 85 and 86)

The contents of the two letters written by A-3, though denied by A-3, clearly amounts to confession and lend ample corroboration to the evidence in identification before the trial court for the first time as narrated by PW 23. The entire contents of the letter used by the trial Judge were rightly accepted by the High Court. The confessional statement of A-3 inculpated himself and A-1. A-3 in his letter dated 10-2-1999 confessed that he along with A-1 had burnt "Jisu" (the Christian missionary). All the ocular witnesses have testified that after setting fire to vehicles and burning G and his two sons alive, the miscreants raised slogans "Jai Bajarang Bali" and "Dara Singh zindabad". (Paras 79 to 87)

A-3 in his statement recorded under Section 313 CrPC on 4-2-2002 admitted to have set fire to the vehicles and in his statement recorded under Section 313 CrPC on 24-3-2003 has admitted to have filed petitions pleading guilty and to have stated in his earlier examination under Section 313 CrPC that he had set fire to the vehicles. There is no impediment in relying on a portion of the statement of the accused and finding him guilty in consideration of the other evidence against him as laid by the prosecution. (Para 84)

The other circumstance urged by the prosecution was that A-3 absconded soon after the incident and avoided arrest and this abscondence being a conduct under Section 8, Evidence Act, 1872 should be taken into consideration along with other evidence to prove his guilt. The fact remains that he was not available for quite some time till he was arrested which fact has not been disputed by the defence. (Para 88)

The procedure adopted by the investigating agency i.e. taking of specimen signature and writing of A-3 for examination by the expert as analysed and approved by the trial court and confirmed by the High Court cannot be faulted with. In view of the oral report of PW 4 which was reduced into writing, the evidence of PW 23, the two letters of A-3 to the trial Judge admitting his guilt coupled with the other materials, the conclusion arrived at by the High Court is confirmed. (Paras 78 and 75)

The Presiding Officer concerned has to meet the requirements of Section 164 CrPC. Before accepting the contents of the two letters and the evidence of PW 23, the trial Judge afforded A-3 the required opportunity and followed the procedure, which was rightly accepted by the High Court. The trial Judge accepted the entire contents of the admission made by A-3 and affording reasonable opportunity and by following the appropriate procedure coupled with the corroborative evidence of PW 23, upheld his involvement and participation in the crime along with A-1 which resulted in rioting, arson and murder of three persons. (Paras 87 and 88)

Even in the midst of uncertainties as the eyewitnesses have specified the roles of A-1 and A-3 during the murder, their conviction and sentence of life imprisonment imposed on them by the High Court is maintainable. (Para 98). Dara Singh v. Republic of India, (2011) 2 SCC 490.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-1-2011]

State of Bombay v. Kathi Kalu Oghad, AIR 1961 SC 1808: (1961) 2 Cri LJ 856: (1962) 3 SCR 10, relied on

M.P. Sharma v. Satish Chandra, AIR 1954 SC 300: 1954 Cri LJ 865: 1954 SCR 1077, referred to [1750] — S. 164 — Recording of confession — Language — Confessional statements recorded in Hindi — Plea that the accused did not know Hindi raised about 1½ years after recording of such statement — Finding of the trial court that accused persons understood Hindi — Question put to the accused persons under S. 313 CrPC answered by them without expressing any difficulty — Held, in the circumstances, of the case, plea that the accused did not know Hindi not maintainable (Para 14). Wariyam Singh v. State of U.P., (1995) 6 SCC 458: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1124: AIR 1996 SC 305.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-9-1995]

Madi Ganga v. State of Orissa, (1981) 2 SCC 224: 1981 SCC (Cri) 411: AIR 1981 SC 1165: 1981 Cri LJ 628

[1751] — S. 164 — Where magistrate records confession of the accused after putting to him all necessary questions and appends a certificate with the confession document showing voluntary nature of the confession, held, the confessional statement is admissible in evidence and the magistrate need not be further examined as a witness to confirm its reliability — Accused can be convicted on the basis of the confessional statement if the general trend of his confession is substantiated by other evidence — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 80. Madi Ganga v. State of Orissa, (1981) 2 SCC 224: 1981 SCC (Cri) 411: AIR 1981 SC 1165: 1981 Cri LJ 628.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: O. Chinnappa Reddy and Baharul Islam, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-2-1981]

[1752] — S. 164 — Time for reflection to be granted before recording of confession — Though there is no hard-and-fast rule therefor, time of 5 or 10 minutes is, by all standards, utterly inadequate — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 24 — Prevention of Terrorism Act, 2002 — S. 32

There is no hard-and-fast rule regarding grant of time for reflection before recording a confession and the rules and guidelines applicable to a confession under Section 164 CrPC do not govern, but in the present case, the time of 5 or 10 minutes is, by all standards, utterly inadequate. Granting reasonable time for reflection before recording a confession is one way of ensuring that the person concerned gets the opportunity to deliberate and introspect once again when he is brought before the prescribed authority for recording the confession. That it is one of the relevant considerations in assessing the voluntariness of the confession. (Para 184)

Sufficient time was not given for reflection after the accused (Afzal/Shaukat) were produced before PW 60 recording the confession. PW 60 stated in the evidence that he gave only 5 to 10 minutes time to the accused for thinking/reflection. (Para 184). State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715: 2005 Cri LJ 3950: (2005) 122 DLT 194.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2005]

[1753] — S. 164 — Recording of confession of accused under TADA — Procedure to be followed — Strict compliance with — Necessity of — Held, necessary so as to render confessional statement such as would need no corroboration or contemporaneous record to prove its veracity — Strict compliance not necessary in cases (such as the present) where confessional statements in question being mainly used for purpose of corroborating another confession/other evidence — Especially when the defects were curable ones — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987, S. 15 — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Rules, 1987, R. 15. Ahmed Hussein Vali Mohammed Saiyed v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 7 SCC 254: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 368: (2009) 79 AIC 229 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and P. Sathasivam and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-5-2009]

State v. Nalini, (1999) 5 SCC 253: 1999 SCC (Cri) 691, relied on

Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1994) 3 SCC 569: 1994 SCC (Cri) 899; Bharatbhai v. State of Gujarat, (2002) 8 SCC 447: 2003 SCC (Cri) 93, explained

[1754] — S. 164 — Recording of confession of accused under TADA — Procedure to be followed — Requirements of obtaining signature of accused, appending certificate and making memorandum at the end of confession, as required under R. 15(3), TADA Rules — Omission as to — Effect — Curability of the said defect — Reiterated, said omission in obtaining signature of accused or appending certificate at the end of confession is curable in view of provision contained in S. 463 CrPC — In present case, certain confessional statements recorded without appending certificate or making memorandum in terms of R. 15(3)(b) — Confessional statements containing opening words similar to subject-matter of memorandum to be made under R. 15(3)(b) — Further, said confessional statements mainly corroborating the confession made strictly in compliance with all necessary provisions of TADA Act and Rules — Considering the facts, held, the defect, if any, present in the confessional statements got cured through reliable and trustworthy depositions made by the respective recording officers before the trial court — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Rules, 1987, R. 15(3). Ahmed Hussein Vali Mohammed Saiyed v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 7 SCC 254: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 368: (2009) 79 AIC 229 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and P. Sathasivam and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-5-2009]

State v. Nalini, (1999) 5 SCC 253: 1999 SCC (Cri) 691, relied on

Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1994) 3 SCC 569: 1994 SCC (Cri) 899; Bharatbhai v. State of Gujarat, (2002) 8 SCC 447: 2003 SCC (Cri) 93, explained

(2) Manner of recording confession — Compliance with precautions under S. 164 (contd.)

[1755] — Ss. 164 and 463 — Confession — Omission to affix signature on the last two pages of the 18-page confession statement — Effect — How that omission affected the defence of the accused not shown — Confession corroborated in material particulars by independent evidence apart from the evidence of co-accused — Confession statement promptly sent to CJM and Designated Court — Held, confession duly made and recorded and failure to obtain signature of the accused on the last two pages would not be fatal on the ground of violation of R. 15(3) — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987 — S. 15 — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Rules, 1987, R. 15(3)

Contention in the case of Nalini (A-1) was that the mandatory provisions of Rule 15(3) had been violated as confession was in 18 pages out of which only pp. 1 to 16 bore her signatures while pp. 17 and 18, which were crucial to the confession, did not bear her signatures. The police officer had appended his certificate at the end of the confession but his recording of the certificate was immaterial if the accused did not append his signatures at the end of the confession. Omission of signatures of Nalini (A-1) cannot cure the defect and her confession had to be rejected in its entirety. The Superintendent of Police, who recorded the confession, merely stated in the examination-in-chief that his not getting the signatures of Nalini (A-1) was an omission. No explanation had been given as to why the omission occurred and it was not for the accused to bring out in cross-examination as to the circumstances under which signatures of Nalini (A-1) could not be obtained at the end of the confession. It was also not relevant if each page of the confession was signed, signature had to be put on the last page at the end of the confession and only then endorsement by the police officer recording the confession has a meaning. Both the signatures at the end of the confession and the certificates of the police officer must go together. Rule 15 provided an assurance that confession recorded is as per prescribed provisions.

Held :

Per Wadhwa, J.

When the requirement of law is that confession should be signed by the person making it, it would mean his signatures at the end of the confession. It has not been suggested or brought on record as to how not getting signatures of Nalini (A-1) on the last pages of the confession had injured her in her defence on the merits of the case. The confession has been corroborated in material particulars by means of independent evidence even if the confessions of the co-accused are set apart. Confession of Nalini (A-1) was recorded on 7-8-1991 and was sent to the Court of the Chief Judicial Magistrate on the following day and on 9-8-1991, it was sent to the Designated Court. The confession was duly made and the objection that Rule 15(3) of the TADA Rules has been violated cannot be accepted. (Para 404). State v. Nalini, (1999) 5 SCC 253: 1999 SCC (Cri) 691: AIR 1999 SC 2640: 1999 Cri LJ 3124.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.T. Thomas[1], D.P. Wadhwa[2] and S.S.M. Quadri[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 11-5-1999]

Abdul Razak Shaikh v. State of Maharashtra, 1988 Cri LJ 382: 1987 Mah LJ 863 (Bom); Neharoo Mangtu Satnami v. Emperor, AIR 1937 Nag 220: 38 Cri LJ 642, overruled [1756] — S. 164 — Safeguards provided in — Applicability to recording confession of accused under S. 108, Customs Act — Customs Officer recording such statement, held, need not follow the safeguards provided in S. 164 CrPC — Customs Act, 1962 — S. 108 (Para 15). Gulam Hussain Shaikh Chougule v. S. Reynolds, Supdt. of Customs, (2002) 1 SCC 155: 2002 SCC (Cri) 116: AIR 2001 SC 2930.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-10-2001]

CCE v. Duncan Agro Industries Ltd., (2000) 7 SCC 53: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1275, followed

[1757] — S. 164(2) — Recording of confession by the Magistrate — Failure to put questions to ascertain voluntary nature of confession — Held, the confessional statement is inadmissible in evidence — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 24

Under sub-section (2) of Section 164 the Magistrate is first required to explain to the accused that he was not bound to make a confession and that if he does so it might be used against him. Though this requirement has been complied with in the instant case, the other requirement which obligates the Magistrate to put questions to the accused to satisfy himself that the confession was voluntary so as to enable him to give the requisite certificate under sub-section (4), has not been fulfilled since the Magistrate did not ask any question whatsoever to ascertain whether the appellant was making the confession voluntarily. In view of such flagrant omission to comply with the mandatory requirement of Section 164(2) CrPC the High Court was not at all justified in entertaining the confession as a piece of evidence, much less, a reliable one. Preetam v. State of M.P., (1996) 10 SCC 432: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1343: AIR 1997 SC 445.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-3-1996]

[1758] — S. 164(2) — Confessional statement recorded by Magistrate — Reliability — Compliance with sub-section (2) — What is — Confessional statement made freely and voluntarily by accused while released on bail, held, cannot be rejected merely because Magistrate used the expression "evidence" instead of "confession" while warning the accused — Magistrate having recorded in the statement that she (Magistrate) gave the statutory warning and advice that accused was not bound to make the statement, S. 164(2) complied with — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 28 (Paras 25 to 28, 30). M.A. Antony v. State of Kerala, (2009) 6 SCC 220.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-4-2009]

State of U.P. v. Singhara Singh, AIR 1964 SC 358, relied on

[1759] — Ss. 164(2) and (4) — Non-compliance of sub-s. (2) — Confession recorded by the Magistrate not indicating anywhere as to whether before recording the same he gave the accused requisite caution and put questions to satisfy himself that it was being made voluntary — Held, confession not voluntary and it cannot be acted upon — Mere endorsement in accordance with sub-s. (4) after recording it would not fulfil the requirement of sub-s. (4)

Though the Magistrate testified that before recording the confession he satisfied himself that the accused was making a voluntary statement and that after giving due caution he recorded it, the confession does not anywhere indicate as to whether before recording the same he gave him the requisite caution and put questions to satisfy himself that it was being made voluntarily. These are the basic prerequisites for recording a confession under sub-section (2) of Section 164 CrPC and a mere endorsement in accordance with sub-section (4) after recording it would not fulfil the requirements of the former sub-section. Since none of the two requirements of Section 164(2) CrPC has been complied with there is no other alternative but to hold that the Special Court was not at all justified in entertaining the confession as a voluntary one. Tulsi Singh v. State of Punjab, (1996) 6 SCC 63: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1118: AIR 1996 SC 3477.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-1996]

[1760] — Ss. 164(2) and 463 — Confession — Formal defect in recording, curable and not fatal — But non-compliance with mandatory requirement of sub-s. (2) would render the confession inadmissible in evidence — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 24

The confession of an accused (Satwant) was recorded in Tihar Jail. It was contended that the confession being not recorded in open court as required under the provisions of S. 164 of Criminal Procedure Code, is inadmissible in evidence and it cannot be adhered to for convicting the accused.

Held :

Per Ray, J.

The compliance with sub-s. (2) of S. 164 is mandatory and imperative and non-compliance of it renders the confession inadmissible in evidence. If the court comes to a finding that such a compliance had in fact been made the mere omission to record the same in the proper form will not render it inadmissible evidence and the defect is cured under S. 463 (S. 533 of the old Criminal Procedure Code) but when there is non-compliance of the mandatory requirement of S. 164(2) and it comes out in evidence that no such explanation as envisaged in the aforesaid sub-section has been given to the accused by the Magistrate, this substantial defect cannot be cured under S. 463.

In the present case the accused was asked the necessary questions and was given the warning that he was not bound to make any statement and in case any statement is made, the same might be used against him by the prosecution for his conviction. Of course, no question was put by the Magistrate to the accused as to why he wanted to make a confessional statement. The confessional statement was made voluntarily by the accused. So the defect in recording the statement in the form prescribed is cured by S. 463. Though the said confession was retracted subsequently by the accused, the same can be used by the Court against the accused in convicting him. The confessional statements were corroborated by independent evidence which clearly prove the guilt of the accused. Kehar Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1988) 3 SCC 609: 1988 SCC (Cri) 711: AIR 1988 SC 1883.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.L. Oza[1]· B.C. Ray[2] and K. Jagannatha Shetty[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 3-8-1988]

[1761] — S. 164(4) — Magistrate certifying that he "hoped" the confession of accused was voluntary and not that he "believed" that the confession was voluntary — Confession cannot be used as evidence against the accused

The Magistrate did not comply with S. 164(3), Criminal Procedure Code inasmuch as instead of certifying that he believed that the confession of the appellant was voluntarily made, he certified that "I hope that this statement was made by him voluntarily".

(2) Manner of recording confession — Compliance with precautions under S. 164 (contd.)

Held :

The word "hope" suggests a lingering doubt that what is desired and expected may not turn out to be true whereas the word "believe", in the sense in which it is used in S. 164, Criminal Procedure Code has logical confidence or rational conviction as its essential element.

Therefore, it must be held that the Magistrate advisedly and deliberately chose to use the word "hope" instead of the word "believe" because he was not fully convinced that the confession made by the appellant before him was voluntarily made and the Magistrate had suspicion and doubt as to the voluntariness of the confession. Therefore, the confession must be excluded from consideration of evidence against the appellant. Chandran v. State of T.N., (1978) 4 SCC 90: 1978 SCC (Cri) 528: AIR 1978 SC 1574: 1978 Cri LJ 1693.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and P.S. Kailasam, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-8-1978]

[1762] — S. 164(4) — Magistrate not filing memorandum as required by the section — When a matter of form curable by his oral testimony

The Magistrate did not comply with S. 164(3), Criminal Procedure Code inasmuch as the Magistrate omitted to certify that the confession was taken in his presence and hearing and was read over to the person making it and that it was admitted by him to be correct and that it contains a full and true account of the statements made by him. This is obviously a defect of form which could be cured by oral testimony of the Magistrate. Chandran v. State of T.N., (1978) 4 SCC 90: 1978 SCC (Cri) 528: AIR 1978 SC 1574: 1978 Cri LJ 1693.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and P.S. Kailasam, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-8-1978]

[1763] — S. 164(4) — Recording of confessional statement — Requirement of obtaining signature of the person making confession is mandatory — Non-compliance with it renders the entire confessional statement inadmissible where making of the confession is disputed — Magistrate recording confession should ensure that all the requirements of the provision are complied with

The function of the Magistrate in recording confession under Section 164 of the Code is a very solemn act which he is obliged to perform by taking due care to ensure that all the requirements of Section 164 are fully satisfied. The Magistrate recording such a statement should not adopt a casual approach. Besides ensuring that the confessional statement being made before him is voluntary and without pressure, the Magistrate must record the confession in the manner laid down by the section. Omission to comply with the mandatory provisions, one of such being as incorporated in sub-section (4) of Section 164 is likely to render the confessional statement inadmissible. The words "shall be signed by the person making the confession", are mandatory in nature and the Magistrate recording the confession has no option. Mere failure to get the signature of the person making the confession may not be very material if the making of such statement is not disputed by the accused but in cases where the making of the statement itself is in controversy, the omission to get the signature is fatal. No reliance can therefore be placed on the judicial confession of A-4. (Para 20)

If a part of confession is excluded under any provision of law, the entire confessional statement in all its parts, including the admission of minor incriminating facts must be excluded unless proof of it is permitted by some other section, such as Section 27 of the Evidence Act. (Para 21)

Where a power is given to do a certain thing in a certain manner, the thing must be done in that way or not at all. (Para 23). Dhanajaya Reddy v. State of Karnataka, (2001) 4 SCC 9: 2001 SCC (Cri) 652: AIR 2001 SC 1512: 2001 Cri LJ 1712.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-3-2001]

Kehar Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1988) 3 SCC 609: 1988 SCC (Cri) 711: AIR 1988 SC 1883; State of U.P. v. Singhara Singh, AIR 1964 SC 358: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 263 (2), relied on

Shamla Hardeo Teli v. Emperor, AIR 1941 Nag 17: 42 Cri LJ 117; Abdul Razak Shaikh v. State of Maharashtra, 1988 Cri LJ 382: (1987) 89 Bom LR 408 (Bom), approved

(3) Who can record confession under S. 164

[1764] — S. 164 — Power under, to record confessions and statements — Authority competent to exercise such power, held, is only a Judicial Magistrate — Even a police officer on whom power of a Magistrate has been conferred, held, cannot exercise such power

The power conferred by Section 164 CrPC to record confessions and statements can be exercised only by a Judicial Magistrate. Even a police officer on whom power of a Magistrate has been conferred is forbidden from recording a confession. Sub-sections (2) and (4) deal with procedure which such Magistrate has to follow while recording inculpatory statements made by persons. (Para 10). CCE v. Duncan Agro Industries Ltd., (2000) 7 SCC 53: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1275: AIR 2000 SC 2901: (2000) 120 ELT 280.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2000]

[1765] — S. 164 — Recording of confession — Magistrate who can record — Mere fact CJM had not nominated the Judicial Magistrate of the taluk where the accused was locked up in sub-jail and instead nominated another Judicial Magistrate, held, not sufficient to vitiate the recording of confession — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 30

It was contended that the Magistrate who had recorded the confession was a Judicial Magistrate at Ahmednagar, whereas, there was a Judicial Magistrate, Ist Class at Newasa itself and as the accused was locked up in the sub-jail at Newasa, there was no explanation why a Magistrate belonging to a distant place was asked to record the confession, in preference to a Magistrate at a near place. Rejecting the contention,

Held :

Newasa is a taluk located within the territorial limits of the district of Ahmadnagar. The Chief Judicial Magistrate, Ahmadnagar was approached for nominating a Magistrate within his jurisdiction for recording the confession. There could have been a variety of reasons for the Chief Judicial Magistrate for choosing a particular Magistrate to do the work. When not even a question was put to the Magistrate who recorded the confession and the investigating officer as to why the CJM, Ahmadnagar did not assign the work to a Magistrate at Newasa, it is not proper for the High Court to have used that as a ground for holding that voluntariness of the confession was vitiated. (Para 22). State of Maharashtra v. Damu, (2000) 6 SCC 269: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1088: AIR 2000 SC 1691: 2000 Cri LJ 2301.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2000]

[1766] — Ss. 164(1), 167, 3, 6, 20(1) and (4) — Inclusion of Executive Magistrate or Special Executive Magistrate within the purview of Ss. 164 and 167 CrPC — Held, not violative of Arts. 50, 14 and 21 — Likewise S. 15(a) of Special Courts Act also does not suffer from any infirmity — Executive Magistrates also constitute a class of criminal court — Executive Magistrates are judicial officers — However, whenever Judicial Magistrate is available, he should record confession or statement in presence of Executive Magistrate — Terrorist Affected Areas (Special Courts) Act, 1984 — S. 15(a) — Constitution of India — Arts. 50, 14 and 21 — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987 — S. 20(3) and (4)(a) (as amended by Act 43 of 1993)

A reading of sub-section (3) of S. 20 of TADA Act and sub-section (1) of S. 164 CrPC in juxtaposition shows that S. 164(1) of the Code is made substantially applicable in relation to a case involving an offence punishable under the TADA Act or any rule made thereunder. But the modification is only to the extent that the Executive Magistrate and Special Executive Magistrate are included along with the Metropolitan Magistrate and Judicial Magistrate and they are all empowered to record the confession or statement. It was contended that the inclusion of the Executive Magistrate or Special Executive Magistrate to record any confession or statement is with an oblique motive of making it possible that the confession or statement may be recorded and admitted in evidence even if the confessions or statements are not made voluntarily but are extorted under coercion or inducement. The empowering of these two Magistrates, it was contended, is against the very principle of separation of judiciary from the executive enunciated in Art. 50 of the Constitution, and therefore, this provision is bad under Arts. 14 and 21 of the Constitution. It was further stated that the conferment of judicial functions on the newly added non-judicial authorities, who cannot be expected to have judicial integrity and independence, is totally opposed to the fundamental principle of governance contained in Art. 50 of the Constitution.

Held :

Per curiam

(1) The Executive Magistrates are also brought in as one of the classes of criminal courts in every State. This revised set-up and the allocation of magisterial functions between the two categories of Magistrates, judicial under the control of the High Court and the executive under the control of the State Government, the new Code has provided for, make for the simple scheme of separation of the judiciary from the executive on an all-India basis. The Executive Magistrates have not been further classified evidently for the reason that the judicial functions to be performed by the Executive Magistrates under the new Code are very few. Broadly speaking the functions which are essentially of judicial nature are for the Judicial Magistrates and the functions which are of police and administrative nature are for the Executive Magistrates as appears from the rules of construction contained in sub-section (4) of S. 3. When S. 6 brings Executive Magistrates' Courts as one of the classes of criminal courts, it must be held that it is acting as a criminal court. The orders passed by the criminal courts inclusive of the Executive Magistrates are revisable as having been passed in 'judicial proceedings'.

There is no classification or gradation of the Courts of Executive Magistrates but the Special Executive Magistrate is the one appointed by the State Government for a particular area or for the purpose of particular functions.

Therefore, merely because the Executive Magistrates and Special Executive Magistrates are included along with the other Judicial Magistrates in S. 164(1) of the Code and empowered with the authority of recording confessions in relation to the case under the TADA Act, it cannot be said that it is contrary to the accepted principles of criminal jurisprudence and that the Executive Magistrates and Special Executive Magistrates are personam outside the ambit of machinery for adjudication of criminal cases.

The Executive Magistrates while exercising their judicial or quasi-judicial functions though in a limited way within the frame of the Code of Criminal Procedure, which judicial functions are normally performed by Judicial Magistrates can be held to be holding the judicial office. Therefore, the contention that the conferment of judicial functions on the Executive Magistrates and Special Executive Magistrates is opposed to the fundamental principle of governance contained in Art. 50 of the Constitution cannot be countenanced. Resultantly, it is held that sub-section (3) of S. 20 of the TADA Act does not offend either Art. 14 or Art. 21 and hence this sub-section does not suffer from any constitutional invalidity.

Though S. 20(3) is constitutionally valid, but in order to remove the apprehension that the Executive Magistrates and the Special Executive Magistrates who are under the control of the State may not be having judicial integrity and independence as possessed by the Judicial Magistrates and the recording of confessions and statements by those Executive Magistrates may not be free from any possible oblique motive, it would be always desirable and appreciable that a confession or statement of a person is recorded by the Judicial Magistrate whenever the Magistrate is available in preference to the Executive Magistrates unless there is compelling and justifiable reason to get the confession or statement, recorded by the Executive or Special Executive Magistrates.

(2) The modification in sub-section (4)(a) of S. 20 is in the same line of sub-section (3); in that the Executive Magistrate and the Special Executive Magistrate are included along with the Judicial Magistrate. Therefore, whenever a person is arrested for an offence under the provisions of TADA Act, the arrestee can be transmitted to the Judicial Magistrate or the Executive Magistrate or the Special Executive Magistrate though the transmission of the accused under S. 167(1) for other offences is still only to the Judicial Magistrate. For the reasons mentioned above while disposing the submission made with reference to sub-section (3) of S. 20, it must be held that the criticism that the inclusion of Executive Magistrate and Special Executive Magistrate in sub-section (1) of S. 167 is with an ulterior motive, cannot be countenanced and this provision cannot be said to be unconstitutional.

Thus sub-sections (3) and (4)(a) of S. 20 do not suffer from any infirmity on account of the inclusion of the Executive Magistrate and Special Executive Magistrate within the purview of Ss. 164 and 167 of the Code of Criminal Procedure in respect of their application in relation to a case involving an offence punishable under the TADA Act or any rule made thereunder. Likewise, clause (a) of S. 15 of the Special Courts Act, 1984 does not suffer from any infirmity. Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1994) 3 SCC 569: 1994 SCC (Cri) 899: 1994 Cri LJ 3139.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian[1], M.M. Punchhi[1], K. Ramaswamy[2], S.C. Agrawal[1] and R.M. Sahai[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-1994]

(4) Person who may get statement recorded under S. 164

[1767] — Ss. 164(1) & (5), 154 to 160, 165 to 173(5) & (8) and 311 — Locus standi to get one's statement recorded under S. 164 — A person who is neither an accused nor sponsored by the investigating agency, held, has no locus standi to apply to the Magistrate to record his statement under S. 164 — However, further held, evidence of such a person can, at the instance of any of the parties, be taken during the trial

In an incident two persons sustained injuries and one of them later succumbed to the injuries. On completion of investigation, the police filed final report against the accused persons. Four other persons, appellants herein, who were strangers to the said case, filed a writ petition before the High Court seeking an order to the Magistrate to record their statements under Section 164 CrPC. The High Court issued such an order. Subsequently, at the instance of the first informant in the criminal case, the High Court after hearing both sides revoked that order, dismissed the writ petition and ordered each of the writ petitioners to pay a cost of Rs 2500 "for filing frivolous and vexatious petition". Before the Supreme Court they contended that the Magistrate could, under Section 164 CrPC, record the statement of a witness even at his instance. They also challenged the imposition of costs on them.

Confirming the High Court's order,

Held :

A confession of the accused can certainly be recorded by a Magistrate. An accused is a definite person against whom there would be an accusation and the Magistrate can ascertain whether he is in fact an accused person. Such a confession can be used against the maker thereof. If it is a confessional statement, the prosecution has to rely on it against the accused. But that cannot be said of a person who is not an accused. No such person can straight away go to a Magistrate and require him to record a statement which he proposes to make. (Para 12)

In Sections 154 to 160 and 165 to 173 CrPC contained in Chapter XII thereof, which has the appellation "Information to the police and their power to investigate" there is no set or stage at which a Magistrate can take note of a stranger individual approaching him directly with a prayer that his statement may be recorded in connection with some occurrence involving a criminal offence. Even for willing witnesses whose statement the investigating officer might be disinclined to record provisions are available in law e.g. the accused can cite them as defence witnesses during trial or the court can be requested to summon them under Section 311 CrPC. Therefore, the Magistrate should not be burdened with the additional task of recording the statements of all and sundry who may knock at the door of the court with a request to record their statements under Section 164 CrPC. Otherwise, too many persons sponsored by culprits might throng before the portals of the Magistrates' Courts for the purpose of creating record in advance for the purpose of helping the culprits. In the present case, one of the arguments advanced by the accused for grant of bail to them was based on the statements of the four appellants recorded by the Magistrate under Section 164 CrPC. It is not part of the investigation to open up such a vista nor can such step be deemed necessary for the administration of justice. (Paras 19, 22 and 23)

Therefore, Section 164(1) cannot be interpreted as empowering a Magistrate to record the statement of a person unsponsored by the investigating agency. Of course, the said course will be without prejudice to their evidence being adduced during trial, if any of the parties requires it. (Para 24). Jogendra Nahak v. State of Orissa, (2000) 1 SCC 272: 2000 SCC (Cri) 210: AIR 1999 SC 2565: 1999 Cri LJ 3976.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.T. Thomas, D.P. Mohapatra and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-1999]

C.W. Casse, Re, AIR 1948 Mad 489: (1948) 1 MLJ 404: (1949) 50 Cri LJ 28; State of Orissa v. Amitava Prasad Das, (1979) 47 Cut LT 298; Kunjukutty v. State of Kerala, 1988 Cri LJ 504: 1986 Ker LT 1011, overruled

(5) Admissibility of confession/statement recorded under S. 164 — Voluntariness

See also S. 164, '(1) Generally', and

'(2) Manner of recording confession — Compliance with precautions under S. 164', above and

'(6) Reliability of judicial confession: basing of conviction thereon', below

See also under CRIMINAL TRIAL in Vol. 3

See also Ss. 24 to 31, EVIDENCE ACT, 1872

[1768] — S. 164 — If any part of the confessional statement is excluded under any provision of law, then the entire confessional statement must be excluded unless proof of it is permitted by some other provision (Para 21). Dhanajaya Reddy v. State of Karnataka, (2001) 4 SCC 9: 2001 SCC (Cri) 652: AIR 2001 SC 1512: 2001 Cri LJ 1712.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-3-2001]

Abdul Razak Shaikh v. State of Maharashtra, 1988 Cri LJ 382: (1987) 89 Bom LR 408 (Bom), approved

[1769] — S. 164 — Judicial confession — Admissibility — Held, is admissible in evidence and is a relevant fact — Further held, judgment of conviction can also be based on confession if it is found to be truthful, deliberate and voluntary and if clearly proved — Voluntary nature of confession depends upon whether there was any threat, inducement or promise and its truth is judged on the basis of the entire prosecution case — Retracted confession, however, must be looked upon with greater concern unless the reasons given for having made it in the first instance are on the face of them false — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 24 (Paras 12, 13 and 14). Babubhai Udesinh Parmar v. State of Gujarat, (2006) 12 SCC 268: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 702: AIR 2007 SC 420: (2007) 49 AIC 618 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 786: (2007) 1 Guj LR 742.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-2006]

Bharat v. State of U.P., (1971) 3 SCC 950: 1972 SCC (Cri) 198; Subramania Goundan v. State of Madras, 1958 SCR 428: AIR 1958 SC 66: 1958 Cri LJ 238; State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715, relied on

Taylor's Treatise on the Law of Evidence, Vol. I, cited

[1770] — S. 164 — Judicial confession — Admissibility — Ordinarily admissible in evidence and can solely form the basis of conviction, provided it is voluntary, truthful and is corroborated by independent evidence — Confession being detailed by itself may not raise presumption of its truthfulness

Confession ordinarily is admissible in evidence. It is a relevant fact. It can be acted upon. Confession may under certain circumstances and subject to law laid down by the superior judiciary from time to time form the basis for conviction. It is, however, trite that for the said purpose the court has to satisfy itself in regard to: (i) voluntariness of the confession; (ii) truthfulness of the confession; (iii) corroboration. (Para 87)

(5) Admissibility of confession/statement recorded under S. 164 — Voluntariness (contd.)

A detailed confession which would otherwise be within the special knowledge of the accused may itself be not sufficient to raise a presumption that confession is a truthful one. Main features of a confession are required to be verified. If it is not done, no conviction can be based only on the sole basis thereof. (Para 89)

Section 164 CrPC makes the confession before a Magistrate admissible in evidence. The manner in which such confession is to be recorded by the Magistrate is provided under Section 164 of the Code. The said provision, inter alia, seeks to protect an accused from making a confession, which may include a confession before a Magistrate, still as may be under influence, threat or promise from a person in authority. It takes into its embrace the right of an accused flowing from Article 20(3) of the Constitution of India as also Article 21 thereof. Although, Section 164 provides for safeguards, the same cannot be said to be exhaustive in nature. The Magistrate putting the questions to an accused brought before him from police custody, should sometime, be more intrusive than what is required in law. (Para 104)

In this case, the courts below have failed to notice the legality of the judicial confession. There did not exist any evidence against the co-accused. The courts apparently considered the extra-judicial confession of the main accused A (wherein he took the blame entirely upon himself without implicating the other accused) and then started connecting links therefrom and again came back to the confession for completing the chain. Confession must be considered so as to buttress other evidence and not vice versa. (Para 133). Aloke Nath Dutta v. State of W.B., (2007) 12 SCC 230: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 264.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-12-2006]

Shankaria v. State of Rajasthan, (1978) 3 SCC 435: 1978 SCC (Cri) 439; Anil v. Admn. of Daman and Diu, Daman, (2006) 13 SCC 36: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 72; Muthuswami v. State of Madras, AIR 1954 SC 4: 1954 Cri LJ 236; Babubhai Udesinh Parmar v. State of Gujarat, (2006) 12 SCC 268: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 702, relied on

[1771] — Ss. 164 and 162 — Recording of confession — Source from which investigating officer came to know about accused's willingness to make confession, held, not relevant

It is a worthless exercise to ponder over how or from which source the investigating officer would have come to know that the accused was desiring to confess. The investigating officer can have different sources to know that fact and he is not obliged to state in court the same, particularly in view of the ban contained in Section 162 CrPC. (Para 22). State of Maharashtra v. Damu, (2000) 6 SCC 269: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1088: AIR 2000 SC 1691: 2000 Cri LJ 2301.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2000]

[1772] — S. 164 — Confessional statement of accused recorded by Magistrate — Reliability — Confession made freely and voluntarily when accused was released on bail and thus was a free man — Accused in his statement under S. 313 CrPC or during cross-examination never suggested that his statement under S. 164 was false — Allegation of presence of police officers at the time of recording of the confessional statement was without material — Requirements of S. 164(2) complied with — Held, confessional statement was fit to be accepted — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 21 and 28 (Paras 27 to 30). M.A. Antony v. State of Kerala, (2009) 6 SCC 220.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-4-2009]

[1773] — S. 164 — Confession before Magistrate — Voluntary nature of — On facts, confessional statement held, voluntary and not made under influence of police. Akella Subrahmanyam v. State of A.P., (1980) 1 SCC 590: 1980 SCC (Cri) 299.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Jaswant Singh and P.S. Kailasam, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-11-1978]

[1774] — S. 164 — Confession must be shown to be voluntary — Circumstances necessary to show. Davendra Prasad Tiwari v. State of U.P., (1978) 4 SCC 474: 1979 SCC (Cri) 95: AIR 1978 SC 1544: 1978 Cri LJ 1614.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Jaswant Singh and P.S. Kailasam, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-8-1978]

[1775] — S. 164 — Confession of accused — Voluntary nature of — Determination of — Retraction at later stage — Effect of — Held, merely because the confession was retracted later, that does not mean that the confession was not voluntary in nature — Whether the accused was willing to give confession voluntarily or not is to be determined from his mental state at the time when he gave the confession — In the present case, confession of accused recorded by Dy. Commissioner of Police (DCP) under TADA Act — Accused had expressed his willingness to make the confession —

DCP took all precautions to ascertain that the confession was voluntary — Confession recorded after complying with all procedural formalities and these facts incorporated in confessional statement — Before the Magistrate, accused had no case that he was put under pressure or third-degree methods had been used against him to extract confession — In view of the said facts, held, the above confession was voluntary, truthful and admissible in evidence — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987 — S. 15 — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 24

Merely because the confession was retracted later, that does not mean that the confession was not voluntary in nature. All confessions are invariably retracted at a later stage, therefore, the retraction by itself is not a ground to discard the confession by holding that it was not voluntarily made. Whether the accused was willing to give a confession voluntarily or not is to be determined from his mental state at the time when he gave the confession. (Paras 13 and 8)

In the present case, the accused was arrested by the police and as he expressed his willingness to make a confession, he was produced before the DCP and told that he was not legally bound to give a voluntary statement and that in case any statement is found to be false, it would be used against him. The DCP had taken all precautions to ascertain that the confession was voluntary. All formalities had been complied with and these facts are incorporated in the confessional statement. There is nothing on record to show that the accused was under pressure to give any confession. When he was produced before the Magistrate, he had no case that he was put under pressure or third-degree methods had been used against him to extract the confession. When he was questioned under Section 313 CrPC, he had only stated that he had not given any confession as recorded by DCP. The facts indicate that the confession was voluntary and was recorded by DCP after apprising him that he was not bound to give a confession and in case he gave the confession, it would be used against him. Therefore, there is no force in the contention of the accused-appellants regarding the inadmissibility of the confession. There is ample evidence to show that the confession was truthful and gained support from other items of evidence. (Paras 8 and 13). Abdulvahab Abdulmajid Shaikh v. State of Gujarat, (2007) 4 SCC 257: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 276: (2007) 55 AIC 204 (SC): (2007) 3 Guj LR 1841.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and G.P. Mathur, J. [Date of decision: 24-4-2007]

[1776] — S. 164 — Confession of accused when may be acted upon

It is true that the appellant was given by the magistrate only 15 to 20 minutes for reflection before recording his confession, but in fact, he was for more than 30 hours in judicial custody free from fear or influence of the police. There is no statutory provision that the accused should be given 24 hours for reflection. How much time should be given for reflection depends on the circumstances of each case, but what is important is that the magistrate, recording the confession, should be satisfied that it was being made voluntarily. The magistrate, in the present case, testified that he was so fully satisfied and the large number of pointed questions put to the appellant and his answers show that the magistrate had cogent reasons for being so satisfied.

The appellant was not, after his confession was recorded, handed over to the police and hence there was no violation of S. 164(3), Criminal Procedure Code.

The failure of the appellant to say in his confessional statement the precise number of blows given to the victim, does not amount to a material discrepancy between the confession and medical evidence. Shankaria v. State of Rajasthan, (1978) 3 SCC 435: 1978 SCC (Cri) 439: AIR 1978 SC 1248: 1978 Cri LJ 1251.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria, N.L. Untwalia and P.S. Kailasam, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-1978]

[1777] — S. 164 — Confession whether voluntary — On facts, the evidence, including that of the cross-examination of the Judicial Magistrate before whom the confession was made, show that the confession was voluntarily made — No discrepancy between the confessional statement and the medical evidence found — Confession held voluntary. Shankaria v. State of Rajasthan, (1978) 4 SCC 453: 1979 SCC (Cri) 74: AIR 1978 SC 1399: 1978 Cri LJ 1414.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria, N.L. Untwalia and P.S. Kailasam, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-1978]

[1778] — S. 164 — Confessional statement of accused found to have been recorded by a Judicial Magistrate after taking all necessary precautions — Confession corroborated by the report of Serologist and other evidence, both direct and circumstantial — On facts held, confessional statement voluntary and could be acted upon. Bheru Singh v. State of Rajasthan, (1994) 2 SCC 467: 1994 SCC (Cri) 555: (1994) 1 Crimes 630: (1994) 1 ALT (Cri) 695: (1994) 31 ACC 240.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-2-1994]

(5) Admissibility of confession/statement recorded under S. 164 — Voluntariness (contd.)

[1779] — S. 164 — Confession when admissible — Vitiation of voluntariness of confession — Extent of proof necessary — Need for confession to have been made with full knowledge of nature and consequences of the confession — Held, court need not go to extent of holding that said vitiation (from threat etc.) or lack of said knowledge has in fact been proved — It is enough if evidence adduced raises reasonable doubts as to said requirements — Twin tests for evaluation of confession restated — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 24

Before acting upon a confession the court must be satisfied that it was freely and voluntarily made. Section 24 of the Evidence Act lays down the obvious rule that a confession made under any inducement, threat or promise becomes irrelevant in a criminal proceeding. The expression "appears" connotes that the court need not go to the extent of holding that the threat etc. has in fact been proved. If the facts and circumstances emerging from the evidence adduced make it reasonably probable that the confession could be the result of threat, inducement or pressure, the court will refrain from acting on such confession, even if it be a confession made to a Magistrate or a person other than a police officer. Further, the confession should have been made with full knowledge of the nature and consequences of the confession. If any reasonable doubt is entertained by the court that these ingredients are not satisfied, the court should eschew the confession from consideration. Recognising the stark reality of the accused being enveloped in a state of fear and panic, anxiety and despair while in police custody, the Evidence Act has excluded the admissibility of a confession made to the police officer. (Paras 27 and 29)

The twin tests to be applied to evaluate a confession are: (1) whether the confession was perfectly voluntary, and (2) if so, whether it is true and trustworthy. If the first test is not satisfied the question of applying the second test does not arise. One broad method by which a confession can be evaluated is that the Court should carefully examine the confession and compare it with the rest of the evidence, in the light of the surrounding circumstances and probabilities of the case. If on such examination and comparison, the confession appears to be a probable catalogue of events and naturally fits in with the rest of the evidence and the surrounding circumstances, it may be taken to have satisfied the second test. (Para 36). State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715: 2005 Cri LJ 3950: (2005) 122 DLT 194.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2005]

Shankaria v. State of Rajasthan, (1978) 3 SCC 435: 1978 SCC (Cri) 439, relied on

[1780] — S. 164 — Voluntary nature of confession — To be ascertained from facts and circumstances of the case including the nature of confession made — Three hours' time given for reflection before recording confession — That by itself would not render the confession involuntary — If confessional statement amply corroborated by circumstantial evidence, its subsequent retraction by its maker would not make it unreliable — On facts held, confessional statements voluntary and could be acted upon — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 24

Although Magistrate should give some more time to the accused for reflection before recording his confession but a confessional statement cannot be rejected merely because only three hours' time had been given for the reflection, if it is otherwise acceptable. It is necessary to see what the maker of the statement stated in his confession to find out whether intrinsically it is a voluntary statement or tutored one made under coercion.

In the present case the confessional statements show that they were more or less exculpatory of the maker in which each accused attributed the important role in the crime to the other and were quite long and full of facts and minute details. These would not be there normally if the confessions are the result of tutoring or of compulsion. The circumstantial evidence relied upon by the trial court and the High Court lend assurance to the genuineness and voluntary nature of these confessions. Although they had been retracted, but in view of the fact that they are generally corroborated by the circumstantial evidence in ample measure, there is no satisfactory reason for the confessions not being accepted and acted upon.

The confessional statements cannot be said to be not of voluntary nature in this case. The Judicial Magistrate who recorded the statements had given the necessary warning to the accused as required under S. 164(2). After the accused told him that his mind was clear from the time of his arrest and that he wanted to confess out of repentance for what he had done he gave him three hours' time for reflection and put him in the custody of a peon of the Chief Judicial Magistrate in his own chamber and saw to it that no police officer was allowed to enter the court until the recording of the confessional statement of the accused was over. After the accused was brought before him from his chamber after the said interval he cautioned him again and after being satisfied that the accused was going to confess voluntarily he recorded his statement.

Although one of the accused had injury on his person but the injury was not serious enough to force the accused to make a false confessional statement. It was not improbable in this case that the accused was roughed up and given some beating by the police when he tried to escape before he was forcibly put into the police vehicle and taken to the police station resulting in some injury to his person. The accused had not told the Judicial Magistrate that he was beaten by the police for causing him to make a confessional statement. It is also not possible to hold that the statement of the other accused was not voluntary merely because he had on a prior occasion declined to make a confessional statement. Henry Westmuller Roberts v. State of Assam, (1985) 3 SCC 291: 1985 SCC (Cri) 364: AIR 1985 SC 823: 1985 Cri LJ 1079.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, A. Varadarajan and Sabyasachi Mukharji, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-3-1985]

[1781] — S. 164 — Whether confession recorded was voluntary — Submission that the fact that one of the persons arrested along with accused-appellant had died in police lock-up shows physical torture by police — Such submission raised before Supreme Court in appeal under Art. 136, in absence of any other material, held, not sufficient to doubt voluntariness of a confession

Dealing with the contention that the confession was not voluntary attention of the court was drawn to the fact that one of the persons arrested along with the appellant died in the lock-up and that would give sufficient indication as to the physical torture which the persons involved in this case would have been subjected to.

Held :

Neither the prosecution nor the defence could show how that person died when he was in police custody. The defence did not even bother to ask the investigating officer about the result of the enquiry conducted by a Magistrate under Section 176 CrPC, regarding the death of that person (if he had died while he was in the lock-up the aforementioned provision mandates that the enquiry should have been conducted by a Magistrate). There is no allegation that the Judicial Magistrate had not adopted all the precautions enjoined by law before recording the confession. No other formality prescribed under law had been infringed by the Judicial Magistrate. In the absence of any such material it is too late in the day for the Supreme Court, particularly dealing with the appeal under Article 136 of the Constitution, to use the death of that person as a sufficient ground to eclipse the voluntariness of the confession of LS which was recorded by a Judicial Magistrate. (Para 14). Lokeman Shah v. State of W.B., (2001) 5 SCC 235: 2001 SCC (Cri) 829: AIR 2001 SC 1760: 2001 Cri LJ 2196.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.T. Thomas, R.P. Sethi and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-4-2001]

[1782] — Ss. 164 and 163, 162 — Confession — Reliability — Comparison of confession with record in case diary illegal — Direction by Magistrate, while remanding the accused to judicial custody, to keep away the accused from police does not indicate involuntariness of the confession — Merely because the Magistrate started recording the confession within a short time after the accused was produced before him, it could not be inferred that the confession was not voluntarily made — Confession retracted four days after the accused was released on bail — No such complaint made while he was in judicial custody for about a fortnight — Merely because the accused while retracting the confession and during his examination under S. 313 CrPC alleged that he made the confession under pressure and force from the police it cannot be concluded that the confession was not voluntarily made — Trial court not justified in considering length of confession as a suspicious circumstance — Accused clearly warned that his confession was likely to be used against him — Omission to inquire from the accused as to whether he was promised to be made an approver if he made the confession is inconsequential — Separate reasons not required to be recorded for believing that the confession was made voluntarily — Held, in the circumstances of the case, the High Court was justified in placing reliance upon the confession made by the accused — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 24. Ammini v. State of Kerala, (1998) 2 SCC 301: 1998 SCC (Cri) 618: AIR 1998 SC 260: 1998 Cri LJ 481.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and M. Jagannadha Rao, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-11-1997]

[1783] — S. 164 — Applicability — Statement recorded under S. 14, Central Excise Act without complying with S. 164 CrPC, held, nonetheless admissible in evidence subject to the conditions in S. 24 of Evidence Act — Central Excise Act, 1944 — Ss. 14 and 9(1) — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 24, 25 and 26 — Customs Act, 1962 — S. 108(3)

Certain cigarette-manufacturing companies and some of their Directors were prosecuted before the Court of Special Judge (Economic Offences) at Hyderabad for offences under Section 9(1) of the Central Excise Act and Section 120-B of the Penal Code. The Special Judge found them to be not guilty and, therefore, acquitted them. The Revenue filed an appeal together with a petition for leave to appeal which came up before a Single Judge of the A.P. High Court. In an earlier case, a Division Bench of that High Court had held that any inculpatory statement recorded by the authorities under Section 108 of the Customs Act without following and complying with the constraints prescribed in Section 164 CrPC would be inadmissible evidence in a trial against the maker of that statement. Following that decision, the Single Judge excluded all the confessional statements from consideration. Therefore, finding the remaining evidence to be insufficient to establish the guilt of the accused persons, he dismissed the petition for leave to appeal as well as the appeal itself.

Then the Revenue approached the Supreme Court. Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Section 171-A of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 (repealed by the Customs Act) corresponds to Section 108 of the Customs Act. In this context, Section 14 of the Central Excise Act is practically the same as Section 108 of the Customs Act. So the decision rendered by the Supreme Court under the other corresponding provisions will be of much advantage to discern how the scope of the provisions has been understood by the Supreme Court earlier. (Para 9)

A confession made to a police officer can be recorded by him without any of the constraints incorporated under Section 164 CrPC. But the safety of the confessor in such an event is that such confession is forbidden from use in evidence. The ban contained in Section 25 of the Evidence Act is an absolute ban. But there is no ban in regard to the confession made to any person other than a police officer, except when such confession was made while he is in police custody. The inculpatory statement made by any person under Section 108 is to non-police personnel and hence it has no tinge of inadmissibility in evidence if it was made when the person concerned was not then in police custody. Nonetheless such a statement should be scrutinised by the court in the same manner as confession made by an accused person to any non-police personnel. The court has to be satisfied in such cases, that any inculpatory statement made by an accused person to a gazetted officer must also pass the tests prescribed in Section 24 of the Evidence Act. (Paras 12 and 17). CCE v. Duncan Agro Industries Ltd., (2000) 7 SCC 53: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1275: AIR 2000 SC 2901: (2000) 120 ELT 280.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2000]

N.S.R. Krishna Prasad v. Collector of Customs, (1992) 57 ELT 568 (AP), overruled on this point and, held, reversed on a different point

Haroom Haji Abdulla v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1968 SC 832: (1968) 2 SCR 641; Ramesh Chandra Mehta v. State of W.B., AIR 1970 SC 940: (1969) 2 SCR 461: 1970 Cri LJ 863; Harbansingh Sardar Lenasingh v. State of Maharashtra, (1972) 3 SCC 775: 1972 SCC (Cri) 843; Veera Ibrahim v. State of Maharashtra, (1976) 2 SCC 302: 1976 SCC (Cri) 278; Poolpandi v. Supdt., Central Excise, (1992) 3 SCC 259: 1992 SCC (Cri) 620, followed

Asstt. CCE v. Duncan Agro Industries Ltd., 1992 Cri LJ 231 (AP), reversed

(6) Reliability of judicial confession: basing of conviction thereon

See also S. 164, '(2) Manner of recording confession — Compliance with precautions under S. 164', and

'(5) Admissibility of confession/statement recorded under S. 164 — Voluntariness', above

See also under CRIMINAL TRIAL in Vol. 3

See also Ss. 24 to 31, EVIDENCE ACT, 1872

[1784] — Ss. 164 and 313 — Confession by accused — Admissibility in evidence — Need for corroboration — Held, confession would not ordinarily be considered the basis for a conviction — However, it is admissible and conviction may also be based thereon if it is found truthful and voluntary and in the given case, some corroboration thereof — Confession which is not retracted even at a later stage of the trial and even accepted by the accused in his examination under S. 313 can be fully relied upon — Further held, where sufficient material is brought on record to lend assurance to the court in regard to the truthfulness of the confession made, which is corroborated by several independent circumstances lending assurance thereto, even a retracted confession may be acted upon — In the instant case, confession made by Appellant 1 was not retracted and he even accepted the same in his examination under S. 313 — Hence, conviction on the basis of, together with other circumstantial evidence, sustainable (Paras 31 to 39). Bishnu Prasad Sinha v. State of Assam, (2007) 11 SCC 467: AIR 2007 SC 848: (2007) 53 AIC 166 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 1145.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-2007]

Aloke Nath Dutta v. State of W.B., (2007) 12 SCC 230; State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715; Sidharth v. State of Bihar, (2005) 12 SCC 545: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 175; State of T.N. v. Kutty, (2001) 6 SCC 550: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1177; Bhagwan Singh v. State of M.P., (2003) 3 SCC 21: 2003 SCC (Cri) 712; Sarwan Singh Rattan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 637: 1957 SCR 953: 1957 Cri LJ 1014, relied on

[1785] — S. 164 — Confession — Conviction can be based on confession even if it is not corroborated

It is not possible to accept the contention that the confession without corroboration cannot be acted on for the purpose of entering a conviction. Confession if true and reliable can form the basis of conviction. (Para 13). Lokeman Shah v. State of W.B., (2001) 5 SCC 235: 2001 SCC (Cri) 829: AIR 2001 SC 1760: 2001 Cri LJ 2196.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.T. Thomas, R.P. Sethi and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-4-2001]

Balbir Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 216: 1957 Cri LJ 481; Pyare Lal Bhargava v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1963 SC 1094: 1963 Supp (1) SCR 689: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 178; Ram Chandra Prasad Sharma v. State of Bihar, AIR 1967 SC 349: (1966) 3 SCR 517: 1967 Cri LJ 409; Hem Raj Devilal v. State of Ajmer, AIR 1954 SC 462: 1954 SCR 1133: 1954 Cri LJ 1313, relied on [1786] — S. 164 — Confession — Conviction based on — Propriety — Recorded confession showing that Magistrate followed the legal formalities in recording confession of the accused-appellant and that confession was voluntary in nature — Statement of appellant that he was beaten up by police for three days not believed by Magistrate in view of appellant's failure to show marks of injury on his body — As, after putting preliminary questions and recording answers of appellant, further confession was recorded by the Magistrate two hours thereafter, appellant had time for reflection, who was then in judicial custody — Appellant in his confession gave details as to how the incident had happened — Description of injuries, found on the dead body of the deceased in the post-mortem report, in conformity with the overt acts described in the confession statement which proved that confession was fully corroborated by medical evidence — Bloodstained dhariya (crime weapon) and turban allegedly worn by appellant at the time of the incident recovered at the instance of the appellant from his house — Held, there was satisfactory evidence to prove the case against the appellant and the Sessions Judge as well as the High Court had rightly convicted the appellant for the offence punishable under S. 302 — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302 — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 24 (Para 7). Devi Singh v. State of Rajasthan, (2005) 10 SCC 453: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1580.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-12-2004]

[1787] — S. 164 — Confessions when may not to be relied on — Graham Staines murder case — Acquittal of accused persons other than main assailants (A-1 and A-3) confirmed — Dock and photo identification being done for the first time in court without any corroboration — There being procedural lapses and doubt of involvement of accused persons (except A-1 and A-3) — Accused persons at midnight setting on fire a vehicle parked in front of a church in which G (a Christian missionary from Australia) and his two children were sleeping — As accused prevented deceased from escaping from vehicle, the three getting burnt in vehicle and dying — For many days, many of the eyewitnesses not coming forward to claim that they had seen occurrence, before IOs and police personnel who had visited village from time to time — Confessional statements of A-9, A-12 and A-14 being exculpatory — Many of the confessional statements being recorded immediately after production of maker after long CBI custody and in some cases after recording of such statements maker being remanded to police custody — A-11 being given only 10 minutes' time for reflection after his production from police custody — Various warnings/cautions required to be given to the accused before recording such confession, not having been fully adhered to by Magistrates recording confessions under S. 164 CrPC — There being procedural lapses and absence of acceptable materials, High Court acquitting all accused except A-1 and A-3, held, justified — Dock identification or photo identification though is admissible evidence, cannot be given credence without further corroborative evidence like earlier TI parade or other corroborative evidence — Explanation that out of fear eyewitnesses turned up late, cannot be accepted because as per rule of prudence generally it is desirable to look for corroboration — Though there was corroboration in respect of A-1 and A-3 (those rightly convicted by High Court), criminal conspiracy was not established against the rest (those acquitted by High Court) — Though eyewitnesses proved that a mob consisting of A-1 and A-3 set fire to vehicle causing death of deceased, there being absence of definite assertion from prosecution about specific role and involvement of other accused persons — The poor tribals were, therefore, entitled to benefit of doubt — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 24 — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302

Dock identification or photo identification though is admissible evidence, cannot be given credence without further corroborative evidence. Though some of the witnesses identified some of the accused in the dock, without corroborative evidence dock identification alone cannot be treated as substantial evidence, though it is permissible. No importance needs to be attached on the testimony of the eyewitnesses regarding the persons acquitted by the High Court (i.e. accused persons other than A-1 and A-3) because the acquitted persons were identified for the first time before the trial court without any corroboration by previous TI parade held by the

(6) Reliability of judicial confession: basing of conviction thereon (contd.)

Magistrate in accordance with the procedure established. As rightly observed by the High Court, for a long number of days, many of these eyewitnesses never came forward to claim that they had seen the occurrence before the IOs and the police personnel visiting the village from time to time. (Paras 50 and 40 to 45)

Though an explanation was offered that out of fear the eyewitnesses did not name the offenders, as a safe rule of prudence, generally it is desirable to look for corroboration of the sworn testimony of witnesses in court as to the identity of the accused who are strangers to them, in the form of earlier TIP. Though some of them were identified by the photographs except A-1 and A-3, no other corroborative material was shown by the prosecution. (Para 43)

There is no material to prove conspiracy charge against any of the other accused. (Para 98)

In the absence of definite assertion from the prosecution side, about their specific role and involvement, as rightly observed by the High Court, it is not safe to convict the other accused. (Para 95)

Finally, insofar as the appeals filed by CBI against the order of acquittal by the High Court in respect of certain persons, it was pointed out that when two views are possible, the one in favour of the accused should be accepted. Presumption of innocence is a fundamental principle of criminal jurisprudence. (Para 94)

Section 164 CrPC requires strict and faithful compliance with sub-sections (2) to (4). The failure to observe safeguards not only impairs the evidentiary value of confession but casts a doubt on the nature and voluntariness of confession on which no reliance can be placed. As rightly observed by the High Court, no exceptional circumstances could be brought to notice by the prosecution in respect of the appellants other than A-1 and A-3, to explain away the procedural lapses. (Para 72)

The analysis of evidence of PWs 29 and 34, Judicial Magistrates shows that many of the confessional statements were recorded immediately after production of the maker after long CBI custody and in some cases after such statements were made and recorded by the Judicial Magistrate, the maker was remanded to police custody. Though the Magistrates have deposed that the procedure provided under Section 164 CrPC has been complied with, various warnings/cautions required to be given to the accused before recording such confession, have not been fully adhered to by them. In the certificate, there is no specific reference about the nature of the custody from which these persons were produced nor about the assurance that they would not be remanded to police custody if they declined. (Paras 71 and 72)

As rightly observed by the High Court, the possibility of coercion, threat or inducement to the accused A-9 to make the confession cannot be ruled out. Remanding A-9 to police custody after his statement was recorded under Section 164 CrPC is not justified. As per Section 164(3) if any accused refuses to make any confessional statement, such Magistrate shall not authorise detention of the accused in police custody. (Para 68)

A-12 was not cautioned that if he made any confession, the same may be used against him in evidence and on that basis he may be sentenced to death or imprisonment for life. Equally he was not cautioned by PW 29 that if he refused to make the confessional statement, he would not be remanded to police custody. (Para 69)

The confessional statement of A-11 was recorded immediately after his production before him from the police custody. He was given only 10 minutes' time for reflection after his production from police custody. (Para 70)

Both A-9 and A-12 in their confessional statements, made exculpatory statements. The entire confessional statement of A-14 is exculpatory and he also retracted from the confession. It was further found that this confessional statement was made long after the charge-sheet was filed i.e. on 22-6-1999. (Paras 69 and 70)

Hence, the reasoning and conclusion of the High Court with regard to acquittal of certain accused persons is justified. In the absence of acceptable materials and in view of the various infirmities in the prosecution case as pointed out by the High Court, the order of acquittal of others (except A-1 and A-3) who are all poor tribals is confirmed. (Paras 95 and 98). Dara Singh v. Republic of India, (2011) 2 SCC 490.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-1-2011]

Manu Sharma v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 6 SCC 1: (2010) 2 SCC (Cri) 1385; Umar Abdul Sakoor Sorathia v. Narcotic Control Bureau, (2000) 1 SCC 138: 2000 SCC (Cri) 200; Dana Yadav v. State of Bihar, (2002) 7 SCC 295: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1698; Malkhansingh v. State of M.P., (2003) 5 SCC 746; State of U.P. v. Nandu Vishwakarma, (2009) 14 SCC 501: (2010) 1 SCC (Cri) 1429; Sambhaji Hindurao Deshmukh v. State of Maharashtra, (2008) 11 SCC 186: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 464; Raghunath v. State of Haryana, (2003) 1 SCC 398: 2003 SCC (Cri) 326; Allarakha K. Mansuri v. State of Gujarat, (2002) 3 SCC 57: 2002 SCC (Cri) 519, relied on [1788] — S. 164 — Effect of non-compliance with — Submission by appellant that: no reliance can be placed on the statement under S. 164 CrPC as there was non-compliance with the provisions therof — Held, appellant never retracted the said confession — Apart from the judicial confession appellant had also made extra-judicial confessions — Hence, appellant rightly convicted under S. 302 and sentenced to life imprisonment — Penal Code, 1860, S. 302 (Paras 14, 21 and 23 to 28). Mondri Sreenu v. State of A.P., (2008) 17 SCC 43: AIR 2009 SC 677.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-10-2008]

[1789] — S. 164 — Scope and applicability — Trial court, inter alia, relying on judicial confession of respondent-accused, convicting him under S. 302 IPC for allegedly killing his parents — However, High Court, on ground that requisite procedure for recording confession under S. 164 was not followed, directing acquittal — Sustainability — Held, act of recording confessions under S. 164 is a very solemn act and in discharging his duties under the said section, Judicial Magistrate is required to take care to see that requirements of S. 164(2) are fully satisfied — It is necessary in every case to put questions as intended to be asked under S. 164(2) — In the instant case, a bare perusal of evidence of PW 9 (Judicial Magistrate) shows that necessary questions were asked and due care was taken before recording statement of accused — It was specifically told to accused that statement could be used in evidence against him — Time was given to accused to ensure that he was making statement voluntarily without any pressure — Therefore, High Court was not justified in holding non-compliance with provisions of S. 164 — Moreover, it is not the case of respondent that any mitigating factor existed — Hence, impugned judgment liable to be set aside — Penal Code, 1860, S. 302 (Paras 16, 17 and 20). State of Punjab v. Harjagdev Singh, (2009) 16 SCC 91.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-4-2009]

State of Rajasthan v. Raja Ram, (2003) 8 SCC 180: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1965; Ram Singh v. Sonia, (2007) 3 SCC 1: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 1, relied on

R. v. Warickshall, (1783) 1 Leach 263: 168 ER 234, cited

Woodroffe's Evidence, 9th Edn., p. 284, cited

[1790] — S. 164 — Applicability — Prosecutrix giving statement only under S. 164 — Prosecutrix not giving any evidence in court — During alleged crime other accused bringing prosecutrix to appellant's house but nothing on record to show appellant's involvement — Effect — Mere S. 164 CrPC statement of prosecutrix, held, is not enough to convict appellant — S. 164 CrPC statement is not substantive evidence and can be utilised only to corroborate or contradict the witness vis-à-vis statement made in court — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 366-A or 363 (Paras 6 to 8)

In appeal, the High Court altered the conviction from one under Section 366-A to Section 363 IPC. One out of the four accused died, one was released on the basis of reduction of sentence to imprisonment already undergone and the appellant and his brother were sentenced to one year's RI. The SLP of appellant's brother was dismissed because he did not surrender to custody.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Statement under Section 164 CrPC is not substantive evidence and can be utilised only to corroborate or contradict the witness vis-à-vis statement made in court. (Para 6)

The conviction of the appellant under Section 363 IPC is set aside because the only material that has been used against the appellant is the statement under Section 164 CrPC. The prosecutrix was not produced as a witness as she had since been married in Nepal and her husband had refused to let her return to India for the evidence. In this light her statement under Section 164 cannot be used against the appellant. (Paras 7 and 6)

Even otherwise the appellant could not be implicated in the offence under Section 363 or 366-A IPC dehors other evidence to show his involvement in the events preceding the kidnapping when as per the Section 164 CrPC statement of the prosecutrix she was brought to appellant's house by other kidnappers. (Para 7). Baij Nath Sah v. State of Bihar, (2010) 6 SCC 736.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision : 29-4-2010]

Ram Kishan Singh v. Harmit Kaur, (1972) 3 SCC 280: 1972 SCC (Cri) 493, relied on [1791] — S. 164 — Confession — Exculpatory — Inadmissibility — Alleged confession read as a whole exculpatory of the offence of murder for which appellant was charged, the same have been committed by way of private defence when the deceased tried to rape the accused — Such statement, held, was inadmissible and could not be the basis for her conviction — Appellant acquitted of the charge of murder — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 100, 302 and 376 — Conviction based on exculpatory statement. Champa Rani Mondal v. State of W.B., (2000) 10 SCC 608: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1514.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and B.N. Kirpal, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-1998]

(6) Reliability of judicial confession: basing of conviction thereon (contd.)

[1792] — S. 164 — Post-recovery judicial confession — Reliability of — Merely because a judicial confession regarding murder and theft was made after recovery of the articles belonging to the victim at the behest of the confessor, confession does not become unreliable

A judicial confession would also not become bad by reason of the fact that articles belonging to the victims were recovered prior to the making of the confession. That aspect, instead of vitiating the confession, could be a factor in favour of the voluntariness of the confession. When the culprit finds that the articles concealed by him are all disinterred, it is possible that he might feel that there is no use in concealing the facts any more. Then he may desire to make a clean breast of everything to any person or authority. (Para 14)

On the facts of the case there was no reason to think that A-2 had been prevailed upon by any extraneous influence to make the confession. The Judicial Magistrate who heard the confession certified that in his opinion the accused made the confession voluntarily. That satisfaction could be disrupted only if there are sturdy reasons. Even regarding the truthfulness of the version given by the accused in the confession, it is open to the court to ascertain whether there are other materials to lend assurance to the court about the truth of it. (Para 18). State of T.N. v. Kutty, (2001) 6 SCC 550: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1177: AIR 2001 SC 2778.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-8-2001]

[1793] — S. 164 — Use of threat, inducement or promise alleged — Held, the burden of proof is on the accused, though it is not as high as on the prosecution — Further, once the accused is able to prove the facts creating a reasonable doubt that the confession was not voluntary or was obtained by threat, coercion or inducement, the burden would be on the prosecution to prove that the confession was made voluntarily — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 24, 30 and 101-106

In a trial and proprio vigore in a criminal trial, courts are required to marshal the evidence. It is the duty of the prosecution to prove the case beyond reasonable doubt. The evidence may consist of direct evidence, confession or circumstantial evidence. In a criminal trial punishable under the provisions of the IPC it is now a well-settled legal position that confession can form the sole basis for conviction. If it is retracted, it must first be tested whether the confession is voluntary and truthful inculpating the accused in the commission of the crime. Confession is one of the species of admission dealt with under Sections 24 to 30 of the Evidence Act and Section 164 of the Code. It is an admission against the maker of it, unless its admissibility is excluded by some of those provisions.

If a confession is proved by unimpeachable evidence and if it is of voluntary nature, it when retracted, is entitled to high degree of value as its maker is likely to face the consequences of confession by a statement affecting his life, liberty or property. Burden is on the accused to prove that the statement was obtained by threat, duress or promise if it is established from the record or circumstances that the confession is shrouded with suspicious features, then it falls in the realm of doubt. The burden of proof on the accused is not as high as on the prosecution. If the accused is able to prove the facts creating reasonable doubt that the confession was not voluntary or it was obtained by threat, coercion or inducement etc., the burden would be on the prosecution to prove that the confession was made by the accused voluntarily. K.I. Pavunny v. Asstt. Collector (HQ), Central Excise Collectorate, (1997) 3 SCC 721: 1997 SCC (Cri) 444: (1997) 1 KLT 489.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Ramaswamy, S. Saghir Ahmad and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-2-1997]

Bhagwan Singh v. State of Punjab (I), AIR 1952 SC 214: 1952 SCR 812, followed

[1794] — S. 164 — Effect of clerical mistake on credibility of recorded statement — Held, reliable substantive evidence not to be doubted where a presumption of clerical mistake might explain the incompatibility in accommodating the evidence — Authentic substantive evidence of Special Judicial Magistrate while recording dying declaration was relied on which was further corroborated by another analogous dying declaration by PSI (PW 7) — Therefore, clerical mistake (of typing 11.55 p.m instead of 11.55 a.m. while recording dying declaration) was presumed to accommodate the reliable substantive evidence of dying declaration recorded by Special Judicial Magistrate (Paras 24 to 26). Vikas v. State of Maharashtra, (2008) 2 SCC 516: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 486.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-1-2008]

[1795] — Ss. 164 and 313 — Kidnapping of a 5-year-old boy for ransom — Victim subsequently murdered and thereafter his dead body burnt — Two of the three persons involved in the crime committing suicide — The third one i.e. the appellant, who had worked as a driver in the house of victim, making a disclosure statement as a result of which bones of victim and his burnt clothes etc.

were recovered — Medical evidence including DNA test report showing that remnants of body were that of victim — Confession made by appellant before Judicial Magistrate was to the effect that he only kidnapped the boy while the other two killed him — Appellant was seen 5-6 days prior to the incident moving around the house of the victim — Motive for crime was to extort ransom — Considering the above circumstances, the trial court convicted the appellant under Ss. 364-A and 201 IPC and passed death sentence — High Court affirmed the said judgment — Challenge to circumstance of discovery of bones not sustainable — Confession of appellant was recorded after complying with requirements of law and the same was voluntary and truthful in nature — Said confession not retracted during trial — Retraction purported to have been done only during examination of appellant under S. 313 CrPC — In this view, held, appellant was guilty of crime committed — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 364 and 201

Both PW 2 and PW 3 as also PW 10 gave a vivid description as to the mode and manner in which the appellant pointed out the place whereat the dead body of the victim was burnt, the nalla wherefrom the bones were recovered and the spot where some burnt pieces of cardboard and ashes were seen. (Para 21)

The appellant was not in police custody when a request was made to record his confessional statement. He was in judicial custody. He was produced before the Magistrate on 16-8-2000. The Magistrate took the requisite precaution in not recording his statement on that day. The requirements of Section 164 CrPC have, thus, fully been complied with. The appellant was asked to come on the next day. A note of caution as envisaged in law was again administered. His statement was recorded on 17-8-2000. The questions put to the appellant clearly go to show that the Magistrate took all the requisite precautions before recording the said statement. (Paras 29 and 30)

The confession made by the appellant was voluntary in nature and the same was free from undue influence, coercion and threat. There is a ring of truth in the confession of the appellant. (Para 41)

The confession was not retracted during the course of the trial. It was purported to have been done only in his examination under Section 313 CrPC. (Para 32). Anil v. Admn. of Daman & Diu, Daman, (2006) 13 SCC 36: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 72: (2007) 49 AIC 65 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-2006]

State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715; Hanumant Govind Nargundkar v. State of M.P., AIR 1952 SC 343: 1952 SCR 1091: 1953 Cri LJ 129; Palvinder Kaur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1952 SC 354: 1953 SCR 94: 1953 Cri LJ 154; Aher Raja Khima v. State of Saurashtra, AIR 1956 SC 217: 1956 Cri LJ 426; Subramania Goundan v. State of Madras, AIR 1958 SC 66: 1958 SCR 428: 1958 Cri LJ 238; Bharat v. State of U.P., (1971) 3 SCC 950: 1972 SCC (Cri) 198; Bhagwan Singh Rana v. State of Haryana, (1976) 3 SCC 101: 1976 SCC (Cri) 373, relied on

(7) Retracted judicial confession

See also under CRIMINAL TRIAL in Vol. 3

See also Ss. 24 to 31, EVIDENCE ACT, 1872

[1796] — S. 164 — Retracted confession — Court should be assured of its voluntary nature and truthfulness — Procedural requirements — After confession is recorded by apprising the accused of its implications, court called upon to consider evidence against accused, should ascertain whether there were any circumstances casting doubt on voluntary nature of the confession — Court should apply its mind and form a prima facie opinion as to whether confession was free from threat, duress and inducement — Thereafter, court should determine whether the confession was true — Fact that confession was made voluntary and without threat and inducement may raise a presumptive evidence about its truthfulness — Court should also have regard to corroboration from other evidence so as to be assured of truth of the confession — However, corroboration need not be in respect of each and every material particular but it should be such that taken as a whole it should fit into the facts proved by other evidence — On facts held, confession which was retracted by accused received no corroboration from any other evidence and also contradicted the medical evidence as regards death of the deceased which was an important aspect of the confession — Hence it would be unsafe to convict the accused solely on the basis of the retracted confession — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 24

Before acting on a confession made before a Judicial Magistrate in terms of Section 164, the court must be satisfied first that the procedural requirements laid down in sub-sections (2) to (4) are complied with. These are salutary safeguards to ensure that the confession is made voluntarily by the accused after being apprised of the implications of making such confession. After this first requirement of acting on a confession is satisfied, the court, called upon to consider the evidence against the accused, should still see whether there are any circumstances appearing from the record which may cast a doubt on the voluntary nature of the confession. The endeavour of the court should be to apply its mind to the question whether the accused was free from threat, duress or inducement at the time of making the confession. In doing so, the Court should bear in mind, that under Section 24 of the Evidence Act, a stringent rule of proof as to the existence of threat, duress or inducement should not be applied and a prima facie opinion based on evidence and circumstances may be adopted as the standard laid down. Having thus reached a finding as to the voluntary nature of a confession, the truth of the confession should then be tested by the court. The fact that the confession has been made voluntarily, free from threat and inducement, can be regarded as presumptive evidence of its truth. Still, there may be circumstances to indicate that the confession cannot be true wholly or partly in which case it loses much of its evidentiary value. In order to be assured of the truth of confession, the rule of prudence is that the court should look to corroboration from other evidence. However, there need not be corroboration in respect of each and every material particular. The expression "corroboration of material particulars" does not imply that there should be meticulous examination of the entire material particulars. It is enough that there is broad corroboration in conformity with the general trend of the confession. Broadly, there should be corroboration so that the confession taken as a whole fits into the facts proved by other evidence. In substance, the court should have assurance from all angles that the retracted confession was, in fact, voluntary and it must have been true. (Paras 17 to 20)

(7) Retracted judicial confession (contd.)

In Chandrakant Chimanlal Desai case, (1992) 1 SCC 473, the Court imported the observations which were made in Kashmira Singh case, AIR 1952 SC 149 in the context of evidentiary value of the confession of co-accused and applied them to the case of retracted confession. It appears that the learned Judges went by the headnote in the AIR to Kashmira Singh which opens up with the sentence: (AIR p. 159) "The confession of an accused person...." However, in the text of the judgment it is crystal clear that the entire discussion and the statement of law was only with reference to the confession of the co-accused. In view of the error in comprehending the scope of the decision in Kashmira Singh case the decision in Chimanlal case falls close to the category of decisions rendered per incuriam. If followed, it would run counter to a catena of coordinate Bench decisions and the larger Bench decision in Pyare Lal case, 1963 Supp (1) SCR 689. (Paras 21 and 23)

In the present case, the confessional statement of the accused-appellant far from receiving corroboration of any sort from other circumstances, contradicts the medical evidence relating to cause of death which is an important aspect of the confession. Therefore, it is not safe to convict the appellant solely on the basis of the alleged confession which has been retracted. (Para 25). Parmananda Pegu v. State of Assam, (2004) 7 SCC 779: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2081: AIR 2004 SC 4197.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-9-2004]

Pyare Lal Bhargava v. State of Rajasthan, 1963 Supp (1) SCR 689: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 178; Subramania Goundan v. State of Madras, 1958 SCR 428: 1958 Cri LJ 238; Kashmira Singh v. State of M.P., AIR 1952 SC 159: 1952 Cri LJ 839; State of Maharashtra v. Damu, (2000) 6 SCC 269: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1088, relied on

Chandrakant Chimanlal Desai v. State of Gujarat, (1992) 1 SCC 473: 1992 SCC (Cri) 157, held, per incuriam

[1797] — S. 164 — Retracted confession — Reliability of — Merely because a judicial confession is retracted by its maker, it does not become unreliable — Court has to ascertain whether the confession is voluntary and true and is not vitiated by any other reason and if so, court cannot refuse to act on it — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 24

A film actress and her mother were murdered in their house. A-1, their driver, A-2, their watchman and A-3, their cook were convicted for murder and theft and sentenced to death by the trial court. But the High Court while confirming the conviction of A-1, altered his sentence to imprisonment for life and acquitted A-2 and A-3. Thereupon A-1 moved the Supreme Court for special leave to appeal but the SLP was dismissed. The State filed appeals before the Supreme Court against the acquittal of A-2 and A-3. A-3 could not be traced out in spite of repeated searches made for effecting the service of notice on him and finally the appeal filed against him was also dismissed. Thus the appeal by special leave filed against acquittal of A-2 remained to be decided. The prosecution case against A-2 was based on his confession recorded by a Judicial Magistrate. The High Court had declined to act on the said confession mainly for two reasons. Firstly, that the confession was retracted by the maker thereof and secondly, that the recovery of articles was made prior to the confession. If the said confession could not, for any reason whatsoever, be used by the court, it would not be possible to reverse the acquittal with the help of the remaining evidence. Allowing the State's appeal, setting aside the acquittal of A-2 and restoring the order of conviction passed by the trial court,

Held :

It is not the law that once a confession is retracted the court should presume that the confession is tainted. To retract from a confession is the right of the confessor and all the accused against whom confessions were produced by the prosecution have invariably adopted that right. It would be injudicious to jettison a judicial confession on the mere premise that its maker has retracted from it. The court has a duty to evaluate the evidence concerning the confession by looking at all aspects. The twin tests of a confession are to ascertain whether it was voluntary and true. Once those tests are found to be positive the next endeavour is to see whether there is any other reason which stands in the way of acting on it. Even for that, retraction of the confession is not a ground to throw the confession overboard. (Para 13)

On the facts of the case there was no reason to think that A-2 had been prevailed upon by any extraneous influence to make the confession. The Judicial Magistrate who heard the confession certified that in his opinion the accused made the confession voluntarily. That satisfaction could be disrupted only if there are sturdy reasons. Even regarding the truthfulness of the version given by the accused in the confession, it is open to the court to ascertain whether there are other materials to lend assurance to the court about the truth of it. (Para 18)

There were several circumstances which would lend assurance to the court about the facts contained in the judicial confession made by A-2. He being a watchman, his disappearance from the scene after the occurrence and his absconding for more than 15 days are circumstances effectively corroborating the confession. A large number of articles belonging to the deceased were recovered at his instance. Further, in the absence of any explanation as to how the finger impression of A-2, who was a watchman, had appeared on the door of the kitchen of the house, it can safely be treated also as an incriminating circumstance against him because the place of a watchman of the house is normally outside the house, if not outside the gate of the compound itself. (Para 21)

Thus the High Court should not have sidelined the judicial confession. It has, therefore, gone seriously wrong in interfering with the conviction passed by the trial court regarding A-2. (Para 23)

However, the lesser sentence of imprisonment for life is sufficient to be imposed on A-2 for the offence under Section 302 read with Section 34 IPC. (Para 24). State of T.N. v. Kutty, (2001) 6 SCC 550: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1177: AIR 2001 SC 2778.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-8-2001]

Distinguished in Aloke Nath Dutta v. State of W.B., (2007) 12 SCC 230

[1798] — S. 164 — Retracted confession — When can be sole basis of conviction — Corroboration of — Nature and extent of by independent evidence explained — Rule one of practice and prudence requires that the court seek assurance that there be any other facts and circumstances to corroborate the retracted confession — Customs Act, 1962 — S. 108 — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 24

There is no prohibition under the Evidence Act to rely upon a retracted confession to prove the prosecution case or to make the same basis for conviction of the accused. Practice and prudence require that the court could examine the evidence adduced by the prosecution to find out whether there were any other facts and circumstances to corroborate the retracted confession. It is not necessary that there should be corroboration from independent evidence adduced by the prosecution to corroborate each detail contained in the confessional statement. The court is required to examine whether the confessional statement was voluntary; in other words, whether it was not obtained by threat, duress or promise. If the court is satisfied from the evidence that it was voluntary, then it is required to examine whether the statement is true. If the court on examination of the evidence finds that the retracted confession is true, that part of the inculpatory portion could be relied upon to base the conviction. However, prudence and practice require that court would seek assurance getting corroboration from other evidence adduced by the prosecution. K.I. Pavunny v. Asstt. Collector (HQ), Central Excise Collectorate, (1997) 3 SCC 721: 1997 SCC (Cri) 444: (1997) 1 KLT 489.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Ramaswamy, S. Saghir Ahmad and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-2-1997]

[1799] — S. 164 — Retracted judicial confession — Reliability — Nature and extent of corroboration required — Though conviction based on uncorroborated confession of an accused person is not illegal but as a rule of prudence, which has become a rule of law, courts look for corroboration before accepting retracted confession — Each and every circumstance mentioned in the confession is not required to be separately and independently proved — Corroborative evidence itself need not be sufficient for conviction — Retracted confession

(7) Retracted judicial confession (contd.)

corroborated by evidence of eyewitnesses and other circumstances including discovery of dead body and jewels of deceased at the instance of accused and evidence of last seen together — On facts held, retracted confessions of accused persons are true and voluntary and the same are sufficiently corroborated in all material particulars establishing guilt of the accused

The judicial confessions are those which are made before a Magistrate or in court in due course of legal proceedings and when such a confession is retracted, the courts have held that apart from the statement being voluntary it should be true and should receive sufficient corroboration in material particulars by independent evidence. The rule of prudence namely requiring corroboration does not mean that each and every circumstance mentioned in the confession with regard to the participation of the accused in the crime must be separately and independently corroborated. It is sufficient if there is general corroboration of the important incidents, just like in the case of an approver's evidence and it is not necessary that the corroborative evidence itself should be sufficient for conviction. It is not illegal to base a conviction on an uncorroborated confession of an accused person but as a rule of prudence which has sanctified itself to the rule of law, the courts do look for corroboration before acting upon and accepting the retracted confession and what amount of corroboration would be necessary in a case would be a question of fact to be determined in the light of the circumstances of the case. Shankar v. State of T.N., (1994) 4 SCC 478: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1252: 1994 Cri LJ 3071: (1994) 2 Crimes 1: (1994) 2 An LT(Cri) 429.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-4-1994]

[1800] — S. 164 — Offences under Ss. 302/149 and 148 — Confession — Retracted judicial confession — Reliance on — On facts, held, did not substantiate the said offence — Accused confessing about a conspiracy to commit murder of the deceased but not confessing that he was a party to the murder — Such a confessional statement, held, exculpatory — Hence, in view of his having already been acquitted of the charge under S. 120 IPC, held, there was no substantive evidence to connect him with the said offences — More so, when his name was not mentioned in the FIR — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/149, 148 and 120 — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 24. Shabad Pulla Reddy v. State of A.P., (1997) 8 SCC 495: AIR 1997 SC 3087: 1997 Cri LJ 3753.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-8-1997]

[1801] — S. 164 — Retracted confession — Admissibility of against confessor — Rule of corroboration — Nature of and rationale for — Extent of corroboration necessary — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 24

A court may take into account the retracted confession, but it must look for the reasons for the making of the confession as well as for its retraction, and must weigh the two to determine whether the retraction affects the voluntary nature of the confession or not. If the court is satisfied that it was retracted because of an afterthought or advice, the retraction may not weigh with the court if the general facts proved in the case and the tenor of the confession as made and the circumstances of its making and withdrawal warrant its user. All the same, the courts do not act upon the retracted confession without finding assurance from some other sources as to the guilt of the accused. Therefore, it can be stated that a true confession made voluntarily may be acted upon with slight evidence to corroborate it, but a retracted confession requires corroboration that the retraction was an afterthought and that the earlier statement was true. However, this is not a rule of law, but is only rule of prudence. It cannot even be laid down as an inflexible rule of practice or prudence that under no circumstances can such a conviction be made without corroboration, for a court may, in a particular case, be convinced of the absolute truth of a confession and prepared to act upon it without corroboration; but it may be laid down as a general rule of practice that it is unsafe to rely upon a confession, much less on a retracted confession, unless the court is satisfied that the retracted confession is true and voluntarily made and has been corroborated in material particulars. (Paras 32 and 34)

As to the extent of corroboration required each and every circumstance mentioned in the retracted confession regarding the complicity of the maker need not be separately and independently corroborated. It would be sufficient that the general trend of the confession is substantiated by some evidence which would tally with what is contained in the confession. (Paras 32 to 35 and 37). State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715: 2005 Cri LJ 3950: (2005) 122 DLT 194.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2005]

Bharat v. State of U.P., (1971) 3 SCC 950: 1972 SCC (Cri) 198; Subramania Goundan v. State of Madras, 1958 SCR 428: 1958 Cri LJ 238; Pyare Lal Bhargava v. State of Rajasthan, 1963 Supp (1) SCR 689: AIR 1963 SC 1094: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 178; Parmananda Pegu v. State of Assam, (2004) 7 SCC 779: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2081, followed

Haroon Haji Abdulla v. State of Maharashtra, (1968) 2 SCR 641: 1968 Cri LJ 1017, clarified

Impliedly distinguished in Kanhaiyalal v. Union of India, (2008) 4 SCC 668*

[1802] — S. 164 — Retracted confession — Confession not retracted at the first opportunity available at the time when the charge was framed but only later when the accused was examined under S. 313 — Held, militates against the plea that the confession was not voluntary. Shankaria v. State of Rajasthan, (1978) 4 SCC 453: 1979 SCC (Cri) 74: AIR 1978 SC 1399: 1978 Cri LJ 1414.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria, N.L. Untwalia and P.S. Kailasam, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-1978]

[1803] — S. 164 — Retracted judicial confession — Court's approach — Court should look at retracted confession with some amount of suspicion and should be slow and cautious in accepting the same — Except where there is per se evidence of motivating factors of retraction or retraction is based on extraneous circumstances, court should probe deeper to find whether it was voluntary and truthful or was obtained by inducement, threat or torture — In absence of any objective evidence verifying conditions in which confession was retracted, court should extend the spirit of S. 24 and give the accused benefit of doubt — Courts should be guided by their past experience and decisions rendered by superior courts

In a case where confession is made in the presence of a Magistrate conforming to the requirements of Section 164, if it is retracted at a later stage, the court should probe deeper into the matter. Despite procedural safeguards contained in the said provision, the Magistrate should satisfy himself whether the confession was of voluntary nature and had not been by reason of any inducement, threat or torture. There can be times where despite such procedural safeguards, confessions are made for unknown reasons and in fact made out of fear of police. (Paras 105 and 106)

The past experience of the courts as also the decisions rendered by the superior courts should be taken as a wholesome guide. Despite the fact that procedural safeguards contained in Section 164 CrPC may be satisfied, it may be retracted subsequently. The court must, thus, take adequate precaution. Affirmative indication of external pressure will render the retracted confession nugatory in effect. The court must play a proactive role in unearthing objective evidence forming the backdrop of retraction and later the examination of such evidence of retraction. However in cases where none exists, the court must give the benefit of doubt to the accused. Where there is no objective material available for verifying the conditions in which the confession was retracted, the spirit of Section 24 of the Evidence Act (irrelevance of confession caused by inducement) may be extended to retracted confession. An inverse presumption must be drawn from absence of materials. (Para 108)

A retracted confession is a weak evidence. In a case of retracted confession, the courts while arriving at a finding of guilt would not ordinarily rely solely thereupon and would look forward for corroboration of material particulars. Such corroboration must not be referable in nature. Such corroboration must be independent and conclusive in nature. A retracted confession of a co-accused cannot be relied upon for the purpose of finding corroboration for the retracted confession of an accused. (Paras 125, 109 and 110)

In this country, retractions are as plentiful as confessions. In a case of retracted confession, the courts should evidently be a little slow in accepting the confession, although the accused may not be able to fully justify the reasons for his retraction. Caution and prudence in accepting a retracted confession is an ordinary rule. Although retracted confession is admissible, the same should be looked at with some amount of suspicion — a stronger suspicion than that which is attached to the confession of an approver who leads evidence in the court. (Paras 111, 114 and 117)

The court shall consider the materials on record objectively in regard to the reasons for retraction. It must arrive at a finding that the confession was truthful and voluntary. Merit of the confession being the voluntariness and truthfulness, the same, in no circumstances, should be compromised. In some of the decisions the Supreme Court proceeded on the basis that conviction of an accused on the basis of a retracted confession is permissible but only if it is found that retraction made by the accused was wholly on a false premise. (Para 116). Aloke Nath Dutta v. State of W.B., (2007) 12 SCC 230: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 264.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-12-2006]

Bhuboni Sahu v. R., (1948-49) 76 IA 147: AIR 1949 PC 257: (1949) 50 Cri LJ 872; Haricharan Kurmi v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 1184: (1964) 6 SCR 623: (1964) 2 Cri LJ 344; State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715; Bharat v. State of U.P., (1971) 3 SCC 950: 1972 SCC (Cri) 198; Puran v. State of Punjab (I), AIR 1953 SC 459: 1953 Cri LJ 1925; Kora Ghasi v. State of Orissa, (1983) 2 SCC 251: 1983 SCC (Cri) 387; Preetam v. State of M.P., (1996) 10 SCC 432: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1343; Bhagwan Singh v. State of M.P., (2003) 3 SCC 21: 2003 SCC (Cri) 712; R. v. Thompson, (1893) 2 QB 12: (1891-94) All ER Rep 376; Subramania Goundan v. State of Madras, AIR 1958 SC 66: 1958 Cri LJ 238; Pyare Lal Bhargava v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1963 SC 1094: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 178; Balbir Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 216: 1957 Cri LJ 481, relied on

(7) Retracted judicial confession (contd.)

Sidharth v. State of Bihar, (2005) 12 SCC 545: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 175; State of T.N. v. Kutty, (2001) 6 SCC 550: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1177, distinguished

[1804] — S. 164 — Retracted confession — Admissibility and use of against co-accused, explained in detail — Evidentiary value of such confession — Held, confession of a co-accused cannot be elevated to status of substantive evidence which can form basis of conviction of the co-accused — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 30 and 24

The proper way to approach a case of this kind is, first, to marshal the evidence against the [co-]accused excluding the confession altogether from consideration and see whether, if it is believed, a conviction could safely be based on it. If it is capable of belief independently of the confession, then of course it is not necessary to call the confession in aid. But cases may arise where the judge is not prepared to act on the other evidence as it stands even though, if believed, it would be sufficient to sustain a conviction. In such an event the judge may call in aid the confession and use it to lend assurance to the other evidence and thus fortify himself in believing what without the aid of the confession he would not be prepared to accept. (Para 38)

The court cannot start with the confession of a co-accused person; it must begin with other evidence adduced by the prosecution and after it has formed its opinion with regard to the quality and effect of the said evidence, then it is permissible to turn to the confession in order to receive assurance to the conclusion of guilt which the judicial mind is about to reach on the said other evidence. (Para 40)

The crucial expression used in Section 30 of the Evidence Act, 1872 is "the Court may take into consideration such confession". These words imply that the confession of a co-accused cannot be elevated to the status of substantive evidence which can form the basis of conviction of the co-accused. (Para 39). State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715: 2005 Cri LJ 3950: (2005) 122 DLT 194.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2005]

Kashmira Singh v. State of M.P., 1952 SCR 526: AIR 1952 SC 159: 1952 Cri LJ 839; Bhuboni Sahu v. R., AIR 1949 PC 257: 50 Cri LJ 872: 76 IA 147; Hari Charan Kurmi v. State of Bihar, (1964) 6 SCR 623: (1964) 2 Cri LJ 344, followed

[1805] — S. 164 — Retracted judicial confession — Nature, admissibility and consideration of — Impact of Art. 20(3) of the Constitution — Conviction when may be based on — Held, retracted confession should be construed in the light of Art. 20(3) which includes right to remain silent, Art. 21 as also provisions of Ss. 24 to 26 and S. 30 of the Act and basic tenets of Safeguards provided under S. 164 are not exhaustive — Retracted confession is a weak piece of evidence — Conviction cannot be solely based upon it unless confession is voluntary, truthful and is corroborated by independent and cogent evidence — Constitution of India — Arts. 20(3) & 21

Confession ordinarily is admissible in evidence. It is a relevant fact. It can be acted upon. Confession may under certain circumstances and subject to law laid down by the superior judiciary from time to time form the basis for conviction. It is, however, trite that for the said purpose the court has to satisfy itself in regard to: (i) voluntariness of the confession; (ii) truthfulness of the confession; (iii) corroboration. (Para 87)

A detailed confession which would otherwise be within the special knowledge of the accused may itself be not sufficient to raise a presumption that confession is a truthful one. Main features of a confession are required to be verified. If it is not done, no conviction can be based only on the sole basis thereof. (Para 89)

Article 20(3) of the Constitution of India provides that no person accused of any offence shall be compelled to be a witness against himself. The right to remain silent is an extension of the rule of civil liberty enjoined by our Constitution. Considering the guarantee under Article 20(3) and also humanising standards under Article 21, court is required to tread cautiously while construing retracted confession. To withdraw from what has been said previously needs to be interpreted in the vein of right to remain silent as an extension of this civil liberty. (Paras 95, 96 and 99)

Section 164 CrPC makes the confession before a Magistrate admissible in evidence. The manner in which such confession is to be recorded by the Magistrate is provided under Section 164 of the Code. The said provision, inter alia, seeks to protect an accused from making a confession, which may include a confession before a Magistrate, still as may be under influence, threat or promise from a person in authority. It takes into its embrace the right of an accused flowing from Article 20(3) of the Constitution of India as also Article 21 thereof. Although, Section 164 provides for safeguards, the same cannot be said to be exhaustive in nature. The Magistrate putting the questions to an accused brought before him from police custody, should sometime, be more intrusive than what is required in law. (Para 104)

In this regard it is important to consider the retracted confession within the legislative paradigm laid down under Sections 24 to 26 of the Evidence Act and Section 162(1) and Section 164 CrPC. Also it will be in the fitness of the case to appraise the value of retracted confession for the co-accused under Section 30 of the Evidence Act. The basic tenets of criminal law cannot also be lost sight of. In similar vein the law on retracted confession must be judged in the context of each case. (Paras 100, 101 and 99)

Sections 24 to 30 deal with confession. Sections 25 and 26 are simple corollaries flowing out of the axiomatic and generalised proposition (confession caused by inducement where inducement proceeds from a person in authority, is bad in law) contained in Section 24. They are directed towards assessing the value of a confession made to a police officer or in police custody. The policy underlying Sections 25 and 26 is to make it a substantive rule of law that confessions whenever and wherever made to the police, or while in the custody of the police unless made in the immediate presence of a Magistrate, shall be presumed to have been obtained under the circumstances mentioned in Section 24 and, therefore, inadmissible, except so far as is provided by Section 27 of the Act. (Paras 102 and 103). Aloke Nath Dutta v. State of W.B., (2007) 12 SCC 230: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 264.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-12-2006]

Shankaria v. State of Rajasthan, (1978) 3 SCC 435: 1978 SCC (Cri) 439; Anil v. Admn. of Daman and Diu, Daman, (2006) 13 SCC 36: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 72; Muthuswami v. State of Madras, AIR 1954 SC 4: 1954 Cri LJ 236; Nandini Satpathy v. P.L. Dani, (1978) 2 SCC 424: 1978 SCC (Cri) 236; State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715; Directorate of Enforcement v. Deepak Mahajan, (1994) 3 SCC 440: 1994 SCC (Cri) 785; Balkishan A. Devidayal v. State of Maharashtra, (1980) 4 SCC 600: 1981 SCC (Cri) 62; Babubhai Udesinh Parmar v. State of Gujarat, (2006) 12 SCC 268: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 702; Bhuboni Sahu v. R., (1948-49) 76 IA 147: AIR 1949 PC 257: (1949) 50 Cri LJ 872; Haricharan Kurmi v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 1184: (1964) 6 SCR 623: (1964) 2 Cri LJ 344; Bharat v. State of U.P., (1971) 3 SCC 950: 1972 SCC (Cri) 198; Puran v. State of Punjab (I), AIR 1953 SC 459: 1953 Cri LJ 1925; Kora Ghasi v. State of Orissa, (1983) 2 SCC 251: 1983 SCC (Cri) 387; Preetam v. State of M.P., (1996) 10 SCC 432: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1343; Bhagwan Singh v. State of M.P., (2003) 3 SCC 21: 2003 SCC (Cri) 712; R. v. Thompson, (1893) 2 QB 12: (1891-94) All ER Rep 376; Subramania Goundan v. State of Madras, AIR 1958 SC 66: 1958 Cri LJ 238; Pyare Lal Bhargava v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1963 SC 1094: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 178; Balbir Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 216: 1957 Cri LJ 481, relied on

Sidharth v. State of Bihar, (2005) 12 SCC 545: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 175; State of T.N. v. Kutty, (2001) 6 SCC 550: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1177, distinguished

[1806] — S. 164 — Retracted judicial confession — Involuntary nature — Adverse inference against prosecution case — When can be drawn — Accused produced before Magistrate straightaway from police custody — Magistrate ordered the accused to be sent to judicial custody for two days for self-introspection — Although thereafter he was supposed to be produced directly from the jail to the Magistrate, he was allegedly taken out of jail 2½ hours before the time fixed therefor — Accused then made a complaint that before he had been produced before the Magistrate he was taken to police station and was tortured and tutored there and was made to make the confession — Accused maintained that stand in his examination under S. 313 but prosecution did not make any attempt to disprove the allegation — Although it appeared from accused's examination under S. 313 that he had named the Police Inspector who allegedly tortured him but that Police Inspector had not been cross-examined on that point — Application made by accused calling for some records from the jail but no order passed thereupon — Held, in such a situation court should issue a suo motu direction to jail authorities to produce the records, and if even then authorities fail to produce the documents, an adverse inference can be drawn — In absence of substantive corroboration, the retracted confession not reliable

In this case it is not in dispute that the co-accused M has retracted from his confession. The value of the retracted confession was required to be considered on the accusation of the accused (M) that the confession was not voluntary. Although sufficient time (2 days) was given to the accused (M) to confirm his willingness to confess and finalise the contents of the confession. The reasons for which the confession had been retracted and the subsequent events wherein the appellants intended to prove a certain state of affairs, namely, although he was supposed to have been produced directly from the jail to the Magistrate concerned but in fact he was taken out of jail 2 1/2 hours before the time fixed therefor, could be a pointer to the fact as to whether the confession was a voluntary one. The lawyer appearing for the accused (M) had made a submission that an application had been filed praying for calling of some records from the Presidency Jail. No order had been passed thereupon. It is expected in a situation of this nature that the court will issue a suo motu direction to the authority to produce the records. There was absolutely no reason as to why the records would not be produced by the Presidency Jail Authorities for a period of two months. If the said records had not been produced, it was obligatory on the part of the court to issue a suo motu notice. The court was dealing with a serious matter. More than one life hinged on that valuable material. If a public authority does not produce a document despite being called upon to do so, an adverse inference is to be drawn. Converse is not the law. (Paras 120, 122, 118 and 121)

(7) Retracted judicial confession (contd.)

It may be true that an application for adducing evidence had been filed by the appellants in terms of Section 311 CrPC, but the said evidence, if adduced would have tilted the balance one way or the other so as to enable the court to come to the conclusion as to whether the purported judicial confession made by the accused (M) satisfies the tests laid down by the Supreme Court in a large number of decisions. There was no reason for the court to draw an adverse inference that the records had been destroyed. No such inference could be drawn in law either in terms of Section 114 of the Evidence Act or any other law. The period during which such documents are preserved under the provisions of the jail manual have not been referred to. No evidence had been brought on record to show that the documents had in fact been destroyed. The least the jail authorities could do was to produce the destruction register. (Para 123)

In the aforementioned backdrop, the court should give the benefit of doubt to the co-accused instead of the prosecution. The trial Judge should not have closed the case. He should have invoked his jurisdiction under Section 311 in the interest of justice and instead of blaming the defence for non-examination of the Superintendent of Presidency Jail, the court itself should have called upon authorities to produce the document. (Para 124). Aloke Nath Dutta v. State of W.B., (2007) 12 SCC 230: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 264.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-12-2006]

[1807] — S. 164 — Retraction of confession — Delay in and inconsistencies in grounds on which confession retracted — Effect — Held, would not impart credibility to confession, if otherwise the prosecution cannot establish the same — Prevention of Terrorism Act, 2002 — S. 32 — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 24

It cannot be held that there was abnormal delay in disowning the confession, the effect of which would be to impart credibility to the confessional statement. The fact that there is an alleged inconsistency in the grounds on which the confessional statement was refuted by Afzal will not give rise to an inference that the confessional statement was true and voluntary. It is the substance of what the accused said while refuting the statement that has to be seen rather than building up a case on the basis of some inconsistencies in the defence plea. (Paras 187 and 188). State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715: 2005 Cri LJ 3950: (2005) 122 DLT 194.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2005]

(8) Confession/Statement of co-accused/ approver

[1808] — S. 164 — Confession of co-accused — Effect of his acquittal for main offence on admissibility of the confession — Use of such confession for corroboration and not as substantive evidence — Permissibility — Joint trial of A-1 to A-2 for the same offences viz. those punishable under Ss. 302, 120-B, 201 and 397 read with S. 34 IPC — Confession made by A-2 before Magistrate stating that A-1 (A-2's father) had committed the murders though he (A-2) had destroyed the evidence relating to the murders — Confessional statement proved in court by examining the Magistrate who had recorded the same — Trial court convicting both the accused under the aforesaid provisions of IPC — High Court convicting A-1 under S. 302 alone on the basis of proved circumstantial evidence and relying upon the confessional statement of A-2 by way of corroboration of the proved circumstances and acquitting A-2 of the main offence of murder and convicting him only under S. 201 IPC — Held, acquittal of A-2 of offence under S. 302 would not render his confessional statement inadmissible in evidence insofar as it corroborated the circumstantial evidence connecting A-1 with the offence of murder — Conviction of A-2 under S. 201 IPC upheld — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302 and 201 — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 30 and 24

It was submitted that the High Court has given benefit of doubt to A-2 with regard to conspiracy for commission of murders and, therefore, as he was acquitted for the main offence, his confessional statement would not be admissible in evidence.

Held :

The submission on behalf of A-2 is without substance. Firstly, the confessional statement of A-2 recorded under Section 164 CrPC by the Magistrate would be admissible in evidence as Accused 1 and 2 were jointly tried. The said statement was proved by examining the Magistrate who recorded the same. Conviction of A-1 for the offence for which he was charged was based on circumstantial evidence. Conviction of A-2 for the offence punishable under Section 201 was also based on circumstantial evidence and after taking into consideration the confessional statement. The circumstantial evidence which gets corroboration from the confessional statement of A-2 for connecting A-1 with the crime could be relied upon. In view of Section 30 of the Evidence Act the court may take into consideration such confession against the maker thereof as well as against such persons (who are being jointly tried for the same offence). The High Court has not relied upon the confessional statement as a substantive piece of evidence to convict Accused 1. It has been used for lending assurance to the proved circumstances. The High Court held that the proved circumstances would not involve A-2 for the offence punishable under Section 302 IPC and the circumstantial evidence did not establish that there was any common intention or conspiracy between A-1 and A-2 to commit the offence. However, the Court held that A-2 had seen A-1 committing multiple murders and when he (A-2) destroyed the evidence relating to those murders, it was absolutely clear that he did this with the primary object of saving his father A-1 and, therefore, he would be liable to be convicted for the offence under Section 201 IPC. Hence, it cannot be said that confessional statement was wholly exculpatory. (Paras 18 to 20). Prakash Dhawal Khairnar (Patil) v. State of Maharashtra, (2002) 2 SCC 35: 2002 SCC (Cri) 281: AIR 2002 SC 340: 2002 Cri LJ 928.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-12-2001]

Ghulam Hussain v. R. (1950) 52 Bom LR 508; Aghnoo Nagesia v. State of Bihar, AIR 1966 SC 119: 1966 Cri LJ 100: (1966) 1 SCR 134; State v. Nalini, (1999) 5 SCC 253: 1999 SCC (Cri) 691, relied on [1809] — S. 164 — Confessional statement of approver given to the Magistrate before tender of pardon — Held, can be used as corroborative material — However, it being former statement of an accomplice not much weight can be attached to it — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 133 and 114 Ill. (b) (Para 25). Ramprasad v. State of Maharashtra, (1999) 5 SCC 30: 1999 SCC (Cri) 651: AIR 1999 SC 1969: 1999 Cri LJ 2889.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-5-1999]

[1810] — S. 164 — Retracted confession — Admissibility and use of against co-accused, explained in detail — Evidentiary value of such confession — Held, confession of a co-accused cannot be elevated to status of substantive evidence which can form basis of conviction of the co-accused — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 30 and 24

The proper way to approach a case of this kind is, first, to marshal the evidence against the [co-]accused excluding the confession altogether from consideration and see whether, if it is believed, a conviction could safely be based on it. If it is capable of belief independently of the confession, then of course it is not necessary to call the confession in aid. But cases may arise where the judge is not prepared to act on the other evidence as it stands even though, if believed, it would be sufficient to sustain a conviction. In such an event the judge may call in aid the confession and use it to lend assurance to the other evidence and thus fortify himself in believing what without the aid of the confession he would not be prepared to accept. (Para 38)

The court cannot start with the confession of a co-accused person; it must begin with other evidence adduced by the prosecution and after it has formed its opinion with regard to the quality and effect of the said evidence, then it is permissible to turn to the confession in order to receive assurance to the conclusion of guilt which the judicial mind is about to reach on the said other evidence. (Para 40)

The crucial expression used in Section 30 of the Evidence Act, 1872 is "the Court may take into consideration such confession". These words imply that the confession of a co-accused cannot be elevated to the status of substantive evidence which can form the basis of conviction of the co-accused. (Para 39). State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715: 2005 Cri LJ 3950: (2005) 122 DLT 194.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2005]

Kashmira Singh v. State of M.P., 1952 SCR 526: AIR 1952 SC 159: 1952 Cri LJ 839; Bhuboni Sahu v. R., AIR 1949 PC 257: 50 Cri LJ 872: 76 IA 147; Hari Charan Kurmi v. State of Bihar, (1964) 6 SCR 623: (1964) 2 Cri LJ 344, followed [1811] — S. 164 — Statement of co-accused recorded under — Evidentiary value — Such a statement made by a person arrayed in the same case and against whom a charge had been framed, held, could not be treated as evidence for deciding to proceed against another accused — More so when the statement was exculpatory in nature — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 30 (Para 11). State of T.N. v. J. Jayalalitha, (2000) 5 SCC 440: 2000 SCC (Cri) 981: AIR 2000 SC 1589.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.C. Lahoti, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-5-2000]

[1812] — Ss. 164 and 313 — Reliance upon, to convict both accused — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 30. Dara Singh v. Republic of India, (2011) 2 SCC 490.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-1-2011]

State of Bombay v. Kathi Kalu Oghad, AIR 1961 SC 1808: (1961) 2 Cri LJ 856: (1962) 3 SCR 10, relied on

M.P. Sharma v. Satish Chandra, AIR 1954 SC 300: 1954 Cri LJ 865: 1954 SCR 1077, referred to

(8) Confession/Statement of co-accused/approver (contd.)

[1813] — S. 164 — Statement under, of co-accused/accomplice — Use of, against accused — Held, the court cannot start with the confession of a co-accused and must begin with other evidence adduced by the prosecution — But the court can use confession of co-accused to lend support or assurance to the conclusion of guilt which the court is about to reach on the other evidence — In the present case, the statements of PWs 11 and 15 under S. 164 were not the only evidence on which reliance was placed — Those statements were used more as a corroboration — Further, PWs 11 and 15 were not "co-accused" or "accomplices" or "abettors" — Hence, contention that their said statements could not be used as evidence against accused, held on facts, misleading — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 30 (Para 25). R. Janakiraman v. State, (2006) 1 SCC 697: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 442: AIR 2006 SC 1106: (2006) 39 AIC 479 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-1-2006]

Hari Charan Kurmi v. State of Bihar, (1964) 6 SCR 623: AIR 1964 SC 1184: (1964) 2 Cri LJ 344; Dagdu v. State of Maharashtra, (1977) 3 SCC 68: 1977 SCC (Cri) 421, relied on

(9) Extra-judicial confession/ Hearsay evidence

See also under Ss. 161-162, above

See also under CRIMINAL TRIAL in Vol. 3

[1814] — S. 164 — Confession — Need not be made to an authorised person only — Any person can give evidence in court regarding confession made by an accused to him — If confession made to a Magistrate, same has to be recorded in the manner prescribed by law — If it is made to any other person the court has to consider whether evidence of that person can be believed which depends upon the credibility of the witness giving such evidence in court — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 24 (Para 6). Sasi v. State of Kerala, (2000) 10 SCC 360.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-8-1999]

[1815] — S. 164 — Extra-judicial confession — Before a confession is relied on it must be clear and unequivocal whether it is in a judicial or in an extra-judicial confession — Bride burning — Confession made at a panchayat — In the panchayat names of a large number of persons referred to as to have confessed their guilt, including the accused-appellant — Names including the names of those who were not even the accused — Fact that the appellant had burnt the deceased not mentioned in such confession — Held, no reliance can be placed on such so-called confession — Alleged confession by a large number of persons is more in a general and vague term — CrPC, 1973 — S. 164 (Para 23). Kishan Lal v. State of Rajasthan, (2000) 1 SCC 310: 2000 SCC (Cri) 182: AIR 1999 SC 3062: 1999 Cri LJ 4070.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and A.P. Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-8-1999]

[1816] — S. 164 — Retracted extrajudicial confession — Confessions made by the appellants, on identical terms, before three different persons who live far off from their villages at periodical intervals found to be artificial and unnatural — Appellants could have surrendered before the police instead of taking a circuitous route of first approaching the said three witnesses more so when there is nothing on record to show that they were persons of their confidence — Held, in the circumstances, extrajudicial confessions purportedly made by the three appellants do not bear any scrutiny. Ballu v. State of Haryana, 1997 SCC (Cri) 234.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-10-1996]

[1817] — S. 164 — Extra-judicial confession — Evidentiary value — Corroboration, on facts, held, was not necessary — Sepoy in Army in his written and signed statement, made to his superiors and attested by four of them, unambiguously confessing to have killed his wife by strangulating her, cut off her head and thumbs, thrown the headless trunk and the head in two different wells and the thumbs at another place — Both the courts below concurrently finding the statement to have been made voluntarily — At the time of making of the statement neither the sepoy nor his officers knowing that headless trunk of the deceased had been recovered from a well — Officers not biased or inimical to the sepoy — One of the four officers who had attested the confessional statement, examined as a PW and proving the sepoy's statement — Sepoy's vague plea that the statement was obtained by inducement or promise found to be untrue — In such circumstances, held, the court could hold the sepoy to be guilty of murder on the basis of such statement without seeking any corroboration — More so when at the instance of the said sepoy the head of the deceased was recovered from a well and the presence of the head had been in the exclusive knowledge of the sepoy — While relying on such confessional statement High Court rightly held that variations, if any, between the details and other evidence on record were inconsequential — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 24 and 27. Vinayak Shivajirao Pol v. State of Maharashtra, (1998) 2 SCC 233: 1998 SCC (Cri) 610: AIR 1998 SC 1096.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi, C.J. and M. Srinivasan, J. [Date of decision: 22-1-1998]

Nishi Kant Jha v. State of Bihar, (1969) 1 SCC 347; Harchand Singh v. State of Haryana, (1974) 3 SCC 397: 1973 SCC (Cri) 962; Makhan Singh v. State of Punjab, 1988 Supp SCC 526: 1988 SCC (Cri) 916; Chhittar v. State of Rajasthan, 1995 Supp (4) SCC 519: 1995 SCC (Cri) 248, distinguished [1818] — S. 164 — Delay in recording PW's statement relating to extra-judicial confession made to him — When immaterial — Murder of 10 year old girl — Accused making extra-judicial confession to PW — PW interrogated by police on the next day of the occurrence and PW stated the said fact — In such circumstances delay, if any, in recording the PW's statement under S. 164, held, not attributable to the PW and did not vitiate his testimony. State of A.P. v. Shaik Mazhar, AIR 2001 SC 2427.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-2-2001]

[1819] — S. 164 — Extra-judicial confessions — Inadmissibility — Statements made to TV and press reporters by accused in immediate presence of, and while in police custody — Held, inadmissible — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 24, 25, 26 and 17

The talk which Afzal had with the TV and press reporters admittedly in the immediate presence of the police and while he was in police custody, should not be relied upon irrespective of the fact whether the statement was made to a police officer within the meaning of Section 162 CrPC or not. No weight or credibility can be attached to the statements made in the course of such interview prearranged by the police. The police officials in their over-zealousness arranged for a media interview which has evoked serious comments from the counsel about the manner in which publicity was sought to be given thereby. The wrong step taken by the police should not enure to the benefit or detriment of either the prosecution or the accused. (Para 176). State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715: 2005 Cri LJ 3950: (2005) 122 DLT 194.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2005]

[1820] — S. 164(1) — Doctrine of res gestae — Nature and scope of — Exception to general rule of inadmissibility of hearsay evidence — Fact or statement must form part of the same transaction — Interval between act constituting the offence and making of the statement renders the statement inadmissible — Statement recorded by the Magistrate as dying declaration — Maker thereof not dying — Held, such statement neither admissible as res gestae nor as dying declaration — It can be used to corroborate or contradict the testimony of its maker — Words "investigate" and "legally competent" in S. 157 — Meaning of — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 6, 32 and 157

The principle of law embodied in Section 6 of the Evidence Act is usually known as the rule of res gestae recognised in English law. The essence of the doctrine is that a fact which, though not in issue, is so connected with the fact in issue "as to form part of the same transaction" becomes relevant by itself. This rule is, roughly speaking, an exception to the general rule that hearsay evidence is not admissible. The rationale in making certain statement or fact admissible under Section 6 of the Evidence Act is on account of the spontaneity and immediacy of such statement or fact in relation to the fact in issue. But it is necessary that such fact or statement must be a part of the same transaction. In other words, such statement must have been made contemporaneous with the acts which constitute the offence or at least immediately thereafter. But if there was an interval, however slight it may be, which was sufficient enough for fabrication then the statement is not part of res gestae.

In the present case there was some appreciable interval between the acts of incendiarism indulged in by the miscreants and the Judicial Magistrate recording statements of the victims. That interval, therefore, blocks the statements from acquiring legitimacy under Section 6 of the Evidence Act.

Though the statement given to a magistrate by someone under expectation of death ceases to have evidentiary value under Section 32 of the Evidence Act if the maker thereof does not die, such a statement has, nevertheless, some utility in trials. It can be used to corroborate this testimony in court under Section 157 of the Evidence Act which permits such use, being a statement made by the witness "before any authority legally competent to investigate". The word 'investigate' has been used in the section in a broader sense. Similarly the words "legally competent" denote a person vested with the authority by law to collect facts. A magistrate is legally competent to record dying declaration "in the course of an investigation" as provided in Chapter XII of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973. The contours provided in Section 164(1) would cover such a statement also. However, such a statement, so long as its maker remains alive, cannot be used as substantive evidence. Its user is limited to

(10) Dying declaration

Corroboration or contradiction of the testimony of its maker. Gentela Vijayavardhan Rao v. State of A.P., (1996) 6 SCC 241: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1290: AIR 1996 SC 2791.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-8-1996]

R. v. Lillyman, (1896) 2 QB 167: (1895-99) All ER Rep 586; Teper v. R., (1952) 2 All ER 447, approved

Maqsoodan v. State of U.P., (1983) 1 SCC 218: 1983 SCC (Cri) 176, relied on

(10) Dying declaration

See also under Ss. 161-162, above

See also S. 164, '(11) Dying declarant surviving', below

See also under CRIMINAL TRIAL in Vol. 3

See also S. 32(1), EVIDENCE ACT, 1872

[1821] — S. 164 — Dying declaration — Recording of — Omission to question about mental condition of deceased — Magistrate who recorded the dying declaration stating that he was fully satisfied about the mental condition of the deceased — Answers given by the deceased also showing that he was in a fit condition to make the statement — Held, in the circumstances omission on the part of Magistrate to question the deceased regarding his state of mind could not be a ground to reject the dying declaration outright — Non-mention of name of one of the participants in the earlier dying declaration recorded by the Investigating Officer not fatal to the prosecution — Possibility of the deceased failing to remember his name due to injuries cannot be ruled out

Whether the injured person who made the statement was in a fit condition depends on several circumstances. No doubt, a Judicial Magistrate who knows the law well would do better if such a question is put, but the mere absence of such a question being put, could not be a ground to reject the dying declaration outright. The Court has looked to the entire statement and the answers duly recorded by the Magistrate along with the doctor's evidence. The Magistrate in the instant case as PW has deposed that he was fully satisfied that the deceased was in a fit condition while making the statement. On examination of the questions and answers, particularly, the first question and the answer to that it is clear that the deceased must have been in a fit condition to make the statement. (Para 4). Bolem Bhaskara Rao v. State of A.P., 1995 Supp (4) SCC 211: 1996 SCC (Cri) 49.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-3-1993]

K. Ramachandra Reddy v. Public Prosecutor, (1976) 3 SCC 618: 1976 SCC (Cri) 473, explained and distinguished

[1822] — S. 164 — Dying declaration — Bride burning — Contradictory dying declarations — Credibility of evidence recorded by Magistrate over other dying declarations — Evidentiary value of dying declaration recorded by a competent Magistrate having no animus and not being an interested witness, reiterated, would stand on a much higher footing — Deceased had in her dying declaration before the Special Judicial Magistrate (PW 5) and PSI (PW 7) accused the appellants (accused persons) for her burn injuries — PW 1 (father of the deceased) and PW 2 giving false depositions — Oral dying declaration revealed by PW 1 and PW 2 contradictory to dying declaration recorded separately by Magistrate and PSI (PW 7) — No material on record to ascribe any animus to Magistrate or to show that he was interested in fabricating the dying declaration — On facts, held, High Court was right in relying upon evidence of Magistrate (PW 5) and dying declaration of the deceased

The High Court was right in relying upon evidence of Special Judicial Magistrate (PW 5) and the dying declaration of deceased. PW 5 was a retired gazetted officer of armed forces aged about 76 years. Where a dying declaration is recorded by a competent Magistrate, it would stand on a "much higher footing". A competent Magistrate has no axe to grind against the person named in the dying declaration of the victim and in absence of circumstances showing anything to the contrary, he should not be disbelieved by the court. In the present case both the dying declarations i.e. dying declaration recorded by PW 5 and dying declaration recorded by PW 7 the deceased clearly and unequivocally attributed burn injuries caused to her to the appellants (A-1, A-2, and A-3). Therefore there is no ground to interfere with the order of conviction and sentence recorded by the trial court and confirmed by the High Court. (Paras 23, 24, 46, 48, 27 and 53). Vikas v. State of Maharashtra, (2008) 2 SCC 516: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 486.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-1-2008]

Khushal Rao v. State of Bombay, AIR 1958 SC 22: 1958 SCR 552; Ravi Chander v. State of Punjab, (1998) 9 SCC 303: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1004; Harjit Kaur v. State of Punjab, (1999) 6 SCC 545: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1130, applied

[1823] — S. 164 — Recording of dying declaration — Dying declaration recorded by Taluka Magistrate after obtaining certificate of doctor that deceased was in a 'fit state of mind' to make statement — Similar certificate obtained by the Magistrate after obtaining the statement of the deceased — Simply because the Magistrate did not put a direct question to the deceased as to whether she was in a fit state of mind to make the statement, the dying declaration cannot be discarded — In facts and circumstances of the case no distinction between 'fit state of mind' and 'conscious state of mind' — Merely because the deceased was suffering from great physical pain due to extensive burn injuries it cannot be presumed that she was not in a fit state of mind

Dying declaration was recorded by Taluka Magistrate after obtaining a certificate from the doctor that the deceased was in a fit state of mind to make the statement. Even after recording such dying declaration, the Magistrate obtained a further certificate from the doctor that the deceased was in fit state of mind to make the statement. The distinction sought to be made out by the Sessions Judge that 'fit state of mind' and 'conscious state of mind' were not the same thing, is too hypertechnical in the facts and circumstances of the case. The Magistrate put the questions to the deceased and then recorded the statement. It will be wholly unjustified to hold that simply because the Magistrate did not put a direct question to the deceased as to whether she was in a fit state of mind to make the statement, the dying declaration was required to be discarded. There is no manner of doubt that the deceased was suffering from great physical pain because of extensive burn injuries but on that score alone it could not be presumed that she was not in a fit state of mind to make the statement particularly when the doctor had certified both before and after the statement that she had a state of mind to make the statement. Goverdhan Raoji Ghyare v. State of Maharashtra, 1993 Supp (4) SCC 316: 1994 SCC (Cri) 15.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-8-1993]

[Ed.: But see K. Ramachandra Reddy v. Public Prosecutor, (1976) 3 SCC 618 wherein omission to question the deceased regarding his state of mind was considered to be a serious irregularity. In that case the injured was suffering from pain and was unable to sign and was taking time to answer the questions.]

[1824] — S. 164 — Recording of dying declaration — Mode of — Deceased answering questions in Bagri language while Magistrate recording it in Hindi — Answers recorded not in the form of question and answers but in a narrative form — Held, dying declaration was not vitiated and conviction could be based on it — High Court erred in not relying on the dying declaration and setting aside the conviction recorded by the trial court — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 32

Assuming that the deceased gave her statement in her own language, the dying declaration would not vitiate merely because it was recorded in a different language. It is not unusual that courts record evidence in the language of the court even when witnesses depose in their own language. Judicial officers are used to the practice of translating the statements from the language of the parties to the language of the court. Such translation process would not upset either the admissibility of the statement or its reliability, unless there are other reasons to doubt the truth of it.

Nor would a dying declaration go bad merely because the magistrate did not record it in the form of questions and answers. It is axiomatic that what matters is the substance and not the form. Questions put to the dying man would have been formal and hence the answers given are material. Criminal courts may evince interest in knowing the contents of what the dying person said and the questions put to him are not very important normally. That part of the statement which relates to the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death gets the sanction of admissibility. Here it is improper to throw such statement overboard on a pedantic premise that it was not recorded in the form of questions and answers. State of Rajasthan v. Bhup Singh, (1997) 10 SCC 675: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1032: (1997) 1 An LT (Cri) 588.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-1-1997]

Ganpat Mahadeo Mane v. State of Maharashtra, 1993 Supp (2) SCC 242: 1993 SCC (Cri) 491, followed

[1825] — S. 164 — Safeguards to be observed by the Magistrate when recording dying declaration

There are certain safeguards which must be observed by a Magistrate when requested to record a dying declaration. The Magistrate before recording the dying declaration must satisfy himself that the deceased is in a proper mental state to make the statement. He must record that satisfaction before recording the dying declaration. He must also obtain the opinion of the doctor, if one is available, about the fitness of the patient to make a statement and the prosecution must prove that opinion at the trial in the manner known to law. These safeguards have not been observed in the present case. (Para 11). Kanchy Komuramma v. State of A.P., 1995 Supp (4) SCC 118: 1996 SCC (Cri) 31.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-2-1994]

Kundula Bala Subrahmanyam v. State of A.P., (1993) 2 SCC 684: 1993 SCC (Cri) 655, followed

(11) Dying declarant surviving

See also S. 164, '(10) Dying declaration', above

[1826] — Ss. 164 and 162 — Statement made to a Magistrate under expectation of death but maker thereof surviving — His statement not admissible under S. 32, Evidence Act, 1872 — It can be used to corroborate him as provided in S. 157 or to contradict him as provided under S. 155, Evidence Act, 1872 — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 32, 155 and 157

The statement of a person surviving cannot be used as evidence under Section 32 though it was recorded as a dying declaration. At the time when the witness gave the statement he would have been under expectation of death but that is not sufficient to wiggle it into the cassette of Section 32. As long as the maker of the statement is alive it would remain only in the realm of a statement recorded during investigation. (Para 14)

Section 157 permits proof of any former statement made by a witness relating to the same fact before "any authority legally competent to investigate the fact" but its use is limited to corroboration of the testimony of such a witness. Though a police officer is legally competent to investigate, any statement made to him during such an investigation cannot be used to corroborate the testimony of a witness because of the clear interdict contained in Section 162 of the Code. But a statement made to a Magistrate is not affected by the prohibition contained in the said section. A Magistrate can record the statement of a person as provided in Section 164 of the Code and such a statement would either be elevated to the status of Section 32 if the maker of the statement subsequently dies or it would remain within the realm of what it was originally. A statement recorded by a Magistrate under Section 164 becomes usable to corroborate the witness as provided in Section 157 of the Evidence Act or to contradict him as provided in Section 155 thereof. (Para 15). Ramprasad v. State of Maharashtra, (1999) 5 SCC 30: 1999 SCC (Cri) 651: AIR 1999 SC 1969: 1999 Cri LJ 2889.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-5-1999]

Maqsoodan v. State of U.P., (1983) 1 SCC 218: 1983 SCC (Cri) 176, followed [1827] — S. 164 — Dying declarant surviving — His dying declaration can be treated as statement recorded under S. 164, CrPC and can be used for corroboration or contradiction — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 32. Sunil Kumar v. State of M.P., (1997) 10 SCC 570: 1997 SCC (Cri) 879: AIR 1997 SC 940: 1997 Cri LJ 1183.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and B.N. Kirpal, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-1997]

[1828] — S. 164 — Situation where maker of purported dying declaration survives — Effect — Held, the said declaration is then not a statement under S. 32, Evidence Act but a statement under S. 164 CrPC — It can be used under S. 157, Evidence Act for the purpose of corroboration and under S. 155, Evidence Act for the purpose of contradiction — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 32(1), 157 and 155 (Para 5). State of U.P. v. Veer Singh, (2004) 10 SCC 117: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1672: 2004 All LJ 2809: 2004 Cri LJ 3835.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-4-2004]

Ramprasad v. State of Maharashtra, (1999) 5 SCC 30: 1999 SCC (Cri) 651; Sunil Kumar v. State of M.P., (1997) 10 SCC 570: 1997 SCC (Cri) 879; Gentela Vijayavardhan Rao v. State of A.P., (1996) 6 SCC 241: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1290, relied on

(12) Statements of witnesses recorded under S. 164

[1829] — S. 164 — Statement recorded under — Evidentiary value — Held, cannot be used as substantive evidence — Can be used only to contradict or corroborate the maker of the statement — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 145 and 157. George v. State of Kerala, (1998) 4 SCC 605: AIR 1998 SC 1376: 1998 Cri LJ 2034.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-3-1998]

[1830] — S. 164 — Statement under — Significance of Section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code possesses great probative value and affords an unerring assurance to the court. (Para 8). Kishore Chand v. State of H.P., (1991) 1 SCC 286: 1991 SCC (Cri) 172: AIR 1990 SC 2140: 1990 Cri LJ 2289.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.B. Sawant and K. Ramaswamy, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-8-1990]

[1831] — S. 164 — Statements of witnesses by Investigating Officer got recorded under S. 164 — Applicability of the rule of caution to the testimony of such witnesses at the trial

It would be wrong to find fault with the Investigating Officer merely because he got the statements of witnesses recorded under S. 164. Nor can the evidence of a witness be discarded for the mere reason that his statement was recorded under S. 164. But the evidence of witnesses whose statements are recorded under S. 164 must be approached with caution. Such witnesses feel tied to their previous statements given on oath and have but a theoretical freedom to depart from the earlier version. A prosecution for perjury could be the price of that freedom. It is, of course, open to the Court to accept the evidence of a witness whose statement was recorded under S. 164, but the salient rule of caution must always be borne in mind. that is all the more necessary when almost all the eye-witnesses are subjected to this tying-up process. Balak Ram v. State of U.P., (1975) 3 SCC 219: 1974 SCC (Cri) 837: AIR 1974 SC 2165: 1974 Cri LR (SC) 530: 1974 Cri LJ 1486.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.R. Khanna and Y.V. Chandrachud, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-8-1974]

[1832] — S. 164 — Testimony of independent witness, cannot be doubted merely because his statement was got recorded by police under S. 164 CrPC

The evidence of an independent witness cannot become suspect merely because the statement under S. 164 CrPC was got recorded by the police. Perhaps with a view to see that he cannot be gained over, the police in its usual precaution has got his statement recorded under S. 164 CrPC. It might be that there is an attempt to pressurise him by getting the statement under S. 164 and the prosecution attempted to pin him down to the statement given to them. But that ground should be taken as a caution to scrutinise his evidence and subject it to critical examination. In this case the evidence of the independent witness was consistent though there were some discrepancies in his evidence vis-à-vis the statement under S. 161 which were not on material particulars of the prosecution case. Harish Kumar v. State (Delhi Admn.), 1994 Supp (1) SCC 462: 1994 SCC (Cri) 581: AIR 1993 SC 973.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and S. Mohan, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-1-1992]

[1833] — S. 164 — Evidence of witnesses cannot be discarded merely because their statements were got recorded under S. 164 — All that is required as a matter of caution is a careful analysis of the evidence (Para 8). State of M.P. v. Mansingh, (2003) 10 SCC 414.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-2003]

Balak Ram v. State of U.P., (1975) 3 SCC 219: 1974 SCC (Cri) 837: AIR 1974 SC 2165; Ram Charan v. State of U.P., AIR 1968 SC 1270: 1968 Cri LJ 1473, relied on [1834] — S. 164 — Evidence of witnesses whose statements are got recorded by Magistrate under — Effect — Held, that by itself would not discredit the said evidence — It is only that the evidence of such witnesses must be considered with caution and if there are other circumstances on record which might support the truth of the evidence of such witnesses, it can be acted upon — Presence of PWs 1 to 3 at the time of occurrence not doubtful — In regard to actual assault though there were certain minor embellishments, still there was sufficient consistency as to the role played by the accused-appellants — Hence, in spite of the fact that PWs 1 to 3's evidence was recorded under S. 164 CrPC, the same was acceptable to base a conviction (Para 6). Ramesh Singh v. State of A.P., (2004) 11 SCC 305: 2004 Cri LJ 3354.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-3-2004]

Ram Charan v. State of U.P., AIR 1968 SC 1270: (1968) 3 SCR 354: 1968 Cri LJ 1473; Balak Ram v. State of U.P., (1975) 3 SCC 219: 1974 SCC (Cri) 837, explained and followed

Emperor v. Manu Chik, AIR 1938 Pat 290: 39 Cri LJ 635, held, overruled

Gopisetti Chinna Venkata Subbaiah, In re, ILR 1955 AP 633: AIR 1955 AP 161, held, approved

[1835] — S. 164 — Merely because the statement of witness is got recorded under S. 164, held, would not automatically dilute the worth of his evidence (Para 9). N. Somashekar v. State of Karnataka, (2004) 11 SCC 334.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2004]

State of Assam v. Jilkadar Ali, (1972) 2 SCC 320: 1972 SCC (Cri) 662; Vishwanath v. State of U.P., AIR 1960 SC 67: 1960 Cri LJ 154, relied on

[1836] — S. 164 — Recording of statement of a witness by Magistrate during police investigation — Held, by itself does not affect the credibility of the witness

Ordinarily the police in the course of investigation sends witnesses for having their statements recorded by a magistrate under S. 164, Criminal Procedure Code, when they feel that there may be some uncertainty about the evidence or such a witness may at some distant time prevaricate. There cannot be any hard and fast rule of law for treating a witness as suspect from the mere fact of his statement being recorded under S. 164. If the Court finds that the evidence of the witness has been consistent throughout and there was no reason whatsoever for the police to have taken the step for his statement being recorded under S. 164, CrPC, the fact of such recording would be of no moment in appraising the testimony of such a witness. Badri v. State of Rajasthan, (1976) 1 SCC 442: 1976 SCC (Cri) 60: AIR 1976 SC 560: (1976) 2 SCR 339: 1976 Cri LJ 496.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.H. Beg and P.K. Goswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-11-1975]

[1837] — S. 164 — Conviction of appellant-accused M confirmed, but reversed in case of appellant-accused A — M, A and R (absconding accused) allegedly raped PW 6 (prosecutrix) — High Court convicted M and A under aforementioned sections — Sustainability — Held, statements of PW 6 (prosecutrix), PW 5 (constable)

(12) Statements of witnesses recorded under S. 164 (contd.)

and PW 9 (investigating officer) were categoric insofar as presence of M was concerned — In her statement recorded under S. 164 CrPC, prosecutrix clearly stated that she was kidnapped and then raped by M and R and that A joined them much later who merely held her hand while she was raped second time by M and R — Thus, prosecutrix had not attributed any rape to A — Likewise, she had stated that A was not one of those who kidnapped her — It is true that in her statement in court, she attributed rape to A as well, but in light of contradictions, some doubt created with regard to A*'s involvement — Again, PW 5 (constable) made a statement which was corroborated by PW 9 (investigating officer), that only* M and R along with prosecutrix were brought to police station as A had run away while en route to police station — Resultantly, an inference can rightly be drawn that A was perhaps not in the car (in which prosecutrix was kidnapped) when M, R and prosecutrix were apprehended by PW 5 — Therefore, involvement of A, held, uncertain — Hence, conviction of M confirmed, however, reversed in case of A — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 375 and 376 and Ss. 376/34 and 336/34 (Paras 7 to 12). Abbas Ahmad Choudhary v. State of Assam, (2010) 12 SCC 115: 2010 Cri LJ 2060.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-11-2009]

[1838] — S. 164 — Statement of witnesses recorded under — Evidentiary value — No invariable rule of law that statement of eyewitnesses (chowkidars in the present case) recorded under S. 164 should be viewed with some initial distrust, though sometimes the police gets the statements recorded in a routine manner — Held, in the present case there was no reason to discard the evidence of the eyewitnesses on that ground. Kanwar Pal Singh v. State of Haryana, 1994 SCC (Cri) 150: AIR 1994 SC 1045: 1994 Cri LJ 1392.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-9-1992]

[1839] — Ss. 164, 451, 452 and 457 — Statement made under S. 164 by driver of car indicating that the accused persons had travelled in his car to, and returned from, a place near the place of murder — Whether on facts involuntary — The mere fact that the car was released about one long month after its seizure, held, did not justify the inference that the driver had made such a statement to oblige the police as his brother had been arrested in an excise case. George v. State of Kerala, (1998) 4 SCC 605: AIR 1998 SC 1376: 1998 Cri LJ 2034.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-3-1998]

(13) Confession recorded under S. 164 at instance of police

[1840] — S. 164 — Recording of confession — Police influence — Merely because a person is produced from police custody before Magistrate for recording confession, held, such confession cannot be discredited — Magistrate is not to record the confession until the lapse of such time, as he thinks necessary to extricate the accused's mind completely from fear of the police to have the confession in his own way by telling the Magistrate the true facts — However, in the instant case there was an interval of about a month after the accused was removed from police custody to judicial custody when his confession was recorded (Paras 19 and 20). State of Maharashtra v. Damu, (2000) 6 SCC 269: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1088: AIR 2000 SC 1691: 2000 Cri LJ 2301.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2000]

[1841] — S. 164 — Recording of confession — Police influence — Geographical distance between the sub-jail and police station — Mere fact that the sub-jail, in which the accused was interred, was located adjacent to the police station, held, not sufficient to infer police control over the accused

The geographical distance between the two buildings — the sub-jail and the police station — should not have been a consideration to decide the possibility of the police exerting control over a detenu. To keep a detenu in police fear, it is not necessary that the location of the police station should be proximal to the edifice in which the prisoner is detailed in judicial custody. In many places judicial courts are situated very near to police station houses, or the offices of higher police officers would be housed in the same complex. It is not a contention to be countenanced that such nearness would vitiate the independence of judicial function in any manner. (Para 21). State of Maharashtra v. Damu, (2000) 6 SCC 269: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1088: AIR 2000 SC 1691: 2000 Cri LJ 2301.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2000]

[1842] — S. 164-A — Right to privacy — Basis, scope and extent — Privacy as an aspect of personal liberty — Mental privacy and physical privacy — Protection of mental privacy is available to accused as well as to victim of an offence — A female who alleges to be victim of sexual offence cannot be subjected to polygraph test to ascertain whether she is making truthful allegation — Held, while physical privacy may be curtailed to some extent in reasonable exercise of police powers under CrPC, there is no corresponding provision for intruding upon a person's mental privacy — Extracting testimonial responses by means of narcoanalysis, polygraph and BEAP tests, held, intrude upon a person's mental privacy and are therefore impermissible in law — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 24 to 27 and 114-A — Laboratory Procedure Manual for Polygraph Examination, Para 3.4(v) — European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, 1950, Art. 8 — Police and Criminal Evidence Act, 1984 (UK), S. 64(1-A) — Constitution of India — Arts. 21 and 20(3)

A distinction must be made between the character of restraints placed on the right to privacy. While ordinary exercise of police powers contemplates restraints of a physical nature such as extraction of bodily substances and use of reasonable force for subjecting a person to a medical examination, it is not viable to extend these police powers to forcible extraction of testimonial responses. In conceptualising right to privacy, distinction between privacy in a physical sense and the privacy of one's mental processes, has to be kept in view. (Para 224)

So far, judicial understanding of privacy in India has mostly stressed on protection of body and physical spaces from intrusive actions by the State. While the scheme of criminal procedure as well as evidence law mandates interference with physical privacy through statutory provisions that enable arrest, detention, search and seizure among others, the same cannot be the basis for compelling a person to impart personal knowledge about a relevant fact. Theory of interrelationship of rights mandates that right against self-incrimination should also be read as a component of personal liberty under Article 21. Hence, understanding of right to privacy should account for its intersection with Article 20(3). Furthermore, rule against involuntary confessions as embodied in Sections 24, 25, 26 and 27 of the Evidence Act, 1872 seeks to serve both the objectives of reliability as well as voluntariness of testimony given in a custodial setting. A conjunctive reading of Articles 20(3) and 21 of the Constitution along with the principles of evidence law leads to a clear answer. Importance of personal autonomy must be recongised in aspects such as choice between remaining silent and speaking. An individual's decision to make a statement is the product of a private choice and there should be no scope for any other individual to interfere with such autonomy, especially in circumstances where the person faces exposure to criminal charges or penalties. (Para 225)

Medical test for ascertaining mental condition of a person is most likely to be in the nature of a psychiatric evaluation which usually includes testimonial responses. Subjecting a person to the impugned techniques (narcoanalysis, lie-detector and BEAP tests) in an involuntary manner violates prescribed boundaries of privacy. Forcible interference with a person's mental processes is not provided for under any statute and it most certainly comes into conflict with right against self-incrimination. However, this determination does not account for circumstances where a person could be subjected to any of the impugned tests but not exposed to criminal charges and the possibility of conviction. In such cases, he/she could still face adverse consequences such as custodial abuse, surveillance, undue harassment and social stigma among others. In order to address such circumstances, it is important to examine some other dimensions of Article 21. (Paras 204 and 226)

There is possibility that victims of offences could be forcibly subjected to any of these techniques during the course of investigation. There is provision in Laboratory Procedure Manual for polygraph tests which contemplates the same for ascertaining the testimony of victims of sexual offences. Irrespective of the need to expedite investigations in such cases, no person who is a victim of an offence can be compelled to undergo any of the tests in question. Such a forcible administration would be an unjustified intrusion into mental privacy and could lead to further stigma for the victim. (Para 254). Selvi v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 7 SCC 263.

Bench Strength 3. Coram : K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and R.V. Raveendran and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision : 5-5-2010]

M.P. Sharma v. Satish Chandra, AIR 1954 SC 300: 1954 Cri LJ 865: 1954 SCR 1077; Kharak Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1963 SC 1295: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 329; Maneka Gandhi v. Union of India, (1978) 1 SCC 248; Gobind v. State of M.P., (1975) 2 SCC 148: 1975 SCC (Cri) 468; R. Rajagopal v. State of T.N., (1994) 6 SCC 632; People's Union for Civil Liberties v. Union of India, (1997) 1 SCC 301; 'X' v. Hospital 'Z', (2003) 1 SCC 500; Attorney General's Reference (No. 3 of 1999), (2001) 2 AC 91: (2001) 2 WLR 56: (2001) 1 All ER 577 (HL), relied on

M. Vijaya v. Singareni Collieries Co. Ltd., AIR 2001 AP 502; R.(S) v. Chief Constable of the South Yorkshire Police, (2002) 1 WLR 3223: (2003) 1 All ER 148 (CA), approved

'X' v. Hospital 'Z', (1998) 8 SCC 296, held, partly overruled

94 Journal of Criminal Law and Criminology 243-293 (2004), relied on

— S. 165 See Ss. 57 and 165
See also Ss. 91, 165 and 166
See also Ss. 93 to 101 and 165
See also Ss. 100, 102, 103 and 165
See also Ss. 100 and 165
See also Ss. 100(4) and 165
See also Ss. 102, 100 and 165
See also Ss. 104, 102 and 165
See also Ss. 154 to 173
See also Ss. 154 to 173 and 482
See also Ss. 156, 157, 161 and 165
See also Ss. 157, 156, 165 and 482
See also Ss. 157 to 167
See also Ss. 157 to 172 and 198
See also Ss. 157 to 173
See also Ss. 157, 160 to 168
See also Ss. 157 and 165
See also Ss. 164(1) & (5), 154 to 160, 165 to 173(5) & (8) and 311
See also Ss. 190, 161, 165 and 173

[1843] — Ss. 165 and 102 — Search and seizure — Challenge to — Proper stage for — Where the Supreme Court set aside the order of High Court, which quashed the investigation, and directed the investigation to proceed, held on facts, it was not proper to consider the legality of search and seizure at this stage — The accused if put up for trial, held, could challenge the same before the trial court

It is premature at this stage to consider whether search and seizure were done in accordance with law as that is a question which has to be considered by the court, if the accused is ultimately put up for trial and he challenges the search and seizure made. CBI v. Tapan Kumar Singh, (2003) 6 SCC 175: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1305: AIR 2003 SC 4140: 2003 Cri LJ 2322.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-4-2003]

[1844] — Ss. 165 and 102 — Even if search is illegal, that will not vitiate the seizure and the further investigations. State of Maharashtra v. Natwarlal Damodardas Soni, (1980) 4 SCC 669: 1981 SCC (Cri) 98: AIR 1980 SC 593: 1980 Cri LJ 429.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-12-1979]

[1845] — Ss. 165, 102 and 100 — Illegality of search would not render the seizure effected pursuant to the search also illegal so as to enable the accused to claim return of the seized material — However, courts must be cautious while dealing with evidence collected during the illegal search. Partap Singh (Dr.) v. Director of Enforcement, (1985) 3 SCC 72: 1985 SCC (Cri) 312: AIR 1985 SC 989: (1985) 155 ITR 166.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.A. Desai and V. Balakrishna Eradi, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-1985]

[1846] — Ss. 165 and 100 — Illegal search — Evidence obtained under, held, is not completely excluded unless it has caused serious prejudice to the accused — Such evidence could be admitted provided there is no express statutory violation or violation of the constitutional provisions i.e. where certain specific enactments are made and the search or seizure is to be effected in accordance with the provisions thereof, the authorities shall comply with such provisions — Thus, general provisions in CrPC are to be treated as guidelines and if at all there is any minor violation, still the court can accept the evidence — Courts have discretion to decide whether such evidence is to be accepted or not — On facts, evidence regarding seizure of articles from the house of the accused could not be rejected merely because the witness who accompanied the police officer conducting the search was not from the same locality (Paras 28 and 31 to 33). State of M.P. v. Paltan Mallah, (2005) 3 SCC 169: 2005 SCC (Cri) 674: AIR 2005 SC 733: 2005 Cri LJ 918.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-1-2005]

Radhakishan v. State of U.P., 1963 Supp (1) SCR 408: AIR 1963 SC 822: (1963) 1 Cri LJ 809; Pooran Mal v. Director of Inspection, (1974) 1 SCC 345: 1974 SCC (Tax) 114; Partap Singh (Dr.) v. Director of Enforcement, (1985) 3 SCC 72: 1985 SCC (Cri) 312: 1985 SCC (Tax) 352, followed

Kuruma v. R., 1955 AC 197: (1955) 1 All ER 236: (1955) 2 WLR 223 (PC), relied on

[1847] — Ss. 165, 102 and 100 — If empowered officer while effecting search or arrest in accordance with Ss. 100 and 165 CrPC, fails to record reasons, such a failure will not amount to an illegality vitiating the trial — Mere non-compliance with Ss. 100 and 165 CrPC would not by itself vitiate the trial — Effect of such non-compliance stated — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — Ss. 41(2) and 42(1)

If a police officer, even if he happens to be an "empowered" officer while effecting an arrest or search during normal investigation into offences purely under the provisions of CrPC fails to strictly comply with the provisions of Ss. 100 and 165 CrPC including the requirement to record reasons, such failure would only amount to an irregularity.

Neither S. 41(2) nor S. 42(1) of NDPS Act mandates such empowered officer to record the grounds of his belief. It is only proviso to S. 42(1) read with S. 42(2) which makes it obligatory to record grounds for his belief. To that extent it has already been held that the provisions are mandatory. A fortiori, the empowered officer though is expected to record reasons of belief as required under S. 165, failure to do so cannot vitiate the trial particularly when S. 41 or 42 of NDPS Act do not mandate recording of reasons while making a search. Section 165 CrPC in the context has to be read along with Ss. 41(2) and 42(1) whereunder the officer is not required to record his reasons. The general principles laid down regarding the irregularities committed in such searches, equally apply even to cases where the grounds of belief as required under S. 165 are not recorded.

If an empowered officer or an authorised officer under S. 41(2) of the NDPS Act carries out a search, he would be doing so under the provisions of CrPC namely Ss. 100 and 165 CrPC and if there is no strict compliance with the provisions of CrPC then such search would not per se be illegal and would not vitiate the trial.

The effect of such failure has to be borne in mind by the courts while appreciating the evidence in the facts and circumstances of each case. The court has to consider whether any prejudice has been caused to the accused and also examine the evidence in respect of search in the light of the fact that these provisions have not been compiled with and further consider whether the weight of evidence is in any manner affected because of the non-compliance. The effect of such non-compliance will have a bearing on the appreciation of evidence of the official witness and other material depending upon the facts and circumstances of each case. The testimony of a witness is not to be doubted or discarded merely on the ground that he happens to be an official but as a rule of caution and depending upon the circumstances of the case, the courts look for independent corroboration. This again depends on the question whether the official has deliberately failed to comply with these provisions or failure was due to lack of time and opportunity to associate some independent witnesses with the search and strictly comply with these provisions. State of Punjab v. Balbir Singh, (1994) 3 SCC 299: 1994 SCC (Cri) 634: AIR 1994 SC 1872: (1994) 1 Crimes 753.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-3-1994]

Bai Radha v. State of Gujarat, (1969) 1 SCC 43, followed

Deepak Ghanshyam Naik v. State of Maharashtra, 1989 Cri LJ 1181: 1989 Mah LJ 276 (Bom); Sunil Kumar v. State, 1990 Cri LJ 414 (Del), approved

[1848] — Ss. 165, 102 and 100 — Search and seizure — Illegality in — Effect of — Illegality in — Effect of — Held, is not always fatal to prosecution case — It would have a bearing on the appreciation of evidence of the official witnesses and other materials depending on the facts of each case — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — Ss. 50 and 42 (Para 11). Ravindran v. Supdt. of Customs, (2007) 6 SCC 410: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 189: AIR 2007 SC 2040.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-5-2007]

Ritesh Chakarvarti v. State of M.P., (2006) 12 SCC 321: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 744, relied on [1849] — Ss. 165 and 102 — Further proceedings closed against accused in respect of material seized during search — Inference that the search was vexatious cannot be drawn therefrom. Partap Singh (Dr.) v. Director of Enforcement, (1985) 3 SCC 72: 1985 SCC (Cri) 312: AIR 1985 SC 989: (1985) 155 ITR 166.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.A. Desai and V. Balakrishna Eradi, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-1985]

[1850] — Ss. 165 and 102 — Seizure of incriminating documents from the person of the accused — Evidence of — Entry in Malkana Register said to be verbatim copy of seizure memo — Endorsement or note in the register that the document though said to be recovered but not deposited in police station — In the circumstances, nature of the entry in the register only shows recovery of certain articles but would not prove recovery of the documents — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 27. Kehar Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1988) 3 SCC 609: 1988 SCC (Cri) 711: AIR 1988 SC 1883.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.L. Oza[1], B.C. Ray[2] and K. Jagannatha Shetty[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 3-8-1988]

[1851] — Ss. 165, 102, 100(4) and 154 — Search and seizure — Investigating Officer taking signature of accused persons as witnesses to the seizure memo — No independent person of locality or nearby village joined to witness the seizure — Articles recovered from the house of the accused persons found to be exactly of same number, description and details as mentioned in Fard-beyan and FIR — Even weight of the ornaments and cash seized tallying with weight mentioned in Fard-beyan and FIR — Held, in the circumstances, it can be inferred that Fard-beyan and FIR had been recorded after seizure of articles from the house of the accused persons and the accused persons had not been named as accused till then. Arjun Marik v. State of Bihar, 1994 Supp (2) SCC 372: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1551.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-3-1994]

[1852] — Ss. 165 and 102 — Non-seizure — Effect — Non-seizure of torchlight used by the witness to see the occurrence — Held, does not render the evidence of the eyewitness concerned untrustworthy

If the accused had used a torchlight or if the victim had a torchlight with him during the occurrence there would be much force in insisting that the investigating officer should have seized it as the same could be used as a material object during trial but a torchlight used by the witness to see the occurrence cannot be equated with the torchlight used by the victim or the assailants in the encounter for evidentiary purposes. Non-seizure of such a torchlight cannot, therefore, be considered as a lapse on the part of any investigating officer, much less a ground for impairment of the testimony of the eyewitness concerned. Balo Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1997) 5 SCC 360: 1997 SCC (Cri) 701: AIR 1997 SC 2678: 1997 Cri LJ 3395.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-1997]

[1853] — Ss. 165, 166(3) & (4) and 100(4) — Statement of prosecution witness contradicting the recovery — On facts, statement of witness not found reliable — Witness stating recovery of revolver from vehicle on the following day of murder whereas revolver, in fact, recovered from another place after 5 months — Discarding the statement of witness, held, there was no reason for police to conceal the revolver for 5 months after it was recovered from vehicle on the next day of murder — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 27 — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302, 364 r/w Ss. 120-B & 34. Manish Dixit v. State of Rajasthan, (2001) 1 SCC 596: 2001 SCC (Cri) 235: AIR 2001 SC 93: 2001 Cri LJ 133.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-10-2000]

[1854] — Ss. 165, 102, 166(3) & (4) and 100(4) — Search and seizure — Objections raised on the ground of non-compliance with Ss. 165 and 166(3) CrPC — In view of the facts of case, evidence of police officer not spurned down despite no signature of any independent witness of locality on seizure memo — When the police officers of Jaipur conducting search at Delhi had given information of the search to their higher officer, who agreed to forward the same to police officers of Delhi concerned, held, compliance with Ss. 166(3) and (4) was not liable to be questioned — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302, 364 r/w Ss. 120-B & 34. Manish Dixit v. State of Rajasthan, (2001) 1 SCC 596: 2001 SCC (Cri) 235: AIR 2001 SC 93: 2001 Cri LJ 133.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-10-2000]

[1855] — Ss. 165, 102 and 100 — Seizure memo — Mahazar — Preparation of, and writing of — Distinction between — Constable preparing mahazar on dictation of Sub-Inspector — In such circumstances, Sub-Inspector's statement that mahazar was written by the Constable and the Constable's statement that mahazar was prepared by Sub-Inspector, held, not contradictory — Even assuming them to be contradictory, held, the contradiction was not a material contradiction affecting the merits of the case — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — Ss. 42 and 51

There is no contradiction between the statements of PWs 1 and 2. The constable in question obviously prepared the mahazar on the dictation of PW 1 which PW 2 interpreted to mean that the mahazar was prepared by PW 1. Preparation of mahazar and writing down of the contents of the mahazar are two different things. (Para 6). P.P. Fathima v. State of Kerala, (2003) 8 SCC 726.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-2003]

[1856] — Ss. 165 and 100 — Non-examination of independent witnesses to search — Effect of — Held, is not fatal to prosecution case — But, where such witness is not examined in the course of trial, the evidence of official witnesses may be approached with suspicion and corroboration may be insisted upon — In the present case, the courts below while passing conviction had critically scrutinised the evidence of the official witnesses applying the rule of caution — There was no reason to disagree with their findings — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — Ss. 50 and 42 (Paras 12 and 13). Ravindran v. Supdt. of Customs, (2007) 6 SCC 410: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 189: AIR 2007 SC 2040.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-5-2007]

Koluttumottil Razak v. State of Kerala, (2000) 4 SCC 465: 2000 SCC (Cri) 829; M. Prabhulal v. Asstt. Directorate of Revenue Intelligence, (2003) 8 SCC 449: 2003 SCC (Cri) 2024, relied on

[1857] — S. 165 — Compliance with rigours of S. 42 NDPS Act, 1985 — Necessity of — Compliance with S. 165 CrPC — Sufficiency of — Held, for the said purpose, a distinction is to be borne in mind between a search conducted on the basis of a prior information and a case where the authority comes across a case of commission of an offence under the NDPS Act accidentally or per chance — Rigours of law need not be complied with in a case where the purpose for making search and seizure would be defeated, if strict compliance therewith is insisted upon — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — S. 42

A declaration to the effect that the minimum requirement, namely, compliance with Section 165 CrPC would serve the purpose may not suffice as non-compliance with the said provision would not render the search a nullity. A distinction therefore must be borne in mind between a search conducted on the basis of a prior information and a case where the authority comes across a case of commission of an offence under the NDPS Act accidentally or per chance. It is also possible to hold that rigours of the law need not be complied with in a case where the purpose for making search and seizure would be defeated, if strict compliance therewith is insisted upon. (Para 14). Directorate of Revenue v. Mohd. Nisar Holia, (2008) 2 SCC 370: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 415.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-12-2007]

[1858] — S. 165 — Applicability — No question of applicability of R. 14, TADA Rules arose when no case for offence was pending — Search and seizure was carried out by higher officer, namely SP, CID Crime Branch — Being a cognizable offence, on the basis of information received that large quantity of arms and explosive substances were stored in the premises, the police officer was entitled to exercise power under S. 165 CrPC — Exercise of power under R. 14 by the District Magistrate does not take away the authority of the police officer to search under S. 165 CrPC — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Rules, 1987, R. 14 (Para 89). Lal Singh v. State of Gujarat, (2001) 3 SCC 221: 2001 SCC (Cri) 472: AIR 2001 SC 746: (2001) 2 Cal LT 8 (SC): 2001 Cri LJ 978.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-1-2001]

[1859] — S. 165 — Requirement of recording written reasons under, not mandatory for the purpose of S. 37, Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, 1973. Partap Singh (Dr.) v. Director of Enforcement, (1985) 3 SCC 72: 1985 SCC (Cri) 312: AIR 1985 SC 989: (1985) 155 ITR 166.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.A. Desai and V. Balakrishna Eradi, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-1985]

[1860] — Ss. 165(4) and 100(4) — Search of smuggled goods — No person from the locality called upon to witness and instead Customs officers and an independent witness witnessing the search — In case of search of smuggled goods, local witnesses are not always available — Hence, evidence of such witnesses to the search, held, cannot be rejected if otherwise reliable

When dealing with the recovery of smuggled goods, the Customs authorities have to maintain top secrecy lest the recovery should prove abortive by reason of any leakage. Furthermore, smuggled goods are often kept in lonely places which may or may not have habitation. In the present case, the articles were got recovered from a lonely sea shore and a far-off island and the articles were concealed in the bushes growing there. In these circumstances, it would neither be practical nor reasonable to expect any person of the locality to witness the search. State of Maharashtra v. P.K. Pathak, (1980) 2 SCC 259: 1980 SCC (Cri) 428: AIR 1980 SC 1224: 1980 Cri LJ 923.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-2-1980]

— S. 166 See Ss. 91, 165 and 166

See also Ss. 154 to 173

See also Ss. 154 to 173 and 482

See also Ss. 157 to 167

See also Ss. 157 to 172 and 198

See also Ss. 157 to 173

See also Ss. 157, 160 to 168

See also Ss. 164(1) & (5), 154 to 160, 165 to 173(5) & (8) and 311

— S. 166(3) See Ss. 100(4) & (5) and 166(3) & (4)

See also Ss. 165, 102, 166(3) & (4) and 100(4)

See also Ss. 165, 166(3) & (4) and 100(4)

[1861] — Ss. 166(3) and (4) — Search by IO of a place in the limits of another police station — Requirement on the part of the IO to send notice and a copy of the list prepared under S. 100 to the officer-in-charge of the other police station — IO deposing that he had written two letters to the police station in whose jurisdiction the search and seizure were made — However, copies of those letters not produced before court — Held, presumption under Ill. (e) of S. 114 of the Evidence Act would arise and the official acts would be deemed to have been performed regularly — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 114 Ill. (e). Ronny v. State of Maharashtra, (1998) 3 SCC 625: 1998 SCC (Cri) 859: AIR 1998 SC 1251.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-1998]

— S. 166(4) See Ss. 100(4) & (5) and 166(3) & (4)

See also Ss. 165, 102, 166(3) & (4) and 100(4)

See also Ss. 165, 166(3) & (4) and 100(4)

See also Ss. 166(3) and (4)

— S. 166-A See Ss. 157, 173(8) and 166-A

See also Ss. 482, 397, 166-A and 401

[1862] — S. 166-A — "Letter rogatory" — Meaning of

'Letter Rogatory' is a formal communication in writing sent by a Court in which action is pending to a foreign Court or Judge requesting the testimony of a witness residing within the jurisdiction of that foreign Court may be formally taken thereon under its direction and transmitted to the issuing Court making such request for use in a pending legal contest or action. This request entirely depends upon the comity of Courts towards each other, that is to say, on the friendly recognition accorded by the Court of one nation to the laws and usages of the Court of another nation. Union of India v. W.N. Chadha, 1993 Supp (4) SCC 260: 1993 SCC (Cri) 1171: AIR 1993 SC 1082: 1993 Cri LJ 859.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-1992]

[1863] — S. 166-A — Bofors gun deal case — Letter rogatory issued by Special Judge to authorities in Switzerland — Held, on facts, not vitiated by non-application of mind

The Special Judges cannot be found fault with to have issued letter rogatory casually or mechanically. They have issued the letter rogatory only after applying their mind and on being satisfied that the FIR constitutes a cognizable offence or offences and that a competent officer under the Code of Criminal Procedure had made a request for issuance of letter rogatory. Union of India v. W.N. Chadha, 1993 Supp (4) SCC 260: 1993 SCC (Cri) 1171: AIR 1993 SC 1082: 1993 Cri LJ 859.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-1992]

[1864] — S. 166-A — Letter rogatory — Initially issued to competent authority for investigation in a foreign country (confederation of Switzerland) under Memorandum of Understanding prior to coming into force of S. 166-A — But amended letter rogatory issued subsequent to enforcement of S. 166-A — Held, amended letter legal and valid — Bofors case. Union of India v. W.N. Chadha, 1993 Supp (4) SCC 260: 1993 SCC (Cri) 1171: AIR 1993 SC 1082: 1993 Cri LJ 859.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-1992]

[1865] — S. 166-A — Letter rogatory — Opportunity of being heard before issuing — Held, not required to be afforded to the accused — Accused has no right at this stage to contest the investigating agency seeking the letter rogatory. Union of India v. W.N. Chadha, 1993 Supp (4) SCC 260: 1993 SCC (Cri) 1171: AIR 1993 SC 1082: 1993 Cri LJ 859.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-1992]

— S. 166-B See Ss. 176, 177, 166-B, 188 and 190

[1866] — S. 166-B — Invocation of, if proper — Letter of request received from Govt. of Canada addressed to Govt. of India to obtain appellant's statement and his blood sample on voluntary basis to conform with Canadian law prohibiting compulsion in this regard — In such situation, held, S. 166-B was wrongly invoked by CBI since the directions of the Magistrate necessarily implied compulsion which was contrary to the request of the Canadian authorities — Impugned orders of Magistrate are unsustainable in law — Question as to correct interpretation of S. 166-B left open as case was decided on facts, that is, on basis of contents of letter of Canadian authorities (Paras 8 and 9). Narinder Singh Bogarh v. State of Punjab, (2004) 11 SCC 180.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-2-2004]

[1867] — S. 166-B — Enforcement of red corner notice issued by Interpol on the ground that fugitive criminal in India has violated order of a foreign civil court — Held, Indian court can examine whether tests laid down under Ss. 13 and 44-A CPC are satisfied — Extradition Act, 1962, Ss. 4 to 10 — CPC, 1908, Ss. 13 and 44-A (Para 114). Bhavesh Jayanti Lakhani v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 9 SCC 551.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

[1868] — Ss. 166-B and 173(5) — Inquiry by Magistrate on request for extradition — Compliance with requirement of S. 173(5) CrPC at the stage of — Necessity of — Extradition Act, 1962 — S. 7 (Para 50). Sarabjit Rick Singh v. Union of India, (2008) 2 SCC 417: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 449.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-12-2007]

[1869] — S. 166-B — Evidence of documents — Govt. of India's order under S. 5, Extradition Act, 1962 for conducting inquiry by Magistrate in the matter of USA's request for extradition of a fugitive as also all the documents which were sent along with the duly authenticated and certified letter of request of USA presented by Govt. of India to the Magistrate — Held, these documents were eligible to be treated and received as evidence under S. 10, Extradition Act, 1962 — Since these documents were placed on file of the Magistrate and copies thereof given to the fugitive within the period of two months from the date of his apprehension as prescribed under the treaty, there was no violation of the treaty — Extradition Act, 1962 — Ss. 5 and 10. Rosiline George v. Union of India, (1994) 2 SCC 80: 1994 SCC (Cri) 304: (1993) 2 ALT (Cri) 672: (1994) 1 KLT 36.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and S.P. Bharucha, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-10-1993]

Section 167 — Detention without charge pending investigation

— S. 167 See also S. 167 Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 1035 in Vol. 2

Synopsis

- (1) Generally 573
- (2) Expeditious investigation and duty and powers of police under S. 167 577
- (3) Remand to custody up to and beyond 15 days — S. 167(2) and proviso thereto and S. 167(2-A) 579
- (4) Duties of remanding Magistrate 584
- (5) Rights of undertrials/Right to bail under S. 167(2) proviso and Expln. I thereto 584
- (6) Remand to custody before and after charge-sheet/cognizance — Ss. 167 and 309 600
- (7) S. 167(5) as amended in State of West Bengal 603
- (8) Applicability in cases of special statutes 606

— S. 167 See Ss. 50, 57 and 167

See also Ss. 56, 57, 167

See also Ss. 73, 167, 204, 82, 83 and 155

See also Ss. 154 to 173

See also Ss. 154 to 173 and 482

See also Ss. 157 to 167

See also Ss. 157 to 172 and 198

See also Ss. 157 to 173

See also Ss. 157, 160 to 168

See also Ss. 157, 160, 167, 170, 190 and 319

See also Ss. 164(1) & (5), 154 to 160, 165 to 173(5) & (8) and 311

See also Ss. 164(1), 167, 3, 6, 20(1) and (4)

See also Ss. 172, 161, 162 and 167

See also Ss. 172(2) & (3) and 167

See also Ss. 173(8) and 167

See also Ss. 204 and 167

See also Ss. 228, 167, 173, 2(g) & (h), 190 and 309

See also Ss. 437, 439 and 167

— S. 167 proviso See Ss. 438 and 167 proviso

— S. 167 proviso (a) See Ss. 439 and 167 proviso (a)

— S. 167(2) See Ss. 167(1), 57 and 167(2)

See also Ss. 167(1) and (2)

See also Ss. 437 and 167(2)

See also Ss. 437(5), (1) & (2) and 167(2)

See also Ss. 439 & 167(2)

— S. 167(2) proviso See Ss. 437(5), 439(2) and 167(2) proviso

— S. 167(2) proviso (a) See Ss. 437(5), 439(2) and 167(2) proviso (a)

— S. 167(2) proviso (a)(i) See Ss. 173(2) and 167(2) proviso (a)(i)

— S. 167(2-A) See Ss. 167(2) and (2-A)

— S. 167(5)(iii) (as amended in the State of W.B.) See Ss. 468(1) & (2)(c) and 167(5)(iii) (as amended in the State of W.B.)

— S. 167(6) See Ss. 167(5) and (6) (as amended in the State of W.B.)

(1) Generally

[1870] — S. 167 — Detention in contravention of provisions under S. 167(2) proviso — Violation of right to life — When maximum period of custody is provided under, any further detention of the accused beyond that period without filing a challan would amount to violation of Art. 21 — Constitution of India — Article 21

Personal liberty is one of the cherished objects of the Indian Constitution and deprivation of the same can only be in accordance with law and in conformity with the provisions thereof, as stipulated under Article 21 of the Constitution. When the law provides that the Magistrate could authorise the detention of the accused in custody up to a maximum period as indicated in the proviso to sub-section (2) of Section 167, any further detention beyond the period without filing of a challan by the investigating agency would be a subterfuge and would not be in accordance with law and in conformity with the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code, and as such, could be violative of Article 21. (Para 13). Uday Mohanlal Acharya v. State of Maharashtra, (2001) 5 SCC 453: 2001 SCC (Cri) 760: AIR 2001 SC 1910: 2001 Cri LJ 1832.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik[1], U.C. Banerjee and B.N. Agrawal[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 29-3-2001]

[1871] — Ss. 167, 41, 44 and 46 — 'Person arrested' — 'Arrest' — Meaning of — 'Arrest' and 'custody' — Distinction — Arrest condition precedent to judicial custody

(1) Generally (contd.)

The word 'arrest' is derived from the French word 'arreter' meaning "to stop or stay" and signifies a restraint of the person.

The Code gives power of arrest not only to a police officer and a Magistrate but also under certain circumstances or given situations to private persons. The arrest of a person is a condition precedent for taking him into judicial custody thereof. The taking of the person into judicial custody is followed after the arrest of the person concerned by the Magistrate on appearance or surrender. In every arrest, there is custody but not vice versa. The words 'custody' and 'arrest' are not synonymous terms. Though 'custody' may amount to an arrest in certain circumstances but not under all circumstances. If these two terms are interpreted as synonymous, it is nothing but an ultra legalist interpretation which if under all circumstances accepted and adopted, would lead to a startling anomaly resulting in serious consequences. Directorate of Enforcement v. Deepak Mahajan, (1994) 3 SCC 440: 1994 SCC (Cri) 785: AIR 1994 SC 1775: 1994 Cri LJ 2269: (1994) 2 BLJR 912: (1994) 2 An LT(Cri) 173: (1994) 70 ELT 12.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-1994]

Roshan Beevi v. Govt. of T.N., 1984 Cri LJ 134: (1984) 15 ELT 289: 1983 MLW (Cri) 289 (Mad), approved

Niranjan Singh v. Prabhakar Rajaram Kharote, (1980) 2 SCC 559: 1980 SCC (Cri) 508, relied on

[1872] — Ss. 167, 202(1), 204, 273 Expln. and 319 — 'Accused' — Meaning of

Generally speaking, to accuse means to allege whether the person is really guilty of the crime or not. Accusation according to Black's Law Dictionary means a formal charge against a person, to the effect that he is guilty of a punishable offence laid before a court or Magistrate having jurisdiction to inquire into the alleged crime. In this sense accusation may be said to be equivalent of information at common law which is mere allegation of prosecuting officer by whom it is preferred.

In the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, the expression 'the accused' has been used in the narrower sense. In S. 167 the words 'the accused' have been used only in respect of a case where there are grounds for believing that the accusation or information is well founded. 'Information' and 'accusation' are synonymously used. In S. 202(1) the expression "the accused" has been used in relation to a complaint case under this section even before issue of process. It also appears that in the Code the expression "the accused" is used after cognizance is taken by the Magistrate. In S. 204 one is referred to as 'the accused' even before issue of process. The explanation to S. 273 says that "accused" includes a person in relation to whom any proceeding under Chap. VIII (Security for keeping the peace and good behaviour) has been commenced under this Code. In view of S. 319 persons who have been discharged under S. 245 of all or some of the charges are 'accused' and hence cannot be proceeded against under S. 319. However, power to order inquiry under S. 398 may be invoked. Sohan Lal v. State of Rajasthan, (1990) 4 SCC 580: 1990 SCC (Cri) 650: AIR 1990 SC 2158: (1990) 3 Crimes 120.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.N. Saikia and K. Ramaswamy, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-8-1990]

[1873] — S. 167 — 'Police officer' — Includes authorised or empowered officer under FERA or Customs Act

Neither the Police Act, 1861 (Act V of 1861) nor any other statute defines the expression 'police officer'. Shortly stated, the main duties of the police are the prevention, detention and investigation of crimes. Though the powers of customs officers and enforcement officers are not identical to those of police officers qua the investigation under Chapter XII of the Code yet the officers under the FERA and Customs Act are vested with certain powers similar to the powers of police officers. Directorate of Enforcement v. Deepak Mahajan, (1994) 3 SCC 440: 1994 SCC (Cri) 785: AIR 1994 SC 1775: 1994 Cri LJ 2269: (1994) 2 BLJR 912: (1994) 2 An LT(Cri) 173: (1994) 70 ELT 12.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-1994]

[1874] — Ss. 167 and 3 — Special Judge created by Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, 1952 is a 'Magistrate having jurisdiction' within the meaning of S. 167 to authorise detention of accused in police custody — General Clauses Act, 1897 — S. 32

The Criminal Procedure Code is applicable when there is no conflict with the provisions of the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act. While S. 8 of the Amendment Act empowers the Special Judge to take cognizance of the offence without the accused being committed to him, neither a Sessions Judge nor a Magistrate is so empowered under the Code. If a Special Judge having such a power is not empowered to exercise powers of remanding an accused person produced before him or release him on bail it will lead to an anomalous situation.

Besides, S. 3 of the Code suggests that if the context otherwise requires, the word 'Magistrate' may include Magistrates who are not specified in the section. Read along with the definition of 'Magistrate' in S. 32 of the General Clauses Act, the Special Judge can be held to be a Magistrate for the purposes of S. 167. Thus, although the words "Special Judge" are not mentioned in S. 167, that would not exclude the Special Judge from being a Magistrate having jurisdiction to try cases under S. 167. State of T.N. v. V. Krishnaswami Naidu, (1979) 4 SCC 5: 1979 SCC (Cri) 887: AIR 1979 SC 1255: 1979 Cri LJ 1069: (1980) 1 MLJ 16 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and P.S. Kailasam, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-1979]

[1875] — S. 167 — 'Accused' — Meaning of, in the context — Covers person arrested under FERA or Customs Act — Different from 'person accused of an offence' under Art. 20(3) — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 11 — General Clauses Act, 1897 — S. 3(42)

Though the word "person" is defined in the Indian Penal Code (S. 11) and the General Clauses Act [S. 3(42)] which are identical and are not exhaustive but an inclusive one, the words 'accused' or 'accused person' or 'accused of an offence' are not defined either in the Indian Penal Code or in the Indian Evidence Act or in the General Clauses Act, 1897. In the Code of Criminal Procedure also, these words are not defined except an inclusive meaning of the word 'accused' is given in the Explanation to S. 273 of the Code of 1973, of course, confined only to the mode of taking and recording evidence in the course of the trial or other proceedings as envisaged in the said section. Though this explanation of the word 'accused' limited to that S. 273 cannot and should not be strained and stretched to such an extreme extent to make it applicable in all circumstances wherever the word 'accused' appears in the Code, this explanation gives a clue providing or suggesting an answer to the problem.

The prohibitive sweep of Art. 20(3) which imposes the ban on self-accusation reads, "No person accused of any offence shall be compelled to be a witness against himself." To bring a person within the meaning of 'accused of any offence', that person must assimilate the character of an 'accused person' in the sense that he must be accused of any offence.

While referring to a person arrested and detained neither Art. 22 nor S. 167 employs the expression "accused of any offence". Section 24 of the Evidence Act uses the expression 'accused person' whereas in Ss. 25 and 27, the identical expression "person accused of any offence" is used. But in S. 26 neither of these two expressions is used but "any person". It was only while in examining the admissibility or otherwise of a statement of an 'accused person' or "a person accused of any offence", this Court in a series of judgments has dealt with the connotation of these two expressions but not otherwise.

The word 'accused' in the Code denotes different meanings according to the context in which it is deployed; in that sometimes the said word is employed to denote a person arrested, sometimes a person against whom there is an accusation, but who is yet not put on trial and sometimes to denote a person on trial and so on.

An officer-in-charge of a police station who is empowered under S. 156 to investigate on an information received under S. 154 or otherwise takes up the investigation by proceeding to the spot "for the discovery and arrest of the offender when he has reason to suspect the commission of an offence" as contemplated under S. 157 of the Code. At that stage, the investigating officer does not suddenly jump to a conclusion that the person against whom the investigation has commenced has committed an offence. But he can arrive at such a conclusion only when the investigation consummates to a finality on the collection of evidence eliminating all suspicion and establishing the commission of the offence. In case the investigating officer arrives at a conclusion that no offence is made out he forwards his final report to that effect.

The view of majority in the impugned judgment that the person arrested under the FERA or Customs Act cannot fall within the meaning of the word 'accused' for invoking S. 167 solely based on the decisions of the Supreme Court, namely Ramesh Chandra Mehta, AIR 1970 SC 940: (1969) 2 SCR 461: 1970 Cri LJ 863 as well as Illias v. Collector of Customs, Madras, AIR 1970 SC 1065: (1969) 2 SCR 613 is not logically concluded for more than one reason.

Firstly, almost all the decisions of the Supreme Court holding that "a person arrested by an Enforcement Officer or Customs Officer, as the case may be, is not a 'person accused of an offence' " have been rendered only in the context of examining the question of admissibility or otherwise of the statement of a person arrested under those special Acts but not with reference to authorising the detention of an arrestee under S. 167 of the Code by a Magistrate and so the dictum laid down in those decisions is clearly distinguishable;

Secondly, in the teeth of the newly introduced explanation to S. 273 of 1973 Code it is made clear that the word 'accused' includes a person against whom any proceeding under Chapter VIII of the

(1) Generally (contd.)

Code has been commenced. Thus the explanation gives a clear clue that in given situation the word 'person' can be construed as 'accused' or 'accused person'.

Thirdly, in the Code different expressions are used under various provisions to denote a person involving in a criminal proceeding such as 'offender', 'person', 'accused', 'accused person', "accused of an offence" depending on the nature of the proceeding.

Fourthly, the very legislative change made in S. 436 of the old Code corresponding to S. 398 of the new Code substituting the words "person accused of an offence" in the place of "accused person" as originally stood makes it clear that in the procedural code, these two expressions cannot always denote the same meaning or be construed as synonymous or interchangeable and this legislative change indicates that the Legislature in its wisdom intended to make a clear distinction between these expressions for the reasons mentioned supra.

Fifthly, if the expression 'accused person' and "a person accused of an offence" are to be held denoting the same meaning and interchangeable at all times and situations, it will become fallacious and pernicious in the implementation of the procedural law of the Code.

Sixthly, in interpreting a statute in its true spirit, the right direction should be to give a full and literal meaning to the language aiming ever to show fidelity to the meaningful purpose of the statute and never to make it sterile and impotent by giving a strict literal interpretation putting blinkers for judicial approach; because such interpretation will run counter to the legislative intent.

The word 'accused' in the Code denotes different meanings according to the context in which it is deployed; in that sometimes the said word is employed to denote a person arrested, sometimes a person against whom there is an accusation, but who is yet not put on trial and sometimes to denote a person on trial and so on. The word 'accused' or 'accused person' is used only in a generic sense in Ss. 167(1) and (2) denoting the 'person' whose liberty is actually restrained on his arrest by a competent authority on well-founded information or formal accusation or indictment. Therefore, the word 'accused' limited to the scope of Ss. 167(1) and (2) — particularly in the light of Explanation to S. 273 of the Code includes "any person arrested". The inevitable consequence that follows is that "any person is arrested" occurring in the first limb of S. 167(1) of the Code takes within its ambit "every person arrested" under S. 35 of FERA or S. 104 of the Customs Act also as the case may be and the 'person arrested' can be detained by the Magistrate in exercise of his power under S. 167(2) of the Code. In other words, the 'person arrested' under FERA or Customs Act is assimilated with the characteristics of an 'accused' within the range of S. 167(1) and as such liable to be detained under S. 167(2) by a Magistrate when produced before him. Directorate of Enforcement v. Deepak Mahajan, (1994) 3 SCC 440: 1994 SCC (Cri) 785: AIR 1994 SC 1775: 1994 Cri LJ 2269: (1994) 2 BLJR 912: (1994) 2 An LT(Cri) 173: (1994) 70 ELT 12.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-1994]

Supdt. of Customs, C.I.U., Cochin v. P.K. Ummerkutty, 1983 Cri LJ 1860 (Ker); M.K. Ayoob v. Superintendent, C.I.W., Cochin, 1984 Cri LJ 949: 1984 KLT 215 (Ker); N.H. Dave v. Mohmed Akhtar, (1984) 15 ELT 353 (Guj); Senior Intelligence Officer v. M.K.S. Abu Bucker, 1989 LW (Cri) 325, approved

Union of India v. O.P. Gupta, (1990) 2 Del Lawyer 23 (FB), affirmed

Deepak Mahajan v. Directorate of Enforcement, 1991 Cri LJ 1124 (FB) (Del), reversed

[1876] — S. 167 — Allegations made against accused in application moved by police for accused's remand to police custody — Accused's failure to object to those allegations would not amount to his admission — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 17

Per Shetty, J.

The averments in the remand application are only self-serving. The silence of the accused cannot be construed as his admission of those allegations. Kehar Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1988) 3 SCC 609: 1988 SCC (Cri) 711: AIR 1988 SC 1883.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.L. Oza[1], B.C. Ray[2] and K. Jagannatha Shetty[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 3-8-1988]

[1877] — Ss. 167(1) and 2(h) — 'Investigation' — Scope of — Not limited to that made by police officer alone but includes that made by authorised or empowered officer under special Acts such as FERA or Customs Act

The word 'investigation' cannot be limited only to police investigation but on the other hand, the said word is with wider connotation and flexible so as to include the investigation carried on by any agency whether he be a police officer or empowered or authorised officer or a person not being a police officer under the direction of a Magistrate to make an investigation vested with the power of investigation.

It cannot be said that either the Officer of Enforcement or the Customs Officer is not empowered with the power of investigation though not with the power of filing a final report as in the case of a police officer. Directorate of Enforcement v. Deepak Mahajan, (1994) 3 SCC 440: 1994 SCC (Cri) 785: AIR 1994 SC 1775: 1994 Cri LJ 2269: (1994) 2 BLJR 912: (1994) 2 An LT(Cri) 173: (1994) 70 ELT 12.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-1994]

(2) Expeditious investigation and duty and powers of police under S. 167

See also under S. 173, below

[1878] — S. 167 — Object

Though S. 167(1) refers to the investigation by the police and the transmission of the case diary to the nearest Magistrate as prescribed under the Code etc., the main object of sub-section (1) of S. 167 is the production of an arrestee before a Magistrate within twenty-four hours as fixed by S. 57 when the investigation cannot be completed within that period so that the Magistrate can take further course of action as contemplated under sub-section (2) of S. 167. Directorate of Enforcement v. Deepak Mahajan, (1994) 3 SCC 440: 1994 SCC (Cri) 785: AIR 1994 SC 1775: 1994 Cri LJ 2269: (1994) 2 BLJR 912: (1994) 2 An LT(Cri) 173: (1994) 70 ELT 12.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-1994]

[1879] — S. 167 — Applicability — Conditions precedent — Registration of case and entries in diary relating to that case not sine qua non — Arrest need not be by police officer alone but may be by an authorised officer or officer empowered to arrest

A Magistrate can himself arrest or order any person to arrest any offender if that offender has committed an offence in his presence and within his local jurisdiction or on his appearance or surrender or is produced before him and take that person (offender) into his custody subject to the bail provisions. If a case is registered against an offender arrested by the Magistrate and a follow-up investigation is initiated, or if an investigation has emanated qua the accusations levelled against the person appearing or surrendering or being brought before the Magistrate, the Magistrate can in exercise of the powers conferred on him by S. 167(2) keep that offender or person under judicial custody in case the Magistrate is not inclined to admit that offender or person to bail.

The above deliberation leads to a derivation that to invoke S. 167(1), it is not an indispensable prerequisite condition that in all circumstances, the arrest should have been effected only by a police officer and none else and that there must necessarily be records of entries of a case diary. Therefore, it necessarily follows that a mere production of an arrestee before a competent Magistrate by an authorised officer or an officer empowered to arrest (notwithstanding the fact that he is not a police officer in its stricto sensu) on a reasonable belief that the arrestee "has been guilty of an offence punishable" under the provisions of the special Act is sufficient for the Magistrate to take that person into his custody on his being satisfied of the three preliminary conditions, namely (1) the arresting officer is legally competent to make the arrest; (2) that the particulars of the offence or the accusation for which the person is arrested or other grounds for such arrest do exist and are well-founded; and (3) that the provisions of the special Act in regard to the arrest of the person and the production of the arrestee serve the purpose of S. 167(1) of the Code. Directorate of Enforcement v. Deepak Mahajan, (1994) 3 SCC 440: 1994 SCC (Cri) 785: AIR 1994 SC 1775: 1994 Cri LJ 2269: (1994) 2 BLJR 912: (1994) 2 An LT(Cri) 173: (1994) 70 ELT 12.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-1994]

[1880] — Ss. 167, 209 and 309 — Expeditious disposal of cases including investigations and trials emphasised — Pre-trial detention for a considerable period goes against the spirit of the Code and the Constitution

The Criminal Procedure Code in Ss. 167, 209 and 309 has emphasised the importance of expeditious disposal of cases including investigations and trials. Therefore, the Government will do well to comply with the spirit of the Code especially in the matter of persons sought to be bound over for good behaviour, persons against whom summons cases are pending and persons who have been in custody for more than six months. Nimeon Sangma v. Govt. of Meghalaya, (1980) 1 SCC 700: 1980 SCC (Cri) 328: AIR 1979 SC 1518: 1979 Cri LJ 941.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer, R.S. Pathak and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-4-1979]

[1881] — S. 167 — Test identification parade — Unexplained delay in holding, held, adversely affects the value of evidence of identification — Where the identification parade was held 1½ long months after the occurrence in question and after the expiry of the maximum permissible period (15 days) for producing the arrested accused before the court; there was no explanation for the delay; there was nothing on record to show that while taking the accused to and producing them before the court the identity of the accused was not revealed; and the witnesses had at no earlier stage revealed any special identifying features, held, exclusive reliance could not be placed on such identification — Hence, conviction and sentence set aside — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 9. Satrughana v. State of Orissa, 1995 Supp (4) SCC 448: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1424.

(2) Expeditious investigation and duty and powers of police under S. 167 (contd.)

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, M.M. Punchhi and K. Ramaswamy, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-12-1992]

[1882] — S. 167 — Remand application filed by investigating agency — Object of — Several persons arrested in connection with an offence — Materials collected against any person so far not arrested need not be disclosed in the application

Remand applications are to be filed by the Investigating Agency to satisfy the Court that there are justifiable grounds to detain an accused already arrested, in police or judicial custody. By such applications the Investigating Agency is required to bring to the notice of the Court the materials collected against an arrested accused to persuade the Court to remand him to custody for the purpose of further investigation. To put it negatively, the Investigating Agency is not required to state in such application the materials, if any, collected against a person who is yet to be arrested. Such being the limited purpose of a remand application the non-disclosure of the name of the respondent as a conspirator (who was not arrested till then) in the remand applications of others arrested could not — and ought not to — have been made a ground by the High Court for disbelieving the prosecution case qua the respondent and for that matter, granting bail to him. State of Maharashtra v. Ramesh Taurani, (1998) 1 SCC 41: 1998 SCC (Cri) 257: AIR 1998 SC 586: 1998 Cri LJ 855.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-11-1997]

[1883] — S. 167(1) — 'Entries in the diary' — 'Diary' refers to the special diary mentioned in S. 167(2) — Contents of the diary

The expression 'diary' referred to in S. 167(1) of the Code is the special diary mentioned in S. 167(2) which should contain full and unabridged statements of persons examined by the police so as to give the Magistrates on a perusal of the said diary, a satisfactory and complete source of information which would enable him to decide whether or not the accused person should be detained in custody but it is different from the general diary maintained under S. 44 of the Police Act. Directorate of Enforcement v. Deepak Mahajan, (1994) 3 SCC 440: 1994 SCC (Cri) 785: AIR 1994 SC 1775: 1994 Cri LJ 2269: (1994) 2 BLJR 912: (1994) 2 An LT(Cri) 173: (1994) 70 ELT 12.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-1994]

[1884] — Ss. 167(1), 57 and 167(2) — Legal obligation on the police officer concerned to forward the accused to the nearest Judicial Magistrate within 24 hours of arrest — Omission to discharge — Effect — Where the person arrested was neither an "enemy alien" nor was the arrest under any law of preventive detention, such omission on the part of the police officer, held, vitiated the further detention of the arrested person — That the person was already in jail in another State in another case, held, was not a valid excuse for not producing the accused before the Magistrate in the instant case — Ss. 167(1) and 57 and not S. 167(2), held, relevant in such a case — Constitution of India — Arts. 22(2) and 21 — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — S. 15

The appellant was arrested in connection with a case involving Section 15 of the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 (for short "the NDPS Act") in Rajasthan on 22-6-1998. On 7-8-1998 while still in custody, he was recorded as arrested in another case under the NDPS Act in Madhya Pradesh. In the Rajasthan case, the Rajasthan High Court directed him to be released on bail but the M.P. High Court did not grant him bail in the M.P. case. Therefore, he remained in jail. Since in the M.P. case no charge-sheet was laid within ninety days of the appellant's arrest, he moved an application under the proviso to Section 167(2) for bail before the Special Judge who rejected that application. Then the appellant approached the M.P. High Court which also held the appellant to be not entitled to the benefit of the said provision on the premise that having not been produced before any court pursuant to his arrest on 7-8-1998 he could not be treated to be in judicial custody in the M.P. case.

Allowing his appeal,

Held :

It is settled that benefit of the proviso to Section 167(2) CrPC would endue to an accused involved in the offences under the NDPS Act as well. But in the present case, the position is slightly different because the appellant is not continuing in custody pursuant to any order passed under that section. Section 167(2) would apply only to an accused who was forwarded to a Magistrate under Section 167(1) because further detention of the accused can be made only if it is so authorised by such a Magistrate. In the instant case rather Sections 167(1) and 57 are relevant. In view of Section 167(1), the police officer who conducts investigation cannot obviate the legal obligation under Section 167(1) CrPC read with Section 57 thereof to perform two requisites if he knows that investigation cannot be completed within 24 hours after the arrest of the accused. One requisite is, to transmit a copy of the case-diary to the nearest Judicial Magistrate. The other is, to forward the accused to such Magistrate simultaneously. The only exceptional ground on which the police officer can avoid producing the arrested person before such Magistrate is when the officer concerned is satisfied that there are no grounds for believing that the information or accusation was well founded. In such a case, the accused has to be released from custody.

It is a constitutional mandate that no person shall be deprived of his liberty except in accordance with the procedure established in law. The Constitution further directs that the person arrested and detained in custody shall be produced before the nearest Magistrate within 24 hours of such arrest. The only time permitted to be excluded from the said period of 24 hours is "the time necessary for going from the place of arrest to the court of the Magistrate". Only under two contingencies can the said direction be obviated. One is when the person arrested is an "enemy alien" and the second when the arrest is under any law for preventive detention. In all other cases the Constitution has prohibited peremptorily that "no such person shall be detained in custody beyond the said period without the authority of a Magistrate".

Since after his arrest in the M.P. case the appellant was not produced before the nearest Magistrate, his detention sequel to the arrest became unlawful beyond the said period of 24 hours. Excuses advanced by the respondent-State for their inability to produce the accused before the nearest Magistrate within the required period cannot be recognized by law. Manoj v. State of M.P., (1999) 3 SCC 715: 1999 SCC (Cri) 478: AIR 1999 SC 1403: 1999 Cri LJ 2095.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-1999]

Union of India v. Thamisharasi, (1995) 4 SCC 190: 1995 SCC (Cri) 665, relied on [1885] — Ss. 167(2) and 468 — Undertrials, right of speedy trial — Investigations to be completed within a time-bound programme — Action directed against non-commencement of trials since several years — State Government and High Court to report compliance with S. 167(2) — State Government to submit data of those charged with minor offences and have been held beyond the maximum period for which they could be sentenced on conviction — Release directed under S. 468, of those against whom no charge-sheet filed within the period of limitation — State Government and High Court directed to ensure compliance with S. 167(5) — Constitution of India — Art. 21. Hussainara Khatoon (III) v. State of Bihar, (1980) 1 SCC 93: 1980 SCC (Cri) 35: AIR 1979 SC 1360 (Order: 1979 Cri LJ 1036.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and A.P. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-2-1979]

(3) Remand to custody up to and beyond 15 days — S. 167(2) and proviso thereto and S. 167(2-A)

See also under Section 167, '(7) S. 167(5) as amended in State of W.B.', below

[1886] — S. 167(2) and proviso thereto — Object

The object behind the enactment of S. 167 of the Code was that the detention of an accused person should not be permitted in custody pending investigation for any unreasonably longer period. However, realising that it may not be possible to complete the investigation in every case within 24 hours or even 15 days, as the case may be, even if the investigating agency proceeds with utmost promptitude, Parliament introduced the proviso to S. 167(2) of the Code prescribing the outer limit within which the investigation must be completed. The proviso to sub-section (2) fixes the outer limit within which the investigation must be completed and in case the same is not completed within the said prescribed period, the accused would acquire a right to seek to be released on bail and if he is prepared to and does furnish bail, the Magistrate shall release him on bail and such release shall be deemed to be grant of bail under Chapter XXXIII of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Hitendra Vishnu Thakur v. State of Maharashtra, (1994) 4 SCC 602: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1087: AIR 1994 SC 2623.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-7-1994]

(3) Remand to custody up to and beyond 15 days — S. 167(2) and proviso thereto and S. 167(2-A) (contd.)

[1887] — S. 167(2) — Remand to police custody — Temporal limits — Any remand to police custody including second remand application, held, can be made only within first 15 days after the arrest and not thereafter (Paras 16 and 12). Devender Kumar v. State of Haryana, (2010) 6 SCC 753.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision : 5-5-2010]

CBI v. Anupam J. Kulkarni, (1992) 3 SCC 141: 1992 SCC (Cri) 554, followed

[1888] — Ss. 167(2) and (2-A) — Total period of remand to police or judicial custody shall initially be 15 days by a single order or several orders of Judicial Magistrate or 7 days by order/orders of Executive Magistrate, as the case may be — Period of remand ordered by Executive Magistrate shall be deducted in computing total period of custody — First period of detention shall be computed from the date of order of remand — After expiry of the period of first 15 days of custody, further remand for 90/60 days under proviso to sub-s. (2) shall only be to judicial custody — But in connection with a different offence alleged against the same accused in any other case there can again be an order of remand to police custody — If investigation remain incomplete even after expiry of 90/60 days of custody, accused shall be released on bail

Section 167 is supplementary to S. 57. The investigation should be completed in the first instance within 24 hours; if not the arrested person should be brought by the police before a Magistrate as provided under S. 167. While doing so, the police should also transmit a copy of the entries in the diary relating to the case which is meant to afford to the Magistrate the necessary information upon which he can take the decision whether the accused should be detained in the custody further or not. Even at this stage the Magistrate can release him on bail if an application is made and if he is satisfied that there are no grounds to remand him to custody but if he is satisfied that further remand is necessary then he should act as provided under S. 167.

The Judicial Magistrate can in the first instance authorise the detention of the accused in either police or judicial custody from time to time but the total period of detention cannot exceed fifteen days in the whole. Within this period of fifteen days there can be more than one order changing the nature of such custody either from police to judicial or vice-versa.

If the arrested accused is produced before Executive Magistrate having judicial powers where Judicial Magistrate is not available, the Executive Magistrate is empowered to authorise the detention in such custody either police or judicial only for a week, in the same manner namely by one or more orders but after one week he should transmit him to the nearest Judicial Magistrate along with the records. When the arrested accused is so transmitted the Judicial Magistrate, for the remaining period, that is to say excluding one week or the number of days of detention ordered by the Executive Magistrate, the Judicial Magistrate, may authorise further detention within that period of first fifteen days to such custody either police or judicial.

On a combined reading of Ss. 167(2) and (2-A) it emerges that the Judicial Magistrate to whom the Executive Magistrate has forwarded the arrested accused can order detention in such custody namely police custody or judicial custody under S. 167(2) for the rest of the first fifteen days after deducting the period of detention ordered by the Executive Magistrate. The detention thereafter could only be in judicial custody.

Likewise the remand under S. 309 CrPC can be only to judicial custody in terms mentioned therein. Section 309 comes into operation after taking cognizance and not during the period of investigation and the remand under this provision can only be to judicial custody and there cannot be any controversy about the same.

After the expiry of the first period of fifteen days the further remand during the period of investigation can only be in judicial custody. Police custody if found necessary can be ordered only during the first period of fifteen days. If a further interrogation is necessary after the expiry of the period of first fifteen days there is no bar for interrogating the accused who is in judicial custody during the periods of 90 days or 60 days. The detention in police custody is generally disfavoured by law. The whole scheme underlying S. 167 is intended to limit the period of police custody in order to protect the accused from the methods which may be adopted by some overzealous and unscrupulous police officers.

There cannot be any detention in the police custody after the expiry of first fifteen days even in a case where some more offences either serious or otherwise committed by him in the same transaction come to light at a later stage. But this bar does not apply if the same arrested accused is involved in a different case arising out of a different transaction. Even if he is in judicial custody in connection with the investigation of the earlier case he can formally be arrested regarding his involvement in the different case and associate him with the investigation of that other case and the Magistrate can act as provided under S. 167(2) and the proviso and can remand him to such custody as mentioned therein during the first period of fifteen days and thereafter in accordance with the proviso as discussed above.

If the investigation is not completed within the period of ninety days or sixty days as provided under the proviso to sub-section (2) of S. 167 then the accused has to be released on bail as provided under the proviso to S. 167(2).

The period of ninety days or sixty days has to be computed from the date of detention as per the orders of the Magistrate and not from the date of arrest by the police. Consequently the first period of fifteen days mentioned in S. 167(2) has to be computed from the date of such detention and after the expiry of the period of first fifteen days it should be only judicial custody. CBI v. Anupam J. Kulkarni, (1992) 3 SCC 141: 1992 SCC (Cri) 554: AIR 1992 SC 1768: 1992 Cri LJ 2768: (1992) 2 An WR 15 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-1992]

Natabar Parida v. State of Orissa, (1975) 2 SCC 220: 1975 SCC (Cri) 484; Chaganti Satyanarayana v. State of A.P., (1986) 3 SCC 141: 1986 SCC (Cri) 321, relied on

State (Delhi Admn.) v. Dharam Pal, 1982 Cri LJ 1103: (1982) 21 DLT 50: 1982 Chand Cri C (Del) 114; State (Delhi Admn.) v. Ravinder Kumar Bhatnagar, 1982 Cri LJ 2366: (1982) 84 Punj LR (D) 114: (1982) 21 DLT 442; State of Kerala v. Sadanadan, 1984 KLT 747; S. Harsimran Singh v. State of Punjab, 1984 Cri LJ 253: ILR (1984) 2 P&H 139, approved

Gian Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), 1981 Cri LJ 100: (1981) 19 DLT 168: (1981) 83 Punj LR (D) 85; Trilochan Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), 1981 Cri LJ 1773: 1981 Rajdhani LR 635, overruled

State v. Mehar Chand, (1969) 5 DLT 179, distinguished

[1889] — Ss. 167(2), proviso (a)(i)&(ii), 57 and 309 — Total period of 90 days or 60 days prescribed in sub-clauses (i) and (ii) of proviso (a) to be computed from the date of remand of the accused and not from the date of his arrest under S. 57 — Remand to police custody cannot be beyond the period of 15 days — Further remand must be to judicial custody

Construing proviso (a) either in conjunction with sub-section (2) of S. 167 or as an independent paragraph, it is clear that the total period of 90 days under Cl. (i) and the total period of 60 days under Cl. (ii) have to be calculated only from the date of remand and not from the date of arrest.

The earlier period when the accused is in the custody of a police officer in exercise of his powers under S. 57 cannot constitute detention pursuant to an authorisation issued by the magistrate. The powers of remand given to a magistrate become exercisable only after an accused is produced before him in terms of S. 167(1).

Further, if an accused were to contend that he was taken into custody more than 24 hours before his production before the magistrate and the police officer refutes the statement, the magistrate will have to indulge in a fact-finding inquiry to determine when exactly the accused was arrested and from what point of time the remand period of 15 days is to be reckoned. This is not contemplated or provided for in the Code.

Moreover, the magistrate will be disentitled to placing an accused in police custody for a full period of 15 days or in judicial custody for a full period of 15 days if the period of custody is to be reckoned from the date of arrest because the period of custody prior to the production of the accused will have to be excluded from the total period of 15 days.

As S. 167(2) as well as proviso (1) to S. 309(2) relate to the powers of remand of a magistrate, though under different situations, the two provisions call for a harmonious reading insofar as the periods of remand are concerned. The words"15 days in the whole" occurring in S. 167(2) would be tantamount to a period of "15 days at a time" in S. 309(2). A magistrate can, therefore, authorise the detention of the accused for a maximum period of 15 days from the date of remand and place the accused either in police custody or in judicial custody during the period of 15 days' remand. But if an accused is remanded to police custody the maximum period during which he can be placed in police custody is only 15 days. Beyond that period no magistrate can authorise the detention of the accused in police custody. Where an accused is placed in police custody for the maximum period of 15 days allowed under law either pursuant to a single order of remand or to more than one order, when the remand is restricted on each occasion to a lesser number of days, further detention of the accused, if warranted, has to be necessarily to judicial custody and not otherwise.

Where the person arrested under S. 57 on the previous day is produced before an Executive Magistrate next day within 24 hours and remand is obtained for 7 days under S. 167(2-A), the Judicial Magistrate is obliged to take into consideration only the period of detention actually undergone by the accused pursuant to the orders of remand passed by the Executive Magistrate. There cannot be different modes of computation of the period of remand depending upon whether the accused person is forwarded to a Judicial Magistrate or an Executive Magistrate for purposes of remand.

(3) Remand to custody up to and beyond 15 days — S. 167(2) and proviso thereto and S. 167(2-A) (contd.)

Furthermore, the legislature has consciously referred to the date of arrest in S. 167(5) but has made no such reference in S. 167(2) or proviso (a) thereto.

The substitution of the words 'under this paragraph' for the words 'under this section' in proviso (a) to S. 167(2) by the Amending Act 45 of 1978 indicates that the words occurring in proviso (a) should be construed within the frame-work of the proviso itself without any reference to S. 167(2). That being so the period of 90 days or 60 days as the case may be, will commence running only from the date of remand and not from any anterior date in spite of the fact that the accused may have been taken into custody earlier by a police officer and deprived of his liberty.

The historical background of the proviso to S. 167(2) shows that the proviso has been enacted to not only safeguard the liberty of the citizens but also to safeguard the interests of the State or in other words the public. Chaganti Satyanarayana v. State of A.P., (1986) 3 SCC 141: 1986 SCC (Cri) 321: AIR 1986 SC 2130.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-1986]

Fakira Naik v. State of Orissa 1983, Cri LJ 1336 (Cri), overruled

[1890] — S. 167(2) — Person held in judicial custody can, if circumstances justify, be transferred to police custody or vice versa within the period referred to in S. 167(2) CrPC — In the circumstances of the case it cannot be said that grounds for police custody did not exist — Order for change of custody upheld with a condition that counsel of the accused would be entitled to visit the place of detention twice a day and if discovers evidence of maltreatment he shall be entitled to require the District Medical Officer to examine the accused and make a report — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987 — S. 20(4). Kosanapu Ramreddy v. State of A.P., AIR 1994 SC 1447.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.N. Venkatachaliah, P.B. Sawant and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-7-1992]

[1891] — S. 167(2) proviso (a) — Applicability to offence under S. 304-B IPC — Held, in a case involving offence under S. 304-B IPC, period of remand would be 90 days under cl. (i) and not 60 days under cl. (ii) of the proviso — S. 304-B(2) IPC provides for minimum punishment of 7 years and maximum punishment of imprisonment for life and it is for the court to decide what would be the adequate punishment in facts and circumstances of the case — It can impose punishment of imprisonment for life as well and merely because minimum sentence is provided, it does not mean that only that is imposable — Word "punishable" in proviso (a)(i) means liable to be punished or may be punished and not must be punished

The first information report was lodged by the respondent against the appellants on the allegation of commission of murder of wife of Appellant 1. Appellants 1 and 2 were arrested on 5-8-2004 while Appellant 3 was arrested on 7-8-2004 for alleged commission of offence under Section 304-B IPC. The challan was filed on 30-10-2004 and the trial court passed an order to the effect that the Ahlmad was to check and report. The Ahlmad examined the challan and noted: "Challan checked and found that negatives of the three photographs are not attached therewith." The negatives were filed on 1-11-2004 and it was indicated that "challan checked, found correct".

A prayer for bail was made before Judicial Magistrate on 4-11-2004 on the ground that since challan was not filed in time they were entitled to bail in terms of Section 167(2) proviso (a)(ii) CrPC. The Magistrate rejected the application stating that the challan was presented in the court prior to the completion of 90 days and, therefore, it was presented within the prescribed period. The order was challenged before the Sessions Judge who granted bail, holding that in relation to Section 304-B IPC period of 60 days of remand and not 90 days of remand would be applicable for the purpose of Section 167(2)(a)(ii). The High Court in revision petition filed by the respondent held that the period during which the challan had to be filed was 90 days under proviso (a)(i) and not 60 days under proviso (a)(ii) to Section 167(2) CrPC. Therefore, the order granting bail was set aside.

Two questions arose for consideration before the Supreme Court in appeal:

(a) In a case involving offence punishable under Section 304-B, is the period for filing challan 90 days or 60 days?

(b) Does mere filing of challan without relevant documents satisfy the requirement of filing the challan within a stipulated period for the purpose of Section 167(2)(a)?

There is no dispute that all the relevant documents were before the court before expiry of 90 days. In case it is held that the period is 90 days and not 60 days in relation to an offence punishable under Section 304-B IPC, the second question would become academic so far as the facts of the present case are concerned.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The question is whether Section 304-B is an offence "punishable" with imprisonment for life. Under Section 304-B IPC the minimum sentence is 7 years but in a given case sentence of imprisonment for life can be awarded. Put differently, sentence of imprisonment for life can be awarded in respect of an offence punishable under Section 304-B IPC. The range varies between 7 years and imprisonment for life. Where minimum and maximum sentences are prescribed, both are imposable depending on the facts of the cases. What should be the adequate punishment in a given case has to be decided by the court on the basis of the facts and circumstances involved in the particular case. The stage of imposing a sentence comes only after recording the order of conviction of the accused person. The significant word in the proviso is "punishable". The word "punishable" as used in statutes which declare that certain offences are punishable in a certain way means liable to be punished in the way designated. It is ordinarily defined as deserving of or capable or liable to punishment, capable of being punished by law or right, may be punished or liable to be punished, and not must be punished. It cannot, therefore, be accepted that only the minimum sentence is imposable and not the maximum sentence. Merely because minimum sentence is provided that does not mean that the sentence imposable is only the minimum sentence. The High Court's view in the impugned order that permissible period of filing of challan is 90 days is the correct view. (Paras 11 and 15). Bhupinder Singh v. Jarnail Singh, (2006) 6 SCC 277: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 101: AIR 2006 SC 2622: (2006) 4 KLT 460.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-7-2006]

Rajeev Chaudhary v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2001) 5 SCC 34: 2001 SCC (Cri) 819; Sunil Kumar v. State of Jharkhand, (2003) 2 Rec Cri R 135: 2002 Cri LJ 2507 (Jhar), overruled

Keshav Dev v. State of Rajasthan, 2005 Cri LJ 3306 (Raj); State of H.P. v. Lal Singh, 2003 Cri LJ 1668 (HP); Kuldeep Singh v. State of Punjab, (2005) 3 RCR 599 (P&H), approved

Sube Singh v. State of Haryana, (1989) 1 SCC 235: 1989 SCC (Cri) 101, relied on

[1892] — S. 167(2) proviso (a)(i) — Expression — "Imprisonment for a term of not less than ten years" — Meaning — Held, covers offences punishable with imprisonment for a clear period of 10 years or more — Hence, offence under S. 386 IPC, being punishable with imprisonment for less than ten years, proviso (a)(i) to S. 167(2) would not apply to such offence — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 386

The appellant was arrested in connection with an offence punishable under Sections 386, 506 and 120-B IPC. He was produced before the Metropolitan Magistrate and was released on bail by the Magistrate on the ground that charge-sheet was not submitted within 60 days as provided under Section 167(2) CrPC. That order was challenged before the Sessions Court by filing revision. The revision was allowed. The Additional Sessions Judge held that for an offence under Section 386 IPC, period of sentence could be up to 10 years' RI. Hence, clause (i) of proviso (a) to Section 167(2) would be applicable. But the High Court set aside the order passed by the Additional Sessions Judge.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

From the relevant part of Section 167 CrPC it is apparent that in cases where offence is punishable with imprisonment for 10 years or more, the accused could be detained up to a period of 90 days. In this context, the expression "not less than" would mean imprisonment should be 10 years or more and would cover only those offences for which punishment could be imprisonment for a clear period of 10 years or more. Under Section 386 punishment provided is imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to 10 years and also fine. That means, imprisonment can be for a clear period of 10 years or less. Hence, it could not be said that minimum sentence would be 10 years or more. Further, in context also if clause (i) of proviso (a) to Section 167(2) is considered, it would be applicable in case where investigation relates to an offence punishable (1) with death; (2) imprisonment for life; and (3) imprisonment for a term of not less than ten years. It would not cover the offence for which punishment could be imprisonment for less than 10 years. Under Section 386 IPC, imprisonment can vary from minimum to maximum of 10 years and it cannot be said that imprisonment prescribed is not less than 10 years. (Para 6). Rajeev Chaudhary v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2001) 5 SCC 34: 2001 SCC (Cri) 819: AIR 2001 SC 2369: 2001 Cri LJ 2941.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-5-2001]

Rajeev Chaudhary v. State, (2000) 86 DLT 203, affirmed

[1893] — S. 167(2) proviso (a) — After expiry of period of 15 days of police remand, order for police remand for a further period of 7 days, held, violated S. 167 (Para 5). Budh Singh v. State of Punjab, (2000) 9 SCC 266.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-4-2000]

CBI v. Anupam J. Kulkarni, (1992) 3 SCC 141: 1992 SCC (Cri) 554, followed

(3) Remand to custody up to and beyond 15 days — S. 167(2) and proviso thereto and S. 167(2-A) (contd.)

[1894] — Ss. 167 proviso (a) (as stood prior to 1978 amendment) 170 and 437 — Further detention beyond 60 days from the date of arrest of the accused, held, by itself not illegal or void — If charge-sheet is not submitted by police to the Magistrate within 60 days, held, accused would be entitled to be released on bail, notwithstanding anything to the contrary in S. 437(1) — But if the accused does not apply to the Magistrate for release on bail on the expiry of 60 days from the date of his arrest, his continued detention would not be illegal. State of U.P. v. Lakshmi Brahman, (1983) 2 SCC 372: 1983 SCC (Cri) 489: AIR 1983 SC 439: 1983 Cri LJ 839: 1983 ALJ 419.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.A. Desai and R.B. Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-1983]

(4) Duties of remanding Magistrate

See also under Section 167, '(7) S. 167(5) as amended in State of W.B.', below

[1895] — S. 167 — Injury sustained by under trial prisoner — Forwarding report sent by Police Officer-in-Charge referring to the injuries — Held, Judicial Magistrate must enquire into the matter and should not mechanically sign the order of remand even if the injured accused is not physically produced before the magistrate. Khatri (II) v. State of Bihar, (1981) 1 SCC 627: 1981 SCC (Cri) 228: AIR 1981 SC 928.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and A.P. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-12-1980]

[1896] — S. 167(2) — Remand orders should be passed by Magistrate on proper application of mind and not mechanically. State of U.P. v. Ram Sagar Yadav, (1985) 1 SCC 552: 1985 SCC (Cri) 127: AIR 1985 SC 416.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and A.N. Sen, J. [Date of decision: 22-1-1985]

[1897] — Ss. 167, 56 and 57 — Order of remand to police custody obtained from Magistrate at his residence after office hours without producing the accused — Passing of remand order in such casual manner shows lack of any sense of responsibility or possible collusion with police. Bhim Singh v. State of J&K, (1985) 4 SCC 677: 1986 SCC (Cri) 47: AIR 1986 SC 494.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: O. Chinnappa Reddy and V. Khalid, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-11-1985]

[1898] — S. 167(2) — Undertrial prisoners — Petitioners imprisoned for more than seven years without any investigation and laying any charge-sheet — Magistrates mechanically authorising repeated detentions — Held, Art. 21, as also S. 167(2), CrPC violated — Authorities directed to release the petitioners forthwith on their own bond without sureties, subject to the legal proceedings that State may take if warranted. Mantoo Majumdar v. State of Bihar, (1980) 2 SCC 406: 1980 SCC (Cri) 504: AIR 1980 SC 847: 1980 Cri LJ 546: 1980 BLJR 577.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer, A.C. Gupta and R.S. Pathak, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-2-1980]

(5) Rights of undertrials/Right to bail under S. 167(2) proviso and Expln. I thereto

See also under Section 167, '(6) Remand to custody before and after charge-sheet/cognizance — Ss. 167 and 309', below

See also under CrPC, 1973 Ss. 437 and 439 pp. 430 et seq. in Vol. 2

[1899] — S. 167(2) proviso — Bail-on-default — Object

Per Ahmadi, J.

The provisions of the Code, in particular Ss. 57 and 167, manifest the legislative anxiety that once a person's liberty has been interfered with by the police arresting him without a court's order or a warrant, the investigation must be carried out with utmost urgency and completed within the maximum period allowed by the proviso (a) to S. 167(2) of the Code. The legislative object was to ensure speedy investigation after a person has been taken in custody. It expects that the investigation should be completed within 24 hours and if this is not possible within 15 days and failing that within the time stipulated in clause (a) of the proviso to S. 167(2) of the Code. The law expects that the investigation must be completed with dispatch and the role of the Magistrate is to oversee the course of investigation and to prevent abuse of the law by the investigating agency. The said proviso was introduced in the Code by way of enlargement of time for which the arrested accused could be kept in custody. Therefore, the prosecuting agency must realise that if it fails to show a sense of urgency in the investigation of the case and omits or defaults to file a charge-sheet within the time prescribed, the accused would be entitled to be released on bail and the order passed to that effect under S. 167(2) would be an order under S. 437(1) or (2) or S. 439(1) of the Code.

Per Ramaswamy, J. (concurring)

The purpose of the proviso to S. 167(2) read with Chapter XXXIII of the Code is to impress upon the need for expeditious completion of the investigation by the police officer within the prescribed limitation and to prevent laxity in that behalf. On its default the Magistrate shall release the accused on bail if the accused is ready and does furnish the bail. At the same time during investigation or trial the power of the court to have the bail cancelled and have the accused taken into custody are preserved. Aslam Babalal Desai v. State of Maharashtra, (1992) 4 SCC 272: 1992 SCC (Cri) 870: AIR 1993 SC 1.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi[1], M.M. Punchhi[2] and K. Ramaswamy[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 15-9-1992]

[1900] — S. 167(2) proviso — Delay beyond the period specified in cl. (a) of the proviso in completion of investigation — Grant of bail to accused — Object, scope and effect of the proviso — Held, per majority, accused has an indefeasible right to be released on bail when investigation is not complete within the specified period — In order to avail of such right, accused is only required to file an application before the Magistrate seeking release on bail alleging that no challan has been filed within the period prescribed and he is prepared to offer bail on being directed by the Magistrate — Expression "if not already availed of" used by Supreme Court in Sanjay Dutt case, has to be understood in this manner — Magistrate has to dispose of such application forthwith and on being satisfied that the accused has been in custody for the specified period, that no charge-sheet has been filed and that accused is prepared to furnish bail, Magistrate is obliged to grant bail even if after filing of the application by accused, a charge-sheet had been filed — Therefore, where accused's application is erroneously rejected by Magistrate and accused then moves the higher forum but during pendency of the matter before that forum a charge-sheet is filed, accused's indefeasible right is not affected — In case, however, accused fails to furnish the bail as directed by the Magistrate, his right to be released on bail would be extinguished — Per Agrawal, J. (dissenting), though accused's right to be released on bail on default of completing investigation within the specified period is a valuable right, but this right is subject to the condition that the accused is not only prepared to but also "does furnish" the bail and vide Expln. I he "shall be detained in custody so long as he does not furnish bail" — Hence in order to avail of this right, mere filing of application for bail expressing willingness to furnish bail bond is not enough but the stage for actual furnishing of bail bond must reach — If challan is filed before that, accused's right would be extinguished — In that case question of grant of bail can be considered only with reference to merits of the case under the relevant provisions relating grant of bail after filing of challan — Where, however, court concerned adopts dilatory tactics to defeat the right of the accused, it is open to him to immediately move the superior court for appropriate direction — Maharashtra Protection of Interest of Depositors (in Financial Establishments) Act, 1999 (16 of 2000) — Applicability of S. 167(2) CrPC

The accused after surrendering himself in the court was remanded to judicial custody by order of the Magistrate on 17-6-2000. A case had been instituted against him under Sections 406 and 420 IPC r/w Maharashtra Protection of Interest of Depositors (in Financial Establishment)s Act, 1999. The period of 60 days for filing of charge-sheet was completed on 16-8-2000. On the next day i.e. 17-8-2000, an application for being released on bail was filed before the Magistrate alleging that non-filing of challan within 60 days entitled the accused to be released on bail under proviso to Section 167(2) CrPC. The Magistrate rejected the prayer on the same day on the conclusion that Section 167(2) CrPC had no application to cases pertaining to the MPID Act. The accused, therefore, preferred a criminal application before the Bombay High Court. A Single Judge after hearing the contentions, referred the matter to the Division Bench on 23-8-2000 and the matter was listed before a Division Bench on 29-8-2000. On that date the Division Bench adjourned the matter for argument to 31-8-2000 and in the meanwhile a charge-sheet was filed before the trial Judge on 30-8-2000. The Division Bench held that an accused arrested for commission of an offence under Section 3 of the MPID Act is entitled to claim release on bail on expiry of total period specified in Section 167 if the challan is not filed within that period. However, the High Court ultimately refused to grant relief on the ground that by the time the application for bail before the Division Bench came to be considered on 31-8-2000, a charge-sheet had been filed before the Magistrate on 30-8-2000 and, therefore, the so-called enforceable right did not survive or remain enforceable. Allowing the appeal (by majority),

Held :

Per majority

Section 167 is in fact supplementary to Section 57, in consonance with the principle that the accused is entitled to demand that justice is not delayed. The object of requiring the accused to be produced before a Magistrate is to enable the Magistrate to see that remand is necessary and also to enable the accused to make a representation which he may wish to make. The power under Section 167 is given to detain a person in custody while the police goes on with the investigation and before the Magistrate starts the enquiry. Section 167, therefore, authorises the Magistrate to permit detention of an accused in custody and prescribes the maximum period for which such detention could be ordered. Under sub-section (2) of Section 167, a Magistrate before whom an accused is produced while the police is investigating into the offence can authorise detention of the accused in such custody as the Magistrate thinks fit for a term not exceeding 15 days on the whole. (Paras 5 and 13)

(5) Rights of undertrials/Right to bail under S. 167(2) proviso and Expln. I thereto (contd.)

Having prescribed the maximum period what would be the consequences thereafter has been indicated in the proviso to sub-section (2) of Section 167. On the expiry of the said period of 90 days or 60 days, as the case may be, an indefeasible right accrues in favour of the accused for being released on bail on account of default by the investigating agency in the completion of the investigation within the period prescribed and the accused is entitled to be released on bail, if he is prepared to and does furnish the bail as directed by the Magistrate. The proviso is unambiguous and clear and stipulates that the accused shall be released on bail if he is prepared to and does furnish the bail which has been termed by judicial pronouncement to be "compulsive bail" and such bail would be deemed to be a bail under Chapter 33. The proviso to sub-section (2) of Section 167 is a beneficial provision for curing the mischief of indefinitely prolonging the investigation and thereby affecting the liberty of a citizen. (Paras 13 and 5)

Even though a Magistrate does not possess any jurisdiction to refuse the bail when no charge-sheet is filed after expiry of the period stipulated under the proviso to sub-section (2) of Section 167 and even though the accused may be prepared to furnish the bail required, but such furnishing of bail has to be in accordance with the order passed by the Magistrate. In other words, without an order of the Magistrate the legislative mandate engrafted in the proviso to sub-section (2) of Section 167 cannot be given effect to. Necessarily, therefore, an order of the court has to be passed. (Paras 6 and 13)

If, however, the accused is unable to furnish the bail as directed by the Magistrate, then on a conjoint reading of Explanation I and the proviso to sub-section (2) of Section 167, the continued custody of the accused even beyond the specified period in para (a) will not be unauthorised, and therefore, if during that period the investigation is complete and the charge-sheet is filed then the so-called indefeasible right of the accused would stand extinguished. (Para 13)

The indefeasible right of the accused does not survive or remain enforceable on the challan being filed, if already not availed of, as has been held by the Constitution Bench of the Supreme Court in Sanjay Dutt case. The expression "if not already availed of" used in Sanjay Dutt case must be understood to mean when the accused files an application and is prepared to offer bail on being directed. In other words, on expiry of the period specified in para (a) of the proviso to sub-section (2) of Section 167 if the accused files an application for bail, alleging that no challan has been filed and he is prepared to offer the bail that is ordered, and it is found as a fact that no challan has been filed within the period prescribed from the date of the arrest of the accused, then it has to be held that the accused has availed of his indefeasible right even though the court has not considered the said application and has not indicated the terms and conditions of bail and the accused has not furnished the same. With the aforesaid interpretation of the expression "availed of", if the charge-sheet is filed subsequent to the availing of the indefeasible right by the accused then that right would not stand frustrated or extinguished. Necessarily therefore, if an accused entitled to be released on bail by application of the proviso to sub-section (2) of Section 167, makes the application before the Magistrate, but the Magistrate erroneously refuses the same and rejects the application and then the accused moves the higher forum and while the matter remains pending before the higher forum for consideration, a charge-sheet is filed, the so-called indefeasible right of the accused would not stand extinguished thereby and on the other hand, the accused has to be released on bail. (Para 13)

When an application for bail is filed by an accused for enforcement of his indefeasible right alleged to have been accrued in his favour on account of default on the part of the investigating agency in completion of the investigation within the specified period, the Magistrate/court must dispose of it forthwith, on being satisfied that in fact the accused has been in custody for the period of 90 days or 60 days, as specified and no charge-sheet has been filed by the investigating agency. Such prompt action on the part of the Magistrate/court will not enable the prosecution to frustrate the object of the Act and the legislative mandate of an accused being released on bail on account of the default on the part of the investigating agency in completing the investigation within the period stipulated. (Para 13)

This is the only way how a balance can be struck between the so-called indefeasible right of the accused on failure on the part of the prosecution to file a challan within the specified period and the interest of the society, at large, in lawfully preventing an accused from being released on bail on account of inaction on the part of the prosecuting agency. Such interpretation would subserve the purpose and the object for which the provision in question was brought on to the statute-book. Since the legislature has given its mandate it would be the bounden duty of the court to enforce the same and it would not be in the interest of justice to negate the same by interpreting the expression "if not availed of" in a manner which is capable of being abused by the prosecution. Accused persons in several serious cases would get themselves released on bail, but that is what the law permits, and that is what the legislature wanted and an indefeasible right to an accused flowing from any legislative provision ought not to be defeated by a court by giving a strained interpretation of the provisions of the Act. (Para 13)

Personal liberty is one of the cherished objects of the Indian Constitution and deprivation of the same can only be in accordance with law and in conformity with the provisions thereof, as stipulated under Article 21 of the Constitution. When the law provides that the Magistrate could authorise the detention of the accused in custody up to a maximum period as indicated in the proviso to sub-section (2) of Section 167, any further detention beyond the period without filing of a challan by the investigating agency would be a subterfuge and would not be in accordance with law and in conformity with the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code, and as such, could be violative of Article 21. (Para 13)

Such an accused, who thus is entitled to be released on bail in enforcement of his indefeasible right will, however, have to be produced before the Magistrate on a charge-sheet being filed in accordance with Section 209 and the Magistrate must deal with him in the matter of remand to custody subject to the provisions of the Code relating to bail and subject to the provisions of cancellation of bail, already granted in accordance with the law laid down by this Court in the case of Mohd. Iqbal v. State of Maharashtra. (Para 13)

Per Agrawal, J. (dissenting)

Framers of the Code conceived and desired that after expiry of the period prescribed in the proviso to Section 167(2) CrPC, an accused has to be released on bail if no challan is filed because after the expiry of the statutory period prescribed therein, there is no power in the Magistrate to remand for further custody. But the same proviso prescribes in clause (a)(ii) that "the accused person shall be released on bail if he is prepared to and does furnish bail". To be released on bail because of the default in submission of challan within the statutory period is a valuable right of the accused, but the framers of the Code have prescribed a condition in that very proviso referred to above that this right to be released on bail can be exercised only on furnishing of bail. Clause (a)(ii) of the proviso to Section 167(2) not only says that the accused "is prepared to", but also says that the "accused does furnish bail" and Explanation I to Section 167(2) clearly mandates that "notwithstanding the expiry of the period specified in paragraph (a), the accused shall be detained in custody so long as he does not furnish bail". It cannot be conceived that if the accused is prepared to furnish bail but does not furnish the same, even in that eventuality the court concerned shall direct his release from custody only on the ground that the statutory period of filing the challan has expired. Therefore, for release from custody both the conditions aforesaid, read with the Explanation referred to above, must be fulfilled. (Para 20)

It is true that the right of an accused to be released on bail for default in submission of a challan is a valuable and indefeasible right, but by the time the court is considering the exercise of the said right if a challan is filed then the question of grant of bail has to be considered only with reference to merits of the case under the provisions of the Code relating to grant of bail after filing of the challan. (Para 28)

The right accruing under the proviso to Section 167(2) of the Code on the expiry of the statutory period of sixty days cannot be said to have been availed of by mere making of an application for bail expressing therein willingness to furnish bail, but on furnishing bail bond as required under clause (a)(ii) of the proviso read with Explanation I to Section 167(2). The stage for actual furnishing of bail bond must reach. If the challan is filed before that, then there is no question of enforcing the right, howsoever valuable or indefeasible it may be, after filing of the challan because thereafter the right under default clause cannot be exercised. If because of any bona fide view or procedure adopted by the court concerned some delay is caused and in the meantime the challan is filed, the court has no power to direct release under the proviso to Section 167(2). (Paras 31 and 30)

In case the court concerned has adopted any dilatory tactics or an attitude to defeat the right of the accused to be released on bail on the ground of default, the accused should immediately move the superior court for appropriate direction. But if the delay is bona fide and unintentional and in the meantime challan is filed then in view of the aforesaid judgments of this Court, such a petition has to be dismissed and it cannot be said that the accused has already availed of the right accruing under the proviso to Section 167 of the Code. (Para 31)

(5) Rights of undertrials/Right to bail under S. 167(2) proviso and Expln. I thereto (contd.)

When the writ petition filed either under Article 32 or Article 226 of the Constitution, as the case may be, for issuance of a writ of habeas corpus on the ground that the accused was under custody without a valid order of remand has to be dismissed if during the pendency of such a petition a valid order of remand has been passed by the court concerned, then the right of an accused claiming relief on the ground that he has a statutory right under the proviso to Section 167(2) cannot be put on a higher footing than the constitutional right. (Para 24)

The present case, where the prosecution was for an offence under the MPID Act, being a case of first impression, the court concerned was of the bona fide opinion that the provisions of Section 167(2) of the Code were not applicable. That view of the Special Judge was reversed by the High Court, but before it could fully apply its mind, the challan was filed. In this background, I am clearly of the opinion that the right of the accused to be enlarged on bail under the proviso to Section 167(2) of the Code cannot be said to have been "availed of" in the present case. Therefore, the High Court has not committed any error in passing the impugned order so as to be interfered with by the Supreme Court. (Paras 32 and 33). Uday Mohanlal Acharya v. State of Maharashtra, (2001) 5 SCC 453: 2001 SCC (Cri) 760: AIR 2001 SC 1910: 2001 Cri LJ 1832.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik[1], U.C. Banerjee and B.N. Agrawal[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 29-3-2001]

Sanjay Dutt v. State through CBI, (1994) 5 SCC 410: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1433, explained and distinguished

State of M.P. v. Rustam, 1995 Supp (3) SCC 221: 1995 SCC (Cri) 830, overruled

State through CBI v. Mohd. Ashraft Bhat, (1996) 1 SCC 432: 1996 SCC (Cri) 117; Bipin Shantilal Panchal (Dr.) v. State of Gujarat, (1996) 1 SCC 718: 1996 SCC (Cri) 200; Makhan Singh Tarsikka v. State of Punjab, AIR 1952 SC 27: 1952 Cri LJ 321: 1952 SCR 368; Abdul Latif Abdul Wahab Sheikh v. B.K. Jha, (1987) 2 SCC 22: 1987 SCC (Cri) 244, distinguished

Mohd. Iqbal Madar Sheikh v. State of Maharashtra, (1996) 1 SCC 722: 1996 SCC (Cri) 202; Naranjan Singh Nathawan v. State of Punjab, AIR 1952 SC 106: 1952 Cri LJ 656: 1952 SCR 395; Ram Narayan Singh v. State of Delhi, AIR 1953 SC 277: 1953 Cri LJ 1113: 1953 SCR 652; A.K. Gopalan v. Govt. of India, AIR 1966 SC 816: 1966 Cri LJ 602: (1966) 2 SCR 427, relied on

Uday Mohanlal Acharya v. State of Maharashtra, (2001) 1 Bom CR 354 (Bom), reversed

[1901] — S. 167(2) — Undertrials, rights of — In respect of remand of prisoners to judicial custody S. 167(2) must be strictly complied with in letter and spirit — Constitution of India — Art. 21. Hussainara Khatoon (IV) v. State of Bihar, (1980) 1 SCC 98: 1980 SCC (Cri) 40: AIR 1979 SC 1369: 1979 Cri LJ 1045: 1980 MLJ (Cri) 86.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and D.A. Desai, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-3-1979]

[1902] — S. 167(2) proviso (a) — Undertrials — Remand of — Production after detention of 90 or 60 days — Duties of Magistrate — When an undertrial who has been in detention for 90 or 60 days, as the case may be, is produced before the Magistrate, held, he is bound to inform the accused that he is entitled to bail as provided by proviso (a) to S. 167(2) — Held, further, the State is bound to provide free legal aid to enable the accused to exercise that right and the Magistrate must ensure that he is so provided — Magistrate bound to follow guidelines laid down in Hussainara I — This constitutional mandate, held, binds every Magistrate and every State Government — Magistrate to apply his mind before passing remand order — Constitution of India — Art. 21. Hussainara Khatoon (V) v. State of Bihar, (1980) 1 SCC 108: 1980 SCC (Cri) 50: AIR 1979 SC 1377: 1979 Cri LJ 1052: 1980 MLJ (Cri) 93.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, O. Chinnappa Reddy and A.P. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-4-1979]

[1903] — Ss. 167(2) proviso, 309, 173 and 190 — Right to bail under S. 167(2) proviso — Non-availability of, after cognizance has been taken — Effect of investigating agency (erroneously) filing applications for remand under S. 167(2) [instead of S. 309(2)] — Held, citing of the wrong provision of law would be of no consequence if in effect and substance the orders were passed by the court in exercise of power under S. 309(2) — Irrespective of the stand of investigating agency/prosecution, the law will prevail — Laxity of investigating agency, deprecated

If a thing cannot be done directly, the same cannot be permitted to be done indirectly. If the order taking cognizance exists, irrespective of the conduct of CBI in treating the investigation to be open or filing applications for remand of the accused to police custody or judicial remand under Section 167(2) CrPC stating that the further investigation was pending, would be of no consequence if in effect and substance such orders were being passed by the court in exercise of its power under Section 309(2) CrPC. Though there are no words to deprecate the stand of CBI; and that it should have taken a clear and categorical stand in the matter, irrespective of the stand taken by CBI, the law will prevail. (Paras 30 to 32). Dinesh Dalmia v. CBI, (2007) 8 SCC 770: (2007) 59 AIC 145 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-2007]

[1904] — S. 167(2) — Bail — Entitlement to, on expiry of statutory period of detention as prescribed under proviso to S. 167(2) — Reckoning of said period of detention — Starting point for — Voluntary surrender before Judicial Magistrate in present case while in custody in another case — Effect of — Held, since the condition under S. 167 CrPC is that the accused must be in custody of police, notional surrender/so-called deemed surrender before Judicial Magistrate while in custody in another case could not be taken as starting point for computation of 15 days' period of police remand or 90 days' or 60 days' period of detention as prescribed under S. 167(2) — Custody of police as contemplated by S. 167 CrPC is police custody in a particular case and not judicial custody/detention in another case — Hence, the statutory period of detention in present case was required to be counted from the date when the accused came in custody of police subsequently — Accused already in custody in relation to certain cases at city M in one State and wanted in two more cases registered at city C in another State — Accused voluntarily surrendering before Magistrate at M in cases relating to FIR at C — Held, such notional surrender could not be treated as police custody so as to count 90 days from that notional surrender as regards cases pending at C — 90 days to be counted from the date when the accused was produced before the Magistrate at C and the said Magistrate directed custody of accused to police

The present case pertained to claim of the accused to be released on bail in terms of Section 167(2) CrPC on expiry of 90 days' period of detention as prescribed under that section. The time from which the said period of detention should be reckoned was the main issue involved herein.

A first information report was lodged against certain persons including the respondent in Calcutta. Prior to that the respondent was arrested in New Delhi by CBI in connection with some other case. Thereafter, on transit remand, the respondent was produced before the Additional Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Chennai. In the meantime, the officer investigating the present case also prayed for issuance of production warrant against the respondent before the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Calcutta. The said Magistrate allowed that prayer directing that the accused-respondent be produced before it on or before 22-2-2006. On 14-2-2006, the said order was brought to the notice of the Additional Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Chennai. The Additional Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Chennai observed that the matter of Calcutta Police would be considered after the period of CBI custody was over. On 27-2-2006 when the accused was in custody in CBI case at Chennai, he voluntarily surrendered before the Magistrate, Chennai in connection with the two cases at Calcutta. The said surrender was accepted by that Magistrate on the same date. But the said Magistrate remanded the respondent to the judicial custody till 13-3-2006.

Thereafter on 11-3-2006 the accused was handed over to Calcutta Police to be escorted to Calcutta for production before the Magistrate at Calcutta. On 13-3-2006 the accused was produced in the Court of Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Calcutta. The investigating officer of the instant case requested the said court to hand over the accused for 15 days on police remand for investigation. But the accused moved an application for bail and contended that as he had surrendered on 27-2-2006 before the Magistrate at Chennai and the period of 15 days was over and the police had not filed the challan, he should be released on bail. The said court rejected that application and took the view that the custody of the accused could not be considered unless and until he was physically produced before the court and since in the present case it was done on 13-3-2006 on the strength of the production warrant issued by it, the period of police custody was to be considered from the date of his physical production. The accused-respondent was remanded to the police custody till 28-3-2006. Against the said order, the respondent approached the High Court. The High Court took the view that the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate did not correctly approach the matter and wrongly opined that the accused did not surrender before the Metropolitan Magistrate, Chennai on 27-2-2006. However, the accused was given liberty to file an application before the said court afresh and the Magistrate was directed to consider the same in the light of the aforesaid judgment.

The accused again moved the bail application before the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Calcutta, who rejected the same holding that the statutory period of 90 days had not expired.

After the final report under Section 173(2) CrPC was submitted, another bail application was filed before the Magistrate concerned but the same was rejected holding that the court had no power to review its earlier order. Against the said order, the accused filed a revision petition before the High Court, which was allowed. The High Court took the view that the detention of the accused should be counted w.e.f. 27-2-2006 when the accused surrendered himself at Chennai and therefore 90 days' period had expired. The matter was directed to be considered again in the light of the observation made by the court. Hence, the present appeal.

(5) Rights of undertrials/Right to bail under S. 167(2) proviso and Expln. I thereto (contd.)

The accused claimed that as the challan had not been filed within the period of 90 days as prescribed under proviso to Section 167(2) CrPC, he was entitled to bail as per Section 167(2) CrPC. In this regard, the crucial question which arose for consideration before the Supreme Court was whether the detention period should be counted from 13-3-2006 when the police took the accused in custody or from 27-2-2006 when the accused surrendered before the Metropolitan Magistrate, Chennai.

Allowing the appeal by setting aside the order of the High Court,

Held :

The whole purpose of Section 167 CrPC is that the accused should not be detained for more than 24 hours and subject to 15 days' police remand and it can further be extended up to 90/60 days as the case may be. From a reading of sub-sections (1) and (2) of Section 167 CrPC with proviso it clearly transpires that the incumbent should be in fact under the detention of police for investigation. But the custody of police for investigation purpose cannot be treated as judicial custody/detention in another case. The police custody here means the police custody in a particular case for investigation and not judicial custody in another case. (Para 16)

In the present case, the accused was not arrested by the police nor was he in the police custody before 13-3-2006. The accused was very well aware that there were two cases registered against him in Calcutta for which he was required by the police, so he voluntarily surrendered before the Additional Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Chennai on 27-2-2006 when he was already in custody in relation to the CBI case. This voluntary surrender cannot be conceived to be detention under a case registered at Calcutta. Such notional surrender cannot be treated as police custody for counting the required period. A notorious criminal may have number of cases pending in various police stations in a city or outside the city. So if notional surrender in pending case for another FIR outside the city or of another police station in same city is counted then the police will not get the opportunity to get custodial investigation. The period of detention before a Magistrate cannot be treated as a device to avoid physical custody of the police and claim the benefit of proviso to sub-section (2). The condition is that the accused must be in the custody of the police and so-called deemed surrender in another criminal case cannot be taken as starting point for counting 15 days' police remand or 90 days or 60 days as the case may be. (Paras 16 and 14)

Therefore, so-called notional surrender of the accused in Chennai cannot be deemed to be a custody of the police for investigation for a case registered against the accused at Calcutta. The police custody will be treated from 13-3-2006 and not from 27-2-2006. (Paras 14 and 21). State of W.B. v. Dinesh Dalmia, (2007) 5 SCC 773: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 19: AIR 2007 SC 1801: 2007 Cri LJ 2757: (2007) 55 AIC 178 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.K. Mathur and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-4-2007]

State of Maharashtra v. Bharati Chandmal Varma, (2002) 2 SCC 121: 2002 SCC (Cri) 299; Directorate of Enforcement v. Deepak Mahajan, (1994) 3 SCC 440: 1994 SCC (Cri) 785; CBI v. Anupam J. Kulkarni, (1992) 3 SCC 141: 1992 SCC (Cri) 554, relied on

Niranjan Singh v. Prabhakar Rajaram Kharote, (1980) 2 SCC 559: 1980 SCC (Cri) 508, distinguished

[1905] — S. 167(2) — Bail — Release on bail under, deemed to be release under Ch. XXXII

A conjoint reading of S. 57 (corresponding to S. 61 of the old Code) and S. 167(1) and (2) barring the provisos to sub-section (2) of the Code together, manifestly shows that the legislature has contemplated that the investigation of the offence in case of a person arrested without a warrant should be completed in the first instance within twenty-four hours and if the investigation cannot be completed within that period, then the Magistrate can authorise the detention of the accused in such custody as he thinks fit for a term not exceeding fifteen days. The present proviso (a)(i) and (ii) of S. 167(2) empowers the Magistrate to authorise the detention of the accused person otherwise than in the custody of the police beyond the period of fifteen days. If the investigation is not completed within the prescribed period, the accused is entitled to bail as embodied in the statute itself, provided the accused person is 'prepared to and does furnish bail' and the person released on bail under S. 167(2) of the Code should be deemed to have been so released under the provisions of Chapter XXXII for the purposes of that Chapter. Directorate of Enforcement v. Deepak Mahajan, (1994) 3 SCC 440: 1994 SCC (Cri) 785: AIR 1994 SC 1775: 1994 Cri LJ 2269: (1994) 2 BLJR 912: (1994) 2 An LT(Cri) 173: (1994) 70 ELT 12.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-1994]

[1906] — S. 167(2) — Bail under — Non-filing of charge-sheet within 90 days — FIR in same offence registered at two places (one at Karnal, where arrest was made and the other at New Delhi, where offence was alleged to be committed) — 90 days expiring only with respect to the date of arrest at Karnal — Appellant-accused, after the grant of bail by ACJM, Karnal, instead of being released handed over to Delhi Police — Bail petition under S. 167(2) rejected by Magistrate and by Additional Sessions Judge, New Delhi as well as by High Court — Interference under Art. 136 not called for as the bail petition was meritless and also the charge-sheet was subsequently filed in the case registered at Delhi — Appellant allowed to apply for regular bail — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302, 201, 34 and 120-B — Constitution of India — Art. 136. Sukhjinder Singh v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2001) 8 SCC 630: 2002 SCC (Cri) 11: AIR 2001 SC 2941.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and Shivaraj V. Patil, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-10-2001]

[1907] — Ss. 167(2) & 437(5), (1) and (2) — Cancellation of bail — Release on bail under S. 167(2) should be considered as one under S. 437(1) or (2) — Held neither mere filing of challan by police subsequent to such release nor dismissal on merits of bail application before release are sufficient grounds for cancellation of the bail. Bashir v. State of Haryana, (1977) 4 SCC 410: 1977 SCC (Cri) 608: AIR 1978 SC 55: 1978 Cri LJ 173.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and P.S. Kailasam, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-10-1977]

[1908] — S. 167(2) proviso — Accused entitled to be released on bail under, not applying for bail when such right accrued — Held, he cannot exercise that right after filing of charge-sheet — However, if he exercises that right and is released on bail he cannot be rearrested on mere filing of the charge-sheet — S. 37 NDPS Act does not exclude applicability of proviso to S. 167(2) CrPC — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — S. 37

If an accused person fails to exercise his right to be released on bail for the failure of the prosecution to file the charge-sheet within the maximum time allowed by law, he cannot contend that he had an indefeasible right to exercise it at any time notwithstanding the fact that in the meantime the charge-sheet is filed. But on the other hand if he exercises the right within the time allowed by law and is released on bail under such circumstances he cannot be rearrested on the mere filing of the charge-sheet. Bipin Shantilal Panchal (Dr.) v. State of Gujarat, (1996) 1 SCC 718: 1996 SCC (Cri) 200: AIR 1996 SC 2897.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, C.J. and B.P. Jeevan Reddy and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-1-1996]

Union of India v. Thamisharasi, (1995) 4 SCC 190: 1995 SCC (Cri) 665; Sanjay Dutt v. State through CBI, (1994) 5 SCC 410: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1433; Aslam Babalal Desai v. State of Maharashtra, (1992) 4 SCC 272: 1992 SCC (Cri) 870, followed

[1909] — Ss. 167 (as stood before 1978 amendment) and 170 — Magistrate has jurisdiction to grant bail — Police investigation becomes complete as soon as charge-sheet is submitted under S. 170, unless further investigation is ordered by the Magistrate

The jurisdiction to grant bail, in case investigation is not completed within the prescribed time limit as incorporated in the provision as it then stood, vests in the Magistrate if the accused applies and is prepared to furnish bail. Section 167 envisages a stage when a suspect is arrested and the investigation is not completed within the prescribed period. The investigation would come to an end the moment charge-sheet is submitted as required under S. 170 unless the Magistrate directs further investigation. State of U.P. v. Lakshmi Brahman, (1983) 2 SCC 372: 1983 SCC (Cri) 489: AIR 1983 SC 439: 1983 Cri LJ 839: 1983 ALJ 419.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.A. Desai and R.B. Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-1983]

[1910] — S. 167(2) proviso — Compulsive bail — Computation of the period prescribed under the proviso — Held, the day on which the accused remanded to the judicial custody should be excluded and the day on which challan filed in the court should be included — Accused remanded to the judicial custody on 3-9-1993 — Challan submitted in the court on 2-12-1993 — Held, period of 90 days not expired — General Clauses Act, 1897 — Ss. 9 and 10. State of M.P. v. Rustam, 1995 Supp (3) SCC 221: 1995 SCC (Cri) 830.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-2-1995]

[1911] — S. 167(2) proviso — Grant of bail — Order of Magistrate necessary to give effect to the mandate under the proviso — Bail to be furnished in accordance with such order

Even though a Magistrate does not possess any jurisdiction to refuse the bail when no charge-sheet is filed after expiry of the period stipulated under the proviso to sub-section (2) of Section 167 and even though the accused may be prepared to furnish the bail required, but such furnishing of bail has to be in accordance with the order passed by the

(5) Rights of undertrials/Right to bail under S. 167(2) proviso and Expln. I thereto (contd.)

Magistrate. In other words, without an order of the Magistrate the legislative mandate engrafted in the proviso to sub-section (2) of Section 167 cannot be given effect to. Necessarily, therefore, an order of the court has to be passed. (Paras 6 and 13)

If, however, the accused is unable to furnish the bail as directed by the Magistrate, then on a conjoint reading of Explanation I and the proviso to sub-section (2) of Section 167, the continued custody of the accused even beyond the specified period in para (a) will not be unauthorised, and therefore, if during that period the investigation is complete and the charge-sheet is filed then the so-called indefeasible right of the accused would stand extinguished. (Para 13). Uday Mohanlal Acharya v. State of Maharashtra, (2001) 5 SCC 453: 2001 SCC (Cri) 760: AIR 2001 SC 1910: 2001 Cri LJ 1832.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik[1], U.C. Banerjee and B.N. Agrawal[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 29-3-2001]

[1912] — S. 167(2) proviso — Right to compulsive bail — Held, does not survive after filing of the challan — Court must examine the availability of right to compulsive bail on the date it is considering the question of bail and not barely on the date of presentation of the petition for bail. State of M.P. v. Rustam, 1995 Supp (3) SCC 221: 1995 SCC (Cri) 830.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-2-1995]

Overruled in (2001) 5 SCC 453, 470

[1913] — Ss. 167(2) proviso — 'Shall be deemed to be so released under the provisions of Ch. XXXIII' — Effect of

Per Ahmadi, J.

The deeming fiction of correlating the release on bail under sub-section (2) of S. 167 with Chapter XXXIII, i.e. Ss. 437 and 439 of the Code, was to treat the order as one passed under the latter provisions. Once the order of release is by fiction of law an order passed under S. 437(1) or (2) or S. 439(1) it follows as a natural consequence that the said order can be cancelled under sub-section (5) of S. 437 or sub-section (2) of S. 439 on considerations relevant for cancellation of an order thereunder.

Per Ramaswamy, J.

The fiction of law under the proviso applying the provisions in Chapter XXXIII is to serve the purpose of law, namely not only the release of the accused on taking the requisite bond and conditions to be incorporated therein as envisaged in the said Chapter, but also the power of the court to cancel the bail and to take the accused into detention for the grounds mentioned under the relevant provisions in Ss. 437(5) and 439(2) of the Code.

Per Punchhi, J.

The mere circumstance that S. 167(2) ordains that every person released on bail under sub-section (2) shall be deemed to be so released under the provisions of Chapter XXXIII for the purposes of that Chapter does not ipso facto mean that the bail order assumes the content and character of bail orders on merit, of the kind conceived of in sub-sections (1) and (2) of S. 437 or sub-section (1) of S. 439 of the Code. The deeming requirement of S. 167(2) puts the release on bail of such person as if under the provisions of Chapter XXXIII but only for the purposes of that Chapter. By this fiction the provision is to be read as a part of Chapter XXXIII so that it invites the purposes of that chapter such as filling of bonds, provision of sureties etc., as also permitting cancellation of bail. It is on the thrust of such inclusion that cancellation under S. 437(5) can be attempted as if fictionally the bail order had been passed under sub-sections (1) and (2) of S. 437 but not on considerations as if the bail order was on merit. Fiction of this kind cannot be permitted to go to the length of converting an order of bail not on merit as if passed on merit. Aslam Babalal Desai v. State of Maharashtra, (1992) 4 SCC 272: 1992 SCC (Cri) 870: AIR 1993 SC 1.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi[1], M.M. Punchhi[2] and K. Ramaswamy[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 15-9-1992]

[1914] — Ss. 167(2) proviso, 437 and 439 — Bail-on-default under proviso to S. 167(2) if different from bail granted on merits under S. 437 or S. 439

Per Ahmadi, J.

It is wrong to think that bail secured by virtue of the proviso (a) to S. 167 is an undeserved one as to so think is to doubt the legislative wisdom in prescribing the outer limit for filing the charge-sheet and to ignore the legislative history.

Per Punchhi, J. (dissenting)

When a decision of bail already made on merit, after due deliberation, is required to be reviewed on prayer for cancellation of bail, it would require the exercise to be undertaken with the necessary care and circumspection. The power of the High Court or Court of Session to cancel bail is exercisable vis-à-vis an order passed by the High Court or the Court of Session under sub-section (1) of S. 439, as the case may be, as also to an order of bail passed by a Court other than the High Court or the Court of Session under sub-sections (1) and (2) of S. 437 of the Code. Bail orders under the aforesaid provisions by the very nature are decisions on merit and if a review is attempted a strong case has to be made out so as to secure cancellation of bail. Hence the apparent distinction in the approach of the Court while granting bail and cancelling bail. This field is covered entirely by judge-made law.

The tests to be applied by courts in granting bail is by reference to many considerations, such as the nature of the accusation, the evidence in support thereof, the severity of punishment on conviction which would entail; the character, behaviour, means and standing of the accused etc. etc. But alongside is the larger interest of the State to be kept in view in granting or refusing bail. By no means are the afore-mentioned factors exhaustive. There may be other considerations which may be determinative for taking one view or the other. The Court is obligated, all the same, to strike a balance. The decision of the Court after consideration of the afore factors and others of the like conceivable results in a verdict judicial in character capable of being reviewed or altered again by a judicial exercise within judicially set out parameters.

A compulsive bail order made by a court under S. 167(2) of the Code being one not on merit, when required to be cancelled after the filing of the challan, would not involve any review of a decision made on merit. Such bail is cancellable if the court has reason to entertain the belief that the accused has committed a non-bailable offence and that it is necessary to arrest him and commit him to custody. The mere circumstance that S. 167(2) ordains that every person released on bail under sub-section (2) shall be deemed to be so released under the provisions of Chapter XXXIII for the purposes of that Chapter does not ipso facto mean that the bail order assumes the content and character of bail orders on merit, of the kind conceived of in sub-sections (1) and (2) of S. 437 or sub-section (1) of S. 439 of the Code. The deeming requirement of S. 167(2) puts the release on bail of such person as if under the provisions of Chapter XXXIII but only for the purposes of that Chapter. By this fiction the provision is to be read as a part of Chapter XXXIII so that it invites the purposes of that chapter such as filling of bonds, provision of sureties etc., as also permitting cancellation of bail. It is on the thrust of such inclusion that cancellation under S. 437(5) can be attempted as if fictionally the bail order had been passed under sub-sections (1) and (2) of S. 437 but not on considerations as if the bail order was on merit. Fiction of this kind cannot be permitted to go to the length of converting an order of bail not on merit as if passed on merit. Aslam Babalal Desai v. State of Maharashtra, (1992) 4 SCC 272: 1992 SCC (Cri) 870: AIR 1993 SC 1.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi[1], M.M. Punchhi[2] and K. Ramaswamy[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 15-9-1992]

[1915] — Ss. 167(2) proviso, 437(5), 439(2), 57 and 173 — Bail-on-default granted under proviso to S. 167(2) — Cancellation of, on challan being filed under S. 173 subsequently — Cancellation of bail by High Court under S. 439(2) on ground that investigation revealed commission of a non-bailable offence by accused and it was necessary to commit him to custody — Held (per Ahmadi, J., Ramaswamy, J. concurring, Punchhi, J. contra),High Court erred in cancelling the bail in absence of any strong ground on mere production of charge-sheet — By virtue of the deeming provision under proviso to S. 167(2), bail order passed thereunder would be one under S. 437(1) or (2) or S. 439(1) and therefore, power to cancel bail would lie under Ss. 437(5) and 439(2) which can be exercised only for special reasons and on strong prima facie evidence — (Per Ramaswamy, J.) merits of the case should be examined — (Per Punchhi, J., contra) grant of bail-on-default being not on merits, court's power is preserved to cancel the bail after filing of challan on being satisfied on merits about commission of non-bailable offence and necessity to commit accused to custody — In view of non-consideration of merits in case of compulsive bail under proviso to S. 167(2), subsequent cancellation of the bail on merits does not involve review of the earlier decision — On facts, (Per Punchhi, J.) a strong case for cancellation of bail had been made out

Per Ahmadi, J.

Once an accused is released on bail under S. 167(2) he cannot be taken back in custody merely on the filing of a charge-sheet but there must exist special reasons for so doing besides the fact that the charge-sheet reveals the commission of a non-bailable crime. The ratio of Rajnikant case to the extent it is inconsistent herewith does not, with respect, state the law correctly.

The order of release on bail under the proviso to S. 167(2) is by the deeming fiction provided therein an order passed under S. 437(1) or (2) or S. 439(1). It, therefore, follows as a natural consequence that the said order can be cancelled under S. 437(5) or S. 439(2) on considerations relevant for cancellation of an order under S. 437(1) or (2) or S. 439(1).

(5) Rights of undertrials/Right to bail under S. 167(2) proviso and Expln. I thereto (contd.)

It is wrong to think that bail secured by virtue of the proviso (a) to S. 167 is an undeserved one as to so think is to doubt the legislative wisdom in prescribing the outer limit for filing the charge-sheet and to ignore the legislative history. It would not be permissible to interfere with the legislative mandate on imaginary apprehensions, e.g., an obliging investigation officer deliberately not filing the charge-sheet in time, as such misconduct can be dealt with departmentally. Once the accused has been released on bail his liberty cannot be interfered with lightly i.e. on the ground that the prosecution has subsequently submitted a charge-sheet. Such a view would introduce a sense of complacency in the investigating agency and would destroy the very purpose of instilling a sense of urgency expected by Ss. 57 and 167(2) of the Code.

Even where two views are possible, this being a matter belonging to the field of criminal justice involving the liberty of an individual, the provision must be construed strictly in favour of individual liberty since even the law expects early completion of the investigation. The delay in completion of the investigation can be on pain of the accused being released on bail. The prosecution cannot be allowed to trifle with individual liberty if it does not take its task seriously and does not complete it within the time allowed by law. It would also result in avoidable difficulty to the accused if the latter is asked to secure a surety and a few days later be placed behind the bars at the sweet will of the prosecution on production of a charge-sheet. Therefore, unless there are strong grounds for cancellation of the bail, the bail once granted cannot be cancelled on mere production of the charge-sheet.

In the present case the High Court relying on the ratio of Rajnikant case cancelled the bail solely on the ground that the bail was granted on technical grounds and the investigation revealed that there was eyewitness account disclosing the commission of a serious offence of murder. It is difficult to agree with the High Court. Therefore, the matter is remitted to the High Court for reconsideration and disposal on merits in the light of the legal position hereinabove stated.

Per Ramaswamy, J.

I am in full agreement with the view expressed by brother Ahmadi, J. and the order proposed by him.

The fiction of law under the proviso applying the provisions in Chapter XXXIII is to serve the purpose of law, namely not only the release of the accused on taking the requisite bond and conditions to be incorporated therein as envisaged in the said Chapter, but also the power of the court to cancel the bail and to take the accused into detention for the grounds mentioned under the relevant provisions in Ss. 437(5) and 439(2) of the Code. But on the happening of the catalyst act i.e. expiry of 90/60 days the hammer of release on default would fall, though it might be possible to abuse the proviso by deliberate delay in completing the investigation to facilitate the release of the accused on bail. Later filing of the charge-sheet (challan) is not by itself relevant to have the bail cancelled on committing the accused for trial or taking cognizance of the offence. On curing the defect by filing the charge-sheet (challan) if the prosecution seeks to have the bail cancelled on the ground that there are reasonable grounds to believe that the accused has committed a non-bailable offence and that it is necessary to arrest and commit him into custody, prima facie at that stage, strong grounds indeed are necessary. For cancellation of the bail after filing of the charge-sheet the factum of dismissal of the bail on the earlier occasion is not relevant. Merits brought out in the charge-sheet and attending circumstances are relevant, as the bail was granted due to default of the investigating officer without court's adverting to the merits but during investigation some strong prima facie evidence and gravity and magnitude of the crime or the manner in which the crime was committed and other attending circumstances may be relevant as prima facie grounds to have a fresh look to cancel the bail. The grounds for cancellation of the bail in Chapter XXXIII are, dehors the merits in the matter, namely, necessity due to the conduct of the accused and abuse of liberty i.e. obstruction of the smooth investigation or suborning witnesses or attempting to tamper the evidence, threatening the witnesses with dire consequences or making or attempting to remove himself beyond the reach of the court to hamper the smooth trial, etc. are independent of the merits in the matter. Cancellation of the bail would be necessitated by the conduct of the accused himself after the release. The High Court or the Court of Sessions should consider the merits of the case.

Per Punchhi, J.(dissenting)

The occasion to grant or refuse bail on merit becomes available to the Court after the filing of the challan because earlier thereto merit of bail could not figure at the time of the grant of compulsive bail. The goal of the court in any event is to strike a judicial balance depending on the exigencies of the situation keeping in view amongst others the claims of personal liberty and the larger interests of the State. It cannot be overlooked that a bail order under S. 167(2) of the Code could even be managed through a convenient investigating officer, however heinous be the crime. The Court would have to grant bail under the mandate of law, debarred as it is to see to the merits of the case at that stage. To say that thenceforth the Court is for ever shut to see to the merits of the case, though it otherwise has power to cancel bail, is to deprive it of its elementary function to administer justice and weigh the claims on merit inter se. Such an interpretation would frustrate justice, and would on the other hand let the Court have the power to cancel bail, for once examining the merits of the case in such a situation.

The High Court in the instant case when approached for cancellation of bail applied its mind on the merits of the case and relied on Rajnikant Jivan Lal case. The High Court rightly relied on this decision when Raghubir Singh case was the basis thereof. These two cases have summed up and have drawn the demarcation between bail orders granted on merit and bail granted under the compulsion and thrust of S. 167(2) of the Code and the parameters of cancellation. Challan for prosecution has been filed. The appellant was described to be a gang leader who had arrived at the scene of the occurrence along with some others and committed the murder of a man on account of gang rivalry. He was accused of having taken part in it by inflicting wounds on the deceased. The allegations have supportive eyewitnesses. The accusation against the appellant is pointedly there. His role in the crime as an active participant could lead the High Court to entertain the view that the appellant has committed a non-bailable offence which may invite capital punishment or imprisonment for life and that there were sufficient grounds to arrest him and commit him into custody. And on coming to that view, the strong ground for cancellation of bail was made out. Aslam Babalal Desai v. State of Maharashtra, (1992) 4 SCC 272: 1992 SCC (Cri) 870: AIR 1993 SC 1.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi[1], M.M. Punchhi[2] and K. Ramaswamy[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 15-9-1992]

*Rajnikant Jivanlal Patel v. NCB, New Delhi, (1989) 3 SCC 532: 1989 SCC (Cri) 612, overruled

Bhagirathsinh v. State of Gujarat, (1984) 1 SCC 284: 1984 SCC (Cri) 63, relied on

Natabar Parida v. State of Orissa, (1975) 2 SCC 220: 1975 SCC (Cri) 484; Bashir v. State of Haryana, (1977) 4 SCC 410: 1977 SCC (Cri) 608, followed

[1916] — Ss. 167(2), proviso (a), 309(2), 437(5), 439(2), 441, 442(1) and 444 — Grant of bail under proviso (a) to S. 167(2) — Not extinguished by lapse of time, subsequent discharge of surety, filing of charge-sheet or remand to custody under S. 309(2) — Remains effective until cancellation under Ss. 437(5) and 439(2)

An order for release on bail made under the proviso to S. 167(2) is not defeated by lapse of time, the filing of the charge-sheet or by remand to custody under S. 309(2).

There is no limit of time within which the bond may be executed after the order for release on bail is made. Sections 441 and 442 are in the nature of provisions for the execution of orders for the release on bail of accused persons. The accused persons are not to be deprived of the benefit of the order for release on bail in their favour because of their inability to furnish bail straightway.

On the discharge of surety under S. 444 the responsibility of the surety ceases and the accused person is put back in the position where he was immediately before the execution of the bond. The order for release on bail is not extinguished and is not to be defeated by the discharge of the surety and the inability of the accused to straightway produce a fresh surety. The accused person may yet take advantage of the order for release on bail by producing a fresh, acceptable surety.

The order for release on bail does not stand extinguished on the remand of the accused to custody under S. 309(2), CrPC. Section 309(2) merely enables the court to "remand the accused if in custody". It does not empower the court to remand the accused if he is on bail. It does not enable the court to 'cancel bail' as it were.

Release on bail under the proviso to S. 167(2) is deemed to be release on bail under the provisions of Ch. XXXIII. Therefore, an order for release under the proviso to S. 167(2) is also subject to the provisions of Ss. 437(5) and 439(2) and may be extinguished by an order under either of these provisions. When an accused person is granted bail, whether under the proviso to S. 167(2) or under the provisions of Ch. XXXIII the only way the bail may be cancelled is to proceed under S. 437(5) or S. 439(2). Raghubir Singh v. State of Bihar, (1986) 4 SCC 481: 1986 SCC (Cri) 511: AIR 1987 SC 149.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: O. Chinnappa Reddy and M.M. Dutt, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-9-1986]

[1917] — S. 167(2) proviso (a) and Ch. XXXIII (Ss. 436-450) — Release of accused on bail under Proviso (a) to S. 167(2) — Accused deemed to be so released under Chapter XXXIII of the Code — Only method by which bail may be cancelled is to proceed under S. 437(5) or S. 439(2)

When an accused is granted bail, whether under proviso (a) to S. 167(2) or under the general provisions of Ch. XXXIII, the only method by which the bail may be cancelled is to proceed under S. 437(5) or S. 439(2). That is because the person released on bail under the proviso to S. 167(2) shall be deemed to be so released under the provisions of Ch. XXXIII of the Code. Rajnikant Jivanlal v. Intelligence Officer, Narcotic Control Bureau, (1989) 3 SCC 532: 1989 SCC (Cri) 612: AIR 1990 SC 71.

Bench Strength 1. Coram: K. Jagannatha Shetty, J. [Date of decision: 26-6-1989]

[1918] — S. 167(2) proviso — Rejection of a bail application that is not pressed, held, not improper — Accused was thereby not "prepared to" be released on bail — This is so even where the period has been wrongly extended underS. 20(4)(bb), TADA, 1987. Hitendra Vishnu Thakur v. State of Maharashtra, (1994) 4 SCC 602: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1087: AIR 1994 SC 2623.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-7-1994]

[1919] — S. 167(2) proviso (a)(i) — Release on bail after expiry of 90 days — Where accused was arrested for offences under IPC and was remanded first to police custody and then to judicial custody but later approval was accorded under S. 23 of Maharashtra Control of Organised Crime Act for conducting investigation into offences under the said Act, held, period of 90 days contemplated under proviso (a)(i) to S. 167(2) must be reckoned from the date of accused's remand at the first instance and not from the date of grant of approval for investigation under the said Act — A new period of 90 days does not commence from the date of grant of approval for investigation under the Act — Second proviso to S. 167(2) inserted by S. 21(2)(b) of the said Act which provides for extension of the period up to 180 days cannot apply where Public Prosecutor does not submit any report indicating specific reasons for detention beyond the period of 90 days — Where charge-sheet could not be laid within 90 days from the date of remand to the custody at the first instance, accused would be entitled to bail — That the provision regarding bail under the said Act is very stringent would be a relevant aspect for consideration only when any motion for bail would be made dehors S. 167(2) CrPC — Maharashtra Control of Organised Crime Act, 1999 (30 of 1999) — Ss. 21(2)(b) and 23(1)(a)

In this case charge-sheet was not laid within 90 days from the date the accused respondent was remanded to the custody at the first instance. The Public Prosecutor has not filed any report before the Special Court showing reasons for the detention of the respondent beyond 90 days from the date of the first remand order. Hence he is disabled from contending that the proviso to Section 21(2) of the MCOC Act would enable the investigating agency to have the pre-trial custody of the respondent extended beyond 90 days. (Para 7)

It is not possible to agree with the contention that a new period of 90 days would commence from the date when approval was accorded under Section 23 of the MCOC Act for initiating investigation for any offence under the said Act. For the application of the proviso to Section 167(2) of the Code there is no necessity to consider when the investigation could legally have commenced. That proviso is intended only for keeping an arrested person under detention for the purpose of investigation and the legislature has provided a maximum period for such detention. On the expiry of the said period the further custody becomes unauthorized and hence it is mandated that the arrested person shall be released on bail if he is prepared to and does furnish bail. It may be a different position if the same accused was found involved in some other offence disconnected from the offence for which he was arrested. In such an eventuality the officer investigating such second offence can exercise the power of arresting him in connection with the second case. But if the investigation into the offence for which he was arrested initially had revealed other ramifications associated therewith, any further investigation would continue to relate to the same arrest and hence the period envisaged in the proviso to Section 167(2) would remain unextendable. In the present case, the accused would be entitled to bail, not on the merits of the case, but on account of the default of the investigating agency to complete the investigation within 90 days from the date of the first remand of the respondent. (Paras 12 and 11)

The further contention that the provision regarding bail under the said Act is very stringent would become germane only when any motion for bail is made dehors Section 167(2) of the Code. Therefore, that contention is left without expressing any opinion on the merits since it is open to the court concerned to consider that aspect when any motion is made in that behalf. (Paras 7 to 9) . State of Maharashtra v. Bharati Chandmal Varma, (2002) 2 SCC 121: 2002 SCC (Cri) 299: AIR 2002 SC 285: 2002 Cri LJ 575: (2002) 1 CHN (Supp) 95.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-12-2001]

Uday Mohanlal Acharya v. State of Maharashtra, (2001) 5 SCC 453: 2001 SCC (Cri) 760, relied on

[1920] — S. 167(2) proviso (a)(i) — Jurisdiction under — Proper mode of invocation of — Whether opposing a custodial remand order before Special Judge/High Court, sufficient — Whether filing separate bail application before Special Judge, necessary, even if the remand order has been opposed before Special Judge/High Court

ATS staff (which had jurisdiction over entire Maharashtra) intercepted and apprehended A-1, which resulted in seizure of 10 AK-47 rifles, 2000 live rounds, 30 kg RDX, etc. and the panchnama went on from 9-5-2006 to 10-5-2006. Investigation was started for offences under Section 120-B IPC read with Sections 4, 5 of the Explosive Substances Act, 1908 read with Sections 5, 6, 9, 9-B of the Explosives Act, 1884 read with Sections 3, 4, 25 of the Arms Act, 1959 read with Sections 10, 13, 16, 18, 23 of the Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act, 1967.

The appellants (A-5 to A-8) were arrested on 13-5-2006. The first extension under Section 167(2) CrPC was granted on 7-8-2006 for a period of 15 days i.e. up to 21-8-2006 and the second extension was granted on 21-8-2006 for a period of 15 days i.e. up to 4-9-2006 and the charge-sheet was filed on 4-9-2006. The application under Section 21(2)(b) of the Maharashtra Control of Organised Crime Act, 1999 (the MCOC Act) read with Section 167(2) CrPC for bail on the default ground came to be filed for the first time on 4-9-2006 i.e. the date on which the charge-sheet was submitted. The said bail application under Section 167(2) proviso (a)(i) was rejected by the Special Judge. Prior to filing of the bail application before the Special Judge (i.e. on the date of filing of charge-sheet after 120 days), an appeal under Section 12 of the MCOC Act had also been filed on 18-8-2006. The Division Bench of the High Court by the impugned order upheld the remand order and rejection of bail application by the Special Judge.

Section 21(2)(a), MCOC Act modified the Section 167(2) CrPC to the effect that the "fifteen days", and "sixty days" occurrences are replaced by "thirty days" and "ninety days" respectively. And Section 21(2)(b), MCOC Act amended Section 167(2) CrPC to include a second proviso which allowed a maximum period of 180 days for completion of investigation subject to specified conditions that the Public Prosecutor reports to Special Judge indicating the progress of the investigation and the Special Judge records specific reasons for detention beyond 90 days.

Dismissing the appeals,

Held :

Section 167(2) CrPC cannot be lost sight of. Section 167 CrPC and Section 21 of the MCOC Act deal with power of custodial remand. The provisions of Section 21 of the MCOC Act must be read in the light of Section 167 CrPC. Section 167(2) CrPC itself indicates that power of remand has to be exercised from time to time and this clearly dispels any doubt as regard the true effect of Section 167(2) second proviso added by Section 21(2) of the MCOC Act, 1999. (Para 15)

The criminal appeal under Section 12 of the MCOC Act to the High Court filed on 18-8-2006 cannot be considered as an application for bail. Even if it is treated as an application for bail, the same was not tenable on default ground as the Special Court extended the period of custodial remand on 7-8-2006 till 21-8-2006 and further extended the period on 21-8-2006 till 4-9-2006. The contention of the appellants was that the appeal filed by them on 18-8-2006 should be considered as their application for bail. This appeal filed in the High Court was challenging the order dated 7-8-2006 of the Special Court granting extension of custodial remand till 21-8-2006 and on 21-8-2006 extension was granted till 4-9-2006. The impugned judgment of the High Court does not suffer from any infirmity to warrant interference. (Paras 17 and 18). Mustaq Ahmed Mohammed Isak v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 7 SCC 480: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 449.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-2009]

[Ed.: Here a question may arise that when a custodial remand application is pressed by the prosecution to extend the time for investigation beyond 90 days, whether the accused persons are entitled to oppose the same having regard to principles of natural justice? And when they have opposed the same before the Special Judge and then challenged the custodial remand order by filing appeal under S. 12 of the MCOC Act in the High Court, whether such opposition to custodial remand order would not amount to seeking a release under bail? And therefore, whether a separate filing of bail application before the Special Judge/Magistrate along with opposing the custodial remand order is necessary?]

[1921] — S. 167(2) proviso (a)(i) (as substituted by Act 45 of 1978) — Bail on default of completion of investigation within 90 days — Successive extensions of time of custodial remand for investigation after expiry of 90 days — Permissibility and whether a ground for grant of bail — Appellant-accused persons charged for offences under S. 120-B IPC r/w Ss. 4, 5 of Explosive Substances Act, 1908 r/w Ss. 5, 6, 9, 9(B) of the Explosives Act, 1884

(5) Rights of undertrials/Right to bail under S. 167(2) proviso and Expln. I thereto (contd.)

r/w Ss. 3, 4, 25 of Arms Act, 1959 r/w Ss. 10, 13, 16, 18, 23 of Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act, 1967 — Prosecution not completing investigation within 90 days and seeking extension [by relying on amendments in S. 167(2) CrPC made by S. 21(2)(b) proviso of MCOC Act, 1999 for extension of investigation up to 180 days] — Appellant-accused persons preferring appeal under S. 12 of MCOC Act against the first remand order dated after 105 days of arrest extending time for completion of investigation for a period of 15 days — Appellant-accused persons filing bail application and prosecution filing charge-sheet after 120 days of arrest i.e. on the day when the second extension of time for investigation expired — Legality — Held, there is nothing in the language of S. 167(2) second proviso CrPC as amended by S. 21(2) of MCOC Act to indicate that the power of extension can be exercised only once — Special Court can exercise power under the said proviso from time to time however, the total period for filing charge-sheet/challan cannot exceed 180 days — Maharashtra Control of Organised Crime Act, 1999 (30 of 1999), S. 21(2) [modifying S. 167(2) CrPC] — Explosive Substances Act, 1908, Ss. 4 and 5 — Explosives Act, 1884, Ss. 5, 6, 9 and 9(B) — Arms Act, 1959, Ss. 3, 4 and 25 — Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act, 1967, Ss. 10, 13, 16, 18 and 23

ATS staff (which had jurisdiction over entire Maharashtra) intercepted and apprehended A-l, which resulted in seizure of 10 AK-47 rifles, 2000 live rounds, 30 kg RDX, etc. and the panchnama went on from 9-5-2006 to 10-5-2006. Investigation was started for offences under Section 120-B IPC read with Sections 4, 5 of the Explosive Substances Act, 1908 read with Sections 5, 6, 9, 9-B of the Explosives Act, 1884 read with Sections 3, 4, 25 of the Arms Act, 1959 read with Sections 10, 13, 16, 18, 23 of the Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act, 1967.

The appellants (A-5 to A-8) were arrested on 13-5-2006. The first extension under Section 167(2) CrPC was granted on 7-8-2006 for a period of 15 days i.e. up to 21-8-2006 and the second extension was granted on 21-8-2006 for a period of 15 days i.e. up to 4-9-2006 and the charge-sheet was filed on 4-9-2006. The application under Section 21(2)(b) of the Maharashtra Control of Organised Crime Act, 1999 (the MCOC Act) read with Section 167(2) CrPC for bail on the default ground came to be filed for the first time on 4-9-2006 i.e. the date on which the charge-sheet was submitted. The said bail application under Section 167(2) proviso (a)(i) was rejected by the Special Judge. Prior to filing of the bail application before the Special Judge (i.e. on the date of filing of charge-sheet after 120 days), an appeal under Section 12 of the MCOC Act had also been filed on 18-8-2006. The Division Bench of the High Court by the impugned order upheld the remand order and rejection of bail application by the Special Judge.

Section 21(2)(a), MCOC Act modified the Section 167(2) CrPC to the effect that the "fifteen days", and "sixty days" occurrences are replaced by "thirty days" and "ninety days" respectively. And Section 21(2)(b), MCOC Act amended Section 167(2) CrPC to include a second proviso which allowed a maximum period of 180 days for completion of investigation subject to specified conditions that the Public Prosecutor reports to Special Judge indicating the progress of the investigation and the Special Judge records specific reasons for detention beyond 90 days.

Dismissing the appeals,

Held :

There is nothing in the language of Section 167(2) second proviso CrPC as amended by Section 21(2) of the Maharashtra Control of Organised Crime Act, 1999 (the MCOC Act) to indicate that the power of extension can be exercised only once as contended by the appellant-accused persons. The only possible interpretation of the said proviso is that the Special Court can exercise power under the said proviso from time to time however, the total period for filing charge-sheet/challan cannot exceed 180 days. Affidavit of Assistant Commissioner of Police specifically stated that the application for bail on a default ground was made for the first time on a date 120 days after date of arrest and not on a date 103 days after date of arrest as incorrectly contended by the appellants herein. (Paras 15 and 16)

Section 167(2) CrPC cannot be lost sight of. Section 167 CrPC and Section 21 of the MCOC Act deal with power of custodial remand. The provisions of Section 21 of the MCOC Act must be read in the light of Section 167 CrPC. Section 167(2) CrPC itself indicates that power of remand has to be exercised from time to time and this clearly dispels any doubt as regard the true effect of Section 167(2) second proviso added by Section 21(2) of the MCOC Act, 1999. (Para 15)

The criminal appeal under Section 12 of the MCOC Act to the High Court filed on 18-8-2006 cannot be considered as an application for bail. Even if it is treated as an application for bail, the same was not tenable on default ground as the Special Court extended the period of custodial remand on 7-8-2006 till 21-8-2006 and further extended the period on 21-8-2006 till 4-9-2006. The contention of the appellants was that the appeal filed by them on 18-8-2006 should be considered as their application for bail. This appeal filed in the High Court was challenging the order dated 7-8-2006 of the Special Court granting extension of custodial remand till 21-8-2006 and on 21-8-2006 extension was granted till 4-9-2006. The impugned judgment of the High Court does not suffer from any infirmity to warrant interference. (Paras 17 and 18). Mustaq Ahmed Mohammed Isak v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 7 SCC 480: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 449.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-2009]

Sanjay Dutt v. State, (1994) 5 SCC 410: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1433, relied on

Hitendra Vishnu Thakur v. State of Maharashtra, (1994) 4 SCC 602: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1087, distinguished

Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1994) 3 SCC 569: 1994 SCC (Cri) 899; Usmanbhai Dawoodbhai Memon v. State of Gujarat, (1988) 2 SCC 271: 1988 SCC (Cri) 318; Naranjan Singh Nathawan v. State of Punjab, AIR 1952 SC 106; Ram Narayan Singh v. State of Delhi, AIR 1953 SC 277; A.K. Gopalan v. Govt. of India, AIR 1966 SC 816, cited

[Ed.: Here a question may arise that when a custodial remand application is pressed by the prosecution to extend the time for investigation beyond 90 days, whether the accused persons are entitled to oppose the same having regard to principles of natural justice? And when they have opposed the same before the Special Judge and then challenged the custodial remand order by filing appeal under S. 12 of the MCOC Act in the High Court, whether such opposition to custodial remand order would not amount to seeking a release under bail? And therefore, whether a separate filing of bail application before the Special Judge/Magistrate along with opposing the custodial remand order is necessary?]

[1922] — S. 167(2) proviso and Ch. XXXIII (Ss. 436 to 450) — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987 — S. 20(4) — Accused released on bail on ground of default in completion of investigation within the statutory period — He shall be deemed to have been so released under Ch. XXXIII of the Code — His bail cannot be cancelled on mere filing of charge-sheet — His bail can be cancelled only when a case for cancellation has been made out under S. 437(5) or S. 439(2) of the Code

Any accused released on bail under proviso (a) to Section 167(2) of the Code read with Section 20(4)(b) or Section 20(4)(bb) TADA, because of the default on the part of the investigating agency to conclude the investigation within the period prescribed, in view of proviso (a) to Section 167(2) itself, shall be deemed to have been so released under the provisions of Chapter XXXIII of the Code. It cannot be held that an accused charged of any offence, including offences under TADA, if released on bail because of the default in completion of the investigation, then no sooner the charge-sheet is filed, the order granting bail to such accused is to be cancelled. The bail of such accused who has been released, because of the default on the part of the investigating officer to complete the investigation, can be cancelled, but not only on the ground that after the release charge-sheet has been submitted against such accused for an offence under TADA. For cancelling the bail, the well-settled principles in respect of cancellation of bail have to be made out. In view of deeming provision under proviso (a) to Section 167(2), the order granting bail shall be deemed to be one under Section 437(1) or sub-section (2) or Section 439(1) and that order can be cancelled when a case for cancellation is made out under Sections 437(5) and 439(2) of the Code. But for that, the sole ground should not be that after the release of such accused the charge-sheet has been submitted. Mohd. Iqbal Madar Sheikh v. State of Maharashtra, (1996) 1 SCC 722: 1996 SCC (Cri) 202.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, C.J. and B.P. Jeevan Reddy and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-1-1996]

Aslam Babalal Desai v. State of Maharashtra, (1992) 4 SCC 272: 1992 SCC (Cri) 870; Raghubir Singh v. State of Bihar, (1986) 4 SCC 481: 1986 SCC (Cri) 511, followed

[1923] — S. 167(2) r/w S. 49(2)(b) of the Prevention of Terrorism Act, 2002 — Accused's right to bail in POTA case on failure of prosecution to complete investigation within statutory period of 90 days — Prior to expiry of said period, Special Court in exercise of power under S. 49(2)(b) granting extension of time to complete investigation — Extension of time was proper — Hence, contention that since accused acquired an indefeasible right to be released on bail on the expiry of 90 days from the date of his arrest, the Special Judge was not justified in rejecting the application for grant of bail, held, not sustainable — Prevention of Terrorism Act, 2002 — S. 49(2)(b) (Paras 17 and 18). Ateef Nasir Mulla v. State of Maharashtra, (2005) 7 SCC 29: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1587: AIR 2005 SC 3293: 2005 Cri LJ 3748.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-8-2005]

Hitendra Vishnu Thakur v. State of Maharashtra, (1994) 4 SCC 602: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1087, relied on

(6) Remand to custody before and after charge-sheet/cognizance — Ss. 167 and 309

See also Section 167, '(5) Rights of undertrials/Right to bail under S. 167(2) proviso and Expln. I thereto', above

[1924] — Ss. 167, 309, 173 and 190 — Remand of accused — Relative scope and applicability of Ss. 167(2) and 309(2) — Right to bail under S. 167(2) proviso — Preconditions for availability, and, continuance of — Effect of filing of charge-sheet (police report) while accused was absconding and was yet to be arrested — Effect of taking of cognizance (on such charge-sheet) — Effect of pendency of further investigation under S. 173(8) — Investigating agency whether submitting charge-sheet only to curtail right of accused under S. 167(2) proviso — Determination of — Held, remand of an accused is contemplated at two stages: pre-cognizance and post-cognizance — Whereas S. 167(2) is attracted where cognizance has not been taken, S. 309(2) is attracted only after cognizance has been taken — The right under S. 167(2) proviso is a conditional one, being conditional on the investigation having remained pending i.e. on the charge-sheet not having been presented — Whether an investigation has in fact remained pending and IO has submitted charge-sheet only with a view to curtail the said right, would essentially be a question of fact — Once a charge-sheet is filed, the right under S. 167(2) proviso ceases and does not revive only because a further investigation remains pending within meaning of S. 173(8) — In the present case, since on the basis of the charge-sheet presented Magistrate took cognizance before appellant-accused had been arrested, and found that a case for trial had been made out, there already being sufficient material available for prosecution of the appellant, it could not be said that the charge-sheet had been filed merely to curtail appellant's right to bail under S. 167(2) proviso — Further, as there was no challenge to validity of charge-sheet or the order taking cognizance, appellant could not have been given benefit of S. 167(2) proviso, as that would have required Magistrate concerned to have declared the charge-sheet illegal and to have recalled his own order taking cognizance, something he could not have done ordinarily

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

A charge-sheet is a final report within the meaning of Section 173(2) CrPC. It is filed so as to enable the court concerned to apply its mind as to whether cognizance of the offence thereupon should be taken or not. The report is ordinarily filed in the form prescribed therefor. One of the requirements for submission of a police report is whether any offence appears to have been committed and, if so, by whom. In some cases, the accused having not been arrested, the investigation against him may not be complete. There may not be sufficient material for arriving at a decision that the absconding accused is also a person by whom the offence appears to have been committed. If the investigating officer finds sufficient evidence even against such an accused who had been absconding, the law does not require that filing of the charge-sheet must await the arrest of the accused. (Para 19)

So long as a charge-sheet is not filed within the meaning of Section 173(2) CrPC, investigation remains pending. Filing of a final police report or charge-sheet however does not preclude an investigating officer to carry on further investigation in terms of Section 173(8). Indisputably, the power of the investigating officer to make a prayer for making further investigation in terms of Section 173(8) is not taken away only because a charge-sheet has been filed under Section 173(2). A further investigation is permissible even if an order of cognizance of offence has been made by the Magistrate. (Paras 20, 38 and 39)

Even in the same case, depending upon the nature of charge-sheet filed by the investigating officer in terms of Section 173 CrPC, cognizance may be taken as against the person against whom an offence is said to have been made out and against whom no such offence has been made out even when investigation is pending. (Para 38)

The investigating agency is required to complete investigation within a reasonable time. The ideal period therefor would be 24 hours, but, in some cases, it may not be practically possible to do so. Parliament, therefore, thought it fit that remand of the accused can be sought for in the event investigation is not completed within 60 or 90 days, as the case may be. But, if the same is not done within the stipulated period, the same would not be detrimental to the accused and, thus, he, on the expiry thereof would be entitled to apply for bail, subject to fulfilling the conditions prescribed therefor. Such a right of bail although is a valuable right but the same is a conditional one; the condition precedent being pendency of the investigation. Whether an investigation in fact has remained pending and the investigating officer has submitted the charge-sheet only with a view to curtail the right of the accused would essentially be a question of fact. (Paras 24 and 25)

Whereas only when a charge-sheet is not filed and investigation is kept pending, benefit of Section 167(2) proviso would be available to an offender; once, however, a charge-sheet is filed, the said right ceases. Such a right does not revive only because a further investigation remains pending within the meaning of Section 173(8) CrPC. (Para 39)

It is a well-settled principle of interpretation of statute that it is to be read in its entirety. Construction of a statute should be made in a manner so as to give effect to all the provisions thereof. Remand of an accused is contemplated by Parliament at two stages; pre-cognizance and post-cognizance. The power of a court to direct remand of an accused either in terms of Section 167(2) or Section 309(2) CrPC will depend on the stages of the trial. Whereas Section 167(2) would be attracted in a case where cognizance has not been taken, Section 309(2) would be attracted only after cognizance has been taken. (Paras 38 and 29)

In this case CBI took a conscious decision to file charge-sheet against the appellant. His name was shown in Column 1 thereof although he was absconding. It is true that ordinarily all documents accompany the charge-sheet. But, in this case, some documents could not be filed which were not in the possession of CBI as the same were with the Government Examiner of Questioned Documents (GEQD). Whereas the charge-sheet was submitted on 24-10-2005, the appellant was arrested only on 12-2-2006. The additional documents were filed on 20-1-2006. However, the appellant does not contend that he has been prejudiced by not filing of such documents with the charge-sheet. No such plea in fact had been taken. Even if all the documents had not been filed, by reason thereof submission of charge-sheet itself does not become vitiated in law. Validity of the said charge-sheet is also not in question. (Paras 16, 18 and 22)

The question whether CBI had filed the charge-sheet against the appellant merely to curtail the right of the accused under Section 167(2) strictly does not arise in this case inasmuch as, according to CBI, sufficient materials are already available for prosecution of the appellant. According to it, further investigation would be inter alia necessary on certain vital points including end use of the funds involved in the commission of the offences in question. (Para 25)

The court takes cognizance of an offence and not the offender. The Magistrate took cognizance of the offence. The Magistrate noticed the fact, while taking cognizance of the offence, that the appellant had been absconding and a non-bailable warrant of arrest had been issued against him. It was found that a case for trial has been made out. There were five accused against whom allegations were made by the complainant. One of the companies was not sent for trial as nothing was found against it. All the other accused named in the first information report had been sent for trial. The charge-sheet has been acted upon as an order of cognizance had been passed on the basis thereof. The appellant has not questioned the said order taking cognizance of the offence. It was, therefore, not necessary for CBI to file a charge-sheet so as to curtail the right of the accused to obtain bail. It is, therefore, not a case where by reason of such submission of charge-sheet the appellant has been prejudiced in any manner whatsoever. (Paras 25 to 28, 16, 17 and 22)

It is also not a case of the appellant that he had been arrested in course of further investigation. A warrant of arrest had already been issued against him. The Magistrate was conscious of the said fact while taking cognizance of the offence. (Para 27)

In the present case, if it is to be accepted that the appellant-accused was entitled to the protection of Section 167, even after cognizance had been taken the Magistrate was not only required to declare the charge-sheet illegal, he was also required to recall his own order of taking cognizance. Ordinarily, he could not have done so. (Para 30)

Hence, it is held that the High Court was correct in its finding that, in the fact situation obtaining, the appellant had no statutory right to be released on bail. (Para 40). Dinesh Dalmia v. CBI, (2007) 8 SCC 770: (2007) 59 AIC 145 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-2007]

K. Veeraswami v. Union of India, (1991) 3 SCC 655: 1991 SCC (Cri) 734; Anil Saran v. State of Bihar, (1995) 6 SCC 142: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1051; Popular Muthiah v. State, (2006) 7 SCC 296: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 245; Adalat Prasad v. Rooplal Jindal, (2004) 7 SCC 338: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1927; Subramanium Sethuraman v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 13 SCC 324: 2005 SCC (Cri) 242; Everest Advertising (P) Ltd. v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (2007) 5 SCC 54: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 444, relied on

CBI v. Anupam J. Kulkarni, (1992) 3 SCC 141: 1992 SCC (Cri) 554, distinguished

[1925] — Ss. 167(2) and 309(1) — Remand to custody — Pre-cognizance and post-cognizance procedures, distinguished

A distinction between a remand of an accused at pre-cognizance stage vis-à-vis the post-cognizance stage is apparent. Whereas the remand to custody at a pre-cognizance stage is to be made in terms of Section 167(2) CrPC, an order of remand of an accused at post-cognizance stage can be effected only in terms of Section 309(2) thereof. (Para 34). Jeewan Kumar Raut v. CBI, (2009) 7 SCC 526: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 475: (2009) 80 AIC 243 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-7-2009]

Mithabhai Pashabhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 332: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 1047, relied on

(6) Remand to custody before and after charge-sheet/ cognizance — Ss. 167 and 309 (contd.)

[1926] — Ss. 167(2), 309(2) and 173 — Relative scope — Remand to custody under S. 167(2) and S. 309(2), distinguished — Fresh remand of accused to custody after charge-sheet is filed — Permissibility — Held, power of remand is to be exercised when investigation is not complete — Once charge-sheet is filed and cognizance of the offence is taken, court cannot exercise its power to remand an accused to custody for investigation under S. 167(2) — After cognizance of offence is taken, court can remand accused to custody only in terms of S. 309(2) — In present case, appellants were not in custody but released on bail — Hence, held, they could not be remanded unless bail was cancelled

The investigating agency and/or a court exercise their jurisdiction conferred on them only in terms of the provisions of CrPC. The courts subordinate to the High Court do not even have any inherent power under Section 482 or otherwise. The power of remand in terms of Section 167 is to be exercised when investigation is not complete. Once the charge-sheet is filed and cognizance of the offence is taken, the court cannot exercise its power under Section 167(2) CrPC. Its power of remand can then be exercised in terms of Section 309(2). The appellants had been granted bail. They are not in custody of the court. They could not be taken in custody ordinarily unless their bail was cancelled. The High Court, therefore was not correct in holding that as further investigation was required, Section 167(2) of the Code gives ample power for grant of police remand. (Paras 15 to 18). Mithabhai Pashabhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 332.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

Raghubir Singh v. State of Bihar, (1986) 4 SCC 481: 1986 SCC (Cri) 511; CBI v. Anupam J. Kulkarni, (1992) 3 SCC 141: 1992 SCC (Cri) 554; State v. Dawood Ibrahim Kaskar, (2000) 10 SCC 438: 1997 SCC (Cri) 636; Dinesh Dalmia v. CBI, (2007) 8 SCC 770: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 36; Rama Chaudhary v. State of Bihar, (2009) 6 SCC 346, followed

[1927] — Ss. 167, 309(2) and 173(8) — Even after taking cognizance of an offence the court can authorise detention in police custody of a person is arrested during further investigation — Words "accused if in custody" in S. 309(2) does not refer to a person who is arrested in course of further investigation — Remand and custody referred to in first proviso to S. 309 relates to post-cognizance stage and can only be to judicial custody

In the Bombay Bomb Blast case the police submitted a composite charge-sheet before the Designated Court against 198 persons, showing 45 of them as absconders. After the Designated Court took cognizance of the case the Central Government entrusted further investigation in the case to the CBI. In the course of such investigation the CBI apprehended one of the absconders mentioned in the charge-sheet who, in his confessional statement, disclosed that the respondents had taken active part in the criminal conspiracy which was the subject-matter of the Bombay Bomb Blast case. Thereafter the CBI moved an application before the Designated Court praying for issuance of non-bailable warrants of arrest against the respondents to initiate further proceedings in the matter to apprehend them and/or to take further action to declare them as proclaimed offenders. Two other applications were thereafter moved for publication of written proclamations under Section 8(3)(a) of TADA as also for issuance of open dated non-bailable warrants of arrest so that "Red Corner Notices" might be issued against them. The Designated Court rejected the applications and held that after cognizance was taken in respect of an offence process could be issued to the persons accused thereof only to compel them to face the trial but no such process could be issued by the Court in aid of investigation under Section 73 of the Code. According to the Designated Court, though under the Code further investigation was not barred there was no provision therein which entitled the Investigating Agency to seek for and obtain aid from the Court for the same. Allowing the appeal by the State

Held :

Section 309(2) does not stand in the way of a Court, which has taken cognizance of an offence, to authorise the detention of a person, who is subsequently brought before it by the police under arrest during further investigation, in police custody in exercise of its power under Section 167 of the Code. (Para 10)

The remand and the custody referred to in the first proviso to Section 309 are different from detention in custody under Section 167. While remand under the former relates to a stage after cognizance and can only be to judicial custody, detention under the latter relates to the stage of investigation and can initially be either in police custody or judicial custody. Since, however, even after cognizance is taken of an offence the police has a power to investigate into it further, which can be exercised only in accordance with Chapter XII, there is no reason whatsoever why the provisions of Section 167 thereof would not apply to a person who comes to be later arrested by the police in course of such investigation. If Section 309(2) is interpreted to mean that after the Court takes cognizance of an offence it cannot exercise its power of detention in police custody under Section 167, the Investigating Agency would be deprived of an opportunity to interrogate a person arrested during further investigation, even if it can on production of sufficient materials, convince the Court that his detention in its (police) custody was essential for that purpose. Therefore, the words "accused if in custody" appearing in Section 309(2) refer and relate to an accused who was before the Court when cognizance was taken or when enquiry or trial was being held in respect of him and not to an accused who is subsequently arrested in course of further investigation. So far as the accused in the first category is concerned he can be remanded to judicial custody only in view of Section 309(2), but he who comes under the second category will be governed by Section 167 so long as further investigation continues. That necessarily means that in respect of the latter the Court which had taken cognizance of the offence may exercise its power to detain him in police custody, subject to the fulfilment of the requirements and the limitation of Section 167. (Para 11). State v. Dawood Ibrahim Kaskar, (2000) 10 SCC 438: 1997 SCC (Cri) 636: AIR 1997 SC 2494.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee, G.T. Nanavati and B.N. Kirpal, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-5-1997]

H.N. Rishbud v. State of Delhi, AIR 1955 SC 196: (1955) 1 SCR 1150; Ram Lal Narang v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1979) 2 SCC 322: 1979 SCC (Cri) 479, relied on

Mohd. Ahmed Yasin Mansuri v. State of Maharashtra, 1994 Cri LJ 1854 (Bom), overruled

(7) S. 167(5) as amended in State of West Bengal

[1928] — Ss. 167(5) and (6) (as amended in the State of W.B.) — Application for extending the time for completing the investigation filed by IO after the expiry of the statutory period prescribed by S. 167(5)(iii) — Grant of — Permissibility — Where the court had still not passed a discharge order, validity of extension of time on such an application, upheld — Further held, there was no conflict between the ratio in Falguni Dutta case and that in Bimal Chandra Saha case — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 409 — W.B. Criminal Law Amendment (Special Courts) Act, 1949 (21 of 1949)

The appellant was involved as accused in an offence under Section 409, IPC. During investigation of the case he applied for, and got, a pre-arrest bail order and surrendered himself before the Magistrate on 18-3-1993. As the investigation was not completed within two years therefrom, he moved the said Magistrate on 22-9-1995 for discharging him under Section 167(5), CrPC. The Magistrate dismissed the application pointing out that the case being triable only by a Special Judge under the West Bengal Criminal Law Amendment (Special Courts) Act, 1949 the order sought by the appellant could be passed only by the Special Judge. A Single Judge of the High Court while holding the Magistrate to be competent to pass an order under Section 167(5) in the instant case, granted further time to the IO, on an application filed by him, on being satisfied that the IO could not complete the investigation due to sickness. The question was whether time could have been extended without the IO moving for such extension before the expiry of the statutory period. A further question was whether there was conflict between the decisions in State of W.B. v. Falguni Dutta case and Durgesh Chandra Saha v. Bimal Chandra Saha case. Upholding the Single Judge's order and answering the second question in the negative,

Held :

On the facts of the instant case the two years' period mentioned in Section 167(5)(iii) must be reckoned from 18-3-1993 on which date the appellant surrendered himself in court.

There is no conflict between the decisions in State of W.B. v. Falguni Dutta case and Durgesh Chandra Saha v. Bimal Chandra Saha case and the ratio was applied on the factual position in each case. Nirmal Kanti Roy v. State of W.B., (1998) 4 SCC 590: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1100: AIR 1998 SC 2322.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.M. Punchhi, C.J. and K.T. Thomas and S. Rajendra Babu, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-4-1998]

Durgesh Chandra Saha v. Bimal Chandra Saha, (1996) 1 SCC 341: 1996 SCC (Cri) 109, impliedly distinguished

State of W.B. v. Pranab Ranjan Roy, (1998) 3 SCC 209: 1998 SCC (Cri) 730, followed

[1929] — S. 167(5) (as amended by W.B. Act 24 of 1988) — Failure to conclude investigation within the statutory period — Obligation of court to stop further investigation and discharge the accused — Held, sub-s. (5) as amended in West Bengal does not apply where investigation has been completed and charge-sheet filed — It applies only where investigation is still pending — Object of the amended provision is to ensure speedy investigation. The right against deprivation of personal liberty would be affected if the trial is kept pending after completion of the investigation without just cause — Constitution of India — Art. 21

(7) S. 167(5) as amended in State of West Bengal (contd.)

The language of Section 167(5) of CrPC as amended by the West Bengal Act is quite clear in indicating that the said section is applicable only in a case where the investigation was still pending but not in a case where investigation had been completed and the charge-sheet had been filed. Section 167(5) as amended is intended to ensure speedy completion of investigation within the time frame specified therein otherwise to face an order of discharge of the accused against whom investigation without any just cause to the satisfaction of the court has been kept pending. Where investigation has been completed, a different situation, not contemplated under Section 167(5) CrPC emerges. If a criminal case is kept pending for a very long time without any just cause thereby seriously affecting the guarantee under Article 21 against deprivation of personal liberty, the law is well-settled that the court, in an appropriate case may quash the criminal proceeding. Hence, unnecessary liberal construction of Section 167(5) CrPC with a view to protect the right against deprivation of personal liberty is not called for. Durgesh Chandra Saha v. Bimal Chandra Saha, (1996) 1 SCC 341: 1996 SCC (Cri) 109: AIR 1996 SC 740.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-11-1995]

Abdul Rehman Antulay v. R.S. Nayak, (1992) 1 SCC 225: 1992 SCC (Cri) 93, relied on [1930] — S. 167(5) (as amended by S. 4 of W.B. Act 24 of 1988) — Provision in, for discharging the accused and stopping further investigation — Held, not applicable in case the investigation had already been completed and charge-sheet, filed — However, the question whether in the facts of the instant case the said provision was not inapplicable, left open. State of W.B. v. Pranab Ranjan Roy, (1998) 3 SCC 209: 1998 SCC (Cri) 730: AIR 1998 SC 1887.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-3-1998]

[1931] — Ss. 167(5) (as amended by S. 4 of W.B. Act 24 of 1988), 436, 437, 204, 205, 206 and 161 — Word "appearance" in S. 167(5)(iii) as in Ss. 436 and 437 — Held, means physical appearance and not appearance through Advocate — Contextual meaning applied — Hence, claim to benefit of S. 167(5)(iii) on account of failure to file charge-sheet within the statutory time-limit from the date of appearance through Advocate, rejected — Further held, in a different context, as in Ss. 204, 205 and 206 of CrPC or in certain provisions of CPC, that very word may have different connotations or different shades of meaning — Interpretation of Statutes — CPC, 1908, Or. 9 Rr. 6 & 8, Or. 41 R. 17, Or. 3 R. 1 — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 — Ss. 13(2) and (1)(e)

The respondent was an officer of Central Inland Water Transport, Calcutta. He was prosecuted under Section 13(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 on the allegation that he had acquired assets disproportionate to his known sources of income. The case was registered on 27-8-1990. On 29-2-1992 his advocate filed a vakalatnama in the Court and applied for the return of certain documents. On 4-5-1994, the investigating agency submitted charge-sheet for offence under Section 13(2) read with Section 13(1)(e) of that Act. On being summoned to appear before the court, the respondent by his application dated 13-7-1996 sought his discharge under Section 167(5)(iii) of CrPC (as amended in W.B.) on the premise that he had appeared in the Court on 29-2-1992 through his counsel and that no charge-sheet was filed till the expiry of two years from the said date. Upholding his plea, the Special Judge discharged him and the decision was upheld by the High Court. Before the Supreme Court the appellant-State contended that "appearance" in Section 167(5) of CrPC contemplated the accused's surrender to the process or control of the court while according to the respondent mere appearance through advocate was enough for the purpose of Section 167(5). Allowing the State's appeal,

Held :

When construing the word "appearance" in Section 167(5) of CrPC (as amended in W.B. by Act 24 of 1988) one has to look at the context in which it is used. In other contexts the same word "appearance" may have different connotations or at least different shades of meaning e.g. Order 9 Rules 6 and 8 of the Code of Civil Procedure prescribe the consequence when the plaintiff or defendant in a suit does not "appear". Order 41 Rule 17 of that Code deals with the consequence when the appellant in an appeal does not "appear". In all such instances "appearance" would include appearance by the advocate because it is made so clear in Order 3 Rule 1 of the Code that any appearance required by law to be made in any court may be made "by the party in person, or by his recognised agent or by his pleader on his behalf". Even under the CrPC the word "appear" or "making appearance" can include appearance through the advocate without the accused concerned physically presenting himself in certain situations. Sections 204, 205 and 206 of the CrPC contain instances where appearance made through the pleader can as well be regarded as appearance of the accused. But that principle cannot be carried forward to the situation in Section 167(5) of the Code. The words "made his appearance" in that sub-section cannot be truncated from the particular context in which that expression is used. It is a salutary principle in the sphere of interpretation of statutory clauses that words in a provision must not be understood merely by their ordinary meanings dehors the context in which such words are used.

The words "made his appearance" in Section 167(5) are used along with the preceding words which by themselves form into a composite collocation as thus: "From the date on which the accused was arrested or made his appearance." The purpose of the section is to impose a time schedule for completion of investigation and such time schedule is to commence from either of the said dates and not from the date of registration of the crime or the date of first information. The sublime idea behind this provision is that the investigating agency who gets opportunity to question the accused under Section 161 of the Code cannot be permitted to dodge with or further prolong the investigation without special reasons and in the interest of justice.

The giving of a different interpretation to the words "made his appearance" in Section 167(5) would enable the accused to keep himself away from the court and claim the benefit of discharge from the offence on the ground that investigation was not completed within the prescribed period.

The appearance mentioned in Sections 436 and 437 of CrPC can only mean physical appearance of the accused and not appearance by counsel because the very notion of bail presupposes restraint of the accused and hence the person who wishes to be released on bail is to appear and surrender before the court. The word "appearance" in Section 167(5) cannot be understood different from the same word used in Sections 436 and 437 of the Code.

In the present case, the respondent had not made his physical appearance before the Special Judge at any time before the charge-sheet was laid. Hence there is no question of invoking the bar contemplated in Section 167(5). State of W.B. v. Pranab Ranjan Roy, (1998) 3 SCC 209: 1998 SCC (Cri) 730: AIR 1998 SC 1887.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-3-1998]

[1932] — S. 167(5) (as amended by S. 4 of W.B. Act of 1988) — Object of — Explained

The purpose of the sub-section is to impose a time schedule for completion of investigation and such time schedule is to commence either "from the date of arrest of the accused or the date when he made his appearance in court". State of W.B. v. Pranab Ranjan Roy, (1998) 3 SCC 209: 1998 SCC (Cri) 730: AIR 1998 SC 1887.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-3-1998]

[1933] — S. 167(5) (as amended in the State of W.B.) — Provision for passing the order of discharge on the expiry of the prescribed period — Held, not mandatory — Factors to be considered by the Magistrate before ordering stoppage of investigation, stated

The order stopping further investigation into the offence and the consequential order of discharge are not intended to be automatic sequel to the failure to complete investigation within the period fixed in the sub-section as is evident from the succeeding words in Section 167(5). Even in a case where the order stopping investigation and the consequent discharge of accused has been made that is not the last word on it because Section 167(6) opens another avenue for moving the Sessions Judge. Therefore, the time schedule shown in Section 167(5) of the Code is not to be treated with rigidity and it is not mandatory that on the expiry of the period indicated therein the Magistrate should necessarily pass the order of discharge of the accused. Before ordering stoppage of investigation the Magistrate shall consider whether, on the facts of that case, further investigation would be necessary to foster interest of criminal justice. The Magistrate at that stage must look into the record of investigation to ascertain the progress of investigation thus far registered. If substantial part of investigation was by then over, the Magistrate should seriously ponder over the question whether it would be conducive to the interest of justice to stop further investigation and discharge the accused. Nirmal Kanti Roy v. State of W.B., (1998) 4 SCC 590: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1100: AIR 1998 SC 2322.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.M. Punchhi, C.J. and K.T. Thomas and S. Rajendra Babu, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-4-1998]

State of W.B. v. Falguni Dutta, (1993) 3 SCC 288: 1993 SCC (Cri) 815, relied on

[1934] — Ss. 167(5) (as substituted for W.B. by W.B. Act 24 of 1988) and 468 — Previous sanction of the State Government under — Necessity to obtain, held, arises only after, and not before, the expiry of the period of six months from the act complained of — Hence, where the Magistrate extended the statutory time-limit of six months to complete investigation, High Court's order quashing the said proceedings on the ground that sanction for prosecution under S. 92(1), had not been obtained within the first six months, held, bad — Bengal Excise Act, 1909 (5 of 1909) — S. 92(1)

The officers of the Excise Department of the West Bengal State seized a huge quantity of spirit from the office-cum-godown of a company. Since the spirit was stored without any valid authority, they sent samples of the spirit to the Chemical Examiner for testing. On the same day two persons were arrested and produced before the Magistrate.

The report of the Chemical Examiner was received more than six months after the seizure of the spirit. The officers of the Excise Department thought that the respondents herein, besides the persons initially arrested, were also responsible for the said offence and were liable to be prosecuted under the West Bengal Excise Act, 1909. Therefore, in view of the expiry of the first six months, they sought the order of the Magistrate for continuing the investigation and also sought the State Government's order sanctioning prosecution. The Magistrate granted further time for investigation but at the instance of the respondents the High Court quashed all the proceedings on the ground that the prosecution had failed to apply for sanction before the expiry of the period of six months and that the sanction had not been obtained even by then. Before the Supreme Court, the State contended that when the prosecution report had not been filed there was no scope for quashing the proceedings. On this ground and also on another ground

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Under Section 92(1) of the Bengal Excise Act, 1909 there is no ban on the Magistrate against taking cognizance of the offence under the Act if one of the two conditions is satisfied. If the prosecution has been instituted within six months of the act alleged there is no question of producing any sanction as the Magistrate would then be free to take cognizance under the Act. But if the aforesaid six months' period is over the court can still take cognizance of the offence under the Act when the prosecution is instituted with the previous sanction of the State Government. After the expiry of the initial period of six months no further period of limitation is prescribed in the Act for instituting the prosecution supported by the sanction. The High Court's view that steps for obtaining sanction should have been adopted before the expiry of the first six months' period has no support in Section 92 or any other provision of the Act. However, even the necessity for obtaining sanction would arise only if the prosecution has not been instituted till the expiry of the said period of six months. Hence, there is no scope for suggesting that the proceedings for securing sanction should have been commenced before the expiry of the said period of six months. (Paras 12 and 13). State of W.B. v. Rashmoy Das, (2000) 1 SCC 76: 2000 SCC (Cri) 103: AIR 2000 SC 228.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-12-1999]

Supdt. and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs v. Mahendra Singh, 1972 Cri LJ 544 (Cal), impliedly approved

(8) Applicability in cases of special statutes

See also under Sections 161-162, above

[1935] — S. 167 — Expanded period of detention under TADA/POTA, for completing investigation — Validity — In view of execution of terrorist acts in a chillingly efficient manner as a result of high conspiracy linked with anti-national elements both inside and outside the country such a provision, held, reasonable — Constitution of India — Arts. 14 and 21 — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987 — S. 20 — Prevention of Terrorism Act, 2002 — Ss. 49(6) & (7)

In the instant petitions filed under Article 32, the petitioners challenged the constitutionality of various provisions of the Prevention of Terrorism Act, 2002 (for short "POTA"). They contended that:

In view of the provisions of Section 49(7) there was likelihood of grant of bail only after minimum detention for one year, (b) some of the courts had erroneously interpreted the proviso to Section 49(7) to mean that power to grant bail under Section 49(6) could be exercised only after the expiry of the period of one year from the date of detention of the accused.

Dismissing the petitions,

Held :

Section 49 of the Act is similar to Section 20 of TADA, constitutional validity of which has been upheld in Kartar Singh case, (1994) 3 SCC 569. Usually the overt and covert acts of terrorism are executed in a chillingly efficient manner as a result of high conspiracy, which is invariably linked with anti-national elements both inside and outside the country. So an expanded period of detention is required to complete the investigation. Such a comparatively long period for solving the case is quite justifiable. Consequently, Sections 49(6) and (7) are not unreasonable. In spite of this, bail could be obtained for an accused booked under POTA if the court is satisfied as postulated in Section 49(7) after hearing the Public Prosecutor. Since such satisfaction has to be arrived at based on the particular facts and after considering the relevant aspects, the unreasonableness attributed to Section 49(7) is not fair. (Para 67). People's Union for Civil Liberties v. Union of India, (2004) 9 SCC 580: AIR 2004 SC 456.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-12-2003]

Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1994) 3 SCC 569: 1994 SCC (Cri) 899, relied on [1936] — S. 167 — Bail — Failure to complete investigationp within the statutory period of 180 days — TADA case — Designated Court not justified in extending the period for completing the investigation without any report of the Public Prosecutor and without the accused being produced and informed by the Designated Court that the question of grant of extension of the period of investigation was under consideration — Validity of order granting extension is to be considered with reference to the facts as existing on the date of the order — Right of the accused to be released on bail on ground of non-filing of challan within the statutory period is enforceable only prior to the filing of the challan and is extinguished on challan being filed — Matter remitted to the Designated Court with a direction to dispose of the bail application pending before it keeping in view the principles laid down in Hitendra Vishnu Thakur and Sanjay Dutt cases — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987 — S. 20(4)(bb). Devinderpal Singh v. Govt. (NCT of Delhi), (1996) 1 SCC 44.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S.C. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-11-1995]

Hitendra Vishnu Thakur v. State of Maharashtra, (1994) 4 SCC 602: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1087; Sanjay Dutt v. State, (1994) 5 SCC 410: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1433, followed

[1937] — Ss. 167(2), 57, 437 and 439 — Effect of Amending Act 43 of 1993 whereby S. 20(4)(b), TADA amended and S. 20(4)(bb) inserted — Modification thereby of S. 167(2), CrPC in relation to TADA matters by substituting "180 days" for "one year" at both places and adding second proviso in S. 167(2) providing for extension of period to one year only on Public Prosecutor showing progress of the investigation and the specific reasons for extension beyond 180 days — Nature of accused's right to get bail under TADA and effect of the 1993 Amendment — Amendment whether to operate retrospectively and apply to cases pending investigation in which charge-sheet or challan not filed till 22-5-1993, the date on which the amendment came into force — Held, S. 167(2) proviso, CrPC r/w S. 20(4)(b), TADA create an indefeasible right in an accused to seek bail on default of investigating agency in completing the investigation within the prescribed period — In such situation Court duty bound to inform the accused of his right to seek bail and enable him to make an application — But release on bail not automatic — Accused must make an application for bail of which notice to be issued to PP to oppose it or secure extension under clause (bb) — Then also, notice of the report submitted by PP for extension under clause (bb), to be issued to the accused for opportunity to oppose the extension on all legitimate and legal grounds — Issuance of notice to both sides and hearing them subserves the ends of justice and fair play — It meets the requirements of natural justice — Further held, the amendment by Act 43 of 1993 being procedural in nature would operate retrospectively and so both clause (b) (as amended) and clause (bb) of S. 20(4) apply to cases pending investigation on 22-5-1993 in which challan/charge-sheet not filed in court — Constitution of India — Art. 22(4) — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987 — S. 20(4) r/w S. 167(2), CrPC. Hitendra Vishnu Thakur v. State of Maharashtra, (1994) 4 SCC 602: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1087: AIR 1994 SC 2623.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-7-1994]

[1938] — S. 167(2) proviso — First proviso inserted by S. 49(2), POTA after proviso to S. 167(2) CrPC — Nature of — Held, the proviso has been inserted in relation to the proviso to S. 167(2) CrPC and not in respect of S. 167(2) — Therefore, what is introduced by way of exception by S. 49(2) POTA is in relation to the proviso to S. 167(2) — Hence contention of the appellant that since in S. 49(2)(a) the period of "15 days" in S. 167(2) CrPC has been substituted with "30 days", therefore S. 49(2)(b) can be resorted to only during the period of 30 days, not acceptable — Prevention of Terrorism Act, 2002 — S. 49(2)(b). Maulavi Hussein Haji Abraham Umarji v. State of Gujarat, (2004) 6 SCC 672: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1815: AIR 2004 SC 3946.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-7-2004]

[1939] — S. 167(2) and its proviso — Provisos inserted by S. 49(2)(b), POTA after proviso to S. 167(2) CrPC — Police remand — Application for, when accused in judicial custody — Time period within which such application has to be made — Safeguards built therein — Considerations to be kept in mind by Special Judge disposing of such application — Held, there is no restriction that such an application for police remand can be resorted to only during a period of thirty days from the arrest of accused — Acceptance of application for police custody is not as a matter of course — There are inbuilt safeguards, firstly, that the investigation officer must file an affidavit justifying the prayer and secondly, in an appropriate case, the reason for delayed motion — Said prayer is to be considered in its proper perspective, in accordance with law keeping in view the object of POTA and the reasons and/or explanation offered — Prevention of Terrorism Act, 2002 — S. 49(2)(b)

(8) Applicability in cases of special statutes (contd.)

On 27-2-2002 some persons died at Godhra in the State of Gujarat and several persons were injured when allegedly a train was attacked and set ablaze. The first information report was lodged and various persons were arrested in connection with the alleged occurrence. Initially, the case was registered for alleged commission of offences punishable under various provisions of the Penal Code, 1860 and other statutes. Subsequently, an application was filed in the Court of Judicial Magistrate, First Class, Railways seeking addition of offences punishable under Sections 3(1)(a), (b) and 3(2) of POTA. The appellant was arrested on 6-2-2003. He was remanded to police custody till 11-2-2003 and subsequently the police custody was extended till 13-2-2003. As the application for addition of offences covered by POTA was not pressed earlier, a subsequent application was filed and the Additional Sessions Judge accepted the prayer.

As an application, filed thereafter, for extending the police remand was rejected, a criminal revision was filed before the Sessions Judge. The Special Court was constituted under Section 23 of POTA on 6-3-2003. Sanction order as required under Section 50 of POTA was also passed so far as the appellant was concerned. The revision application which was filed questioning rejection of the prayer for police custody was withdrawn and an application in terms of Section 49(2)(b) of POTA was filed on 24-4-2003. The prayer was accepted by the Special Judge, POTA. Questioning the legality of the said order, an appeal under Section 34(1) of POTA was filed before the High Court which came to be dismissed by the impugned judgment, against which the appellant was before the Supreme Court by special leave.

The scope and ambit of Section 49(2) of the Prevention of Terrorism Act, 2002 (in short "POTA") fell for consideration in this appeal.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

It is a well-settled principle in law that the court cannot read anything into a statutory provision which is plain and unambiguous. A statute is an edict of the legislature. The language employed in a statute is the determinative factor of legislative intent. The question is not what may be supposed and has been intended but what has been said. (Paras 16 and 18)

While interpreting a provision the court only interprets the law and cannot legislate it. If a provision of law is misused and subjected to the abuse of the process of law, it is for the legislature to amend, modify or repeal it, if deemed necessary. (Para 20)

Two principles of construction — one relating to casus omissus and the other in regard to reading the statute as a whole — appear to be well settled. Under the first principle a casus omissus cannot be supplied by the court except in the case of clear necessity and when reason for it is found in the four corners of the statute itself; but at the same time a casus omissus should not be readily inferred and for that purpose all the parts of a statute or section must be construed together and every clause of a section should be construed with reference to the context and other clauses thereof so that the construction to be put on a particular provision makes a consistent enactment of the whole statute. This would be more so if literal construction of a particular clause leads to manifestly absurd or anomalous results which could not have been intended by the legislature. (Para 21)

Now, the proviso inserted by Section 49(2)(b) of POTA is in relation to the proviso to Section 167(2) CrPC and not in respect of Section 167(2). Therefore, what is introduced by way of an exception by Section 49(2)(b) of POTA is in relation to the proviso to Section 167(2). That being the position, the interpretation suggested by the appellant that since in Section 49(2)(a) the period of "15 days" in Section 167(2) CrPC has been substituted to be "30 days" therefore, Section 49(2)(b) can be resorted to only during the period of 30 days, cannot be accepted. Section 49(2)(b) of POTA is not controlled by Section 167(2) CrPC. (Paras 25, 6 and 9)

It is to be noted that the acceptance of an application for police custody when an accused is in judicial custody is not as a matter of course. Section 49(2)(b) provides inbuilt safeguards against its misuse by mandating the filing of an affidavit by the investigating officer to justify the prayer and in an appropriate case, the reason for delayed motion. The Special Judge before whom such an application is made has to consider the prayer in its proper perspective and in accordance with law keeping in view the purpose for which POTA was enacted, the reasons and/or explanation offered, and pass the necessary order. Therefore, the apprehension of the appellant that there is likelihood of misuse of the provision is without substance. In any event, that cannot be a ground to give an extended meaning to the provision in the manner suggested by the appellant. (Para 25). Maulavi Hussein Haji Abraham Umarji v. State of Gujarat, (2004) 6 SCC 672: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1815: AIR 2004 SC 3946.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-7-2004]

Institute of Chartered Accountants of India v. Price Waterhouse, (1997) 6 SCC 312; Crawford v. Spooner, (1846) 6 Moo PC 1: 4 MIA 179; State of Gujarat v. Dilipbhai Nathjibhai Patel, (1998) 3 SCC 234: 1998 SCC (Cri) 737; Stock v. Frank Jones (Tipton) Ltd., (1978) 1 All ER 948: (1978) 1 WLR 231 (HL); Vickers Sons and Maxim Ltd. v. Evans, 1910 AC 444: 79 LJKB 954 (HL); Jumma Masjid v. Kodimaniandra Deviah, AIR 1962 SC 847; Lenigh Valley Coal Co. v. Yensavage, 218 FR 547; Union of India v. Filip Tiago De Gama of Vedem Vasco De Gama, (1990) 1 SCC 277; D.R. Venkatachalam v. Transport Commr., (1977) 2 SCC 273; CST v. Popular Trading Co., (2000) 5 SCC 511, relied on

[1940] — S. 167(2) proviso — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987 — Ss. 20(4) & (8) — Default in submission of charge-sheet within the statutory period — Accused becomes entitled to be released on bail — But if the accused fails to apply for bail when such right accrued, he cannot exercise that right after the charge-sheet has been filed and cognizance has been taken — Accused's right to be released on bail should not be defeated by keeping the applications pending till the charge-sheet is submitted

Sub-section (4) of Section 20 of TADA makes the provision of Section 167 of the Code applicable in respect of offences under TADA except that the periods prescribed for the authorised detention in respect of such offences during which the investigation should be completed are different. After the expiry of periods which have been specified in Section 20(4)(b) and Section 20(4)(bb), the accused for an offence under TADA acquires the right to be released on bail, in terms of proviso (a) to Section 167(2) of the Code. This right cannot be defeated by any court if the accused concerned is prepared and does furnish bail bonds to the satisfaction of the court concerned.

This right cannot be exercised after the charge-sheet has been submitted and cognizance has been taken, because in that event the remand of the accused concerned including one who is alleged to have committed an offence under TADA, is not under Section 167(2) but under other provisions of the Code.

If an accused charged with any kind of offence becomes entitled to be released on bail under proviso (a) to Section 167(2), that statutory right should not be defeated by keeping the applications pending till the charge-sheets are submitted so that the right which had accrued is extinguished and defeated. Mohd. Iqbal Madar Sheikh v. State of Maharashtra, (1996) 1 SCC 722: 1996 SCC (Cri) 202.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, C.J. and B.P. Jeevan Reddy and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-1-1996]

Sanjay Dutt v. State through CBI (II), (1994) 5 SCC 410: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1433, followed

[1941] — S. 167(2) proviso and Ch. XXXIII (Ss. 436 to 450) — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987 — S. 20(4) — Accused released on bail on ground of default in completion of investigation within the statutory period — He shall be deemed to have been so released under Ch. XXXIII of the Code — His bail cannot be cancelled on mere filing of charge-sheet — His bail can be cancelled only when a case for cancellation has been made out under S. 437(5) or S. 439(2) of the Code

Any accused released on bail under proviso (a) to Section 167(2) of the Code read with Section 20(4)(b) or Section 20(4)(bb) TADA, because of the default on the part of the investigating agency to conclude the investigation within the period prescribed, in view of proviso (a) to Section 167(2) itself, shall be deemed to have been so released under the provisions of Chapter XXXIII of the Code. It cannot be held that an accused charged of any offence, including offences under TADA, if released on bail because of the default in completion of the investigation, then no sooner the charge-sheet is filed, the order granting bail to such accused is to be cancelled. The bail of such accused who has been released, because of the default on the part of the investigating officer to complete the investigation, can be cancelled, but not only on the ground that after the release charge-sheet has been submitted against such accused for an offence under TADA. For cancelling the bail, the well-settled principles in respect of cancellation of bail have to be made out. In view of deeming provision under proviso (a) to Section 167(2), the order granting bail shall be deemed to be one under Section 437(1) or sub-section (2) or Section 439(1) and that order can be cancelled when a case for cancellation is made out under Sections 437(5) and 439(2) of the Code. But for that, the sole ground should not be that after the release of such accused the charge-sheet has been submitted. Mohd. Iqbal Madar Sheikh v. State of Maharashtra, (1996) 1 SCC 722: 1996 SCC (Cri) 202.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, C.J. and B.P. Jeevan Reddy and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-1-1996]

Aslam Babalal Desai v. State of Maharashtra, (1992) 4 SCC 272: 1992 SCC (Cri) 870; Raghubir Singh v. State of Bihar, (1986) 4 SCC 481: 1986 SCC (Cri) 511, followed

[1942] — S. 167(2) r/w S. 49(2)(b) of the Prevention of Terrorism Act, 2002 — Accused's right to bail in POTA case on failure of prosecution to complete investigation within statutory period of 90 days — Prior to expiry of said period, Special Court in exercise of power under S. 49(2)(b) grant-

(8) Applicability in cases of special statutes (contd.)

ing extension of time to complete investigation — Extension of time was proper — Hence, contention that since accused acquired an indefeasible right to be released on bail on the expiry of 90 days from the date of his arrest, the Special Judge was not justified in rejecting the application for grant of bail, held, not sustainable — Prevention of Terrorism Act, 2002 — S. 49(2)(b) (Paras 17 and 18). Ateef Nasir Mulla v. State of Maharashtra, (2005) 7 SCC 29: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1587: AIR 2005 SC 3293: 2005 Cri LJ 3748.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-8-2005]

Hitendra Vishnu Thakur v. State of Maharashtra, (1994) 4 SCC 602: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1087, relied on

[1943] — S. 167 [as amended by S. 43-D(2)(b) of Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act, 1967] — Extension of time for completion of investigation — Jurisdictional fact — Existence of — Held, Special Judge had jurisdiction under 1967 Act — Rejection of bail by courts below therefore, proper — Commission of offences under the Act — Relevance of declaration of organisation concerned as "unlawful association" — Held, merely because organisation concerned had not been declared an "unlawful association" when petitioner was arrested, does not mean that the said organisation could not have indulged in terrorist acts or that the petitioner could not have had knowledge of such activities — Hence extension of period of custody under S. 43(2)(b) and denial of bail, justified — National Investigation Agency Act, 2008, S. 21 — Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act, 1967, Ss. 2(1)(o), 3, 13 and 15 to 24 and S. 43(2)(b) (which amended S. 167 CrPC)

The petitioner was first arrested for sending money to an extremist organisation. Thereafter during pendency of his bail application before a Single Judge of the High Court, the Government by Notification dated 9-7-2009, in exercise of its powers under Section 3 of the Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act, 1967, declared the said organisation as an "unlawful association". Therefore, the Single Judge dismissed the petitioner's bail application on the ground of jurisdiction. The petitioner, thereafter filed statutory bail application before the Special Judge, which also was rejected. Thereafter, on an application made by NIA (National Investigation Agency constituted under the National Investigation Agency Act, 2008), the Special Judge extended the period for completion of investigation by a further period of 60 days in terms of Section 43-D(2)(b) of the 1967 Act as amended, read with Section 167 CrPC. The petitioner thereafter, approached the Division Bench of the High Court under Section 21 of the National Investigation Agency Act, 2008 against the orders of the Single Judge and the Special Judge, which by reason of the impugned order was dismissed.

Dismissing both the SLPs,

Held :

The submission that the Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act, 1967 would not be attracted to the facts of the case is not tenable. On behalf of the petitioners, it was submitted that merely because the organisation concerned had been declared an "unlawful association" when the petitioner was arrested, the said organisation could not have indulged in terrorist acts or that the petitioner could not have had knowledge of such activities. Since the Special Judge had the jurisdiction to extend the time for completion of the investigation, the submissions regarding the grant of statutory bail have to be rejected. (Paras 16 and 17). Redaul Hussain Khan v. National Investigation Agency, (2010) 1 SCC 521.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-11-2009]

[1944] — Ss. 167(1) and 2(h) — 'Investigation' — Scope of — FERA/Customs cases — Not limited to that made by police officer alone but includes that made by authorised or empowered officer under special Acts such as FERA or Customs Act

The word 'investigation' cannot be limited only to police investigation but on the other hand, the said word is with wider connotation and flexible so as to include the investigation carried on by any agency whether he be a police officer or empowered or authorised officer or a person not being a police officer under the direction of a Magistrate to make an investigation vested with the power of investigation.

It cannot be said that either the Officer of Enforcement or the Customs Officer is not empowered with the power of investigation though not with the power of filing a final report as in the case of a police officer. Directorate of Enforcement v. Deepak Mahajan, (1994) 3 SCC 440: 1994 SCC (Cri) 785: AIR 1994 SC 1775: 1994 Cri LJ 2269: (1994) 2 BLJR 912: (1994) 2 An LT(Cri) 173: (1994) 70 ELT 12.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-1994]

[1945] — S. 167(2) — Entitlement to bail — Delay by Magistrate — Effect — Though complaint under S. 22 TOHO lodged within 90 days, Magistrate delaying in taking of cognizance — Effect — Even assuming that the complaint under S. 22 TOHO was a police report under S. 173(2)

CrPC (which it was not), the requirement of filing such report or complaint within 90 days, held, was satisfied on the filing of such report within time — Further held, delay by court in taking cognizance would not mean that a new right to bail under S. 167(2) CrPC has been created — Transplantation of Human Organs Act, 1994, S. 22. Jeewan Kumar Raut v. CBI, (2009) 7 SCC 526: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 475: (2009) 80 AIC 243 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-7-2009]

[1946] — Ss. 167(2) and 173(2) — Applicability to provisions of Transplantation of Human Organs Act, 1994 — Application, scope and implications of S. 22 — Whether a bar to applicability of Ss. 167(2) and 173(2) CrPC — CBI being an authorised agency under S. 13 TOHO to investigate offences thereunder, registering FIR — S. 22 TOHO prohibiting taking of cognizance except on a complaint made by an appropriate authority — Appellant-accused applying for bail under S. 167(2) CrPC — Held, S. 167(2) CrPC is not attracted for offences under TOHO as police report under S. 173(2) CrPC by necessary implication is forbidden under S. 22 TOHO — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 120-B r/w 326, 342, 417, 465, 473, 506 and 307 — Transplantation of Human Organs Act, 1994, Ss. 22, 18, 19 and 20

A case was lodged against the appellants (medical practitioners) in the police station for offences under IPC and Transplantation of Human Organs Act, 1994 (TOHO). The matter was transferred to CBI and it lodged a fresh FIR on 8-2-2008. A-2 was arrested on 10-2-2008 and produced before the Magistrate on 11-2-2008. A-1 surrendered on 17-2-2008 and was produced before the Magistrate on 18-2-2008. Government authorisation was accorded under Section 22 TOHO vide order dated 11-4-2008. A complaint was filed by CBI before the Magistrate for taking cognizance against the appellant medical practitioners for commission of the offences under Section 120-B r/w Sections 326, 342, 417, 465, 473, 506 and 307 IPC and Sections 18, 19 and 20, Transplantation of Human Organs Act, 1994 (TOHO).

Applicability of Section 167(2) CrPC for cognizance taken by the Magistrate under Section 22 TOHO was the question involved in this appeal. A-2 filed a bail application under Section 167(2) CrPC on 9-5-2008. The High Court by the impugned order held that as the complaint was filed within 90 days, even if the Magistrate had delayed in taking cognizance, the petitioners were not entitled to protection under Section 167(2) CrPC.

Dismissing the appeals,

Held :

Section 167(2) CrPC would not apply to provisions under TOHO. Ordinarily although in terms of CrPC, CBI upon completion of investigation and upon obtaining remand of the accused from time to time, was required to file a police report, it was precluded from doing so by reason of the provisions contained in Section 22 TOHO. Section 22 TOHO prohibits taking of cognizance except on a complaint made by an appropriate authority. By reason of Section 22 TOHO, Section 173(2) CrPC by implication is necessarily not applicable. Thus when the question of submitting a report in terms of Section 173(2) would not arise, Section 167(2) CrPC would also not be attracted. (Paras 32 and 25 to 28)

It is one thing to say that the court could take recourse to the procedure laid down in Section 202 CrPC or even reject the complaint but then only because such a course of action could be resorted to by the Magistrate, the same, by itself, would not lead to a conclusion that the complaint petition should have been treated to be a police report; the logical corollary whereof being to invoke the provisions of Section 167(2) CrPC. (Para 29)

Even assuming for the sake of argument that Section 167(2) CrPC requires filing of a report within 90 days and the complaint petition having been filed within the said period, the requirements thereof stood satisfied. Appellant 2 having been arrested on 10-2-2008 and Appellant 1 having surrendered on 17-2-2008 as also the complaint petition having been filed on 29-4-2008, the requirement of Section 167(2) stood satisfied. Only because the court itself took a long time in taking cognizance of the offence i.e. after the expiry of the period of 90 days, the same would not mean that any new right would be created in favour of the appellants thereby. (Paras 32 and 33)

A distinction between a remand of an accused at pre-cognizance stage vis-à-vis the post-cognizance stage is apparent. Whereas the remand to custody at a pre-cognizance stage is to be made in terms of Section 167(2) CrPC, an order of remand of an accused at post-cognizance stage can be effected only in terms of Section 309(2) thereof. (Para 34). Jeewan Kumar Raut v. CBI, (2009) 7 SCC 526: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 475: (2009) 80 AIC 243 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-7-2009]

Madhu Bala v. Suresh Kumar, (1997) 8 SCC 476: 1998 SCC (Cri) 111; Dinesh Dalmia v. CBI, (2007) 8 SCC 770: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 36; Sanjay Dutt v. State, (1994) 5 SCC 410: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1433; Mithabhai Pashabhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 332: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 1047, relied on

Moosakoya v. State of Kerala, 2008 Cri LJ 2388 (Ker), approved

(8) Applicability in cases of special statutes (contd.)

[1947] — S. 167 — 'Accused' — Meaning of, in the context — Covers person arrested under FERA or Customs Act — Different from 'person accused of an offence' under Art. 20(3) — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 11 — General Clauses Act, 1897 — S. 3(42)

Though the word "person" is defined in the Indian Penal Code (S. 11) and the General Clauses Act [S. 3(42)] which are identical and are not exhaustive but an inclusive one, the words 'accused' or 'accused person' or 'accused of an offence' are not defined either in the Indian Penal Code or in the Indian Evidence Act or in the General Clauses Act, 1897. In the Code of Criminal Procedure also, these words are not defined except an inclusive meaning of the word 'accused' is given in the Explanation to S. 273 of the Code of 1973, of course, confined only to the mode of taking and recording evidence in the course of the trial or other proceedings as envisaged in the said section. Though this explanation of the word 'accused' limited to that S. 273 cannot and should not be strained and stretched to such an extreme extent to make it applicable in all circumstances wherever the word 'accused' appears in the Code, this explanation gives a clue providing or suggesting an answer to the problem.

The prohibitive sweep of Art. 20(3) which imposes the ban on self-accusation reads, "No person accused of any offence shall be compelled to be a witness against himself." To bring a person within the meaning of 'accused of any offence', that person must assimilate the character of an 'accused person' in the sense that he must be accused of any offence.

While referring to a person arrested and detained neither Art. 22 nor S. 167 employs the expression "accused of any offence". Section 24 of the Evidence Act uses the expression 'accused person' whereas in Ss. 25 and 27, the identical expression "person accused of any offence" is used. But in S. 26 neither of these two expressions is used but "any person". It was only while in examining the admissibility or otherwise of a statement of an 'accused person' or "a person accused of any offence", this Court in a series of judgments has dealt with the connotation of these two expressions but not otherwise.

The word 'accused' in the Code denotes different meanings according to the context in which it is deployed; in that sometimes the said word is employed to denote a person arrested, sometimes a person against whom there is an accusation, but who is yet not put on trial and sometimes to denote a person on trial and so on.

An officer-in-charge of a police station who is empowered under S. 156 to investigate on an information received under S. 154 or otherwise takes up the investigation by proceeding to the spot "for the discovery and arrest of the offender when he has reason to suspect the commission of an offence" as contemplated under S. 157 of the Code. At that stage, the investigating officer does not suddenly jump to a conclusion that the person against whom the investigation has commenced has committed an offence. But he can arrive at such a conclusion only when the investigation consummates to a finality on the collection of evidence eliminating all suspicion and establishing the commission of the offence. In case the investigating officer arrives at a conclusion that no offence is made out he forwards his final report to that effect.

The view of majority in the impugned judgment that the person arrested under the FERA or Customs Act cannot fall within the meaning of the word 'accused' for invoking S. 167 solely based on the decisions of the Supreme Court, namely Ramesh Chandra Mehta, AIR 1970 SC 940: (1969) 2 SCR 461: 1970 Cri LJ 863 as well as Illias v. Collector of Customs, Madras, AIR 1970 SC 1065: (1969) 2 SCR 613 is not logically concluded for more than one reason.

Firstly, almost all the decisions of the Supreme Court holding that "a person arrested by an Enforcement Officer or Customs Officer, as the case may be, is not a 'person accused of an offence' " have been rendered only in the context of examining the question of admissibility or otherwise of the statement of a person arrested under those special Acts but not with reference to authorising the detention of an arrestee under S. 167 of the Code by a Magistrate and so the dictum laid down in those decisions is clearly distinguishable;

Secondly, in the teeth of the newly introduced explanation to S. 273 of 1973 Code it is made clear that the word 'accused' includes a person against whom any proceeding under Chapter VIII of the Code has been commenced. Thus the explanation gives a clear clue that in given situation the word 'person' can be construed as 'accused' or 'accused person'.

Thirdly, in the Code different expressions are used under various provisions to denote a person involving in a criminal proceeding such as 'offender', 'person', 'accused', 'accused person', "accused of an offence" depending on the nature of the proceeding.

Fourthly, the very legislative change made in S. 436 of the old Code corresponding to S. 398 of the new Code substituting the words "person accused of an offence" in the place of "accused person" as originally stood makes it clear that in the procedural code, these two expressions cannot always denote the same meaning or be construed as synonymous or interchangeable and this legislative change indicates that the Legislature in its wisdom intended to make a clear distinction between these expressions for the reasons mentioned supra.

Fifthly, if the expression 'accused person' and "a person accused of an offence" are to be held denoting the same meaning and interchangeable at all times and situations, it will become fallacious and pernicious in the implementation of the procedural law of the Code.

Sixthly, in interpreting a statute in its true spirit, the right direction should be to give a full and literal meaning to the language aiming ever to show fidelity to the meaningful purpose of the statute and never to make it sterile and impotent by giving a strict literal interpretation putting blinkers for judicial approach; because such interpretation will run counter to the legislative intent.

The word 'accused' in the Code denotes different meanings according to the context in which it is deployed; in that sometimes the said word is employed to denote a person arrested, sometimes a person against whom there is an accusation, but who is yet not put on trial and sometimes to denote a person on trial and so on. The word 'accused' or 'accused person' is used only in a generic sense in S. 167(1) and (2) denoting the 'person' whose liberty is actually restrained on his arrest by a competent authority on well-founded information or formal accusation or indictment. Therefore, the word 'accused' limited to the scope of S. 167(1) and (2) — particularly in the light of Explanation to S. 273 of the Code includes "any person arrested". The inevitable consequence that follows is that "any person is arrested" occurring in the first limb of S. 167(1) of the Code takes within its ambit "every person arrested" under S. 35 of FERA or S. 104 of the Customs Act also as the case may be and the 'person arrested' can be detained by the Magistrate in exercise of his power under S. 167(2) of the Code. In other words, the 'person arrested' under FERA or Customs Act is assimilated with the characteristics of an 'accused' within the range of S. 167(1) and as such liable to be detained under S. 167(2) by a Magistrate when produced before him. Directorate of Enforcement v. Deepak Mahajan, (1994) 3 SCC 440: 1994 SCC (Cri) 785: AIR 1994 SC 1775: 1994 Cri LJ 2269: (1994) 2 BLJR 912: (1994) 2 An LT(Cri) 173: (1994) 70 ELT 12.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-1994]

Supdt. of Customs, C.I.U., Cochin v. P.K. Ummerkutty, 1983 Cri LJ 1860 (Ker); M.K. Ayoob v. Superintendent, C.I.W., Cochin, 1984 Cri LJ 949: 1984 KLT 215 (Ker); N.H. Dave v. Mohmed Akhtar, (1984) 15 ELT 353 (Guj); Senior Intelligence Officer v. M.K.S. Abu Bucker, 1989 LW (Cri) 325, approved

Union of India v. O.P. Gupta, (1990) 2 Del Lawyer 23 (FB), affirmed

Deepak Mahajan v. Directorate of Enforcement, 1991 Cri LJ 1124 (FB) (Del), reversed

[1948] — Ss. 167, 2(h), 4(2), 26(b) and Ch. XII (Ss. 154 to 176) — Authorised or empowered officer under special Acts viz. FERA and Customs Act exercises certain analogous powers of police officers provided under Ch. XII and conducts investigation within the meaning of S. 2(h) — FERA, 1973 — Ss. 33 to 40, 45 — Customs Act, 1962, Ch. XIII

Sub-section (1) of S. 167 speaks of the arrest by a police officer and the follow-up investigation by him. Section 35(1) of FERA and S. 104(1) of the Customs Act empower the authorised officer under the relevant provisions to effect arrest of a person against whom there is reason to believe that he has been guilty of an offence under the respective concerned Acts.

Neither the Police Act, 1861 (Act V of 1861) nor any other statute defines the expression 'police officer'. Shortly stated, the main duties of the police are the prevention, detention and investigation of crimes. Though the powers of customs officers and enforcement officers are not identical to those of police officers qua the investigation under Chapter XII of the Code yet the officers under the FERA and Customs Act are vested with certain powers similar to the powers of police officers.

Though an authorised officer of Enforcement or Customs is not undertaking an investigation as contemplated under Chapter XII of the Code, yet those officers are enjoying some analogous powers such as arrest, seizures, interrogation etc. Besides, a statutory duty is enjoined on them to inform the arrestee of the grounds for such arrest as contemplated under Art. 22(1) of the Constitution and S. 50 of the Code. Therefore, they have necessarily to make records of their statutory functions showing the name of the informant, as well as the name of the person who violated any other provision of the Code and who has been guilty of an offence punishable under the Act, nature of information received by them, time of the arrest, seizure of the contraband if any and the statements recorded during the course of the detection of the offence/offences.

(8) Applicability in cases of special statutes (contd.)

The police officer after consummation of the investigation files a report under S. 173 of the Code upon which the Magistrate may take cognizance of any offence disclosed in the report under S. 190(1)(b) of the Code whereas the empowered or authorised officer of the special Acts has to file only a complaint of facts constituting any offence under the provisions of the Act on the receipt of which the Magistrate may take cognizance of the said offence under S. 190(1)(a) of the Code. After taking cognizance of the offence either upon a police report or upon receiving a complaint of facts, the Magistrate has to proceed with the case as per the procedure prescribed under the Code or under the special procedure, if any, prescribed under the special Acts. Therefore, the word 'investigation' cannot be limited only to police investigation but on the other hand, the said word is with wider connotation and flexible so as to include the investigation carried on by any agency whether he be a police officer or empowered or authorised officer or a person not being a police officer under the direction of a Magistrate to make an investigation vested with the power of investigation.

The word 'investigation' though is not shown in any one of the sections of the Customs Act, certain powers enjoyed by the police officer during the investigation are vested on the specified officer of customs. However, in the FERA the word 'investigation' is used in various provisions, namely Ss. 34, 36, 37, 38 and 40 reading, "... any investigation or proceeding under this Act ..." though limited in its scope.

Therefore, it cannot be said that either the Officer of Enforcement or the Customs Officer is not empowered with the power of investigation though not with the power of filing a final report as in the case of a police officer. Directorate of Enforcement v. Deepak Mahajan, (1994) 3 SCC 440: 1994 SCC (Cri) 785: AIR 1994 SC 1775: 1994 Cri LJ 2269: (1994) 2 BLJR 912: (1994) 2 An LT(Cri) 173: (1994) 70 ELT 12.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-1994]

N.H. Dave v. Mohmed Akhtar, (1984) 15 ELT 353 (Guj), approved

[1949] — S. 167(1) — Held, S. 35(2) of FERA or S. 104(2) of Customs Act serve as substitute to S. 167(1)

Neither the Police Act, 1861 (Act V of 1861) nor any other statute defines the expression 'police officer'. Shortly stated, the main duties of the police are the prevention, detention and investigation of crimes. Though the powers of customs officers and enforcement officers are not identical to those of police officers qua the investigation under Chapter XII of the Code yet the officers under the FERA and Customs Act are vested with certain powers similar to the powers of police officers.

No imponderability in construing S. 35(2) of FERA and S. 104(2) of Customs Act that the said provisions replace S. 167(1) and serve as a substitute thereof substantially satisfying all the required basic conditions contained therein and that consequent upon such replacement of sub-section (1) of S. 167, the arrested person under those special Acts would be an accused person to be detained by the Magistrate under sub-section (2) of S. 167. In passing, it may be stated that there is no expression 'police officer' deployed in S. 167(1) nor does it appear in any part of S. 167(2). The authority for detaining a person as contemplated under S. 167(2) is in aid of investigation to be carried on by any prosecuting agency who is invested with the power of investigation. Directorate of Enforcement v. Deepak Mahajan, (1994) 3 SCC 440: 1994 SCC (Cri) 785: AIR 1994 SC 1775: 1994 Cri LJ 2269: (1994) 2 BLJR 912: (1994) 2 An LT(Cri) 173: (1994) 70 ELT 12.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-1994]

Union of India v. O.P. Gupta, (1990) 2 Del Lawyer 23 (FB), affirmed

[1950] — Ss. 167(1), 4(2), 5 and 26(b) — By virtue of S. 4(2) r/w S. 26(b), S. 167 CrPC applicable to special Acts such as FERA or Customs Act to the extent there is no contrary provision therein — Hence procedure under S. 167 attracted after arrest of a person under S. 35(2) of FERA or S. 104(2) of Customs Act

The combined operation of Ss. 4(2) and 26(b) of the Code is that the offence complained of should be investigated or inquired into or tried according to the provisions of the Code where the enactment which creates the offence indicates no special procedure. Section 4(2) read with S. 26(b) CrPC which governs every criminal proceeding as regards the course by which an offence is to be tried and as to the procedure to be followed, renders the provisions of the Code applicable in the field not covered by the provisions of the FERA or Customs Act.

In sum, S. 4 is comprehensive and S. 5 is not in derogation of S. 4(2) and it only relates to the extent of application of the Code in the matter of territorial and other jurisdiction but does not nullify the effect of S. 4(2). In short, the provisions of the Code would be applicable to the extent in the absence of any contrary provision in the special Act or any special provision excluding the jurisdiction or applicability of the Code. The second limb of S. 4(2) itself limits the application of the provisions of the Code.

The submission that as there is no investigation within the terms of the Code in the field of FERA or Customs Act, S. 4(2) of the Code can have no part to play, has to be rejected. The operation of S. 4(2) of the Code is straightaway attracted to the area of investigation, inquiry and trial of the offences under the special laws including the FERA and Customs Act and consequently S. 167 of the Code can be made applicable during the investigation or inquiry of an offence under the special Acts also inasmuch as there is no specific provision contrary to that excluding the operation of S. 167.

It is not necessary to go deep into the question of interpretation of the expression 'otherwise dealt with' except saying that the said expression is very wide and all comprehensive.

Therefore, the conclusion is that a Magistrate before whom a person arrested by the competent authority under the FERA or Customs Act is produced, can authorise detention in exercise of his powers under S. 167. Otherwise the mandatory direction under S. 35(2) of FERA or S. 104(2) of the Customs Act, to take every person arrested before the Magistrate without unnecessary delay when the arrestee was not released on bail under sub-section (3) of those special Acts, will become purposeless and meaningless and to say that the courts even in the event of refusal of bail have no choice but to set the person arrested at liberty by folding their hands as a helpless spectator in the face of what is termed as "legislative casus omissus" or legal flaw or lacuna, it will become utterly illogical and absurd. Directorate of Enforcement v. Deepak Mahajan, (1994) 3 SCC 440: 1994 SCC (Cri) 785: AIR 1994 SC 1775: 1994 Cri LJ 2269: (1994) 2 BLJR 912: (1994) 2 An LT(Cri) 173: (1994) 70 ELT 12.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-1994]

[1951] — Ss. 167(1) and (2) — When a person arrested under a special Act like S. 35(1) of FERA or S. 104(1) of Customs Act is produced before Magistrate under S. 35(2) or S. 104(2) thereof, held, Magistrate has jurisdiction to authorise detention of that person under S. 167(2)

Sub-sections (1) and (2) of S. 167 are squarely applicable with regard to the production and detention of a person arrested under the provisions of S. 35 of FERA and S. 104 of Customs Act. The Magistrate has jurisdiction under S. 167(2) to authorise detention of a person arrested by any authorised officer of the Enforcement under FERA and taken to the Magistrate in compliance of S. 35(2) of FERA. Directorate of Enforcement v. Deepak Mahajan, (1994) 3 SCC 440: 1994 SCC (Cri) 785: AIR 1994 SC 1775: 1994 Cri LJ 2269: (1994) 2 BLJR 912: (1994) 2 An LT(Cri) 173: (1994) 70 ELT 12.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-1994]

Union of India v. O.P. Gupta, (1990) 2 Del Lawyer 23 (FB), affirmed

Dalam Chand Baid v. Union of India, 1982 Cri LJ 747: (1982) 21 DLT 144 (Del), overruled

[1952] — S. 167(2) — Applicability of S. 36-A(4) proviso, Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act — Conditions thereunder not having been satisfied, bail granted — Appellant-accused arrested under Ss. 24, 29, 30 & 38, Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act and remanded to judicial custody for fifteen days, period being extended from time to time — Whether allowing by trial court of two consecutive applications filed by Respondent 1 (Narcotics Control Bureau) on different dates, for extension of detention of appellant beyond 180 days, up to a further period of six months, for completion of investigation and filing of complaint, which would have allegedly brought total custody to 1 year and 2 days, met necessary conditions under S. 36-A(4) proviso — Determination of — Dismissal of appellant's bail application under default clause — Propriety — Applying Hitendra Thakur case, (1994) 4 SCC 602, reiterated, for seeking extension of time, Public Prosecutor, after an independent application of his mind to the request of investigating agency, is required to make a report to Designated Court, indicating therein progress of investigation and disclosing justification for keeping accused in further custody to enable investigating agency to complete investigation — His report must disclose, on the face of it, that he applied his mind and was satisfied with progress of investigation and considered grant of further time to complete investigation necessary — Report of Public Prosecutor is not merely a formality but is very vital, because consequence of its acceptance affects liberty of accused — Reiterated further, request of investigating officer for extension of time is no substitute for report of Public Prosecutor —

(8) Applicability in cases of special statutes (contd.)

Herein, applications for extending detention of appellant, filed by investigating officer of Respondent 1, did not indicate, even remotely, any application of mind on part of Public Prosecutor — Further, they did not indicate progress of investigation, nor compelling reasons, which required extension of custody beyond 180 days — These applications were allowed on the day of filing itself, which also reveals that no notice was issued to appellant — Hence, held, extensions granted to investigating department under proviso to S. 36-A(4) did not satisfy conditions laid down therein and also did not even remotely satisfy tests laid down in Hitendra Thakur case, therefore, being contrary to law, struck down accordingly — Hence, orders of courts below set aside and directions for releasing appellant on bail issued — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985', S. 36-A(4) & proviso thereto and Ss. 24, 29, 30 & 38 (Paras 13 to 15, 18 to 23 and 25). Sanjay Kumar Kedia v. Narcotics Control Bureau, (2009) 17 SCC 631: 2010 Cri LJ 2054: (2010) 1 ECrN 862 (SC): (2010) 87 AIC 52 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-8-2009]

Hitendra Vishnu Thakur v. State of Maharashtra, (1994) 4 SCC 602: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1087, applied

Sanjay Kumar Kedia v. Narcotics Control Bureau, (2008) 2 SCC 294: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 346; Uday Mohanlal Acharya v. State of Maharashtra, (2001) 5 SCC 453: 2001 SCC (Cri) 760, referred to

[1953] — S. 167(2) — Extension of detention periods stated therein, by special statutes — Stringent preconditions to be strictly followed — Extension of maximum period of detention of accused from 180 days up to one year, if investigation not completed within 180 days — Stringent preconditions therefor, restated — Constitution of India — Arts. 22 and 21 — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985', S. 36-A(4) proviso

The maximum period of 90 days fixed under Section 167(2) CrPC has been increased to 180 days for several categories of offences under the NDPS Act, 1985, but S. 36-A(4) proviso authorises a yet further period of detention which may in total go up to one year, provided the stringent conditions provided therein are satisfied and are complied with. The conditions provided are:

(1) a report of the Public Prosecutor,

(2) which indicates the progress of the investigation, and

(3) specifies the compelling reasons for seeking the detention of the accused beyond the period of 180 days, and

(4) after notice to the accused. (Paras 12 and 10). Sanjay Kumar Kedia v. Narcotics Control Bureau, (2009) 17 SCC 631: 2010 Cri LJ 2054: (2010) 1 ECrN 862 (SC): (2010) 87 AIC 52 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-8-2009]

[1954] — Ss. 167(2) proviso, 437 and 4 — Applicability of — Held, not excluded by any of the provisions of NDPS Act — Person arrested for commission of an offence under NDPS Act can claim release on bail on the expiry of total period specified in proviso to S. 167 CrPC if the complaint is not filed within that period — S. 37 not inconsistent with S. 167(2) CrPC — S. 37(1)(b) applies only when question of granting bail arises on merits and not when grant of bail is automatic on account of default in filing complaint within the specified period — Limitations on granting of bail specified under S. 37(1) NDPS Act are in addition to limitations provided under S. 437 CrPC and they do not exclude applicability of the proviso to S. 167(2) — Distinction between S. 437(1)(i) CrPC and S. 37(1)(b) NDPS Act — S. 37 NDPS Act is more stringent — Provisions of S. 20 TADA Act and S. 37 NDPS Act compared — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — Ss. 37, 36-A, 36-C and 51

The limitations on granting of bail specified in clause (b) of sub-section (1) of Section 37 come in only when the question of granting bail arises on merits. By its very nature the provision is not attracted when the grant of bail is automatic on account of the default in filing the complaint within the maximum period of custody permitted during investigation by virtue of sub-section (2) of Section 167 CrPC. The only fact material to attract the proviso to sub-section (2) of Section 167 is the default in filing the complaint within the maximum period specified therein to permit custody during investigation and not the merits of the case which till the filing of the complaint are not before the court to determine the existence of reasonable grounds for forming the belief about the guilt of the accused. It cannot be said that this belief can be formed during investigation by reference to the contents of the case diary even before the charge-sheet has been filed. This is fallacious. Till the complaint is filed the accused is supplied no material from which he can discharge the burden placed on him by Section 37(1)(b) of the NDPS Act. (Para 10)

Sub-section (2) of Section 167 CrPC has been expressly applied by Section 36-A of the Act and the scheme of the Act is that the provisions of the Code would apply except where there is any inconsistent provision in this Act in relation to arrests made under this Act. It is this context in which Section 37(1)(b) has to be construed wherein are specified the limitations on granting of bail. (Para 11)

The limitation on the power to release on bail in Section 437 CrPC is in the nature of a restriction on that power, if reasonable grounds exist for the belief that the accused is guilty. On the other hand, the limitation on this power in Section 37 of the NDPS Act is in the nature of a condition precedent for the exercise of that power, so that, the accused shall not be released on bail unless the court is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds to believe that he is not guilty. Under Section 437 CrPC it is for the prosecution to show the existence of reasonable grounds to support the belief in the guilt of the accused to attract the restriction on the power to grant bail; but under Section 37 NDPS Act it is the accused who must show the existence of grounds for the belief that he is not guilty, to satisfy the condition precedent and lift the embargo on the power to grant bail. This appears to be the distinction between the two provisions which makes Section 37 of the NDPS Act more stringent. (Para 12)

Provision in Section 37 to the extent it is inconsistent with Section 437 of the Code of Criminal Procedure supersedes the corresponding provision in the Code and imposes limitations on granting of bail in addition to the limitations under the Code of Criminal Procedure as expressly provided in sub-section (2) of Section 37. These limitations on granting of bail specified in sub-section (1) of Section 37 are in addition to the limitations under Section 437 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and were enacted only for this purpose; and they do not have the effect of excluding the applicability of the proviso to sub-section (2) of Section 167 CrPC which operates in a different field relating to the total period of custody of the accused permissible during investigation. (Para 13)

Notwithstanding the substitution of Section 37 in the NDPS Act in its present form by Act 2 of 1989 subsequent to the enactment of the TADA Act, there is nothing in Section 37 of the NDPS Act similar to sub-section (4) of Section 20 of the TADA Act even though there is striking similarity of the provision with sub-sections (8) and (9) of Section 20 of the TADA Act. The legislative intent of not excluding the applicability of the proviso to sub-section (2) of Section 167 CrPC in cases of arrest made for commission of offences under the NDPS Act, is quite evident. (Para 15)

It is settled that the court will have no power of remand of an accused to any custody unless the power is conferred by law. The power must, therefore, be traced to some provision of the statute. There is clear mention of Section 167 CrPC in the NDPS Act for the exercise of this power. Ordinarily, there must also be an outer limit prescribed by specification of the total period of permissible remand during investigation. This too is provided in Section 167. To exclude merely this part of Section 167, an express provision in the statute was necessary, assuming there could be conferment of power of remand unlimited in point of time. (Para 16). Union of India v. Thamisharasi, (1995) 4 SCC 190: 1995 SCC (Cri) 665.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.S. Verma and Sujata V. Manohar, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-1995]

Natabar Parida v. State of Orissa, (1975) 2 SCC 220: 1975 SCC (Cri) 484, relied on

Narcotics Control Bureau v. Kishan Lal, (1991) 1 SCC 705: 1991 SCC (Cri) 265, distinguished

[1955] — S. 167 — Powers of Special Court dealing with NDPS Act cases to pass remand order in EC Act cases — Whether the Special Court dealing with the EC Act cases as well as the NDPS Act cases had power to remand an accused arrested under the EC Act after the said court ceased to be a Special Court under the EC Act but continued as such under the NDPS Act — Held, the remand orders passed by the Special Court long after it had ceased to exercise jurisdiction in cases under the EC Act were without jurisdiction — Special Court dealing with the NDPS Act cases exclusively has no power to deal with the cases under the EC Act — Essential Commodities (Special Provisions) Act, 1981 — S. 11 — T.N. Essential Trade Articles (Regulation of Trade) Order, 1984, Cls. 4(i) and 19(1) — T.N. Essential Commodities (Regulation of Distribution by Card System) Order, 1982, Cl. 6(4) — Essential Commodities Act, 1955 — Ss. 12-AA & 12-A [as inserted by the Essential Commodities (Special Provisions) Act, 1981 — S. 11] and 7(1)(a)(ii)

The accused-respondents herein were alleged to have committed offences under the Essential Commodities Act in the year 2000 and were remanded to judicial custody from time to time by the Special Court which had ceased to function as a Special Court in respect of the cases under the EC Act due to the lapse of EC (Special Provisions) Act, 1981 by efflux of time in 1998, but continued to exercise powers relating to cases under the NDPS Act. The appellant State had challenged the order of the High Court which had held the orders of remand passed by the aforesaid Special Court in cases under the EC Act, long after it ceased to be a Special Court, as invalid.

(8) Applicability in cases of special statutes (contd.)

Dismissing the appeals by the State,

Held :

The period during which the EC (Special Provisions) Act was in force the Special Court constituted for trial of offences under the EC Act had exclusive jurisdiction to try such cases. The Special Court had also the power to pass order of remand under Section 167 of the CrPC but the position changed after the EC (Special Provisions) Act lapsed by efflux of time in 1998. Thereafter, the position that used to prevail before the EC (Special Provisions) Act was enforced, stood restored and the Judicial Magistrates who were previously competent to try the EC Act cases got the jurisdiction to deal with such cases. Therefore, the remand orders passed by the Special Court long after it had ceased to exercise jurisdiction in cases under the EC Act are incompetent. (Para 16)

Further, the Special Court constituted for the NDPS Act cases is a court of exclusive jurisdiction for trial of the particular class of cases provided under the NDPS Act and it has not been vested with power of a Judicial Magistrate for the purpose of dealing with the EC Act cases. Hence, the Special Court constituted for trial of cases under the NDPS Act cannot exercise the power of remand of an accused arrested in the EC Act case. (Para 17). State of T.N. v. Paramasiva Pandian, (2002) 1 SCC 15: 2002 SCC (Cri) 62: AIR 2001 SC 2972: (2002) 1 KLJ 134: (2002) 140 ELT 327.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-10-2001]

[1956] — S. 167(2) proviso — Applicability — Held, applicable even in cases under NDPS Act — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — S. 37. Manoj v. State of M.P., (1999) 3 SCC 715: 1999 SCC (Cri) 478: AIR 1999 SC 1403: 1999 Cri LJ 2095.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-1999]

[1957] — Ss. 167(5), 173(2), 2(x) and (w) — Special Court constituted under S. 12-A, Essential Commodities Act empowered to exercise powers under S. 167(5), CrPC to order stoppage of investigation in case of non-conclusion of investigation within six months even in an otherwise warrant case under S. 7(1)(a)(ii) — By virtue of proviso to cl. (f) of S. 12-AA(1), offence under S. 7(1)(a)(ii), though a warrant case within the meaning of S. 2(x) CrPC, would be treated as a summons case within S. 2(w) of the Code — But even after Special Court's order of stoppage of investigation under S. 167(5), officer-in-charge of police station obliged to file the police report under S. 173(2) CrPC and Special Court can entertain such report restricted to six months' investigation and take cognizance on that basis — Essential Commodities Act, 1955 — Ss. 12-AA(1)(b), (c) and (f) proviso, 12-A, 12-AC and 7(1)(a)(ii)

In the case of the offence punishable under S. 7(1)(a)(ii) of the Act which is tried by a Special Court constituted under S. 12-A, the provision of sub-section (5) of S. 167 of the Code gets attracted if the investigation has not been completed within the period allowed by that sub-section. After the constitution of Special Courts all offences under the Act have to be tried by the Special Court of that area in a summary way by applying the provisions of Ss. 262 to 265 (both inclusive) of the Code. The proviso to clause (f) of S. 12-AA(1) of Essential Commodities Act places a fetter on the power of the court in the matter of passing a sentence on conviction, namely, that notwithstanding the fact that Section 7(1)(a)(ii) prescribes a punishment extending up to seven years and fine, Special Court shall not pass a sentence of imprisonment for a term exceeding two years. It is this proviso which attracts the definition of a summons case, the trial whereof must be undertaken in accordance with the procedure outlined in Chapter XX of the Code. The power conferred by sub-section (5) of S. 167 can be invoked by the Special Court by virtue of clause (c) of S. 12-AA(1) of the Act. A Special Court is expressly empowered by clause (c) of S. 12-AA(1) to exercise the same powers which a Magistrate having jurisdiction to try a case may exercise under S. 167 of the Code in relation to an accused person who has been forwarded to him under that provision. Therefore, the Special Court can stop further investigation into the offence if the investigation is not concluded within a period of six months from the day of arrest of the accused person unless for special reasons and in the interest of justice the continuation of the investigation beyond that period is necessary. In the present case the officer making the investigation had not sought the permission of the Special Court to continue with the investigation even after the expiry of six months. The object of this sub-section clearly is to ensure prompt investigation into an offence triable as summons case to avoid hardship and harassment to the accused person.

The police report under S. 173(2) has to be submitted as soon as the investigation is completed. If the investigation has been stopped on the expiry of six months or the extended period, if any, by the Magistrate in exercise of power conferred by sub-section (5) of S. 167 of the Code, the investigation comes to an end and, therefore, on the completion of the investigation Section 173(2) enjoins upon the officer in charge of the police station to forward a report in the prescribed form. There is nothing in sub-section (5) of S. 167 to suggest that if the investigation has not been completed within the period allowed by that sub-section, the officer in charge of the police station will be absolved from the responsibility of filing the police report under S. 173(2) of the Code on the stoppage of the investigation. Therefore, the Special Court was competent to entertain the police report restricted to six months' investigation and take cognizance on the basis thereof. In this case the High Court erred in quashing the order of the Special Court taking cognizance of the offence on the police report i.e. charge-sheet submitted under S. 173(2) of the Code. State of W.B. v. Falguni Dutta, (1993) 3 SCC 288: 1993 SCC (Cri) 815.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi and M.M. Punchhi, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-1993]

Kanta Dey v. State of W.B., 1986 Cal CrLR 158: (1986) 1 CHN 267; Babulal Agarwal v. State, (1987) 1 CHN 218, overruled

High Court of A.P. v. Anjaneyulu, 1986 Cri LJ 1456: (1986) 1 Andh LT 301: (1986) 1 APLJ (HC) 357; Jnan Prakash Agarwala v. State of W.B., (1992) 1 CHN 213, approved

---

— S. 168 See Ss. 154 to 173

See also Ss. 154 to 173 and 482

See also Ss. 157 to 172 and 198

See also Ss. 157 to 173

See also Ss. 157, 160 to 168

See also Ss. 164(1) & (5), 154 to 160, 165 to 173(5) & (8) and 311

See also Ss. 172, 168 and 157

— S. 169 See also S. 169, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 1036 in Vol. 2

— S. 169 See Ss. 154 to 173

See also Ss. 154 to 173 and 482

See also Ss. 154, 155, 156, 157, 162, 169, 170 and 173

See also Ss. 156, 157, 169, 173 and 190

See also Ss. 157, 156 and 169

See also Ss. 157, 156, 169, 170, 173 and 190 & 173(8)

See also Ss. 157 to 173

See also Ss. 157 to 172 and 198

See also Ss. 164(1) & (5), 154 to 160, 165 to 173(5) & (8) and 311

See also Ss. 170, 169, 173, 2(h), 24 and 482

See also Ss. 170, 169 and 173(2)

See also Ss. 173(2), 169, 190, 200 and 203

See also Ss. 173(2), 169 and 203 & 190(1)

See also Ss. 190, 173(2), 169, 200, 202 and 204

See also Ss. 190(1), 173(2), 169, 200 and 202

See also Ss. 197, 207, 169 and 170

See also Ss. 482 and 154, 155, 156, 157, 162, 169, 170, 173

See also Ss. 482, 190(1)(b), 204, 173, 169 and 362

[1958] — Ss. 169 and 195 — Stage at which report under S. 169 may be filed — Appellants filing report under S. 169 CrPC before the Magistrate to discharge the accused persons involved in serious offences — High Court stating (i) that by filing the cancellation report the appellants had shown scant regard to the proceedings before the Sessions Court and the High Court as on two occasions the petitions for anticipatory bail were rejected, (ii) that the appellants tried to interfere with the administration of justice, and (iii) that serious action should be taken against them — Held, if at the stage of grant or refusal of anticipatory bail certain aspects of the case are considered but later if the investigating agency files a report under S. 169 CrPC, then such a step would not amount to interference with the administration of justice — Observations made by High Court, held, neither justified nor called for in the case (Paras 2 to 4). Satish Sharma v. State of Gujarat, (2002) 10 SCC 323: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1442: AIR 2003 SC 648.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and P. Venkatarama Reddi, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-12-2002]

[1959] — S. 169 — Police report under, for release of certain other persons because of deficient evidence accepted by Magistrate — Magistrate's order approving the report, held, not one of acquittal or discharge so as to bar trial of the accused (Para 11). Ravikant Bhagoji Dhumal v. State of Maharashtra, 1991 Supp (1) SCC 385: 1991 SCC (Cri) 683.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: L.M. Sharma and K. Ramaswamy, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-11-1990]

Pradyum Narain Pandey v. State, 1968 All LJ 768, approved

— S. 170 See also S. 170, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 1036 in Vol. 2

— S. 170 See Ss. 154 to 173

See also Ss. 154 to 173 and 482

See also Ss. 154, 155, 156, 157, 162, 169, 170 and 173

See also Ss. 156, 157, 170, 173(8) and 190

See also Ss. 157, 156, 169, 170, 173 and 190 & 173(8)

See also Ss. 157 to 173

See also Ss. 157 to 172 and 198

See also Ss. 157, 160, 167, 170, 190 and 319

See also Ss. 164(1) & (5), 154 to 160, 165 to 173(5) & (8) and 311

See also Ss. 167 (as stood before 1978 amendment) and 170

See also Ss. 167 proviso (a) (as stood prior to 1978 amendment) 170 and 437

See also Ss. 197, 170 and 173(2)

See also Ss. 197, 207, 169 and 170

See also Ss. 207, 209, 309, 170, 190 and 2(g)

See also Ss. 482 and 154, 155, 156, 157, 162, 169, 170, 173

[1960] — Ss. 170, 169 and 173(2) — Expressions "charge-sheet" and "final report" — Meaning

The expressions "charge-sheet" or "final report" are not used in the Criminal Procedure Code, but it is understood in Police Manuals of several States containing the rules and the regulations to be a report by the police filed under Section 170 of the Code, described as a "charge-sheet". In case of reports sent under Section 169 i.e. where there is no sufficiency of evidence to justify forwarding of a case to a Magistrate, it is termed variously i.e. referred charge, final report or summary. (Para 10). Gangadhar Janardan Mhatre v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 7 SCC 768: (2004) 114 DLT 193.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-9-2004]

[1961] — Ss. 170, 169 and 173(2) — Expressions "charge-sheet" and "final report" — Meaning

The expressions "charge-sheet" or "final report" are not used in CrPC, but it is understood in Police Manuals of several States containing the rules and the regulations to be a report by the police filed under Section 170 CrPC, described as a "charge-sheet". In case of reports sent under Section 169 i.e. where there is no sufficiency of evidence to justify forwarding of a case to a Magistrate, it is termed variously i.e. referred charge, final report or summary. (Para 13). Minu Kumari v. State of Bihar, (2006) 4 SCC 359: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 310: AIR 2006 SC 1937: 2006 Cri LJ 2468: (2006) 2 KLT 588: (2006) 3 Guj LR 2013.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-4-2006]

Gangadhar Janardan Mhatre v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 7 SCC 768: 2005 SCC (Cri) 404, relied on

[1962] — Ss. 170, 169, 173, 2(h), 24 and 482 — Charge-sheet — Filing of — Court cannot direct investigating officer to take opinion of Public Prosecutor for filing charge-sheet — Investigation and prosecution are two different aspects of administration of criminal justice — Formation of opinion as to whether on the material collected a case is made out to place the accused for trial is the exclusive function of the officer in charge of the police station and/or his superior officers — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 498-A and 304-B

A young bride committed suicide in her nuptial home within seven months of her marriage. An inquiry under Section 174(3) CrPC was held. The Sub-Divisional Magistrate conducted the inquiry and submitted a report holding that it was conclusively proved that due to mental restlessness she had committed suicide and no one is responsible and hence it was informed that her death was not due to dowry harassment. However, the police continued with the investigation and submitted a challan against the deceased's husband and his mother for the offence under Sections 304-B and 498-A IPC. The deceased's father, the first respondent, was not satisfied with the challan as the deceased's husband's sister, the appellant, and her father were not arraigned as accused. Hence he moved the High Court under Section 482 CrPC. A Single Judge of the High Court disposed of the petition under Section 482 directing that the papers be placed before the Public Prosecutor "as it is without any further investigation and he shall render an impartial opinion on the matter and thereafter an amended charge-sheet shall be filed in the concerned court". The appellant's father filed a petition before the Single Judge for recalling it on the main ground that neither he nor his daughter (appellant) was heard nor were they made parties in the proceedings. But the Single Judge dismissed the petition on the main premise that Section 362 CrPC contains a bar against recalling any order passed under the Code. Hence the appellant filed the present appeal to challenge both the orders.

Allowing the appeals,

Held :

In this case the High Court has committed an illegality in directing the final report to be taken back and to file a fresh report incorporating the opinion of the Public Prosecutor. Such an order cannot stand legal scrutiny. The formation of the opinion, whether or not there is a case to place the accused on trial, should be that of the officer in charge of the police station and none else. There is no stage during which the investigating officer is legally obliged to take the opinion of a Public Prosecutor or any authority, except the superior police officer in the rank as envisaged in Section 36 of the Code. A Public Prosecutor is appointed, as indicated in Section 24 CrPC, for conducting any prosecution, appeal or other proceedings in the court. He has also the power to withdraw any case from the prosecution with the consent of the court. He is the officer of the court. Thus the Public Prosecutor is to deal with a different field in the administration of justice and he is not involved in investigation. It is not in the scheme of the Code for supporting or sponsoring any combined operation between the investigating officer and the Public Prosecutor for filing the report in the court. (Paras 19, 11, 10 and 12). R. Sarala v. T.S. Velu, (2000) 4 SCC 459: 2000 SCC (Cri) 823: AIR 2000 SC 1731: 2000 Cri LJ 2453.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-4-2000]

H.N. Rishbud v. State of Delhi, AIR 1955 SC 196: (1955) 1 SCR 1150: 1955 Cri LJ 526; Emperor v. Khwaja Nazir Ahmad, AIR 1945 PC 18: 46 Cri LJ 413; Abhinandan Jha v. Dinesh Mishra, AIR 1968 SC 117: 1968 Cri LJ 97; R. v. Metropolitan Police Commr., (1968) 1 All ER 763: (1968) 2 QB 118: (1968) 2 WLR 893 (CA); Vineet Narain v. Union of India, (1998) 1 SCC 226: 1998 SCC (Cri) 307; State v. Raj Kumar Jain, (1998) 6 SCC 551: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1485, relied on

[1963] — Ss. 170 and 173 — Opinion of officer in charge of the police station as to whether accused/case to be sent to Magistrate for trial — Nature of — Word "investigation" in S. 173 — Scope — Held (per curiam), said word includes the abovesaid opinion, and the said opinion is not legal evidence — Further, at the stage of S. 173(2), question of interpretation of legal evidence does not arise

The importance of the opinion formed by the officer in charge of the police station is seen from the fact that the opinion of the officer in charge of the police station is the basis of the report based on which the competent Magistrate must determine whether to take cognizance or not. Even a competent Magistrate cannot compel the police officer concerned to form a particular opinion. Although the Magistrate may have certain supervisory powers under CrPC, it cannot be said that when the police submits a report that no case has been made out for sending the accused for trial, it is open to the Magistrate to direct the police to file a charge-sheet. (Para 21)

The term "investigation" under Section 173(2) of the Criminal Procedure Code includes the opinion of the officer in charge of the police station as to whether there is sufficient evidence or reasonable ground of suspicion to justify the forwarding of the case to the court concerned or not. This opinion is not legal evidence. At the stage of Section 173(2) the question of interpretation of legal evidence does not arise. In any event, that function is that of the courts. (Para 16)

Once the jurisdiction is conferred on CBI to investigate an offence by virtue of a notification under Section 3 the Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 the powers of investigation are governed by the statutory provisions under the general law applicable to such investigation and they cannot be curtailed by any executive instruction issued under Section 4(1) of the 1946 Act. (Paras 25 and 24)

In Supreme Court monitored CBI cases, the Supreme Court is concerned with ensuring proper and honest performance of its duty by CBI and that the Supreme Court is not concerned with the merits of the accusations in the investigation, which are to be determined at the trial on the filing of the charge-sheet in the competent court, according to the ordinary procedure prescribed by law. (Para 30)

Under the CBI Manual, the officer in charge of the police station is the SP. In this connection clauses 6.1 and 19.15 of the CBI (Crime) Manual, 2005 which though the Manual not being binding on the Supreme Court in Supreme Court monitored CBI cases, nonetheless throws light on the controversy in hand. (Para 31)

As held in Sushil Kumar Modi case, (1996) 6 SCC 500, in case of any difference of opinion between officers of CBI in respect of the investigation, the final decision would not be taken by the Director himself or by the Director merely on the opinion of the Legal Department of CBI, but the matter would be decided according to the opinion of the Attorney General for India for the purpose of investigation and filing of the charge-sheet against any individual. In that event, the opinion would be sought from the Attorney General after making available to him the opinions expressed on the subject by the persons associated with the investigation as a part of the materials. (Para 22)

The entire investigating team as well as the law officers of CBI were ad idem in their mind. They had recommended prosecution. It was only the Director of Prosecution and the Senior Public Prosecutor who had opined that a closure report should be filed. It may be noted that the Senior Public Prosecutor does not find place in clause 6.1 of the CBI Manual which refers to the administrative hierarchy of CBI. Further, the Director of Prosecution is the only CBI officer who had dissented from the opinion of the investigating team including the SP. It appears that this opinion is also based only on interpretation of legal evidence. Moreover, as can be seen from the status report dated 31-12-2004, the Director, CBI has not given his independent opinion. He has merely relied upon the opinion of the Attorney General. The Director, CBI expressing an opinion and then referring the matter to the Attorney General can be understood. However, under the above circumstances there was no difference of opinion in the matter of investigation between the officers concerned of CBI and, therefore, there was no question of the Director, CBI referring the matter to the Attorney General for India. (Para 32)

It cannot be understood why an opinion of Senior Public Prosecutor had been taken in the present case. He is not a member of the hierarchy. The SP is not legally obliged to take his opinion. In the circumstances, when there was no difference of opinion in the team concerned, the question of seeking opinion of the Attorney General did not arise. Lastly, even under clause 19.15 of the CBI Manual it is expressly stated that the report of the SP should be prepared personally by the SP and that the internal differences of opinion among CBI officers should not find place in the SP's report. (Para 32)

Keeping in mind the scheme of Sections 168 to 170 and 173 CrPC, in the facts and circumstances of this case the entire material collected by CBI along with the report of the SP is directed to be placed before the court/Special Judge concerned in terms of Section 173(2) CrPC. The decision to accept or reject the report of the SP shall be that of the court/Special Judge concerned, who will decide the matter in accordance with law. It is made clear that none of the other opinions/recommendations including that of the Attorney General for India or the CVC shall be forwarded to the court/Special Judge concerned. (Paras 32 and 34)

In an earlier order the Supreme Court had given time to CBI to complete legal scrutiny when the Supreme Court had been told that there was a difference of opinion in the administrative hierarchy of CBI. However, after going through the recommendations of the above officers, as it has been found that there was no difference of opinion of the officers concerned there was no question of reference to the Attorney General. The status report dated 31-12-2004 is rejected as it is a charade of the performance of duty by CBI. Thus, a case for judicial review is made out. (Para 33)

In matters after matters, it is found that the efficacy and ethics of the governmental authorities are progressively coming under challenge before the Supreme Court by way of PIL for failure to perform their statutory duties. If this continues, a day might come when the rule of law will stand reduced to "a rope of sand". (Para 35)

Per Sinha, J. (concurring)

The Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 indisputably applies in regard to charges of corruption made against public servants. The CBI Manual is subject to the provisions of Criminal Procedure Code. In case of conflict, although none has been pointed out in the present case, evidently, CrPC shall prevail. (Paras 38 and 43)

Subject to the above, the opinion expressed by the learned Brother Kapadia, J. is concurred with. (Para 49). M.C. Mehta (Taj Corridor scam) v. Union of India, (2007) 1 SCC 110: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 264: AIR 2007 SC 1087: (2007) 53 AIC 192 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.B. Sinha[2], S.H. Kapadia[1] and D.K. Jain[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 27-11-2006]

H.N. Rishbud v. State of Delhi, AIR 1955 SC 196: (1955) 1 SCR 1150: 1955 Cri LJ 526; Abhinandan Jha v. Dinesh Mishra, AIR 1968 SC 117: (1967) 3 SCR 668: 1968 Cri LJ 97; R. Sarala v. T.S. Velu, (2000) 4 SCC 459: 2000 SCC (Cri) 823; K. Veeraswami v. Union of India, (1991) 3 SCC 655: 1991 SCC (Cri) 734; Satya Narain Musadi v. State of Bihar, (1980) 3 SCC 152: 1980 SCC (Cri) 660; Kaptan Singh v. State of M.P., (1997) 6 SCC 185: 1997 SCC (Cri) 870; Vijender v. State of Delhi, (1997) 6 SCC 171: 1997 SCC (Cri) 857; Vineet Narain v. Union of India, (1998) 1 SCC 226: 1998 SCC (Cri) 307; Union of India v. Prakash P. Hinduja, (2003) 6 SCC 195: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1314; Union of India v. Sushil Kumar Modi, (1996) 6 SCC 500; Union of India v. Sushil Kumar Modi, (1997) 4 SCC 770, followed

Sheonandan Paswan v. State of Bihar, (1987) 1 SCC 288: 1987 SCC (Cri) 82; S.N. Sharma v. Bipen Kumar Tiwari, (1970) 1 SCC 653: 1970 SCC (Cri) 258; Hemant Dhasmana v. CBI, (2001) 7 SCC 536: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1280, relied on

[1964] — Ss. 170, 173, 36 and 24 — Question whether accused/cases to be sent to Magistrate for trial — Determination of — Person solely authorised to have discretion in the matter, held (per curiam), is the officer in charge of a police station — Opinion as to whether or not there is a case to place the accused on trial, has to be of the said officer and this function cannot be delegated and cannot be performed by any other authority — S. 36 only entitles superior officers to supervise or participate — Even a competent Magistrate cannot compel the officer concerned to form a particular opinion — Lastly, there is no stage during which the investigating officer is legally obliged to take Public Prosecutor's or any other authority's opinion other than that of a superior officer under S. 36 — Public Prosecutor is not involved in investigation — It is not the scheme of CrPC for supporting any combined operation between the IO and Public Prosecutor for filing the report in court

Under CrPC, investigation consists of proceeding to the spot, ascertainment of the facts and circumstances of the case, discovery and arrest of the suspected offender, collection of evidence and formation of the opinion as to whether on the material collected there is a case to place the accused before a Magistrate for trial, and if so, taking the necessary steps for the same by the filing of a charge-sheet under Section 173. The scheme of CrPC shows that while it is permissible for an officer in charge of a police station to depute some subordinate officer to conduct some of these steps in the investigation, the responsibility for each one of the above steps is that of the officer in charge of the police station. The final step in the investigation, namely, the formation of the opinion as to whether or not there is a case to place the accused on trial is to be of the officer in charge of the police station and this function cannot be delegated and can be performed by no other authority. The formation of the opinion of the police on the material collected during the investigation as to whether judicial scrutiny is warranted or not is entirely left to the officer in charge of the police station. There is no provision for delegation of the above function regarding formation of the opinion but only a provision entitling the superior officers to supervise or participate under Section 36 CrPC. (Paras 20, 21 and 31)

The importance of the opinion formed by the officer in charge of the police station is seen from the fact that the opinion of the officer in charge of the police station is the basis of the report based on which the competent Magistrate must determine whether to take cognizance or not. Even a competent Magistrate cannot compel the police officer concerned to form a particular opinion. Although the Magistrate may have certain supervisory powers under CrPC, it cannot be said that when the police submits a report that no case has been made out for sending the accused for trial, it is open to the Magistrate to direct the police to file a charge-sheet. (Para 21)

The term "investigation" under Section 173(2) of the Criminal Procedure Code includes the opinion of the officer in charge of the police station as to whether there is sufficient evidence or reasonable ground of suspicion to justify the forwarding of the case to the court concerned or not. This opinion is not legal evidence. At the stage of Section 173(2) the question of interpretation of legal evidence does not arise. In any event, that function is that of the courts. (Para 16). M.C. Mehta (Taj Corridor scam) v. Union of India, (2007) 1 SCC 110: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 264: AIR 2007 SC 1087: (2007) 53 AIC 192 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.B. Sinha[2], S.H. Kapadia[1] and D.K. Jain[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 27-11-2006]

H.N. Rishbud v. State of Delhi, AIR 1955 SC 196: (1955) 1 SCR 1150: 1955 Cri LJ 526; Abhinandan Jha v. Dinesh Mishra, AIR 1968 SC 117: (1967) 3 SCR 668: 1968 Cri LJ 97; K. Veeraswami v. Union of India, (1991) 3 SCC 655: 1991 SCC (Cri) 734; Satya Narain Musadi v. State of Bihar, (1980) 3 SCC 152: 1980 SCC (Cri) 660; Kaptan Singh v. State of M.P., (1997) 6 SCC 185: 1997 SCC (Cri) 870; Vijender v. State of Delhi, (1997) 6 SCC 171: 1997 SCC (Cri) 857, followed

[1965] — Ss. 170 and 173 — Hawala transactions involving public men — Charge-sheet filed in compliance with directions of the Supreme Court — Proper mode of trial in such cases — Publicity attached to such matters, held, should not affect the essentials of fair trial including the presumption of innocence — Any observation of the Supreme Court made for the purpose of the proceedings pending there, held, should not also influence the trial — Constitution of India — Art. 21

No occasion should arise for an impression that the publicity attaching to these matters has tended to dilute the emphasis on the essentials of a fair trial and the basic principles of jurisprudence including the presumption of innocence of the accused unless found guilty at the end of the trial. This requirement, undoubtedly has to be kept in view during the entire trial. Any observation made by the Supreme Court for the purpose of the proceedings pending there in which the directions for filing the charge-sheet were given has no bearing on the merits of the accusation, and should not influence the trial in any manner. Care must be taken to ensure that the credibility of the judicial process is not undermined in any manner. Anukul Chandra Pradhan v. Union of India, (1996) 6 SCC 354: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1338.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.S. Verma and B.N. Kirpal, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-10-1996]

[1966] — Ss. 170 and 173 — Hawala transactions involving public men — Charge-sheet filed in the court in compliance with Supreme Court's direction — Unless prevented by dilatory tactics of the accused, such trials should be concluded most expeditiously — Constitution of India — Art. 21

The court in which the charge-sheet has been filed has to bear in mind that utmost expedition in the trial and its early conclusion is necessary for the ends of justice and credibility of the judicial process. Unless prevented by any dilatory tactics of the accused, all trials of such kind involving public men should be concluded most expeditiously, preferably within three months of commencement of the trial. This is also the requirement of speedy trial read into Article 21. Anukul Chandra Pradhan v. Union of India, (1996) 6 SCC 354: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1338.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.S. Verma and B.N. Kirpal, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-10-1996]

[1967] — Ss. 170 and 156 — Power of police under — Scope — Illegally exported consignment of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances from India, seized abroad — Information from the police of the foreign countries concerned that no material had been till then collected to connect the appellant with the contraband consignment, held, could not bar the investigating force in India from arriving at a different conclusion or even the police of those foreign countries from taking a different view subsequently — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 9. Umar Abdul Sakoor Sorathia v. Intelligence Officer, Narcotic Control Bureau, (2000) 1 SCC 138: 2000 SCC (Cri) 200: AIR 1999 SC 2562: 1999 Cri LJ 3972.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-8-1999]

[1968] — Ss. 170 and 173 — Evidentiary value of allegations in charge-sheet, held, is only that such allegations have been made, and no more than that — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 35

Even assuming that a charge-sheet is a public document within the meaning of Section 35 of the Evidence Act, 1872 it does not imply that all that is stated in the charge-sheet as having been proved. All that that can be said is that it is proved that the police had laid a charge-sheet in which such allegations have been made against the accused. (Para 63). Standard Chartered Bank v. Andhra Bank Financial Services Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 94.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal, C.J. and B.N. Srikrishna and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2006]

— S. 171 See Ss. 154 to 173

See also Ss. 154 to 173 and 482

See also Ss. 157 to 173

See also Ss. 157 to 172 and 198

See also Ss. 164(1) & (5), 154 to 160, 165 to 173(5) & (8) and 311

— S. 172 See also S. 172, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 1036 in Vol. 2

— S. 172 See Ss. 41, 151, 157 and 172

See also Ss. 100 and 172

See also Ss. 154 to 173 and 482

See also Ss. 154 and 172

See also Ss. 154 and 173

See also Ss. 157 to 172 and 198

See also Ss. 157, 162, 173(6) and 172

See also Ss. 157, 172 and 173

See also Ss. 157 and 173

See also Ss. 161, 162, 91, 172 and 207

See also Ss. 161, 172, 173(6) and 207

See also Ss. 162 and 172

See also Ss. 164(1) & (5), 154 to 160, 165 to 173(5) & (8) and 311

See also Ss. 231(2) and 246(5), 162(1) proviso, Expln. and Ss. 161 & 172

See also Ss. 438 and 172

[1969] — S. 172 — Applicability — Question whether an investigation carried out by a superior officer by virtue of a direction given to him by State Government under S. 3 of Indian Police Act, 1861 is an investigation under Chapter XII so as to attract the applicability of S. 172 to a diary maintained by him in the course of such investigation and whether the report made by such officer as a result of the investigation carried out by him forms part of case diary within the meaning of S. 172, not considered. Khatri (IV) v. State of Bihar, (1981) 2 SCC 493: 1981 SCC (Cri) 503: AIR 1981 SC 1068: 1981 Cri LJ 597: 1981 MLJ (Cri) 456: (1981) 29 BLJR 425.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and Baharul Islam, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-3-1981]

[1970] — S. 172 — Analysis of — Obligations and rights in respect of case diary

The analysis of S. 172 reveals:

(1) That it embodies a complete scheme relating to the matter of maintaining a diary.

(2) Clause (1) imposes the obligation to do so and provides for the contents thereof.

(3) The court is empowered to call for such diaries to aid it in inquiry or trial subject to the rider that it cannot be used as evidence thereat.

(4) Merely because the court calls for the diary, the accused (or his agent) cannot claim the right to peruse it.

(5) The accused can peruse that particular part of the diary in the context of S. 161 of the Evidence Act or S. 145 thereof in case:

(a) if it is used by the police officer concerned to refresh his memory or

(b) if the court uses it for contradicting the police official concerned. Mukund Lal v. Union of India, 1989 Supp (1) SCC 622: 1989 SCC (Cri) 606: AIR 1989 SC 144: 1989 Cri LJ 872.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.P. Thakkar and B.C. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-10-1988]

[1971] — S. 172 — Case diary — Use of — Cannot be used as evidence — Can be perused to find whether investigation properly conducted

Per K. Ramaswamy, J.

The only duty cast on the investigation is to maintain a diary of his investigation, which is known as "Case Diary" under S. 172 of the Code. The entries in the case diary are not evidence nor can they be used by the accused or the Court unless the case comes under S. 172(3) of the Code. The court is entitled to its perusal to enable it to find out if the investigation has been conducted on the right lines so that appropriate directions, if need be, be given. It may also provide materials showing the necessity to summon witnesses not mentioned in the list supplied by the prosecution or to bring on record other relevant material which in the opinion of the court will help it to arrive at a proper decision in terms of S. 172(3) of the Code. State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192: AIR 1991 SC 1260.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh[1] and K. Ramaswamy[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 2-4-1991]

[1972] — Ss. 172 and 157 — Case diary — Purpose and object of — Extent to which accused may cross-examine police officer on case diary entries — Held, purpose and object of case diary is to maintain fairness in investigation, transparency and a record for ensuring proper investigation — Court has power to summon diary but can use it only as aid in inquiry or trial but not as evidence — Purpose is confined to utilising information therein as foundation for questions put to witnesses, particularly to police witnesses where police officer had used entries to refresh his memory or if court uses them for contradicting such police officer — Right of accused to cross-examine police officer with reference to entries in general diary is limited and even that limited scope arises only when court uses entries for aforestated purposes — IO has right to refresh his memory and can refer to general diary (Paras 205 and 209 to 215). Manu Sharma v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 6 SCC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and Swatanter Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision : 19-4-2010]

Habeeb Mohammad v. State of Hyderabad, AIR 1954 SC 51: 1954 Cri LJ 338; Khatri (IV) v. State of Bihar, (1981) 2 SCC 493: 1981 SCC (Cri) 503; Malkiat Singh v. State of Punjab, (1991) 4 SCC 341: 1991 SCC (Cri) 976; Mukund Lal v. Union of India, 1989 Supp (1) SCC 622: 1989 SCC (Cri) 606; Shamshul Kanwar v. State of U.P., (1995) 4 SCC 430: 1995 SCC (Cri) 753, considered and relied on

State of Kerala v. Babu, (1999) 4 SCC 621: 1999 SCC (Cri) 611; State of Karnataka v. K. Yarappa Reddy, (1999) 8 SCC 715: 2000 SCC (Cri) 61, relied on

[1973] — S. 172 — Case diary — Use of — Right of accused regarding use of case diary — Extent of — Held, accused gets right to cross-examine the police officer with reference to entries in case diary when the same is used by the police officer to refresh his memory or when the court uses it for the purpose of contradicting the police officer — Such right of accused is subject to the limitations of Ss. 145 and 161 of the Evidence Act — Police Officer cannot be compelled to look into the case diary for refreshing his memory — Failure of the police officer to keep a diary does not render his evidence inadmissible — Entries of police diary are neither substantive nor corroborating evidence — They cannot be used by or against any other witness — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 145 and 161

The right of accused to cross-examine the police officer with reference to the entries in the general diary is very much limited in extent and even that limited scope arises only when the court uses the entries to contradict the police officer or when the police officer uses it for refreshing his memory and that again is subject to the limitations of Sections 145 and 161 of the Evidence Act and for that limited purpose only the accused in the discretion of the court may be permitted to peruse the particular entry and in case the court does not use such entries for the purpose of contradicting the police officer or if the police officer does not use the same for refreshing his memory, then the question of accused getting any right to use the entries even to that limited extent does not arise. (Para 10)

The accused person is not entitled to require a police officer to refresh his memory during his examination in court by referring to the diary. At the most the accused can on a reasonable basis seek the court to look into the diary and do the needful within the limits of Section 172 CrPC. However, the court is not bound to compel the police witness to look at the diary in order to refresh his memory nor the accused is entitled to insist that he should do so. If there is such a refusal what inference should be drawn depends on the facts and circumstances of each case. Section 172 does not deal with any recording of statements made by witnesses and what is intended to be recorded is what the police officer did namely the places where he went, the people he visited and what he saw, etc. It is Section 161 CrPC which provides for recording of such statements. Assuming that there is failure to keep a diary as required by Section 172 CrPC, the same cannot have the effect of making the evidence of such police officer inadmissible and what inference should be drawn in such a situation depends upon the facts of each case. (Para 10)

The entries of the police diary are neither substantive nor corroborating evidence and they cannot be used by or against any other witness than the police officer and can only be used to the limited extent indicated above. (Para 10). Shamshul Kanwar v. State of U.P., (1995) 4 SCC 430: 1995 SCC (Cri) 753: AIR 1995 SC 1748.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-5-1995]

[1974] — Ss. 172, 161, 162 and 167 — Police Diary maintained under S. 172 — Nature of entries to be made in — Held, S. 172 does not contemplate recording of statement of witnesses and other relevant material gathered during the investigation — Vagueness and confusion in respect of meaning of the word 'diary' used in S. 172 and other sections — Need to frame appropriate and uniform regulations regarding maintenance of diary by the police for the purpose of S. 172 vis-à-vis other sections, stressed

There is vagueness as to the nature of the diary contemplated under Section 172. In some States the diary referred to in Section 172 CrPC is known as 'special diary' or 'case diary' and in some other States like Andhra Pradesh, J&K and Kerala there is a provision in the Police Acts that a "general diary" is to be maintained in the police station thereby indicating it to be different from the case diary. In some States there are police standing orders to the effect that the diary contemplated under Section 172 CrPC can be of two parts; the first one relating to the steps taken during the course of investigation by the police officer with particular reference to the time at which the police received the information and the further steps taken during the investigation like visiting the places etc. and the second part contains statement of the circumstances ascertained during the investigation which obviously relate to the statements recorded by the officer in terms of Section 161 CrPC and other relevant materials gathered during the investigation. The copies of the second part which mainly contains the statements of the witnesses as a matter of course are supplied to the accused persons. (Para 18)

Therefore it is clear that the diary referred to in Section 172 and which the court may call for and which can be used to the limited extent mentioned therein obviously refers to the first part and to the copies of which the accused is not entitled to and the entries of which can be used to the limited extent by the court as well as by the accused as contained in Section 172 CrPC. If by virtue of such police standing orders, the second part also forms, compendiously, part of the diary as a whole and if that also is before the court, the use of the entries in such second part which contains the statements of the witnesses recorded, would be of different nature. Some vagueness or confusion is there in respect of the meaning of the word 'diary' used in Section 172 and other sections of CrPC. Therefore, a legislative change is necessary providing for framing of appropriate and uniform regulations regarding the maintenance of the diaries by the police for the purpose contemplated by Section 172 CrPC vis-à-vis the other sections referred to above. (Para 20) . Shamshul Kanwar v. State of U.P., (1995) 4 SCC 430: 1995 SCC (Cri) 753: AIR 1995 SC 1748.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-5-1995]

Niranjan Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 142: 1956 SCR 734; Habeeb Mohd. v. State of Hyderabad, 1954 SCR 475: AIR 1954 SC 51; Khatri (IV) v. State of Bihar, (1981) 2 SCC 493: 1981 SCC (Cri) 503; Mukund Lal v. Union of India, AIR 1989 SC 144: 1989 Cri LJ 872; State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192; Malkiat Singh v. State of Punjab, (1991) 4 SCC 341: 1991 SCC (Cri) 976, relied on

Queen-Empress v. Mannu, ILR (1897) 19 All 390: 17 AWN 174; Dal Singh v. King-Emperor, AIR 1917 PC 25; Pulukuri Kottaya v. Emperor, AIR 1947 PC 67: (1947) 1 MLJ 219: 49 Bom LR 508, approved

[1975] — Ss. 172, 162 and 161 — Entries in police diaries — Cannot be used as evidence against accused — They cannot therefore be used to explain any contradiction in the evidence of a PW which the defence has brought forth by using any portion of a statement of the PW recorded under S. 161 — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 145

The legal proposition propounded by the High Court regarding the use of Section 172 of the Code is erroneous. The whole exercise made by the High Court on that aspect was in the wake of what PW 1 said, that he was questioned by the investigating officer on 12-10-1991. That might be so but the defence counsel used the statement as recorded on 14-10-1991 under Section 161 of the Code for the purpose of contradicting PW 1. The omission in the statement recorded under Section 161 CrPC by PW 1 dated 14-10-1991 regarding the role attributed to A-2 to A-4 relates to a very material aspect and hence it amounted to contradiction. When any part of such statement is used for contradicting the witness during cross-examination the Public Prosecutor has the right to use any other part of the statement, during re-examination, for the purpose of explaining it. The said right of the Public Prosecutor is explicitly delineated in the last part of the proviso to Section 162(1) CrPC. (Paras 10 and 11)

If a Public Prosecutor failed to get the contradiction explained as permitted by the last limb of the proviso to Section 162(1) of the Code, it is not permissible for the court to invoke the powers under Section 172 CrPC for explaining such contradiction which deals with the diary of proceedings in investigation. Sub-section (2) of Section 172 CrPC makes it clear that the discretion given to the court to use such diaries is only for aiding the court to decide on a point. The court is forbidden from using the entries of such diaries as evidence. What cannot be used as evidence against the accused cannot be used in any other manner against him. If the court uses the entries in a case diary for contradicting a police officer it should be done only in the manner provided in Section 145 of the Evidence Act i.e. by giving the author of the statement an opportunity to explain the contradiction, after his attention is called to that part of the statement which is intended to be so used for contradiction. In other words, the power conferred on the court for perusal of the diary under Section 172 is not intended for explaining a contradiction which the defence has winched to the fore through the channel permitted by law. The interdict contained in Section 162, debars the court from using the power under Section 172 for the purpose of explaining the contradiction. (Paras 13 and 14). Mahabir Singh v. State of Haryana, (2001) 7 SCC 148: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1262: AIR 2001 SC 2503.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-7-2001]

[1976] — S. 172 read with R. 164 of Bihar Police Manual — Non-observance of provisions of — Effect — Does not vitiate the trial unless prejudice is shown to have been caused to the accused — Place of occurrence and identity of accused not disputed — Evidence of eyewitnesses found trustworthy — Omission on the part of the IO in not sending the bloodstained earth seized from the place of occurrence for chemical examination or in not entering the time of recording of statements of witnesses in the diary — No prejudice shown to have been caused to the accused — Held, trial not vitiated

Failure on the part of the Investigating Officer to comply with the provisions of Section 172 CrPC is a serious lapse on his part resulting in diminishing the value and credibility of his investigation. In this case the Investigating Officer neither entered the time of recording of the statements of the witnesses in the diary nor did he send the bloodstained clothes and earth seized from the place of occurrence for examination by a serologist. But the question that arises for consideration is, has any prejudice been caused to the accused in the trial by non-observance of rules by the Investigating Officer? The evidence on record before the Sessions Court and the appellate court does not show that due to the lapses on the part of the Investigating Officer in not sending the bloodstained clothes and earth seized from the place of occurrence for chemical examination and further not noting down the time of recording the statement of the witnesses in the diary has resulted in any prejudice to the defence of the accused. In the present case, the place of occurrence and the identity of the deceased are not disputed. Further, the testimony of the eyewitnesses which is consistent and does not suffer from infirmity, was believed by both the courts below. Once the eyewitnesses are believed and the courts come to the conclusion that the testimony of the eyewitnesses is trustworthy, the lapse on the part of the Investigating Officer in not observing the provisions of Section 172 CrPC unless some prejudice is shown to have been caused to the accused, will not affect the finding of guilt recorded by the Court. Therefore, judgments of the courts below do not suffer on account of omission on the part of the Investigating Officer in not sending the earth seized from the place of occurrence for chemical examination or in not entering the time of recording of the statements of witnesses in the diary. Baleshwar Mandal v. State of Bihar, (1997) 7 SCC 219: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1042: AIR 1997 SC 3471: 1997 Cri LJ 4084.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and V.N. Khare, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-8-1997]

[1977] — S. 172 — General Diary — Presumption in favour of — It is ordinarily difficult to fabricate false entries in a general diary. Sadhu Singh v. State of U.P., (1978) 4 SCC 428: 1979 SCC (Cri) 49: AIR 1978 SC 1506: 1978 ALJ 887.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria, O. Chinnappa Reddy and A.P. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-9-1978]

[1978] — Ss. 172 and 161 — Police diary — Non-production of before the court — Effect — No attempt made by the defence to call upon the prosecution side to produce the police diary — Non-production of the same before the court is insignificant — That apart in view of the statement of the police officer that details of occurrence were not noted in police diary non-production of the same had not resulted into any prejudice to the accused. Uppari Venkataswamy v. Public Prosecutor, High Court of A.P., (1996) 7 SCC 232: 1996 SCC (Cri) 284.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-12-1995]

[1979] — Ss. 172, 168 and 157 — Investigation — Log book — Practice to keep log book in form of loose sheets stapled together — Effect — Practice might require improvement — But it is not necessary in the case to say that such sheets produced are not genuine. Ayya v. State of U.P., (1989) 1 SCC 374: 1989 SCC (Cri) 153: AIR 1989 SC 364: 1989 Cri LJ 991.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ranganath Misra and M.N. Venkatachaliah, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-11-1988]

[1980] — S. 172 — Investigation — Site plan — Preparation of, when place of offence clearly specified — Whether necessary — Where the accused was found to be in possession of opium while sitting on a bench on a particular public road, preparing of a site plan of the place concerned, held, was not necessary — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — Ss. 8 and 18. Sayar Puri v. State of Rajasthan, (1998) 7 SCC 441: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1681: AIR 1998 SC 3224.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-9-1998]

[1981] — S. 172 — Police diary — Entries should be made with promptness, in sufficient detail, mentioning all significant facts, in careful chronological order and with complete objectivity. Bhagwant Singh v. Commr. of Police, (1983) 3 SCC 344: 1983 SCC (Cri) 637: AIR 1983 SC 826: 1983 Cri LJ 1081.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and R.S. Pathak, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-1983]

[1982] — Ss. 172 and 154 — Late entries made by the police officials in their registers/records by interpolation — Held, not permissible — The entry should be made at its appropriate place and under the correct date on which it was actually made and any delay in making the same should be explainable — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 35

The explanation of the police official who made the entries in the Maalkhana register was that he forgot to make an entry of the seized material in the said register and made the same after 5 days of the incident. The entry could be made at its appropriate place and under the correct date on which it was actually made and any delay in making the same could be explained. Entries as made by interpolation in the instant case cannot be permitted. (Para 5). Bahadur Singh v. State of M.P., (2002) 1 SCC 606: 2002 SCC (Cri) 172: AIR 2002 SC 289: (2002) 142 ELT 281: 2002 Cri LJ 579: (2002) 1 CHN (Supp) 34.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and Y.K. Sabharwal, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-12-2001]

[1983] — Ss. 172 and 155 — Daily diary register — Non-mention of names of witnesses, weapons of offence and place of occurrence therein — But in accordance with S. 155 CrPC the contents of FIR also entered in DDR, which contained names of the witnesses, weapons of offence and place of occurrence — Held, it was not necessary to mention them separately all over again (Para 15). Amar Singh v. Balwinder Singh, (2003) 2 SCC 518: 2003 SCC (Cri) 641: AIR 2003 SC 1164: 2003 Cri LJ 1282.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-2003]

[1984] — Ss. 172 and 161 — Case diary — Use of, by police and court — Necessary considerations — Right of accused to use case diary — Held, under S. 172(3), neither the accused nor his agents are entitled to call for or see such diaries — If the entire case diary is made available to the accused it may cause serious prejudice to others and even affect the safety and security of those who may have given statements to the police — But, if the case diaries are used by the police officer who made them to refresh his memory, or if the court uses them for the purpose of contradicting such police officer, the provisions of S. 161 CrPC or S. 145 of the Evidence Act has to be complied with — Court is empowered to call for such diaries not to use it as evidence but to use it as aid to find out anything that happened during the investigation of the crime — In view of the above, the use of entire case diary by the accused during trial in the present case, was not justified — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 145 (Para 27). Sidharth v. State of Bihar, (2005) 12 SCC 545: AIR 2005 SC 4352.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-9-2005]

[1985] — Ss. 172 and 161(3) — Case diary — Evidentiary value — Held, can be used as an aid in inquiry or trial but not as evidence — It cannot be used to overcome contradictions pointed out by defence (Paras 27 to 30). Mohd. Ankoos v. High Court of A.P., (2010) 1 SCC 94.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-11-2009]

Mahabir Singh v. State of Haryana, (2001) 7 SCC 148: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1262, relied on [1986] — S. 172 — Case diary — Reliance on a document, which formed part of case diary, and which was neither proved, nor attention of IO was drawn thereto, held, impermissible (Paras 18 and 19). Hari Yadav v. State of Bihar, (2007) 15 SCC 266.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-12-2007]

[1987] — Ss. 172 and 161 — Entry about police officer directed to accompany funeral party made in general diary kept at police station — Held, such entry cannot be regarded as entry in a case diary under S. 172 or a statement recorded under S. 161 — It was an entry of a police officer sent on duty. Shamshul Kanwar v. State of U.P., (1995) 4 SCC 430: 1995 SCC (Cri) 753: AIR 1995 SC 1748.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-5-1995]

[1988] — Ss. 172 and 162 — Murder case — Suspicious role of the investigating officer, like manipulation in station house diary, held, not necessarily fatal to the prosecution — The court, if convinced of truthfulness of the testimony of a witness to the occurrence, held, can act on such testimony irrespective of the suspicious role of the investigating officer — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302 (Para 19). State of Karnataka v. K. Yarappa Reddy, (1999) 8 SCC 715: AIR 2000 SC 185.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and A.P. Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-10-1999]

[1989] — S. 172 — Submission by accused that despite an application having been filed by the accused, the prosecution had failed to produce case diary and general diary relating to the date of occurrence — However, neither any such application, nor order passed thereon by the trial court produced — Held, question of drawing an adverse inference against the prosecution for non-production of the case diary or the general diary would have arisen had the court passed an order being satisfied that the prosecution intended to suppress some facts which were material for the purposes of arriving at the truth or otherwise of the prosecution case — If no such application had been filed and no order thereupon had been passed by the court, the question of drawing any adverse inference against the prosecution would not arise — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 114 Ill. (g) (Para 12). Ashok Kumar v. State of T.N., (2006) 10 SCC 157: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 497: AIR 2006 SC 2419: 2006 Cri LJ 2931.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2006]

[1990] — S. 172 — Non-examination of Investigating Officer — Entire case diary should not be allowed to be exhibited. Behari Prasad v. State of Bihar, (1996) 2 SCC 317: 1996 SCC (Cri) 271: AIR 1996 SC 2905.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-1-1996]

[1991] — S. 172 — Case diary — Evidentiary value — Held, a criminal court can send for the police diaries of a case under trial in such court, and may use such diaries, not as evidence of the case, but to aid it in such inquiry or trial — Case diary cannot be utilised as evidence to corroborate the statement of the prosecution witness — In the instant case, the IO had migrated to Pakistan and had died there, hence could not be examined by trial court — In such circumstances trial court had looked into the case diary as an additional factor to test the veracity of witnesses — Since the witnesses were confronted with their previous statements, that was not prejudicial to the accused in peculiar facts of the case (Paras 6, 8 and 9). Bachan Singh v. State of Bihar, (2008) 12 SCC 23.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-9-2008]

— S. 172(2) See Ss. 157 to 161 and 172(2)

See also Ss. 173(5), (6) & (7) and Ss. 172(2) & (3)

[1992] — Ss. 172(2) & (3) and 167 — Case-diary — Scrutiny of by the trial court if obligatory — Where the prosecution case was based on testimony of three independent natural eyewitnesses and corroborated by the medical evidence, held, the trial court was not obliged to closely scrutinise the case-diary for any tell-tale signs in favour of the defence. Bhai Lal v. State of U.P., (1998) 9 SCC 66: 1998 SCC (Cri) 982.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and M. Srinivasan, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-1997]

— S. 172(3) See Ss. 172(2) & (3) and 167

See also Ss. 173(5), (6) & (7) and Ss. 172(2) & (3)

[1993] — S. 172(3) — Constitutionality of sub-s. (3) — Held, provision not unreasonable or arbitrary — Unfettered power of court to examine entries in diaries provides sufficient safeguard — Fetter on accused's right to make roving inspection of case diary is in public interest — Further held that sub-ss. (1) and (3) being integral part of scheme of S. 172, sub-s. (3) cannot be struck down in isolation whilst retaining sub-s. (1) — Constitution of India — Article 14

The provision embodied in sub-section (3) of S. 172 of the CrPC cannot be characterised as unreasonable or arbitrary. Under sub-section (2) of S. 172 CrPC the court itself has the unfettered power to examine the entries in the diaries. This is a very important safeguard. The legislature has reposed complete trust in the court which is conducting the inquiry or the trial. It has empowered the court to call for any such relevant case diary. If there is any inconsistency or contradiction arising in the context of the case diary the court can use the entries for the purpose of contradicting the police officer as provided in sub-section (3) of S. 172, CrPC. The accused cannot claim an unfettered right to make roving inspection of the entries in the case diary regardless of whether these entries are used by the police officer concerned to refresh his memory or regardless of the fact whether the court has used these entries for the purpose of contradicting such police officer. Public interest demands that such an entry is not made available to the accused for it might endanger the safety of the informants and it might deter the informants from giving any information to assist the investigating agency.

There would be no prejudice or failure of justice to the accused person since the court can be trusted to look into the police diary for the purpose of protecting his interest. Therefore, the public interest requirement from the perspective of safeguarding the interest of all persons standing trial, is not compromised. On the other hand the public interest requirement from the perspective of enabling the investigating agency to investigate the crime against the society in order that the interest of the community to ensure that a culprit is traced and brought to book is also safeguarded.

There is also another dimension of the issue. Section 172 embodies a composite scheme. The duty cast under sub-section (1) and the rider added by sub-section (3) thereof from integral part of the scheme. Sub-section (3) cannot be struck down in isolation whilst retaining sub-section (1). The legislature in its wisdom has cast this obligation only subject to the rider. Sub-section (3) cannot be viewed in isolation. Mukund Lal v. Union of India, 1989 Supp (1) SCC 622: 1989 SCC (Cri) 606: AIR 1989 SC 144: 1989 Cri LJ 872.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.P. Thakkar and B.C. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-10-1988]

Mohinder Singh v. Emperor, AIR 1932 Lah 103: 33 Cri LJ 97: 135 IC 209; Mahabirji Birajman Mandir v. Prem Narain Shukla, AIR 1965 All 494: 1964 All LJ 950: (1965) 2 Cri LJ 452, approved

[1994] — S. 172(3) — Entries in case diary — Cannot be used by defence as evidence

Unless the investigating officer or the court uses the entries in the case diary either to refresh the memory or contradicting the investigating officer as previous statement under S. 161, Evidence Act, that too after drawing his attention thereto as is enjoined under S. 145 of the Evidence Act, the entries cannot be used by the accused as evidence. Therefore, the free use thereof for contradicting the prosecution evidence is obviously illegal and it is inadmissible in evidence. Thereby the defence cannot place reliance thereon. (Para 11). Malkiat Singh v. State of Punjab, (1991) 4 SCC 341: 1991 SCC (Cri) 976.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, V. Ramaswami and K. Ramaswamy, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-4-1991]

— S. 173 See also S. 173, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 1037 in Vol. 2

— S. 173 See Ss. 56 and 173
See also Ss. 154 to 173
See also Ss. 154 to 173 and 482
See also Ss. 154, 155, 156, 157, 162, 169, 170 and 173
See also Ss. 154, 156, 157, 173 and 482
See also Ss. 154, 156 and 173
See also Ss. 154 and 173
See also Ss. 154 & 173 and 401(3)
See also Ss. 154, 173 and 482
See also Ss. 156, 154, 173 and 482
See also Ss. 156, 157, 169, 173 and 190
See also Ss. 156 and 173
See also Ss. 157, 156, 169, 170, 173 and 190 & 173(8)
See also Ss. 157 to 161 and 173
See also Ss. 157 to 173
See also Ss. 157, 161 and 173
See also Ss. 157, 172 and 173
See also Ss. 157 and 173
See also Ss. 157, 173 and 482
See also Ss. 167, 309, 173 and 190
See also Ss. 167(2), 309(2) and 173
See also Ss. 167(2) proviso, 309, 173 and 190
See also Ss. 167(2) proviso, 437(5), 439(2), 57 and 173
See also Ss. 170, 169, 173, 2(h), 24 and 482
See also Ss. 170 and 173
See also Ss. 170, 173, 36 and 24
See also Ss. 177 and 173
See also Ss. 177, 190 and 173
See also Ss. 190, 154, 173 and 200
See also Ss. 190, 154, 173, 200 and 204

See also Ss. 190, 161, 165 and 173
See also Ss. 190 and 173
See also Ss. 190, 173, 200 and 202
See also Ss. 190, 200, 204, 173 and 482
See also Ss. 190(1) and 173
See also Ss. 190(1)(a) & 200 and 173
See also Ss. 190(1)(a), 200, 204, 173 and 482
See also Ss. 190(1)(b) and 173
See also Ss. 193, 190, 156, 157 and 173
See also Ss. 197, 190 and 173
See also Ss. 201, 203 and 173
See also Ss. 202, 190 and 173
See also Ss. 215, 173, 220 and 228
See also Ss. 228, 167, 173, 2(g) & (h), 190 and 309
See also Ss. 228, 240 and 173
See also Ss. 231 & 242 and 173 & 157
See also Ss. 239, 190 and 173
See also Ss. 319, 154, 156, 173, 190, 204, 209
See also Ss. 321, 228, 240 & 173
See also Ss. 437, 439 and 173
See also Ss. 482 and 154, 155, 156, 157, 162, 169, 170, 173
See also Ss. 482, 156 & 173
See also Ss. 482 and 173
See also Ss. 482, 173 and 197
See also Ss. 482, 173 and 240
See also Ss. 482, 190(1)(b), 204, 173, 169 and 362
See also Ss. 482 and 197, 173, 309, 437(6) and 468
See also Ss. 482, 397, 401, 239, 240 and 173

[1995] — S. 173 — Charge-sheet (police report) — What is, requirements for filing of, and stage at which may be filed

A charge-sheet is a final report within the meaning of Section 173(2) CrPC. It is filed so as to enable the court concerned to apply its mind as to whether cognizance of the offence thereupon should be taken or not. The report is ordinarily filed in the form prescribed therefor. One of the requirements for submission of a police report is whether any offence appears to have been committed and, if so, by whom. In some cases, the accused having not been arrested, the investigation against him may not zbe complete. There may not be sufficient material for arriving at a decision that the absconding accused is also a person by whom the offence appears to have been committed. If the investigating officer finds sufficient evidence even against such an accused who had been absconding, the law does not require that filing of the charge-sheet must await the arrest of the accused. (Para 19). Dinesh Dalmia v. CBI, (2007) 8 SCC 770: (2007) 59 AIC 145 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-2007]

[1996] — Ss. 173 and 190 — "Charge-sheet", "final report" — What are — Held, neither charge-sheet nor final report has been defined in CrPC — Charge-sheet or final report whatever may be the nomenclature, only means a report under S. 173 which has to be filed by police officer on completion of his investigation (Para 24). Srinivas Gundluri v. SEPCO Electric Power Construction Corpn., (2010) 8 SCC 206.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and Anil R. Dave, JJ. [Date of decision : 30-7-2010]

[1997] — S. 173 — Final report — Matter to be contained in — Scope of — Indicated — Power of investigating officer to record findings of fact or give a clean chit to accused in said report — Held, not available

The report contemplated by Section 173 CrPC should contain the information required by the said provision. The investigating officer is neither expected to record findings of fact nor to give clean chit by exercising power of a court or judicial authority. (Para 67)

In the instant case, however, the final report submitted by the Superintendent of Police under Section 173 CrPC is not in consonance with law. The Superintendent of Police not only refers to investigation made by him and the statements recorded in the course of investigation but records a "finding" that the statements were "correct". The investigating officer was required to submit a report in terms of Section 173 CrPC and nothing more. He should not record a finding nor can he give a clean chit which is a function and power of the Magistrate who will exercise the said power as provided in CrPC. (Paras 63 and 66 to 68). Hardeep Singh v. State of Punjab, (2009) 16 SCC 785.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-11-2008]

[1998] — Ss. 173, 154, 195 and 190 — Application and scope — Charge-sheet clubbing together two FIRs — When valid — Charge-sheet clubbing together offences in respect of two incidents one being the fallout of the other, held, valid — Though charge under S. 188 IPC was not tenable for absence of S. 195 CrPC complaint, that would not falsify other charges clubbed with it

— Legislative intent behind S. 195(1)(a)(i) CrPC is to prevent frivolous litigation — Penal Code, 1860, S. 188

There was no wrong in clubbing together of the two crimes. Keeping in view the totality of the circumstances and evidence, the second occurrence was nothing but a fallout of the first occurrence. Merely because two separate complaints had been lodged, did not mean that they could not be clubbed together and one charge-sheet could not be filed. (Paras 37, 8 and 36)

Therefore although the charges under Section 188 are quashed as no complaint in this regard had ever been filed, it would by no means have any bearing on the case of the prosecution, so far as the charges for other offences are concerned. It cannot be accepted that absence of a complaint under Section 195 CrPC falsifies the genesis of the prosecution case and is fatal to the entire prosecution case. (Paras 36 and 35)

The legislative intent behind Section 195(1)(a)(i) CrPC read with Section 188 is that an individual should not face criminal prosecution instituted upon insufficient grounds by persons actuated by malice, ill will or frivolity of disposition and to save the time of the criminal courts being wasted by endless prosecutions. This provision has been carved out as an exception to the general rule contained under Section 190 CrPC. (Para 28)

Thus, there must be a complaint by the public servant whose lawful order has not been complied with. The complaint must be in writing. The provisions of Section 195 CrPC are mandatory. Non-compliance with it would vitiate the prosecution and all other consequential orders. The court cannot assume the cognizance of the case without such complaint. In the absence of such a complaint, the trial and conviction will be void ab initio being without jurisdiction. (Para 33)

The test of whether there is evasion or non-compliance with Section 195 CrPC or not, is whether the facts disclose primarily and essentially an offence for which a complaint of the court or of a public servant is required. The provisions of this section cannot be evaded by describing the offence as one being punishable under some other sections of IPC, though in truth and substance, the offence falls in a category mentioned in Section 195 CrPC. Thus, cognizance of such an offence cannot be taken by misdescribing it or by putting a wrong label on it. (Para 29). C. Muniappan v. State of T.N., (2010) 9 SCC 567: (2010) 5 CTC 794 .

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.S. Singhvi and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-8-2010]

T.T. Antony v. State of Kerala, (2001) 6 SCC 181: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1048; Govind Mehta v. State of Bihar, (1971) 3 SCC 329: 1971 SCC (Cri) 608; Patel Laljibhai Somabhai v. State of Gujarat, (1971) 2 SCC 376: 1971 SCC (Cri) 548; Surjit Singh v. Balbir Singh, (1996) 3 SCC 533: 1996 SCC (Cri) 521; State of Punjab v. Raj Singh, (1998) 2 SCC 391: 1998 SCC (Cri) 642; K. Vengadachalam v. K.C. Palanisamy, (2005) 7 SCC 352: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1673; Iqbal Singh Marwah v. Meenakshi Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1101; M.S. Ahlawat v. State of Haryana, (2000) 1 SCC 278: 2000 SCC (Cri) 193; Sachida Nand Singh v. State of Bihar, (1998) 2 SCC 493: 1998 SCC (Cri) 660; Daulat Ram v. State of Punjab, AIR 1962 SC 1206: (1962) 2 Cri LJ 286; Basir-ul-Haq v. State of W.B., AIR 1953 SC 293: 1953 Cri LJ 1232; Durgacharan Naik v. State of Orissa, AIR 1966 SC 1775: 1966 Cri LJ 1491, relied on

[1999] — Ss. 173, 169, 170, 157, 190 and 482 — Filing of additional charge-sheet (police report) under S. 173 due to intervention by senior officers and MLA in investigation to benefit accused persons — High Court quashing second supervision note of higher officers and retaining first supervision note of Additional SP — First supervision note being sufficient to frame charge against all accused persons — High Court holding that second supervision note, which was in favour of some of the accused persons was without sanction and had materialised due to intervention of the MLA — Sustainability — Impugned judgment of High Court: (1) quashing second supervision, (2) giving directions for filing of additional charge-sheet on basis of first supervision note, and (3) directing investigating authorities to act in accordance with Dinesh Dalmia, (2007) 8 SCC 770, regarding filing of charge-sheet even if the accused persons had not been arrested, not interfered with

The High Court in exercise of inherent powers under Section 482 CrPC entertained a letter written by the informant wife of the deceased. The wife was aggrieved by the inaction of the police in not arresting all the accused persons who had murdered her husband. The supervisory report of the Additional SP was sufficient for the Magistrate to frame charges against all the accused persons. The polygraph test performed by the Additional SP confirmed the presence of all the accused persons who had participated in the assault with different types of weapons. Even the senior police officers accepted the same. The Additional SP was of the view that investigation of other twelve accused required thorough investigation. But later at the intervention of an MLA, the senior police officers conducted a second test and differed with the original test note of the Additional SP.

The Division Bench of the High Court by its impugned order strongly disapproved the role played by the MLA and senior police officers in interfering with the process of investigation. The Division Bench of the High Court, therefore, directed the appropriate authorities to take action against all the accused persons, according to law, based upon the supervision note issued by the Additional SP and quashed all actions taken on the basis of the test report of the IG of Police. Further directions were given to the investigating authority to act in accordance with the decision in Dinesh Dalmia case, (2007) 8 SCC 770, regarding filing of charge-sheet even if the accused persons had not been arrested.

It was submitted on behalf of the appellant-accused that the direction to file additional charge-sheet was contrary to the provisions of law and could not, therefore, be sustained.

Dismissing the appeal of the accused,

Held :

No interference is called for with the impugned order of the High Court. The High Courts in exercise of their inherent and plenary powers are entitled to intervene to set right the illegality and/or mala fide action on the part of the investigating authorities when it notices such illegality and/or mala fide action on the part of the investigating authorities. While the courts should not intervene in matters of investigation, which power, under the scheme of CrPC has been vested in the police authorities, an exception has also been made that in certain circumstances the court could intervene in order to do justice to the parties. The courts and in particular the High Courts, are the guardians of the life and liberty of the citizens and if there is any flavour of deliberate misuse of the authority vested in the investigating authority, the High Court or the Supreme Court may certainly step in to correct such injustice or failure of justice. (Paras 48 to 52)

The High Court, therefore, had power to interfere with the directions given by the Director General of Police to the Inspector General of Police to submit a fresh test note despite the supervisory report which had been submitted by the Additional SP indicating that a case had been made out to go to trial as against all the nineteen accused. Although the supervisory report submitted by the Additional SP had been duly accepted not only by the Inspector General of Police, but also by the Director General of Police, which was sufficient for the Magistrate to frame a charge against all the accused persons, a fresh direction was given to the Inspector General of Police, to submit a test note. Such a direction given after the intervention of an MLA who has gone to the extent of providing an alibi for two of the accused, J and S, claiming that they were present in his house when the incident had occurred, not only exudes an unpleasant flavour, but raises doubts about the bona fides of the police authorities at the highest level. In fact, it is on account of such intervention that initially charge was filed only against four of the accused and thereafter three more. No steps were taken as far as the remaining twelve accused were concerned and it is only when the action of the said MLA was questioned before the High Court, that charge was also filed against the remaining twelve accused persons. (Paras 49 and 50)

In the peculiar facts and circumstances of this case, it was necessary for such a direction to be given by the High Court in order to prevent an injustice from being done on account of the intervention of influential persons, which not only had the effect of negating the supervisory report of the Additional SP but also resulted in an attempt to shield some of the accused persons. (Para 53). Kedar Narayan Parida v. State of Orissa, (2009) 9 SCC 538.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-2009]

Abhinandan Jha v. Dinesh Mishra, AIR 1968 SC 117: (1967) 3 SCR 668; Comptroller and Auditor General of India v. K.S. Jagannathan, (1986) 2 SCC 679: 1986 SCC (L&S) 345: (1986) 1 ATC 1; H.S. Bains v. State (UT, Chandigarh), (1980) 4 SCC 631: 1981 SCC (Cri) 93; Kishan Lal v. Dharmendra Bafna, (2009) 7 SCC 685: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 611: 2009 Cri LJ 3721: (2009) 81 AIC 141 (SC), relied on [2000] — Ss. 173, 170 and 172 — Obligation of prosecution/police to disclose evidence to accused — Extent and scope of — Requirement of fair disclosure — Non-compliance — Effect — Held, constitutional mandate and statutory rights given to accused place an implied obligation on prosecution to make fair disclosure — Nevertheless, violation of this duty does not necessarily vitiate entire trial — Fair trial takes within its ambit furnishing of documents to accused which prosecution relies upon, whether filed or not — However, accused cannot claim indefeasible right to every document on police file or even portions which are permitted to be excluded from documents annexed to report under S. 173(2) as per orders of court — It is not necessary that entire prosecution evidence should be disclosed to accused — Obligation of disclosure is limited to evidence on which prosecution proposes to rely — Even if an omission to bring an inculpatory material to notice of accused has occurred, that ipso facto does not vitiate proceedings unless non-disclosure amounts to material irregularity and causes irreversible prejudice to accused — In instant case, no prejudice was caused to accused, and non-furnishing of copy of one of the ballistic reports had not hampered ends of justice — Besides, prosecution had also doubted said document and not relied thereon — Moreover, such issue was not raised seriously by accused before trial court — Bar Council of India Rules, R. 16 — Constitution of India — Article 21 [Paras 190 to 222, 270 to 273, 303(7) & (8)]. Manu Sharma v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 6 SCC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and Swatanter Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision : 19-4-2010]

State of Punjab v. Swaran Singh, (2005) 6 SCC 101: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1359; Harendra Nath Chakraborty v. State of W.B., (2009) 2 SCC 758: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 865, relied on

[2001] — S. 173 — Charge-sheet (police report) filed without all supporting documents — If vitiated thereby — Effect of no prejudice having been caused to accused on presentation of such charge-sheet — Held, though ordinarily all documents accompany the charge-sheet, even if all the documents had not been filed, the same would not vitiate filing of the charge-sheet, especially if no plea as to prejudice has been taken by accused

In this case CBI took a conscious decision to file charge-sheet against the appellant. His name was shown in Column 1 thereof although he was absconding. It is true that ordinarily all documents accompany the charge-sheet. But, in this case, some documents could not be filed which were not in the possession of CBI as the same were with the Government Examiner of Questioned Documents (GEQD). Whereas the charge-sheet was submitted on 24-10-2005, the appellant was arrested only on 12-2-2006. The additional documents were filed on 20-1-2006. However, the appellant does not contend that he has been prejudiced by not filing of such documents with the charge-sheet. No such plea in fact had been taken. Even if all the documents had not been filed, by reason thereof submission of charge-sheet itself does not become vitiated in law. Validity of the said charge-sheet is also not in question. (Paras 16, 18 and 22). Dinesh Dalmia v. CBI, (2007) 8 SCC 770: (2007) 59 AIC 145 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-2007]

[2002] — Ss. 173, 170, 172 and 24 — Role of Public Prosecutor — Disclosure of evidence/ prosecution material to accused — Position under Indian law vis-à-vis English law — Held, role and obligation of Prosecutor under Indian law cannot be equated to that prevalent under English law — Under English law, subject to exceptions like sensitive information and public interest immunity, prosecution is required to disclose any material which might be exculpatory to defence — Criminal Procedure and Investigation Act, 1996 (English) (Paras 193 to 196). Manu Sharma v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 6 SCC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and Swatanter Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision : 19-4-2010]

R. v. Ward (Judith), (1993) 1 WLR 619: (1993) 2 All ER 577 (CA); R. v. Preston, (1994) 2 AC 130: (1993) 3 WLR 891: (1993) 4 All ER 638 (HL), distinguished

[2003] — S. 173 — Filing of charge-sheet (police report) against absconding accused during the abscondence — When permissible — Availability of sufficient evidence against absconding accused — Held, in such a case, the law does not require that filing of charge-sheet must await arrest of the accused

A charge-sheet is a final report within the meaning of Section 173(2) CrPC. It is filed so as to enable the court concerned to apply its mind as to whether cognizance of the offence thereupon should be taken or not. The report is ordinarily filed in the form prescribed therefor. One of the requirements for submission of a police report is whether any offence appears to have been committed and, if so, by whom. In some cases, the accused having not been arrested, the investigation against him may not be complete. There may not be sufficient material for arriving at a decision that the absconding accused is also a person by whom the offence appears to have been committed. If the investigating officer finds sufficient evidence even against such an accused who had been absconding, the law does not require that filing of the charge-sheet must await the arrest of the accused. (Para 19). Dinesh Dalmia v. CBI, (2007) 8 SCC 770: (2007) 59 AIC 145 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-2007]

[2004] — S. 173 — Final report — Magistrate must give notice and opportunity of hearing to the informant before accepting the final report and closing the case — Issuance of notice to the informant by the investigating agency not a substitute for notice required to be given by the Magistrate — Magistrate cannot delegate to investigating agency its function of issuing notice — Matter remitted to the Magistrate for its disposal in accordance with law

In the present case no notice was issued by the Magistrate to the appellant before accepting the final report submitted by the CBI and deciding not to take cognizance and drop the proceedings. This omission vitiates the order of the court accepting the final report. The issuance of a notice by the Magistrate to the informant at the time of consideration of the final report is a "must".

The issuance of notice by the CBI to the appellant was not a substitute for the notice which was required to be given by the Magistrate. The Magistrate could not in any event "delegate" to the investigating agency its function of issuing notice. Moreover, when law requires a particular thing to be done in a particular manner, it must be done in that manner and in no other manner.

Thus, the Magistrate was not justified in accepting the final report of the CBI and closing the case without any notice to the appellant and behind its back. Union Public Service Commission v. S. Papaiah, (1997) 7 SCC 614: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1112: AIR 1997 SC 3876.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K. Venkataswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-9-1997]

Bhagwant Singh v. Commr. of Police, (1985) 2 SCC 537: 1985 SCC (Cri) 267, followed

[2005] — S. 173 — Final report submitted by police — Court of competent jurisdiction is obliged to decide on proper application of mind whether to accept or reject the report — In case of non-application of mind interference by higher court called for — Constitution of India — Article 136

It is not for a court to keep track of an investigation and watch its day to day progress but, when an investigation culminates into a final report as contemplated under S. 173 of CrPC then the competent court enjoins a duty within its authority sanctioned by law to scrupulously scrutinise the final report and the accompaniments by applying its judicial mind and take a decision either to accept or reject the final report. Sampat Singh v. State of Haryana, (1993) 1 SCC 561: 1993 SCC (Cri) 376.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-12-1992]

[2006] — Ss. 173 and 154 — Interpolation in police report by IO submitted to Magistrate to cover omissions in FIR — On facts, benefit of doubt given. K. Ashokan v. State of Kerala, (1998) 3 SCC 570: AIR 1998 SC 1974.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-2-1998]

[2007] — Ss. 173 and 190 — Police report — Magistrate not bound to accept — He may direct further inquiry or may take cognizance of the offence on material placed before it. State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192: AIR 1991 SC 1260.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh[1] and K. Ramaswamy[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 2-4-1991]

[2008] — Ss. 173 and 207 — Furnishing of documents to accused by prosecution/police and by court — Comparative scope — Held, mandate under S. 207 is in contradistinction to S. 173, where legislature has used expression "documents on which prosecution relies", which words are not used in S. 207 — Hence, S. 207 needs to be given liberal and relevant meaning to achieve its object (Para 219). Manu Sharma v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 6 SCC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and Swatanter Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision : 19-4-2010]

R. v. Ward (Judith), (1993) 1 WLR 619: (1993) 2 All ER 577 (CA); R. v. Preston, (1994) 2 AC 130: (1993) 3 WLR 891: (1993) 4 All ER 638 (HL), distinguished [2009] — S. 173 — Where large number of cases instituted against the petitioner but all resulted in discharge or acquittal, harassment by police cannot be ruled out — Inquiry directed to be made. Aruna Shankar v. State of U.P., (1987) 3 SCC 489: 1987 SCC (Cri) 583.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: O. Chinnappa Reddy and V. Khalid, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-1-1987]

[2010] — Ss. 173, 190(1)(b), 156(3), 200, 203 and 204 — Police report submitted under S. 173 on the basis of investigation ordered by Magistrate under S. 156(3), held, does not bar the Magistrate from proceeding under Ss. 200, 203 and 204 — Courses open to the Magistrate on receipt of the report — Even if the report suggests that the case against the accused not made out and must be dropped, held, the Magistrate disagreeing with the report can take cognizance of the offence under S. 190(1)(b) and direct issue of process

The mere fact that the Magistrate had earlier ordered an investigation under S. 156(3) and received a report under S. 173 will not have the effect of total effacement of the complaint and therefore, the Magistrate will not be barred from proceeding under Ss. 200, 203 and 204. The Magistrate is not bound by the conclusions arrived at by the police even as he is not bound by the conclusions arrived at by the complainant in a complaint. A Magistrate who on receipt of a complaint, orders an investigation under Section 156(3) and receives a police report under S. 173(2), may, thereafter, do one of three things: (i) he may decide that there is no sufficient ground for proceeding further and drop action; (ii) he may take cognizance of the offence under S. 196(1)(b) on the basis of the police report and issue process; this he may do without being bound in any manner by the conclusion arrived at by the police in their report; (iii) he may take cognizance of the offence under S. 190(1)(a) on the basis of the original complaint and proceed to examine upon oath the complainant and his witnesses under S. 200. If he adopts the third alternative, he may hold or direct an inquiry under S. 202 if he thinks fit. Thereafter, he may dismiss the complaint for issue process, as the case may be.

In the present case, therefore, the Magistrate did not act without jurisdiction in taking cognizance of the offence under S. 190(1)(b) and issuing process to the accused notwithstanding the fact that the police report was to the effect that no case had been made out.

[In Abhinandan Jha v. Dinesh Mishra, (1967) 3 SCR 668: AIR 1968 SC 117, the court observed that if ultimately the Magistrate was of the opinion that the facts set out in the police report constituted an offence, he could take cognizance of offence under "S. 190(1)(c)" of the old Code, in which word "or suspicion" occurred after the word 'knowledge'. It is, however, clear that the reference to S. 190(1)(c) was a mistake for S. 190(1)(b). Section 190(1)(c) was never intended to apply to cases where there was a police report under S. 173(1). It is impossible to say that a Magistrate who takes cognizance of the offence on the basis of the facts disclosed in a police report must be said to have taken cognizance of the offence on suspicion and not upon a police report merely because the Magistrate and the police arrived at different conclusions from the facts.]. H.S. Bains, Director, Small Saving-cum-Dy. Secy. Finance v. State (UT, Chandigarh), (1980) 4 SCC 631: 1981 SCC (Cri) 93: AIR 1980 SC 1883: 1980 Cri LJ 1308.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-10-1980]

[2011] — Ss. 173, 200 and 2(d) Expln. — Enquiry report of the officer of the RPF in respect of non-cognizable offence is in the nature of a complaint under S. 200 CrPC and not a report under S. 173 CrPC — High Court wrongly quashed the proceedings — Railway Property (Unlawful Possession) Act, 1966 — Ss. 7 & 3

The respondents, who are the employees of the Railways, were caught red-handed while carrying away railway cement unlawfully for sale. After seizure of the railway property and interrogation of the accused a case under Section 3 of the Railway Property (Unlawful Possession) Act was registered. Inspector, RPF inquired the case and submitted report (complaint Annexure P-3) before the Magistrate. The accused persons filed applications before the Magistrate praying for their discharge on the ground that the officer of the RPF was not a police officer within the meaning of Section 173 CrPC and upon his report submitted in the court, the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to take cognizance. Their prayer was rejected by the Magistrate against which they filed petitions in the High Court for quashing the order of the Magistrate. The High Court quashed the proceedings.

Allowing the appeals,

Held :

The order of the Magistrate refusing to discharge the respondents in the complaint pending before him has to be upheld. (Para 11)

Annexure P-3 unambiguously indicates that it was not a report within the meaning of Section 173 of the Code but a complaint filed before the Magistrate, obviously under Section 200 of the Code. The process against the accused appears to have been issued under Section 204 of the Code. Merely because the inquiry was held by a member of the Force having some similar powers as are possessed by an investigating officer, would not make the complaint to be a report within the meaning of Section 173 of the Code. (Para 6)

Section 2(d) of the Code encompasses a police report also as a deemed complaint if the matter is investigated by a police officer regarding the case involving commission of a non-cognizable offence. In such a case, the report submitted by a police officer cannot be held to be without jurisdiction merely because proceedings were instituted by the police officer after investigation, when he had no power to investigate. (Para 7)

The main purpose of the Act was to invest powers of investigation and prosecution of an offence relating to railway property in the RPF in the same manner as in a case relating to the offences under the law dealing with excise and customs. The offences under the Act are non-cognizable which cannot be investigated by a police officer under the Code. The result is that initiation of inquiry for an offence inquired into under this Act can be only on the basis of a complaint by an officer of the Force, as was actually done in this case. (Para 8). State of Bihar v. Chandra Bhushan Singh, (2001) 2 SCC 241: 2001 SCC (Cri) 338: AIR 2001 SC 429.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-12-2000]

Balkishan A. Devidayal v. State of Maharashtra, (1980) 4 SCC 600: 1981 SCC (Cri) 62: (1981) 1 SCR 175; State of Bihar v. Ganesh Choudhary, (2001) 2 SCC 245, relied on

[2012] — Ss. 173, 190 and 2(d) — Even if proceedings instituted before Magistrate after investigation by a police officer having no power to investigate a case involving non-cognizable offence, held, Magistrate cannot be said to have no jurisdiction to take action — Where SI, Police concerned of Railway Protection Force investigated the cases and submitted charge-sheet, objection that no action could be taken by the Magistrate taking cognizance of offence as the SI of RPF had no power to investigate a case, held, cannot be sustained — Report of the SI should be deemed as a complaint

The scheme of the Code of Criminal Procedure on the subject reflective from Section 2(d) defining "complaint" encompasses a police report also as a "deemed complaint" if the matter has been investigated by a police officer regarding a case involving commission of a non-cognizable offence. It obviously means that the proceedings before the Magistrate could not be viewed as without jurisdiction merely because proceedings were instituted by the police officer after investigation when he had no power to investigate. The police officer here cognizant of his limitations had according to the appellant State undertaken an inquiry and not an investigation and had submitted before the Court not a police report, but a complaint. Thus in either view of the matter, the interference of the High Court was uncalled for. Proceedings had to be allowed to be continued as if on a complaint. (Para 4). State of Bihar v. Ganesh Choudhary, (2001) 2 SCC 245.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-5-1997]

[2013] — Ss. 173 and 190 — Final report — Magistrate not bound to accept it — If the Magistrate feels that the evidence and material collected during investigation justify prosecution of the accused, he may not accept the final report and take cognizance of the offence — This does not amounts to interference with the investigation — Magistrate would be doing so in exercise of powers under S. 190 (Para 14). Union of India v. Prakash P. Hinduja, (2003) 6 SCC 195: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1314: AIR 2003 SC 2612: 2003 Cri LJ 3117.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-7-2003]

[2014] — Ss. 173 and 190(1)(b) — Evidence — Result of investigation — Finding of guilt cannot be based on result of investigation by police — It should be based solely on evidence produced during trial — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 3

The reliance of the trial court on the result of investigation to base its findings is patently wrong. If the observations of the trial Judge in this regard is taken to its logical conclusion it would mean that a finding of guilt can be recorded against an accused without a trial, relying solely upon the police report submitted under Section 173, CrPC, which is the outcome of an investigation. The result of investigation under Chapter XXII of the Criminal Procedure Code is a conclusion which an Investigating Officer draws on the basis of materials collected during investigation and such conclusion can only form the basis of a competent court to take cognizance thereupon under Section 190(1)(b), CrPC and to proceed with the case for trial, where the materials collected during investigation are to be translated into legal evidence. The trial court is then required to base its conclusion solely on the evidence adduced during the trial and it cannot rely on the investigation or the result thereof. Vijender v. State of Delhi, (1997) 6 SCC 171: 1997 SCC (Cri) 857.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and B.N. Kirpal, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-2-1997]

— S. 173(1) See Ss. 203, 173(1) and 190(1)

— S. 173(2) See Ch. XII (Ss. 154 to 176) and S. 173(2)

See also Ss. 154, 156, 173(2) & (8) and 211

See also Ss. 154 and 173(2) & (8)

See also Ss. 156(3), 173(2), 154 and 190(1)(a) & (b)

See also Ss. 157 and 173(2)

See also Ss. 167(5), 173(2), 2(x) and (w)

See also Ss. 170, 169 and 173(2)

See also Ss. 173(8) and (2)

See also Ss. 173(8) & (2) and 156(1)

See also Ss. 173(8), (2) and 190

See also Ss. 173(8) & (2) and 190(1)(b)

See also Ss. 173(8) & (2) and 319

See also Ss. 190, 173(2), 169, 200, 202 and 204

See also Ss. 190, 204, 173(2), 154, 162 and 319

See also Ss. 190(1), 173(2), 169, 200 and 202

See also Ss. 190(1)(a) & (b) and 173(2), 200 & 202

See also Ss. 190(1)(b) and 173(2)

See also Ss. 197, 170 and 173(2)

See also Ss. 437, 173(2) and 190(1)(b)

See also Ss. 482 and 173(2)

See also Ss. 482, 173(8) & (2) and 156(1)

[2015] — S. 173(2) — Police report — Charge-sheet — Details of the offence need not be stated in

Per Shetty and Venkatachaliah, JJ.

The charge-sheet is nothing but a final report of police officer under S. 173(2) of the CrPC. The statutory requirement of the report under S. 173(2) would be complied with if the various details prescribed therein are included in the report. This report is an intimation to the magistrate that upon investigation into a cognizable offence the Investigating Officer has been able to procure sufficient evidence for the court to inquire into the offence and the necessary information is being sent to the court. In fact, the report under S. 173(2) purports to be an opinion of the Investigating Officer that as far as he is concerned he has been able to procure sufficient material for the trial of the accused by the court. The report is complete if it is accompanied with all the documents and statements of witnesses as required by S. 175(5). Nothing more need be stated in the report of the Investigating Officer. It is also not necessary that all the details of the offence must be stated. The details of the offence are required to be proved to bring home the guilt to the accused at a later stage i.e. in the course of the trial of the case by adducing acceptable evidence. (Para 76)

In the instant case, the charge-sheet contains all the requirements of S. 173(2). No more is required to be stated in the charge-sheet. It is fully in accordance with the terms of S. 173(2) CrPC and clause (e) of S. 5(1) of the Act. (Para 77). K. Veeraswami v. Union of India, (1991) 3 SCC 655: 1991 SCC (Cri) 734.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: B.C. Ray[1], K. Jagannatha Shetty[2], L.M. Sharma[3], M.N. Venkatachaliah[2] and J.S. Verma[4], JJ. [Date of decision: 25-7-1991]

[2016] — Ss. 173(2) & (6) — Expression "for which public servant cannot satisfactorily account" in S. 5(1)(e), PC Act, 1947 — Does not indicate that investigating officer is obliged to afford any opportunity to the public servant to explain the alleged disproportionality of his assets and to furnish his averments in the charge-sheet — Charge-sheet must be in compliance with S. 173(2) CrPC — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 — S. 5(1)(e)

Per Shetty and Venkatachaliah, JJ.

The Investigating Officer is only required to collect material to find out whether the offence alleged appears to have been committed. In the course of the investigation, he may examine the accused. He may seek his clarification and if necessary he may cross check with him about his known sources of income and assets possessed by him. Indeed, fair investigation requires that the accused should not be kept in darkness. He should be taken into confidence if he is willing to cooperate. But to state that after collection of all material the Investigating Officer must give an opportunity to the accused and call upon him to account for the excess of the assets over the known sources of income and then decide whether the accounting is satisfactory or not, would be elevating the Investigating Officer to the position of an enquiry officer or a judge. The Investigating Officer is not holding an enquiry against the conduct of the public servant or determining the disputed issues regarding the disproportionality between the assets and the income of the accused. He just collects material from all sides and prepares a report which he files in the court as charge-sheet. (Para 75)

In the instant case, the charge-sheet contains all the requirements of S. 173(2). No more is required to be stated in the charge-sheet. It is fully in accordance with the terms of S. 173(2) CrPC and clause (e) of S. 5(1) of the Act. (Para 77)

Per Sharma, J. (concurring)

Section 5(1)(e) does not contemplate a notice to be served on the accused. If the prosecuting authority after making a suitable enquiry, by taking into account the relevant documents and questioning relevant persons, forms the opinion that the accused cannot satisfactorily account for the accumulation of disproportionate wealth in his possession the section is attracted. The records clearly indicate that after duly taking all the appropriate steps it was stated that the assets found in the possession of the appellant in his own name and in the name of his wife and two sons, were disproportionate by a sum of over Rs 6 lakhs to his known sources of income during the relevant period and which he "cannot satisfactorily account" for. (Para 94). K. Veeraswami v. Union of India, (1991) 3 SCC 655: 1991 SCC (Cri) 734.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: B.C. Ray[1], K. Jagannatha Shetty[2], L.M. Sharma[3], M.N. Venkatachaliah[2] and J.S. Verma[4], JJ. [Date of decision: 25-7-1991]

[2017] — Ss. 173(2) & (5) — Report under should contain all details required in sub-s. (2) and should also be accompanied by the documents and statements required in sub-s. (5)

The report under S. 173(2) purports to be an opinion of the investigating officer that as far as he is concerned he has been able to procure sufficient evidence for the trial of the accused by the Court and when he states in the report not only the names of the accused, but names of the witnesses, the nature of the offence and a request that the case be tried, there is compliance with S. 173(2). The report as envisaged by S. 173(2) has to be accompanied as required by sub-section (5) by all the documents and statements of the witnesses therein mentioned. The whole of it is submitted as a report to the Court. But even if a narrow construction is adopted that the police report can only be what is prescribed in Section 173(2) there would be sufficient compliance if what is required to be mentioned by the statute has been set down in the report. Satya Narain Musadi v. State of Bihar, (1980) 3 SCC 152: 1980 SCC (Cri) 660: AIR 1980 SC 506: 1980 Cri LJ 227.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.A. Desai and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-1979]

[2018] — S. 173(2) — Reason for communicating action taken by officer-in-charge of police station to the informant

When an informant lodges the First Information Report with the officer-in-charge of a police station, he does not fade away with the lodging of the First Information Report. He is very much concerned with what action is initiated by the officer-in-charge of the police station on the basis of the First Information Report lodged by him. The reason is that the informant who sets the machinery of investigation into motion by filing the First Information Report must know what is the result of the investigation initiated on the basis of the First Information Report. The informant having taken the initiative in lodging the First Information Report with a view to initiating investigation by the police for the purpose of ascertaining whether any offence has been committed and, if so, by whom, is vitally interested in the result of the investigation and hence the law requires that the action taken by the office-in-charge of a police station on the First Information Report should be communicated to him and the report forwarded by such officer to the Magistrate under sub-section (2)(i) of S. 173 should also be supplied to him. Bhagwant Singh v. Commr. of Police, (1985) 2 SCC 537: 1985 SCC (Cri) 267: AIR 1985 SC 1285: 1985 Cri LJ 1521.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, A.N. Sen and D.P. Madon, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-4-1985]

[2019] — Ss. 173(2), (8), 190 and 203 — Acceptance of final report by Magistrate does not debar him from taking cognizance of the offence if on further investigation fresh material comes to light (Para 4). State of Rajasthan v. Aruna Devi, (1995) 1 SCC 1: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and B.L. Hansaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-11-1994]

Pramatha Nath Taluqdar v. Saroj Ranjan Sarkar, 1962 Supp (2) SCR 297: AIR 1962 SC 876: (1962) 1 Cri LJ 770, followed

Bindeshwari Prasad Singh v. Kali Singh, (1977) 1 SCC 57: 1977 SCC (Cri) 33, distinguished

[2020] — Ss. 173(2), 169, 190, 200 and 203 — Consideration of police report — Notice and hearing to informant — When on submission of police report under S. 173(2) Magistrate decides not to take cognizance and to drop proceeding against all or some of the accused, held, informant is entitled to a notice and an opportunity to be heard at the time of consideration of the report — The said right is conferred on the informant and none else — If the informant not aware as to when the matter is to be considered, he cannot be faulted even if protest petition is filed belatedly

When the information is laid with the police, but no action in that behalf is taken, the complainant is given power under Section 190 read with Section 200 of the Criminal Procedure Code to lay the complaint before the Magistrate having jurisdiction to take cognizance of the offence and the Magistrate is required to enquire into the complaint as provided in Chapter XV of the Code. In case the Magistrate after recording evidence finds a prima facie case, instead of issuing process to the accused, he is empowered to direct the police concerned to investigate into offence under Chapter XII of the Code and to submit a report. If he finds that the complaint does not disclose any offence to take further action, he is empowered to dismiss the complaint under Section 203 of the Code. In case he finds that the complaint/evidence recorded prima facie discloses an offence, he is empowered to take cognizance of the offence and would issue process to the accused. A writ petition in such cases is not to be entertained. (Para 16). Minu Kumari v. State of Bihar, (2006) 4 SCC 359: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 310: AIR 2006 SC 1937: 2006 Cri LJ 2468: (2006) 2 KLT 588: (2006) 3 Guj LR 2013.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-4-2006]

Bhagwant Singh v. Commr. of Police, (1985) 2 SCC 537: 1985 SCC (Cri) 267, followed

Gangadhar Janardan Mhatre v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 7 SCC 768: 2005 SCC (Cri) 404, relied on

[2021] — S. 173(2) — Police report — Right of parties as to disclosure of police report — Stage when such right can be claimed — Constitution of India, Art. 136

It is too late in the day to raise a contention as has been done in Writ Petition No. 7230 of 1999, that the State should have disclosed that a final report had been filed in regard to the complaint made by MA, for more than one reason; firstly, the same has become academic; secondly, whereas final report had been filed on 29-11-1999, the writ petition was filed on that date itself. What would have been the effect of the said final report that no case has been made out, again is a matter of no significance, as even the High Court while exercising its jurisdiction under Section 482 did not find so. (Para 31). Manoj Narain Agrawal v. Shashi Agrawal, (2009) 6 SCC 385.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-2009]

[2022] — Ss. 173(2), (8) and 200 — Complainant's right and options against accused in criminal trial, stated — Held, the same are (1) the right to be given notice on filing of police report, (2) the right to file a protest petition, which may be treated as a complaint by Magistrate, and (3) the right to question the fairness of investigation and demand further investigation

The investigating officer when an FIR is lodged in respect of a cognizable offence, upon completion of the investigation would file a police report. It is now a well-settled principle of law that when a final form is filed by any investigating officer in exercise of his power under Section 173(2) CrPC, the first informant has to be given notice. He may file a protest petition which in a given case may be treated to be a complaint petition, on the basis whereof after fulfilling the other statutory requirements cognizance may be taken. (Para 11)

The Magistrate can also take cognizance on the basis of the materials placed on record by the investigating agency. It is also permissible for a Magistrate to direct further investigation. The Magistrate has a duty to see that the investigation is carried out in a fair manner (correctness whereof is open to question). An order of further investigation can be made at various stages including the stage of the trial, that is, after taking cognizance of the offence. (Paras 11, 14 and 15)

The question as to admissions made in an application for anticipatory bail were binding on the accused, being a matter of inference, can also be urged during trial. The other and further remedies as pointed out can be resorted to as also invocation of the provisions of Section 319 CrPC at the stage of trial is also permissible in law, if an appropriate case is made out therefor. It is clarified that any observations by higher courts should not prejudice either party and the Magistrate should consider the matter on its own merit if the issue of further investigation again arises in future. (Paras 26 and 27). Kishan Lal v. Dharmendra Bafna, (2009) 7 SCC 685: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 611: 2009 Cri LJ 3721: (2009) 81 AIC 141 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-7-2009]

Sakiri Vasu v. State of U.P., (2008) 2 SCC 409: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 440; Mithabhai Pashabhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 332: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 1047, relied on [2023] — Ss. 173(2), 169 and 203 & 190(1) — When on submission of police report under S. 173(2) Magistrate decides not to take cognizance and to drop proceeding against all or some of the accused, held, informant is entitled to a notice and an opportunity to be heard at the time of consideration of the report — The said right is conferred on the informant and none else — If the informant not aware as to when the matter is to be considered, he cannot be faulted, even if protest petition is filed by him belatedly (Paras 7, 11 and 12). Gangadhar Janardan Mhatre v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 7 SCC 768: (2004) 114 DLT 193.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-9-2004]

Bhagwant Singh v. Commr. of Police, (1985) 2 SCC 537: 1985 SCC (Cri) 267: AIR 1985 SC 1285, followed [2024] — Ss. 173(2) and 167(2) proviso (a)(i) — Challan — When defective — Challan filed without relevant documents viz. negatives of certain photographs — But all the relevant documents were placed before the court before expiry of 90 days' period stipulated under proviso (a)(i) to S. 167(2) which was applicable in the instant case — Hence prayer for grant of bail rightly refused — However, it would be appropriate to file the original photographs along with the report under S. 173(2) CrPC, which can be taken back with permission of the court to be produced as and when required — Alternatively, the xerox copies can be filed along with a certificate that they can be compared with the originals, as and when so directed by the court (Paras 19 and 20). Bhupinder Singh v. Jarnail Singh, (2006) 6 SCC 277: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 101: AIR 2006 SC 2622: (2006) 4 KLT 460.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-7-2006]

Tara Singh v. State, 1951 SCR 729: AIR 1951 SC 441: 1951 Cri LJ 1491; Satya Narain Musadi v. State of Bihar, (1980) 3 SCC 152: 1980 SCC (Cri) 660, relied on [2025] — Ss. 173(2) and 190 — Report of police officer on completion of investigation — Protest petition against — Locus standi — Direction for proper investigation prayed for — Scope of interference — Writ petition filed by respondent-petitioner praying for a direction to the investigating agency to proceed with "fair and proper investigation in Case No. 147 of 2006 under S. 307 IPC" — High Court by the impugned judgment directing the petitioner to lodge protest petition with the Magistrate; directing Magistrate to pass an appropriate order in accordance with law, taking into account the statement of the injured and injury report; further directing that final report of police under S. 173(2) CrPC was not to be accepted, and if accepted to be treated as rejected; and keeping the matter pending, indicating its anxiety to know the order passed by the Magistrate — Submission by appellant that such directions were unsustainable; High Court indirectly directed rejection of the final report as would be evident from the fact that the High Court expressed its anxiety to know the order passed by the Magistrate and kept the writ petition pending for report of the Magistrate concerned; and in fact the Magistrate was so influenced and had not applied his mind while rejecting the report — Held, High Court could not have directed the writ petitioner to lodge the protest petition — It was for the informant to do so if he intended to do so — Moreover, the impugned order clearly indicated that the High Court wanted the rejection of the final report though it was not specifically spelt out — Hence, impugned order set aside — Magistrate directed to consider protest petition, if filed, uninfluenced by any observation made by the High Court — Constitution of India — Art. 226 (Paras 2, 3, 4, 6, 7 and 8). Sanjay Bansal v. Jawaharlal Vats, (2007) 13 SCC 71: AIR 2008 SC 207: (2008) 1 All LJ 37: 2008 Cri LJ 428.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-10-2007]

Gangadhar Janardan Mhatre v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 7 SCC 768: 2005 SCC (Cri) 404, relied on

— S. 173(3) See Ss. 36, 173(8) and (3)

— S. 173(5) See Ss. 164(1) & (5), 154 to 160, 165 to 173(5) & (8) and 311

See also Ss. 166-B and 173(5)

See also Ss. 173(2) and (5)

[2026] — Ss. 173(5) and 170(2) — Documents submitted under S. 173(5) — Scope — Held, documents submitted to Magistrate along with report under S. 173(5) would deem to include documents which have been sent to Magistrate during course of investigation as per S. 170(2) (Para 219). Manu Sharma v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 6 SCC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and Swatanter Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision : 19-4-2010]

R. v. Ward (Judith), (1993) 1 WLR 619: (1993) 2 All ER 577 (CA); R. v. Preston, (1994) 2 AC 130: (1993) 3 WLR 891: (1993) 4 All ER 638 (HL), distinguished [2027] — Ss. 173(5), (6) & (7) and Ss. 172(2) & (3) — Documents to be supplied to accused — Held, accused entitled to have the entire set of documents which accompanied the final report — However, the case diary can be used only by the court subject to restrictions under Ss. 172(2) and (3) and the accused can have no claim to it (Para 2). CBI v. Mohinder Singh, (2004) 13 SCC 578.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and P. Venkatarama Reddi, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-2003]

[2028] — Ss. 173(5), 228, 240, 231, 242, 235 and 248 — Framing of charges — Appreciation of evidence on record — Scope of — Material to be considered — Held, court cannot confine to material supporting the prosecution and ignore the material favouring accused — S. 173(5) of the Code, held, would otherwise lose its meaning

The probative value of the material on record, has not been gone into. The materials have been accepted as true at the stage of framing of charges. At this stage even a defence of an accused cannot be considered. But, where the entire materials collected during investigation have been placed before the court as part of the charge-sheet, the court at the time of framing of the charge cannot confine itself to the materials upon which the prosecution intended to rely ignoring the other materials which were in favour of the accused. Whether the materials on record, even when given face value and taken to be correct in their entirety, disclose commission of an offence or not, should be the basis for the court for proceeding further, is a question which must be determined having regard to the entirety of materials brought on record by the prosecution and not on a part of it. If such a construction was made, sub-section (5) of Section 173 of the Code of Criminal Procedure would become meaningless. (Paras 52 and 53). State of M.P. v. Sheetla Sahai, (2009) 8 SCC 617: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 901.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2009]

[2029] — Ss. 173(5) and (8) — Police report — Additional evidence gathered during investigation can be produced by police officer even after submission of charge-sheet — Word "shall" used in sub-s. (5) for requiring the police officer to forward to the Magistrate "all documents" is directory and not mandatory

From the provisions of Section 173 it is apparent that normally, the investigating officer is required to produce all the relevant documents at the time of submitting the charge-sheet. At the same time, as there is no specific prohibition, it cannot be held that the additional documents cannot be produced subsequently. If some mistake is committed in not producing the relevant documents at the time of submitting the report or the charge-sheet, it is always open to the investigating officer to produce the same with the permission of the court. Considering the preliminary stage of prosecution and the context in which the police officer is required to forward to the Magistrate all the documents or the relevant extracts thereof on which the prosecution proposes to rely, the word "shall" used in sub-section (5) cannot be interpreted as mandatory, but as directory. Normally, the documents gathered during the investigation upon which the prosecution wants to rely are required to be forwarded to the Magistrate, but if there is some omission, it would not mean that the remaining documents cannot be produced subsequently. Further, the scheme of sub-section (8) of Section 173 also makes it abundantly clear that even after the charge-sheet is submitted, further investigation, if called for, is not precluded. If further investigation is not precluded then there is no question of not permitting the prosecution to produce additional documents which were gathered prior to or subsequent to the investigation. In such cases, there cannot be any prejudice to the accused. (Para 7). CBI v. R.S. Pai, (2002) 5 SCC 82: 2002 SCC (Cri) 950: AIR 2002 SC 1644: 2002 Cri LJ 2029: (2002) 2 KLT 149.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.B. Shah, Brijesh Kumar and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-4-2002]

Narayan Rao v. State of A.P., AIR 1957 SC 737: 1958 SCR 283: 1957 Cri LJ 1320, relied on

— S. 173(6) See Ss. 157, 162, 173(6) and 172
See also Ss. 161, 172, 173(6) and 207
See also Ss. 173(2) & (6)
See also Ss. 173(5), (6) & (7) and Ss. 172(2) & (3)

— S. 173(7) See Ss. 173(5), (6) & (7) and Ss. 172(2) & (3)

— S. 173(8) See Ss. 36, 173(8) and (3)
See also Ss. 154, 156, 173(2) & (8) and 211
See also Ss. 154 and 173(2) & (8)
See also Ss. 156, 157, 170, 173(8) and 190
See also Ss. 156 and 173(8)
See also Ss. 156(3), 173(8), 190, 200 and 204
See also Ss. 157, 156, 169, 170, 173 and 190 & 173(8)
See also Ss. 157, 173(8) and 166-A
See also Ss. 164(1) & (5), 154 to 160, 165 to 173(5) & (8) and 311
See also Ss. 167, 309(2) and 173(8)
See also Ss. 173(2), (8), 190 and 203
See also Ss. 173(5) and (8)
See also Ss. 482 and 173(8)
See also Ss. 482, 173(8) & (2) and 156(1)
See also Ss. 482, 173(8) and 228
See also Ss. 482, 311, 391, 173(8), 216 and 24

[2030] — S. 173(8) — Further investigation — Direction/Permission for — Formal request if mandatory — Held, there are certain situations where a formal request may not be insisted upon — Constitution of India — Arts. 32 and 226 (Para 12). Mithabhai Pashabhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 332.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

[2031] — Ss. 173(8) and 482 — Further investigation — Nature and scope — Instances when S. 173(8) may be invoked — Interference by courts — When permissible — Held, S. 173(8) can be invoked (1) when new facts come to light or (2) when superior courts find that the investigation is tainted and/or unfair or (3) when superior courts find that it is required in the ends of justice

The power of investigation is a statutory one and ordinarily and save and except some exceptional situations, no interference therewith by any court is permissible. The investigating officer may exercise his statutory power of further investigation in several situations as, for example, when new facts come or further materials came to his notice. Apart from the aforementioned grounds, the Magistrate or the superior courts can direct further investigation, if the investigation is found to be tainted and/or otherwise unfair or is otherwise necessary in the ends of justice. (Paras 12 and 16). Kishan Lal v. Dharmendra Bafna, (2009) 7 SCC 685: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 611: 2009 Cri LJ 3721: (2009) 81 AIC 141 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-7-2009]

Naresh Kavarchand Khatri v. State of Gujarat, (2008) 8 SCC 300: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 614; Dharmeshbhai Vasudevbhai v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 576: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 76, relied on [2032] — Ss. 173(8), 156 and 157 — Further investigation — Directions that may be given by court — When power under sub-s. (8) is exercised Court should not ordinarily interfere therewith by directing that investigation be made from a particular angle or by a particular agency (Para 48). Popular Muthiah v. State, (2006) 7 SCC 296: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 245.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-7-2006]

[2033] — S. 173(8) — Further investigation — Mere fact that it may delay the trial, held, not a relevant consideration — Police can conduct further investigation in a proper manner even if the court has taken cognisance — Thus, when fresh facts (lapses in earlier investigation in this case) come to light, the police should inform the court and seek permission to make further investigation

The grievance of the appellant, who had lodged a criminal complaint against the accused persons, was that the investigation in his case was not carried out fairly. According to him, the police had succumbed to the pressure exercised by the local MLA and after a few hours of the registration of the FIR, Sections 395 and 120-B IPC were deleted by the prosecuting agency and because of such deletion the accused persons managed to get bail. The appellant filed a writ petition before the High Court for issuance of appropriate writ for reinvestigation by an independent agency. The High Court declined to entertain the said writ petition by holding that if further investigation was necessary, the said remedy was available in CrPC. It held that the police was not the ultimate authority which could decide about the applicability of sections. Thus, the High Court directed that appropriate steps could be taken by the complainant along with the prosecuting agency before the trial court. The appellant challenged the said judgment by filing the instant appeal before the Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court by an order dated 19-3-2004 directed the Director General of Police, Gujarat to submit a report as to whether the action taken by the investigating officer (IO) was proper and whether there was need for further investigation. In the report submitted by the Director General of Police, it was stated that though the deletion of Section 120-B IPC was not proper, the Sessions Court had framed charge against three of the accused persons under the said section. It was submitted that there were a few lapses in investigation and inquiry was being caused against the IO with a view to initiate suitable departmental action. So far as the desirability of further investigation was concerned, it was stated that the case was fixed for day-to-day hearing and if further investigation would be done, it would prove infructuous and would only delay the process of trial unnecessarily.

Disposing of the appeal,

Held :

The mere fact that there may be further delay in concluding the trial should not stand in the way of further investigation if that would help the court in arriving at the truth and do real and substantial as well as effective justice. Section 173(8) CrPC permits further investigation, and even dehors any direction from the court as such, it is open to the police to conduct proper investigation, even after the court took cognisance of any offence on the strength of a police report earlier submitted. All the more so, if as in this case, the Head of the Police Department also was not satisfied of the propriety or the manner and nature of investigation already conducted. (Paras 13 and 12)

When defective investigation comes to light during course of trial, it may be cured by further investigation, if circumstances so permit. It would ordinarily be desirable and all the more so in this case, that the police should inform the court and seek formal permission to make further investigation when fresh facts come to light instead of being silent over the matter keeping in view only the need for an early trial since an effective trial for real or actual offences found during course of proper investigation is as much relevant, desirable and necessary as an expeditious disposal of the matter by the courts. (Para 13) . Hasanbhai Valibhai Qureshi v. State of Gujarat, (2004) 5 SCC 347: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1603: AIR 2004 SC 2078: 2004 Cri LJ 2018: (2004) 3 Mah LJ 1074: (2004) 3 MPLJ 593.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-2004]

Ram Lal Narang v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1979) 2 SCC 322: 1979 SCC (Cri) 479: AIR 1979 SC 1791, relied on [2034] — S. 173(8) — Further investigation after submission of final report — Permissibility — Held, permissible in view of S. 173(8) CrPC (Para 14). N.P. Jharia v. State of M.P., (2007) 7 SCC 358: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 365: AIR 2007 SC 2677: 2007 Cri LJ 3745: (2007) 57 AIC 80 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-7-2007]

[2035] — Ss. 173(8) and (2) — Further investigation by police after a report under S. 173(2) has been forwarded to Magistrate — Held, permissible (Para 12). Kari Choudhary v. Sita Devi, (2002) 1 SCC 714: 2002 SCC (Cri) 269: AIR 2002 SC 441: 2002 Cri LJ 923: (2002) 1 CHN (Supp) 108.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-12-2001]

Impliedly distinguished in Nirmal Singh Kahlon v. State of Punjab, (2009) 1 SCC 441*

[2036] — Ss. 173(8) & (2), 167(2) and 319 — Reinvestigation or further investigation under S. 173(8) at behest of de facto complainant — Permissibility of, after filing of charge-sheet under S. 173(2), and framing of charges against some accused, other accused having been discharged — Proper course to be followed by Magistrate — Held, having passed a final order framing charges against six accused and discharging remaining ten accused, it was no longer within Magistrate's jurisdiction to direct reinvestigation into the case — Besides, investigating authorities had not applied for further investigation — Not only was Magistrate wrong in directing reinvestigation on application made by de facto complainant, but he also exceeded his jurisdiction in entertaining said application filed by de facto complainant — Since no application had been made by investigating authorities for conducting further investigation under S. 173(8) CrPC, the other course of action open to Magistrate was to take recourse to provisions of S. 319 at stage of trial if any material is disclosed during examination of the witnesses during the trial — Hence, no reason to interfere with order of High Court quashing order of Magistrate

(Paras 25 to 27). Reeta Nag v. State of W.B., (2009) 9 SCC 129: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1051.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-2009]

Sooraj Devi v. Pyare Lal, (1981) 1 SCC 500: 1981 SCC (Cri) 188; Master Construction Co. (P) Ltd. v. State of Orissa, AIR 1966 SC 1047; Sankatha Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1962 SC 1208, applied

Dinesh Dalmia v. CBI, (2007) 8 SCC 770: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 36, distinguished on facts but relied on in law

Randhir Singh Rana v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1997) 1 SCC 361; Adalat Prasad v. Rooplal Jindal, (2004) 7 SCC 338: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1927, relied on

K.M. Mathew v. State of Kerala, (1992) 1 SCC 217: 1992 SCC (Cri) 88, held, overruled

[2037] — Ss. 173(8) & (2) and 190(1)(b) — Power of magistrate to order further investigation subsequent to conclusion of final report submitted by police that no offence was committed — If the final report submitted by police concludes that no offence was committed, contrary to the allegations made in the complaint, held, it is open to the Magistrate to order further investigation to be made by police, besides other options available to him viz. to accept the report or to disagree with the report and take cognizance of the offence

The appellant made a complaint to the DIG, CBI complaining that Respondent 4, a son of Respondent 3, Chief Commissioner of Income Tax, demanded Rs 10 lakhs as bribe to be paid to Respondent 3 for settling income tax problems. Accordingly, CBI laid a trap. It supplied a micro-cassette to the appellant with which he recorded his conversation with Respondents 4 and 3. At the pre-arranged time, the money was handed over to Respondent 5, another son of Respondent 3, at the residence of Respondent 3 in the presence of Respondent 4. The signal was then transmitted to the CBI officers who made a swoop and caught Respondent 5. The bag containing the cash was recovered from the house of Respondent 3. Investigation thereupon was commenced by CBI. After conclusion of the investigation, CBI filed its final report before the Special Judge, Anti-Corruption. In the final report, CBI exonerated Respondents 3 to 5 in full measure and wanted the court to initiate prosecution proceedings against the appellant for the offences under Sections 182 and 211 IPC. CBI took the stand that the complaint made by the appellant was not only false but it was aimed at deterring the income tax officials from discharging their functions fearlessly. The Special Judge, on receipt of the final report, issued notice to the appellant and after hearing him, ordered CBI to reinvestigate the matter by a DIG level officer as according to him the investigation was not properly conducted and the final report was submitted without properly going through the provisions of CrPC and the Prevention of Corruption Act. CBI moved the High Court in revision against this order of the Special Judge. A Single Judge of the High Court held that there was no case for any fresh investigation or for any further investigation. According to the Court further investigation could only be ordered when some other evidence was in sight and was not collected or was left over, and could help the merit of the case, but in the instant case, every relevant material was collected and no material was left over, and every such material so collected was made the basis of the final report and thus every material was placed before the Special Judge. The Court also deprecated the direction of the Special Judge for specifying an officer of DIG rank of CBI to conduct the investigation. The Single Judge also observed: "The Special Judge could have either rejected or could have accepted the final report under the circumstances of the case after applying his judicial mind and after recording the basis of his opinion. There was no sense in ordering the fresh investigation in the circumstances of the case in disregard of provisions of Section 173(8) of the Code and making the entire investigation a futile exercise. It was not a case of further investigation. The order is bad in law." Ultimately, the Single Judge after setting aside the order of the Special Judge, directed him to consider the materials before him once again and to pass suitable orders in accordance with law. Allowing the appeal, by the complainant,

Held :

When the report is filed under sub-section (2) of Section 173 the Magistrate (in this case the Special Judge) has to deal with it by bestowing his judicial consideration. If the report is to the effect that the allegations in the original complaint were found true in the investigation, or that some other accused and/or some other offences were also detected, the court has to decide whether cognizance of the offences should be taken or not on the strength of that report. But when the report is against the allegations contained in the complaint and concluded that no offence has been committed by any person, it is open to the court to accept the report after hearing the complainant at whose behest the investigation had commenced. If the court feels on a perusal of such a report that the alleged offences have in fact been committed by some persons the court has the power to ignore the contrary conclusions made by the investigating officer in the final report. Then it is open to the court to independently apply its mind to the facts emerging therefrom and it can even take cognizance of the offences which appear to it to have been committed, in exercise of its power under Section 190(1)(b) of the Code. The third option is the one adumbrated in Section 173(8) of the Code. (Para 15)

Although sub-section (8) does not, in specific terms, mention about the powers of the court to order further investigation, the power of the police to conduct further investigation envisaged therein can be triggered into motion at the instance of the court. When any such order is passed by a court which has the jurisdiction to do so, it would not be a proper exercise of revisional powers to interfere therewith because the further investigation would only be for the ends of justice. After the further investigation, the authority conducting such investigation can either reach the same conclusion and reiterate it or it can reach a different conclusion. During such extended investigation, the officers can either act on the same materials or on other materials which may come to their notice. It is for the investigating agency to exercise its power when it is put back on that track. If they come to the same conclusion, it is of added advantage to the persons against whom the allegations were made, and if the allegations are found false again the complainant would be in trouble. So from any point of view the Special Judge's direction would be of advantage for the ends of justice. It is too premature for the High Court to predict that the investigating officer would not be able to collect any further material at all. That is an area which should have been left to the investigating officer to survey and recheck. When the Special Judge has opted to order for a further investigation the High Court should have stated to CBI to comply with that direction. (Paras 16 and 20). Hemant Dhasmana v. CBI, (2001) 7 SCC 536: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1280: AIR 2001 SC 2721.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-8-2001]

Bhagwant Singh v. Commr. of Police, (1985) 2 SCC 537: 1985 SCC (Cri) 267; India Carat (P) Ltd. v. State of Karnataka, (1989) 2 SCC 132: 1989 SCC (Cri) 306; Union Public Service Commission v. S. Papaiah, (1997) 7 SCC 614: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1112, relied on

[2038] — S. 173(8) — Further investigation — Long after submission of final form — Held, valid — Order for further investigation cannot be interfered with by High Court in exercise of its revisional power on ground that examining the witnesses who were examined at the time of the earlier investigation, recording their statements 5½ years after submission of the final form and further investigation on the basis of such statement would amount to abuse of process of court — Power under sub-section (8) is of widest amplitude and is not of such restrictive nature

The High Court observed "that reopening the investigation by examining those witnesses who were examined or available to be examined at the time of earlier investigation and recording their statements almost five-and-a-half years after the final form was submitted do not appear to be bona fide and further investigation on the basis of statements of witnesses available to be examined during earlier investigation amounts to abuse of process of court and exercise of power not intended to be exercised under Section 173(8) CrPC. The scope of Section 173(8) CrPC cannot be stretched to that extent". Accordingly, the High Court quashed the further investigation but further observed "it shall be open for the investigating agency to make further investigation in terms of Section 173(8) CrPC on the basis of such materials which were not available at the time of earlier investigation or not within the knowledge of the investigating agency".

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The language of the statute is clear enough to indicate that it is not a restrictive one but it has the widest possible sanctity. The statute has provided the said provision for the sake of the concept of justice and in the event, the interest of justice so requires, this further power of investigation has been conferred on the police under Section 173(8) of the Code. (Para 8)

The High Court in exercise of the power under criminal revisional jurisdiction ought not to have interpreted Section 173(8) CrPC with a restriction. The last two lines of the observation of the High Court viz. "which were not available at the time of earlier investigation or not within the knowledge of the investigating agency" cannot be said to be a proper expression of law in terms of Section 173(8) CrPC. The impugned judgment is erroneous on a reading of Section 173(8) CrPC and as such cannot be concurred with. (Para 9). State of Orissa v. Mahima, (2007) 15 SCC 580.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-2002]

Hemant Dhasmana v. CBI, (2001) 7 SCC 536: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1280, relied on

[2039] — Ss. 173(8), 156(3), 202 and 391 — Magistrate's power and duties under, discussed and stated

The investigating officer when an FIR is lodged in respect of a cognizable offence, upon completion of the investigation would file a police report. It is now a well-settled principle of law that when a final form is filed by any investigating officer in exercise of his power under Section 173(2) CrPC, the first informant has to be given notice. He may file a protest petition which in a given case may be treated to be a complaint petition, on the basis whereof after fulfilling the other statutory requirements cognizance may be taken. (Para 11)

The Magistrate can also take cognizance on the basis of the materials placed on record by the investigating agency. It is also permissible for a Magistrate to direct further investigation. The Magistrate has a duty to see that the investigation is carried out in a fair manner (correctness whereof is open to question). An order of further investigation can be made at various stages including the stage of the trial, that is, after taking cognizance of the offence. (Paras 11, 14 and 15)

The question as to admissions made in an application for anticipatory bail were binding on the accused, being a matter of inference, can also be urged during trial. The other and further remedies as pointed out can be resorted to as also invocation of the provisions of Section 319 CrPC at the stage of trial is also permissible in law, if an appropriate case is made out therefor. It is clarified that any observations by higher courts should not prejudice either party and the Magistrate should consider the matter on its own merit if the issue of further investigation again arises in future. (Paras 26 and 27). Kishan Lal v. Dharmendra Bafna, (2009) 7 SCC 685: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 611: 2009 Cri LJ 3721: (2009) 81 AIC 141 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-7-2009]

Sakiri Vasu v. State of U.P., (2008) 2 SCC 409: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 440; Mithabhai Pashabhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 332: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 1047, relied on [2040] — Ss. 173(8) and 156 — Investigation by local police in progress — Direction issued by High Court in writ petition for a fresh and further investigation by an agency other than local police — Propriety of — In the circumstances, held, High Court overstepped its jurisdiction in issuing the impugned direction — However, power of the investigating agency to have any further investigation under S. 173(8) CrPC not affected thereby (Para 2). Rajesh v. Ramdeo, (2001) 10 SCC 759.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-9-2000]

Doubted in Sasi Thomas v. State, (2006) 12 SCC 421*

[2041] — Ss. 173(8) and 156 — Police inaction/atrocities — Fake encounter — Transfer of case to CBI — Stages at which permissible — Need to ensure that justice is also seen to be done — Sohrabuddin Fake Encounter case — Transfer of case to CBI at stage when State Police had completed investigation and charge-sheet had been submitted — Held, case could be transferred to CBI even at this stage — Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (25 of 1946), Ss. 5 and 6 — Constitution of India, Arts. 32 and 226

The writ petitioner is the brother of one Sohrabuddin (S) who was alleged to have been killed by officials of Gujarat Police in a fake encounter. S's wife also disappeared under mysterious circumstances. Investigation was conducted by Gujarat Police but writ petitioner's apprehension was that fair and impartial investigation was not conducted because high officials of Gujarat Police were involved in this case. Some of the accused persons had already been arrested and charge-sheet had been filed in court. Writ petitioner's contention was that the case should be transferred to Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI). Respondent State submitted eight action taken reports which were reviewed by the Supreme Court.

Two issues were involved in this case. First, whether investigation could be transferred to CBI Authorities after charge-sheet had been submitted and trial was going on. Second, whether facts and circumstances of this case warrant transfer of the case to CBI because investigation had not been conducted properly by State police authorities.

Answering both the issues affirmatively,

Held :

It is not possible to accept that investigation at this stage cannot be handed over to CBI Authorities or any other independent agency. The accusations are directed against local police personnel in which high police officials of the State of Gujarat have been made the accused. It is proper for the writ petitioner or even the public to come forward to say that if the investigation carried out by police personnel of the State of Gujarat is done, the writ petitioner and their family members would be highly prejudiced and the investigation would also not come to an end with proper finding, and if investigation is allowed to be carried out by local police authorities, all concerned including relatives of the deceased may feel that investigation was not proper, and in those circumstances it would be fit and proper that the writ petitioner and relatives of the deceased should be assured that an independent agency should look into the matter, and that would lend the final outcome of the investigation credibility, however faithfully the local police may carry out the investigation, particularly when gross allegations have been made against high police officials of the State of Gujarat, and for which some high police officials have already been taken into custody. In an appropriate case when the Court feels that investigation by police authorities is not in the proper direction and in order to do complete justice in the case and as the high police officials are involved in the said crime, it was always open to the Court to hand over investigation to independent agency like CBI. In an appropriate case, the court is empowered to hand over investigation to an independent agency like CBI even when charge-sheet has been submitted. (Paras 51 to 54, 60 and 61)

The investigation in the present case cannot be said to have run in a proper direction. After considering factual discrepancies appearing in eight action taken reports and the charge-sheet, the Supreme Court feels that Police Authorities of State of Gujarat have failed to carry out fair and impartial investigation which the Court wanted them to do. Offences committed by high police officials are of grave nature which need to be strictly dealt with. Besides, the State Police Authorities of Gujarat have to take help from other police officials of States of Andhra Pradesh and Rajasthan. Although the charge-sheet has been submitted, yet considering the nature of crime that has been allegedly committed not by any third party but by police personnel of State of Gujarat, the investigation concluded in the present case cannot be said to be satisfactorily held. If the investigation is transferred to CBI Authorities, it would be fair and proper that other State police officials should also help CBI Authorities in coming to a final conclusion on the allegations made by the writ petitioner and also on the offences alleged to have been committed by some of them. (Paras 62, 68, 73 and 79)

The scope of this order is not to deal with the power of the Supreme Court to monitor investigation but to make sure that justice is not only done but is also seen to be done. Considering involvement of State police authorities and particularly eight officials of State of Gujarat, the Supreme Court is compelled to direct CBI Authorities to investigate into the matter even after the charge-sheet has been filed. Since high officials of the State are involved and some of them are already in custody, it would not be sufficient to instil confidence in the minds of victims as well as public that still the State police authorities would be allowed to continue with investigation when allegations and offences are mostly against them. (Para 80)

The Court cannot shut its eyes and allow State police authorities to continue with the investigation and charge-sheet. For proper and fair investigation, CBI is directed to take up investigation and submit a report to the Supreme Court within six months. Police Authorities of State of Gujarat are therefore directed to hand over records of present case to CBI Authorities. The CBI Authorities would investigate all aspects of the case relating to killing of S and his wife K including alleged possibility of a larger conspiracy. The Supreme Court expects that the Police Authorities of Gujarat, Andhra Pradesh and Rajasthan would cooperate with the CBI Authorities in conducting investigation properly and in an appropriate manner. (Para 82). Rubabbuddin Sheikh v. State of Gujarat, (2010) 2 SCC 200.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-1-2010]

Kashmeri Devi v. Delhi Admn., 1988 Supp SCC 482: 1988 SCC (Cri) 864; Inder Singh v. State of Punjab, (1994) 6 SCC 275: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1653; Gudalure M.J. Cherian v. Union of India, (1992) 1 SCC 397; Punjab & Haryana High Court Bar Assn. v. State of Punjab, (1994) 1 SCC 616: 1994 SCC (Cri) 455; R.S. Sodhi v. State of U.P., 1994 Supp (1) SCC 143: 1994 SCC (Cri) 248; Ramesh Kumari v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2006) 2 SCC 677: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 678; Sk. Hasib v. State of Bihar, (1972) 4 SCC 773; Babu Lodhi v. State of U.P., (1987) 2 SCC 352: 1987 SCC (Cri) 371; Prem Kumar v. State of Bihar, (1995) 3 SCC 228: 1995 SCC (Cri) 445, relied on

Vineet Narain v. Union of India, (1996) 2 SCC 199: 1996 SCC (Cri) 264; Union of India v. Sushil Kumar Modi, (1998) 8 SCC 661: 1999 SCC (Cri) 84; Rajiv Ranjan Singh 'Lalan' (VIII) v. Union of India, (2006) 6 SCC 613: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 125, distinguished

[2042] — S. 173(8) — Investigation into separate offence — Further investigation into same offence — What are — Investigation regarding allegations against investigating officer and the mode and manner of investigation into a particular offence, held, is not an investigation in relation to a separate offence

It was not a case where investigation was carried out in relation to a separate conspiracy. As allegations had been made against the officer of a local police station in regard to the mode and manner in which investigation was carried out, a further investigation was directed. (Para 17). State of A.P. v. A.S. Peter, (2008) 2 SCC 383: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 427: AIR 2008 SC 1052.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-12-2007]

[2043] — S. 173(8) — Power of court to direct the police to conduct further investigation or re-investigation — Court not obliged to hear the accused before making such direction

Power of the police to conduct further investigation, after laying final report, is recognised under Section 173(8) CrPC. Even after the court took cognizance of any offence on the strength of the police report first submitted, it is open to the police to conduct further investigation. (Para 10)

In such a situation the power of the court to direct the police to conduct further investigation cannot have any inhibition. There is nothing in Section 173(8) to suggest that the court is obliged to hear the accused before any such direction is made. Casting of any such obligation on the court would only result in encumbering the court with the burden of searching for all the potential accused to be afforded with the opportunity of being heard. As the law does not require it the Magistrate cannot be burdened with such obligation. (Para 11). Sri Bhagwan Samardha Sreepada Vallabha Venkata Vishwanandha Maharaj v. State of A.P., (1999) 5 SCC 740: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1047: AIR 1999 SC 2332: 1999 Cri LJ 3661.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-7-1999]

Ram Lal Narang v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1979) 2 SCC 322: 1979 SCC (Cri) 479, relied on

[2044] — S. 173(8) — Power of investigating officer to make further investigation — Necessity of express permission of Magistrate — Though Magistrate may have supervisory jurisdiction to ensure a fair investigation, held, that does not mean that investigating officer will have no jurisdiction to make any further investigation without the express permission of Magistrate

Only when cognizance of an offence is taken, may the Magistrate have some say. But, the restriction imposed by judicial legislation is merely for the purpose of upholding the independence and impartiality of the judiciary. It is one thing to say that the court will have supervisory jurisdiction to ensure a fair investigation, as has been observed by a Bench of the Supreme Court in Sakiri Vasu case, (2008) 2 SCC 409 correctness whereof is open to question, but it is another thing to say that the investigating officer will have no jurisdiction whatsoever to make any further investigation without the express permission of the Magistrate. (Para 68). Nirmal Singh Kahlon v. State of Punjab, (2009) 1 SCC 441.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-10-2008]

Sakiri Vasu v. State of U.P., (2008) 2 SCC 409: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 440, doubted

[2045] — S. 173(8) — Reinvestigation — Permissibility — Further investigation and reinvestigation, distinguished — Held, both stand on different footing — A distinction exists between a reinvestigation and further investigation — Supreme Court or High Court can direct State to get an offence investigated and/or further investigated — However, reinvestigation being forbidden in law, no superior court would ordinarily issue direction of reinvestigation — Constitution of India — Arts. 32 and 226

The Supreme Court while passing the order in exercise of its jurisdiction under Article 32 of the Constitution of India in NHRC case, (2009) 6 SCC 342 and the order dated 22-9-2008 did not direct reinvestigation. "Further investigation" and "reinvestigation" stand on different footing. A distinction exists between a reinvestigation and further investigation. It may be that in a given situation a superior court in exercise of its constitutional power, namely, under Articles 226 and 32 of the Constitution of India could direct a "State"to get an offence investigated and/or further investigated by a different agency. Direction of a reinvestigation, however, being forbidden in law, no superior court would ordinarily issue such a direction. If the investigating authority, in terms of the provisions of CrPC, could not ask for reinvestigation, the court would have to proceed on the basis that Supreme Court in its order in NHRC case, (2009) 6 SCC 342 and the order dated 22-9-2008 only directed further investigation. Furthermore, in this case the Special Investigating Team has already submitted its report to the Supreme Court. Nothing has been pointed out as to why even the bail granted to the appellants should be cancelled so as to consider that question independently. No sufficient or cogent material has been placed on record by the State or the Special Investigating Team in this behalf. (Paras 12 to 14 and 24). Mithabhai Pashabhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 332.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

Ramachandran v. R. Udhayakumar, (2008) 5 SCC 413: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 631, followed

National Human Rights Commission v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 342, clarified

Nirmal Singh Kahlon v. State of Punjab, (2009) 1 SCC 441: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 523, referred to

Vineet Narain v. Union of India, (1998) 1 SCC 226: 1998 SCC (Cri) 307, cited

[2046] — Ss. 173(8) & (2) and 319 — "Further investigation"— Scope of — "Further investigation"distinguished from "fresh investigation"or "reinvestigation"— Summoning of witnesses named in supplementary charge-sheet — Permissibility — Held, even after submission of the police report under S. 173(2) on completion of the investigation, the police has a right to "further" investigation under S. 173(8) but not "fresh investigation"or "reinvestigation"— Meaning of "further"is additional, more, or supplemental — It is the continuation of the earlier investigation and not a fresh investigation or reinvestigation to be started ab initio wiping out the earlier investigation altogether — Further held, S. 178(8) clearly envisages that on completion of further investigation, the investigating agency has to forward to the Magistrate a "further" report regarding the "further" evidence obtained during such investigation — Hence, order of trial court summoning the witnesses named in the supplementary charge-sheet cannot be faulted with — Further, law does not mandate taking prior permission from the Magistrate for further investigation and carrying out further investigation even after filing of the charge-sheet which is a statutory right of the police — Furthermore, material collected in further investigation cannot be rejected only because it has been filed at the stage of the trial — Hence, impugned judgment rejecting revision application filed against order of trial court summoning the witnesses based on supplementary charge-sheet calls for no interference (Paras 15 to 22). Rama Chaudhary v. State of Bihar, (2009) 6 SCC 346.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-4-2009]

Hasanbhai Valibhai Qureshi v. State of Gujarat, (2004) 5 SCC 347: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1603; K. Chandrasekhar v. State of Kerala, (1998) 5 SCC 223: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1291, relied on [2047] — S. 173(8) — "Further investigation" and "reinvestigation" — Difference — Plea for reinvestigation or fresh investigation by different investigating agency — Tenability — Authority competent to decide — Reiterated, direction for reinvestigation is not envisaged by law — Held, accused had failed to justify abovesaid plea — In such circumstances it was for court alone to decide whether investigation was required to be done by any other agency and no opinion from DGP-level officer could have been sought therefor — Words and Phrases — "Further investigation" and "reinvestigation" (Paras 34 to 38). Virender Prasad Singh v. Rajesh Bhardwaj, (2010) 9 SCC 171: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 1169: 2010 Cri LJ 4275: (2010) 95 AIC 182 .

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-8-2010]

Mithabhai Pashabhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 332: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 1047; Ramachandran v. R. Udhayakumar, (2008) 5 SCC 413: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 631, relied on

Rubabbuddin Sheikh v. State of Gujarat, (2010) 2 SCC 200: (2010) 2 SCC (Cri) 1006, distinguished on facts

[2048] — Ss. 173(8) and 319 — High Court and Supreme Court setting aside Magistrate's direction for further investigation and concurrently holding that further investigation by Magistrate under S. 173(8) was not warranted in respect of accused persons A-3 to A-10 — Effect — Said direction, held, neither closes the future options of further investigation under S. 173(8) nor closes application of S. 319 to proceed against additional offenders

The investigating officer when an FIR is lodged in respect of a cognizable offence, upon completion of the investigation would file a police report. It is now a well-settled principle of law that when a final form is filed by any investigating officer in exercise of his power under Section 173(2) CrPC, the first informant has to be given notice. He may file a protest petition which in a given case may be treated to be a complaint petition, on the basis whereof after fulfilling the other statutory requirements cognizance may be taken. (Para 11)

The Magistrate can also take cognizance on the basis of the materials placed on record by the investigating agency. It is also permissible for a Magistrate to direct further investigation. The Magistrate has a duty to see that the investigation is carried out in a fair manner (correctness whereof is open to question). An order of further investigation can be made at various stages including the stage of the trial, that is, after taking cognizance of the offence. (Paras 11, 14 and 15)

The question as to admissions made in an application for anticipatory bail were binding on the accused, being a matter of inference, can also be urged during trial. The other and further remedies as pointed out can be resorted to as also invocation of the provisions of Section 319 CrPC at the stage of trial is also permissible in law, if an appropriate case is made out therefor. It is clarified that any observations by higher courts should not prejudice either party and the Magistrate should consider the matter on its own merit if the issue of further investigation again arises in future. (Paras 26 and 27). Kishan Lal v. Dharmendra Bafna, (2009) 7 SCC 685: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 611: 2009 Cri LJ 3721: (2009) 81 AIC 141 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-7-2009]

Sakiri Vasu v. State of U.P., (2008) 2 SCC 409: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 440; Mithabhai Pashabhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 332: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 1047, relied on

[2049] — Ss. 173(8) and 482 — Fresh investigation — When can be directed by court — Ordinarily further investigation, not reinvestigation, permissible — "Ordinary" excludes extraordinary — Court's interference with investigation warranted only in extraordinary or exceptional cases of gross abuse of power and failure of justice — Court would direct de novo investigation to prevent miscarriage of justice, if investigation is tainted and biased, suffers from irregularities and conducted in mala fide exercise of power by police causing serious prejudice and harassment to any party — Charge-sheet filed and any other order issued by investigating agency pur-

suant to such vitiated investigation also liable to be quashed — Constitution of India — Arts. 136 and 14

Not only fair trial but fair investigation is also part of constitutional rights guaranteed under Articles 20 and 21 of the Constitution of India. Therefore, investigation must be fair, transparent and judicious as it is the minimum requirement of rule of law. The investigating agency cannot be permitted to conduct an investigation in a tainted and biased manner. The investigation into a criminal offence must be free from objectionable features or infirmities which may legitimately lead to a grievance on the part of the accused that investigation was unfair and carried out with an ulterior motive. It is also the duty of the investigating officer to conduct the investigation avoiding any kind of mischief and harassment to any of the accused. The investigating officer should be fair and conscious so as to rule out any possibility of fabrication of evidence and his impartial conduct must dispel any suspicion as to its genuineness. The investigating officer "is not merely to bolster up a prosecution case with such evidence as may enable the court to record a conviction but to bring out the real unvarnished truth". (Paras 45 and 32)

Where the court comes to the conclusion that there was a serious irregularity in the investigation that had taken place, the court may direct a further investigation under Section 173(8) CrPC, even transferring the investigation to an independent agency, rather than directing a reinvestigation. Scheme of investigation, particularly, Section 173(8) CrPC provides for further investigation and not reinvestigation. Therefore, if the court comes to the conclusion that the investigation has been done in a manner with an object of helping a party, the court may direct for further investigation and ordinarily not for reinvestigation. The expression "ordinarily" means normally and it is used where there can be an exception. It means in the large majority of cases but not invariably. "Ordinarily" excludes "extraordinary" or "special circumstances". Therefore, unless an extraordinary case of gross abuse of power is made out by those in charge of the investigation, the court should be quite loathe to interfere with the investigation, a field of activity reserved for the police and the executive. In exceptional circumstances, the court in order to prevent the miscarriage of criminal justice, if considers necessary, may direct for investigation de novo wherein the case presents exceptional circumstances. Where non-interference of the court would ultimately result in failure of justice, the court must interfere. In such a situation, it may be in the interest of justice that independent agency chosen by the High Court makes a fresh investigation. Thus, in case of a mala fide exercise of power by a police officer the court may interfere. (Paras 37, 40, 41, 38, 42 and 45)

In the instant case, admittedly, the High Court has given detailed reasons for coming to the conclusion that the investigation has been totally one-sided, biased and mala fide. One party has been favoured by the investigating agency. The natural corollary to this finding is that the other party has been harassed in an unwarranted manner. Thus, the cause of the other party has been prejudiced. Even before the High Court conduct of the party and investigating agency was found to have not been fair. (Paras 43 and 29)

The charge-sheets filed by the investigating agency in both the cases are against the same set of accused. A charge-sheet is the outcome of an investigation. If the investigation has not been conducted fairly, such investigation would ultimately prove to be a precursor of miscarriage of criminal justice. In such a case the court would simply try to decipher the truth only on the basis of guess or conjectures as the whole truth would not come before it. It will be difficult for the court to determine how the incident took place wherein three persons died and so many persons including the complainant and the accused got injured. (Para 44)

Thus, the order of the High Court requires modification to the extent that the charge-sheets in both the cases and any order consequent thereto stand quashed. In case any of the accused could not get bail because of the pendency of these appeals before the Supreme Court, it shall be open to him to apply for bail or any other relief before the appropriate forum. (Para 46). Babubhai v. State of Gujarat, (2010) 12 SCC 254.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-8-2010]

R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; Jamuna Chaudhary v. State of Bihar, (1974) 3 SCC 774: 1974 SCC (Cri) 250; Mahmood v. State of U.P., (1976) 1 SCC 542: 1976 SCC (Cri) 72; State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192; Navinchandra N. Majithia v. State of Meghalaya, (2000) 8 SCC 323: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1510; K. Chandrasekhar v. State of Kerala, (1998) 5 SCC 223: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1291; Ramachandran v. R. Udhayakumar, (2008) 5 SCC 413: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 631; Mithabhai Pashabhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 332: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 1047; Kishan Lal v. Dharmendra Bafna, (2009) 7 SCC 685: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 611; S.N. Sharma v. Bipen Kumar Tiwari, (1970) 1 SCC 653: 1970 SCC (Cri) 258; Kashmeri Devi v. Delhi Admn., 1988 Supp SCC 482: 1988 SCC (Cri) 864; Kailash Chandra v. Union of India, AIR 1961 SC 1346; Eicher Tractors Ltd. v. Commr. of Customs, (2001) 1 SCC 315; State of A.P. v. V. Sarma Rao, (2007) 2 SCC 159: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 535; Nirmal Singh Kahlon v. State of Punjab, (2009) 1 SCC 441: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 523; Manu Sharma v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 6 SCC 1: (2010) 2 SCC (Cri) 1385, relied on

[2050] — Ss. 173(8) and 482 — Further investigation — Scope of — Non-investigation of vital aspects in a counter FIR even after submission of two final reports — Further investigation whether permissible — First final report in an allegation of forgery of mutation records and grievous hurt by gunshot injury submitting that no case made out — IO reinstituting investigation by seeking advice from Public Prosecutor when a writ order directed fair and impartial investigation — An SLP order (in between the submission of first and second final report) directing completion of investigation — IO seeking further investigation with regard to embezzlement of Rs 13.5 lakhs — IO seeking such further investigation after submission of second final report/charge-sheet — Magistrate granting permission for such further investigation — Legality — In terms of direction of Supreme Court, fact that Magistrate had given permission for further investigation and vital aspect of investigation not having been made, held, it was obligatory on the part of IO to complete the investigation and submit an appropriate report — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 452, 232, 427, 506 and 147 to 149 — Constitution of India, Art. 136

A son MA was involved in a dispute with his sister ME and mother S over a farmhouse. The first FIR for alleged offences under Sections 147, 148, 149, 452, 232, 427 and 506 IPC was lodged by ME for alleged raiding of the farmhouse by MA and 40 others and attacking S. The accused were allegedly arrested on the spot. SLPs (Crl.) Nos. 6061-62 of 2008 arose out of the first FIR (FIR No. 960 of 1999). The second FIR (FIR No. 960-A of 1999) was lodged by MA against ME and her farm employees alleging grievous hurt by a gunshot injury. MA also alleged forgery of documents whereof mutation records of the farmhouse were altered. SLP (Crl.) No. 5419 of 2008 arose out of the second FIR.

Charge-sheet was filed on the first FIR. On the second FIR, a final report was made stating that no case was made out. When a writ order (in WP No. 7230 of 1999) was passed by the High Court directed impartial inquiry, the DSP concerned, after seeking opinion of the Public Prosecutor, reopened the second FIR. Apprehending arrest, ME and S also moved the writ jurisdiction, whereupon, the High Court disposed off the matter directing fair, honest investigation without coercive steps against parties. An SLP in this regard was also disposed off directing transfer of investigation to CB CID and continuation of protection to ME.

On the first FIR, MA's trial was concluded and he was convicted. Thereafter, during pendency of appeal in the High Court, he was released on bail and his sentence was suspended. On the second FIR, charge-sheet was filed against S & ME and cognizance was taken. A petition under Section 482 CrPC (CMA No. 620 of 2006) to quash proceedings against them was dismissed but the High Court directed the trial court to consider exemption of personal attendance of S in terms of Section 205 CrPC and observed that they deserved protection. This was the impugned order in SLP (Crl.) No. 5419 of 2008.

SLPs (Crl.) Nos. 6061-62 of 2008 related to the issue of further investigation against ME and others with regard to embezzlement of Rs 13,50,000. The said further investigation was requested by CB CID after charge-sheet had been filed and Section 482 petition was disposed off. The said further investigation was allowed by the Magistrate and not interfered with by the High Court while exercising jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC (CMA No. 518 of 2008).

Disposing of the appeals,

Held :

So far as the criminal appeals arising out of Special Leave Petitions (Crl.) Nos. 6061-62 of 2008 and Special Leave Petitions (Crl.) Nos. 6136-37 of 2008 are concerned, there cannot be any doubt whatsoever that the jurisdiction of the High Court under Section 482 is limited. (Para 42)

In Crime Case No. 960-A of 1999, the Supreme Court had directed CB CID to complete the investigation. It was, thus, obligatory on its part to complete the investigation and submit an appropriate report to the Court. Even otherwise the Magistrate has granted such permission. It is, however, not the case of S that the Magistrate had accepted the final report. Even in such a case, the Magistrate was bound to give notice to the complainant who could have objected thereto. A protest petition was also maintainable. (Paras 28, 25 and 27)

The investigation in Crime No. 960-A of 1999 runs from one extreme end to the other. Final reports were prepared twice. However, the Deputy Superintendent of Police, CB CID on the second final report so prepared sought to obtain the legal opinion of the Public Prosecutor. Such a course adopted may be irregular but it is not denied or disputed that a vital aspect of the matter of the investigation had not been carried out. It is not the case of the appellants i.e. S and ME that the opinion given by the Public Prosecutor was incorrect. (Para 25). Manoj Narain Agrawal v. Shashi Agrawal, (2009) 6 SCC 385.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-2009]

Kamlapati Trivedi v. State of W.B., (1980) 2 SCC 91: 1980 SCC (Cri) 347; Ram Lal Narang v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1979) 2 SCC 322: 1979 SCC (Cri) 479; State of A.P. v. A.S. Peter, (2008) 2 SCC 383: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 427; Bhagwan Samardha Sreepada Vallabha Venkata Vishwanandha Maharaj v. State of A.P., (1999) 5 SCC 740: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1047, relied on

Abhinandan Jha v. Dinesh Mishra, AIR 1968 SC 117: (1967) 3 SCR 668, cited

[2051] — Ss. 173(8), 157, 190 and 482 — Investigation whether fair — Proper forum for, and mode of redressal — Cognizance already taken — Matter pending before Sessions Judge — In such circumstances, held, proper procedure was to move Sessions Judge under S. 173(8) and not High Court under S. 482 (Para 30). Virender Prasad Singh v. Rajesh Bhardwaj, (2010) 9 SCC 171: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 1169: 2010 Cri LJ 4275: (2010) 95 AIC 182 .

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-8-2010]

Mithabhai Pashabhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 332: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 1047; Ramachandran v. R. Udhayakumar, (2008) 5 SCC 413: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 631, relied on

Rubabbuddin Sheikh v. State of Gujarat, (2010) 2 SCC 200: (2010) 2 SCC (Cri) 1006, distinguished on facts

[2052] — Ss. 173(8) and 36 — Power to initiate further investigation/reinvestigation — Power of investigating officer acting of his own accord under S. 173(8) and on directions of State Government under S. 36 r/w S. 3, Police Act, 1861, distinguished — Police Act, 1861, S. 3

An order of further investigation in terms of Section 173(8) CrPC by the State in exercise of its jurisdiction under Section 36 CrPC stands on a different footing. The power of the investigating officer to make further investigation in exercise of its statutory jurisdiction under Section 173(8) CrPC and at the instance of the State having regard to Section 36 thereof read with Section 3 of the Police Act, 1861 should be considered in different contexts. Section 173(8) CrPC is an enabling provision. (Para 68). Nirmal Singh Kahlon v. State of Punjab, (2009) 1 SCC 441.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-10-2008]

Ram Lal Narang v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1979) 2 SCC 322: 1979 SCC (Cri) 479; State of A.P. v. A.S. Peter, (2008) 2 SCC 383: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 427; H.N. Rishbud v. State of Delhi, AIR 1955 SC 196: (1955) 1 SCR 1150; Upkar Singh v. Ved Prakash, (2004) 13 SCC 292: 2005 SCC (Cri) 211, relied on [2053] — S. 173(8) — Limiting relief until filing of additional charge-sheet — Investigation by SIT in post-Godhra riot cases — Interim directions issued for summoning appellants for investigation but without taking them into custody — In the peculiar facts and circumstances, in exercise of jurisdiction under Art. 142, Supreme Court making interim directions absolute till additional charge-sheet, if any, filed by SIT before Sessions Judge (Para 26). Mithabhai Pashabhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 332.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

[2054] — S. 173(8) — Communal riots in the State of Gujarat — Petition seeking investigation by Special Investigation Team (SIT) in post-Godhra riot cases — Need for creation of SIT agreed upon by parties — In view of sensitive nature of cases involved, held, appointment of SIT warranted — Time-bound directions given to State Government to issue notification creating SIT with named officers within 10 days and to SIT to submit report to Supreme Court directly in a sealed cover within 3 months — Free hand given to SIT to work out the modalities for and to make enquiries/investigation including further investigation (Paras 1, 4 to 7 and 10). National Human Rights Commission v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 342.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, P. Sathasivam and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-3-2008]

[2055] — Ss. 173(8) and 167 — Communal riots in the State of Gujarat — Appellants charge-sheeted in post-Godhra riot cases — Cognizance of offence taken and appellants released on bail — Remand sought for — Meanwhile, Special Investigation Team (SIT) created on direction of Supreme Court for investigation in those cases — As part of investigation, remand of appellants sought for — High Court directing remand of appellants on ground that S. 167(2) gives power for grant of police remand without cancellation of bail — Sustainability — Clarifying that SIT was directed only to further investigate but not to reinvestigate, held, High Court was not correct because once charge-sheet is filed, S. 167(2) is inapplicable — Moreover, nothing pointed out in SIT's report as to necessity of cancellation of bail — Neither the State nor SIT had placed any cogent material on record — Order of High Court, held unsustainable and hence set aside

The Supreme Court while passing the order in exercise of its jurisdiction under Article 32 of the Constitution of India in NHRC case, (2009) 6 SCC 342 and the order dated 22-9-2008 did not direct reinvestigation. "Further investigation"and "reinvestigation"stand on different footing. A distinction exists between a reinvestigation and further investigation. It may be that in a given situation a superior court in exercise of its constitutional power, namely, under Articles 226 and 32 of the Constitution of India could direct a "State" to get an offence investigated and/or further investigated by a different agency. Direction of a reinvestigation, however, being forbidden in law, no superior court would ordinarily issue such a direction. If the investigating authority, in terms of the provisions of CrPC, could not ask for reinvestigation, the court would have to proceed on the basis that Supreme Court in its order in NHRC case, (2009) 6 SCC 342 and the order dated 22-9-2008 only directed further investigation. Furthermore, in this case the Special Investigating Team has already submitted its report to the Supreme Court. Nothing has been pointed out as to why even the bail granted to the appellants should be cancelled so as to consider that question independently. No sufficient or cogent material has been placed on record by the State or the Special Investigating Team in this behalf. (Paras 12 to 14 and 24). Mithabhai Pashabhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 332.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

Ramachandran v. R. Udhayakumar, (2008) 5 SCC 413: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 631, followed

National Human Rights Commission v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 342, clarified

Nirmal Singh Kahlon v. State of Punjab, (2009) 1 SCC 441: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 523, referred to

Vineet Narain v. Union of India, (1998) 1 SCC 226: 1998 SCC (Cri) 307, cited

[2056] — Ss. 173(8) & (2) and 167(2) — Power to direct further investigation or reinvestigation — Jurisdictional competency of Magistrate — Effect of bar under S. 167(2) — Held, once charge-sheet is filed under S. 173(2), Magistrate may on basis of protest petition, take cognizance of offence complained of, or, on application made by investigating authorities permit further investigation under S. 173(8) — But, Magistrate cannot suo motu direct further investigation or reinvestigation on account of bar under S. 167(2) (Para 25). Reeta Nag v. State of W.B., (2009) 9 SCC 129: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1051.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-2009]

[2057] — S. 173(8) and S. 167 [as amended by S. 43-D(2)(b) of Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act, 1967] — Further investigation — Requirement of — Determination of — Allegation that petitioner was supplying money to unlawful organisation — Recovery of Rs 4 lakhs from petitioner's custody — On facts, held, further investigation required — Therefore, extension of time for investigation justified (Paras 18 and 19). Redaul Hussain Khan v. National Investigation Agency, (2010) 1 SCC 521.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-11-2009]

[2058] — Ss. 173(8) and 154 — Second FIR and further investigation — Permissibility and scope of, in a case handed over to CBI — CBI detecting larger conspiracy not detected by local police — Scope of preliminary inquiry and power of CBI under — Second FIR, lodging of — Further investigation after first FIR — Consideration of nature/extent/seriousness of crime — CBI detecting larger conspiracy not detected by local police — Held, lodging of second FIR by CBI would not be a bar — Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (Central Act 25 of 1946) — S. 6

If the State has the ultimate supervisory jurisdiction over an investigation for an offence and if it intends to hand over a further investigation even after filing of the charge-sheet, it may do so. The State as in terms of the provisions of CrPC and the Act exercises two different and distinct jurisdictions. The power of supervision over investigation vested in the State in terms of Section 3 of the Police Act, 1861 is absolute. The said power of the State is wholly unrestricted by Section 36 of the Act or otherwise. As a logical corollary if while making preliminary inquiry pursuant to the notification issued by the State in terms of Section 6 of the Act, CBI comes to know of commission of other and further offence involving a larger conspiracy which required prosecution against a large number of persons who had not been proceeded against at all by the local police officers, even lodging of second FIR would not be a bar. (Paras 62 and 71)

As the investigations are complete, CBI is allowed to file charge-sheet before a court having appropriate jurisdiction. (Para 76). Nirmal Singh Kahlon v. State of Punjab, (2009) 1 SCC 441.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-10-2008]

[2059] — Ss. 173(8) and 154 — Second FIR and further investigation (by CBI) in case of distinct and separate offences on a wider scale — Permissibility of — Power of High Court and State Government regarding — High Court, as proposed by State Government, directing State Government to refer matter to CBI — CBI during preliminary investigation detecting material for lodging second FIR when charge-sheet had already been filed in the first FIR — No fair investigation by the State police on the first FIR — CBI after preliminary inquiry discovering new factual materials —

CBI detecting conspiracy neither detected by State police nor alleged in the first FIR — CBI detecting involvement of large number of persons on a wider canvas — Held, it was open to the State and/or High Court to direct investigation in respect of an offence which is distinct and separate from the one for which the FIR had already been lodged — It is one thing to say that an accused acted in his individual capacity and it is another thing to say that he conspired with a large number of persons to facilitate commission of crime by him as a result whereof all of them had made unlawful gains — Constitution of India — Art. 226 — IPC, 1860, Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 120-B — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 13(1)(d), (e) and 13(2) — Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (Central Act 25 of 1946), Ss. 4 and 6

On 14-6-2002, an FIR was lodged by the State Vigilance Department against several persons including Appellant 1 (ex-Minister, Rural Development and Panchayats), for alleged commission of offences under Sections 420, 467, 468, 120-B IPC and Sections 13(1)(d), (e) and 13(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act in terms of recommendations of the Financial Commissioner, Rural Development and Panchayat Department giving an enquiry report to set aside the selection of panchayat secretaries due to involvement of favouritism and corruption in the selection process. In a writ petition filed with regard to the selection process the High Court changed the writ from private interest litigation to public interest litigation. A charge-sheet was filed against Appellant 1. Appellants 2 and 3 were shown as the witnesses in the said report. Despite the same a statement was made before the High Court on behalf of the State on 1-11-2002 that the investigation was proposed to be handed over to CBI. Initially, CBI was reluctant to take up investigation on the ground of lack of manpower and infrastructure and the State Government delayed in issuing a notification under Section 6 of the Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (the Act). However, with the intervention of the High Court (by order dated 30-4-2003), the State Government, on 2-5-2003, issued the Section 6 notification. In view of the said notification the High Court (by order dated 7-5-2003) directed the Director, CBI to take up the investigation by requesting the Central Government for more funds and manpower as per requirement. CBI, thereafter, informed the High Court on 13-8-2003 that a special team had been sent for a meaningful investigation in respect of the allegations, and the same had proceeded to a considerable length. CBI thereafter registered a second FIR on 26-6-2003. The appellants filed applications for recalling of the orders dated 30-4-2003 and 7-5-2003 of the High Court. By reason of the impugned judgment dated 4-10-2005, the said applications were dismissed.

The appellants inter alia submitted that the notification issued by the State permitting investigation by the Central Bureau of Investigation into the offence pursuant to the order of the High Court must be held to be illegal as the High Court, in exercise of its jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution of India could not have issued such a direction. That the High Court in exercise of its jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution of India in a public interest litigation or otherwise cannot issue such a direction particularly when the jurisdiction to monitor an investigation comes to an end when a charge-sheet is filed.

It was also submitted that as per the records the High Court was not made aware of the fact that the charge-sheet had already been submitted before a court of competent jurisdiction and cognizance in the matter had been taken and thus the High Court acted illegally and without any jurisdiction in directing fresh investigation by the Central Bureau of Investigation. That in any event the Magistrate before whom the charge-sheet had been filed did not form an opinion that the investigation was faulty and/or did not satisfy the requirements of law, no reinvestigation could have been directed by the High Court in exercise of its power under Article 226 of the Constitution of India or otherwise. Even such an order of reinvestigation or further investigation is not contemplated under Section 173(8) of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

Lastly, it was submitted that the DSPE Act, 1946 does not envisage a State Government to give consent for investigation by the Central Bureau of Investigation in respect of an offence which had already been investigated and charge-sheet submitted. Section 173(8) of the Code does not envisage any investigation by a Central agency created under the Act after filing of a charge-sheet, in which event, the Court of Magistrate alone has the jurisdiction to issue any further direction regarding investigation.

Held :

If the police authorities did not make a fair investigation and left out conspiracy aspect of the matter from the purview of its investigation, as and when the same surfaced, it was open to the State and/or the High Court to direct investigation in respect of an offence which is distinct and separate from the one for which the FIR had already been lodged. The second FIR would be maintainable not only because there were different versions and new discovery was made on factual foundations but also because the second FIR lodged by CBI was on a wider canvas involving conspiracy of a large number of persons. It was lodged after holding a detailed preliminary inquiry. CBI collected a large number of materials, recorded a large number of statements, enumerates as many as fifteen categories of irregularities involving as many as fourteen accused persons. An offence committed would not be judged by mere mentioning of the sections but the mode and manner in which the same was committed as also the nature thereof. The first FIR pointed out offences under Sections 420, 467, 468, 120-B IPC and Sections 13(1)(d), (e) and 13(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act but no allegation of conspiracy was made. It is one thing to say that an accused acted in his individual capacity and it is another thing to say that he conspired with a large number of persons to facilitate commission of crime by him as a result whereof all of them had made unlawful gains. (Paras 44 to 53 and 57, 58 and 67)

If, in a situation of this nature, lodging of the second FIR was not impermissible in law, the main plank of submission [that in terms of Section 173(8) CrPC further investigation is permissible, reinvestigation is not] takes a back seat. The High Court in this case was not monitoring any investigation. It only desired that the investigation should be carried out by an independent agency. Its anxiety, as is evident from the order dated 3-4-2002, was to see that the officers of the State do not get away. If that be so, the submission that the monitoring of an investigation comes to an end after the charge-sheet is filed, as has been held by the Supreme Court in Vineet Narain case, (1998) 1 SCC 226 and M.C. Mehta (Taj Corridor Scam) case, (2007) 1 SCC 110 loses all significance. Moreover, it was not a case where the High Court had assumed a jurisdiction in regard to the same offence in respect whereof the Special Judge had taken cognizance pursuant to the charge-sheet having been filed. The charge-sheet was not filed in the FIR which was lodged on the intervention of the High Court. As the offences were distinct and different, the High Court never assumed the jurisdiction of the Special Judge to direct reinvestigation as was urged or otherwise. (Paras 61 to 65)

As the investigations are complete, CBI is allowed to file charge-sheet before a court having appropriate jurisdiction. (Para 76). Nirmal Singh Kahlon v. State of Punjab, (2009) 1 SCC 441.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-10-2008]

Ram Lal Narang v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1979) 2 SCC 322: 1979 SCC (Cri) 479; State of A.P. v. A.S. Peter, (2008) 2 SCC 383: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 427; H.N. Rishbud v. State of Delhi, AIR 1955 SC 196: (1955) 1 SCR 1150; Upkar Singh v. Ved Prakash, (2004) 13 SCC 292: 2005 SCC (Cri) 211, relied on

T.T. Antony v. State of Kerala, (2001) 6 SCC 181: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1048; Kari Choudhary v. Sita Devi, (2002) 1 SCC 714: 2002 SCC (Cri) 269, impliedly distinguished

Advanced Law Lexicon, 3rd Edn., 2005, p. 4237, relied on

Vineet Narain v. Union of India, (1998) 1 SCC 226: 1998 SCC (Cri) 307; M.C. Mehta (Taj Corridor Scam) v. Union of India, (2007) 1 SCC 110: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 264, distinguished [2060] — S. 173(8) — Reinvestigation in case of distinct and different offence, held, permissible — But as second FIR lodged was permissible, the issue of reinvestigation had lost significance. Nirmal Singh Kahlon v. State of Punjab, (2009) 1 SCC 441.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-10-2008]

[2061] — S. 173(8) — Power of Magistrate to direct further investigation after acceptance of final report and closure of the case — Shortcomings necessitating reinvestigation brought to the notice of the Magistrate by the informant but he refused to direct reinvestigation holding that he had no power to review the earlier order — Held, the Magistrate failed to exercise jurisdiction vested in him by law — He was not required to review the order but to order further investigation into the case which he was competent to do under S. 173(8). Union Public Service Commission v. S. Papaiah, (1997) 7 SCC 614: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1112: AIR 1997 SC 3876.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K. Venkataswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-9-1997]

[2062] — S. 173(8) — Final report submitted by the investigating agency after reinvestigation of the case — Shortcomings necessitating reinvestigation pointed to the investigating agency by the informant (UPSC) not brought to the notice of the court while resubmitting the final report — Held, acceptance of the final report and closure of the case by Magistrate bad — Withholding of such vital information creates a doubt about the fairness of the investigation. Union Public Service Commission v. S. Papaiah, (1997) 7 SCC 614: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1112: AIR 1997 SC 3876.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K. Venkataswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-9-1997]

[2063] — S. 173(8) — Further investigation in terms of — Power to make prayer for — Effect of filing of charge-sheet (police report) or taking of cognizance of offence — Held, in neither case is the said power taken away, and further investigation is permissible

So long as a charge-sheet is not filed within the meaning of Section 173(2) CrPC, investigation remains pending. Filing of a final police report or charge-sheet however does not preclude an investigating officer to carry on further investigation in terms of Section 173(8). Indisputably, the power of the investigating officer to make a prayer for making further investigation in terms of Section 173(8) is not taken away only because a charge-sheet has been filed under Section 173(2). A further investigation is permissible even if an order of cognizance of offence has been made by the Magistrate. (Paras 20, 38 and 39). Dinesh Dalmia v. CBI, (2007) 8 SCC 770: (2007) 59 AIC 145 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-2007]

K. Veeraswami v. Union of India, (1991) 3 SCC 655: 1991 SCC (Cri) 734; Anil Saran v. State of Bihar, (1995) 6 SCC 142: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1051; Popular Muthiah v. State, (2006) 7 SCC 296: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 245; Adalat Prasad v. Rooplal Jindal, (2004) 7 SCC 338: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1927; Subramanium Sethuraman v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 13 SCC 324: 2005 SCC (Cri) 242; Everest Advertising (P) Ltd. v. State, Govt. (NCT of Delhi), (2007) 5 SCC 54: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 444, relied on

CBI v. Anupam J. Kulkarni, (1992) 3 SCC 141: 1992 SCC (Cri) 554, distinguished

[2064] — S. 173(8) — Power under S. 3 of Police Act, 1861 includes power to direct further investigation under S. 173(8), CrPC. State of Bihar v. J.A.C. Saldanha, (1980) 1 SCC 554: 1980 SCC (Cri) 272: AIR 1980 SC 326: 1980 Cri LJ 98: 1980 MLJ (Cri) 382: (1980) 17 ACC 279: (1980) 28 BLJR 18.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria, D.A. Desai and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-11-1979]

[2065] — S. 173(8) — Reinvestigation — Scope for — On facts, since there was unanimity on part of both parties that investigation was tainted, biased and not fair, though for different reasons, investigating agency directed to act in terms of S. 173(8) — Director General of Police directed to monitor such reinvestigation

Section 173(8) CrPC permits further investigation, and even dehors any direction from the court as such it is open to the police to conduct proper investigation even after the court has taken cognizance of any offence on the strength of a police report submitted earlier. (Para 79)

The role of the investigating agency is perceived differently by the parties, but there is unanimity in their stand that it was tainted, biased and not fair. While the accused persons accuse it for alleged false implication, the victims' relatives like the appellant, allege its efforts to be merely to protect the accused. It would be desirable for the investigating agency or those supervising the investigation, to act in terms of Section 173(8) CrPC, as the circumstances seem to or may so warrant. The Director General of Police, Gujarat is directed to monitor the reinvestigation, if any, to be taken up with the urgency and utmost sincerity, as the circumstances warrant. (Paras 2, 78 and 60). Zahira Habibulla H. Sheikh v. State of Gujarat, (2004) 4 SCC 158: 2004 SCC (Cri) 999: 2004 Cri LJ 2050.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-4-2004]

[2066] — Ss. 173(8), 156 and 158 — Fairness of investigation — Re-examination of completed investigation — Proper authority for — High Court inviting suggestions from parties to propose three names of DGP rank officers to undertake said re-examination — Held, highly improper — It was for court to decide question of fairness of investigation and not police officers as envisaged by High Court (Para 24). Virender Prasad Singh v. Rajesh Bhardwaj, (2010) 9 SCC 171: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 1169: 2010 Cri LJ 4275: (2010) 95 AIC 182 .

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-8-2010]

Mithabhai Pashabhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 332: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 1047; Ramachandran v. R. Udhayakumar, (2008) 5 SCC 413: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 631, relied on

Rubabbuddin Sheikh v. State of Gujarat, (2010) 2 SCC 200: (2010) 2 SCC (Cri) 1006, distinguished on facts

[2067] — S. 173(8) — Reinvestigation — Whether the police officer got reinvestigation done with any oblique motive — Deceased gunned down by gangsters in broad daylight — Nexus between gangsters and police found — Delay of two days in sending copy of FIR to Magistrate showing influence of gangs over police — Attempt made by previous investigating officers to show that the revolver seized by them was used in the crime when from the facts it was clear that the fatal shots were fired from a pistol — False statement made in application for taking accused on remand — No serious attempt made by police for long to secure presence of accused before court and to see that trial proceeded against them — Held, these circumstances create a doubt regarding the honesty of the first investigation — From the mere fact that in the application, made to the court for permission to reinvestigate, it was not stated that the previous investigation was not honest, no inference of oblique motive could be drawn — Without further investigation no charge of dishonesty could have been levelled against the police officers associated with the earlier investigation at that stage — On facts held, the subsequent investigation was not done with any oblique motive (Paras 9 to 17). S.N. Dube v. N.B. Bhoir, (2000) 2 SCC 254: 2000 SCC (Cri) 343: AIR 2000 SC 776: 2000 Cri LJ 830.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-1-2000]

[2068] — S. 173(8) — Supplementary charge-sheet — Court has no power to reject it outright without taking it on file

What all S. 173(8) lays down is that the investigating agency can carry on further investigation in respect of the offence after a report under sub-section (2) has been filed. The further investigation may also disclose some fresh offences but connected with the transaction which is the subject-matter of the earlier report. At the stage of filing supplementary report itself the trial court which took cognizance cannot reject the same outright since it is only a supplementary report in support of the earlier report. The purpose of sub-section (8) of S. 173 CrPC is to enable the investigation agency to gather further evidence and that cannot be frustrated. If the materials incorporated in the supplementary charge-sheet do not make out any offence, the question of framing any other charge on the basis of that may not arise but in case the court frames a charge it is open to the accused persons to seek discharge in respect of that offence also. The rejection of the report outright at that stage is not correct. State of W.B. v. Salap Service Station, 1994 Supp (3) SCC 318: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1713.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-1-1994]

[2069] — Ss. 173(8) and 156 — Order for further investigation — Power of Magistrate to direct a particular police officer in this regard — Magistrate, in exercise of power under, to order further investigation to be made by police, cannot direct that a particular police officer or even an officer of a particular rank should conduct such further investigation

It is not within the province of the Magistrate while exercising the power under Section 173(8) to specify any particular officer to conduct such investigation, not even to suggest the rank of the officer who should conduct such investigation. Therefore, the direction made by the Special Judge that further investigation shall be conducted by an officer of DIG rank of CBI, will stand deleted. (Paras 20 and 21). Hemant Dhasmana v. CBI, (2001) 7 SCC 536: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1280: AIR 2001 SC 2721.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-8-2001]

[2070] — Ss. 173(8), (2) and 190 — Police investigation subsequent to submission of charge-sheet under S. 173(2) — Prior/formal permission of Magistrate — When needed — Requirement of permission, held, depends on whether it is reinvestigation or further investigation — Law does not mandate taking of prior permission of Magistrate for further investigation, and Magistrate has discretion to direct further investigation — However, reinvestigation, without prior permission is necessarily forbidden — Distinction and implications of reinvestigation and further investigation, restated

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Indisputably, the law does not mandate taking of prior permission from the Magistrate for further investigation. Carrying out of a further investigation even after filing of the charge-sheet is a statutory right of the police. The police can exercise such right as often as necessary when fresh information came to light. The Magistrate also has a discretion in the matter to direct further investigation, even if he had taken cognizance of the offence. A distinction exists between further investigation and reinvestigation. Whereas reinvestigation without prior permission is necessarily forbidden, further investigation is not. The dictionary meaning of "further" (when used as an adjective) is "additional; more; supplemental". "Further" investigation therefore is the continuation of the earlier investigation and not a fresh investigation or reinvestigation to be started ab initio wiping out the earlier investigation altogether. (Paras 9, 14, 16 and 18)

Section 36 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 empowers a police officer, superior in rank to an officer in charge of a police station, to exercise the same powers throughout the local area to which they are appointed, as may be exercised by such officer within the limits of his police station. It is not correct to contend that the investigation was taken up by a different agency. CID is a part of the investigating authorities of the State. It was, therefore, permissible for the higher authority to carry out or direct further investigation in the matter. (Paras 11, 12 and 18)

It was not a case where investigation was carried out in relation to a separate conspiracy. As allegations had been made against the officer of a local police station in regard to the mode and manner in which investigation was carried out, a further investigation was directed. (Para 17)

It is also not a case where two charge-sheets were filed before two different courts. The court designated to deal with the matters wherein investigation had been carried out by CID, is located at Chittoor. It was in the aforementioned situation that the Sessions Judge transferred the case pending in the Tirupati Court to the Designated Court at Chittoor. Cognizance of further offence had also been taken by the Chittoor Court. (Para 17). State of A.P. v. A.S. Peter, (2008) 2 SCC 383: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 427: AIR 2008 SC 1052.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-12-2007]

Ram Lal Narang v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1979) 2 SCC 322: 1979 SCC (Cri) 479; State of Bihar v. J.A.C. Saldanha, (1980) 1 SCC 554: 1980 SCC (Cri) 272; Upkar Singh v. Ved Prakash, (2004) 13 SCC 292: 2005 SCC (Cri) 211; R.P. Kapur v. Sardar Pratap Singh Kairon, AIR 1961 SC 1117: (1961) 2 SCR 143, relied on

K. Chandrasekhar v. State of Kerala, (1998) 5 SCC 223: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1291, clarified

Ram Lal Narang v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1979) 2 SCC 322: 1979 SCC (Cri) 479, distinguished

K. Chandrasekhar v. State of Kerala, (1998) 5 SCC 223: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1291, explained and distinguished [2071] — Ss. 173(8), 36 and 156 — IG, Vigilance, having jurisdiction over the whole State, if employed as a police officer, held, would be superior in rank to an officer in charge of a police station within the contemplation of S. 36 and would be competent to take up further investigation under S. 173(8) of a cognizable offence — State Government's power of superintendence under S. 3 of Police Act, 1861 includes giving directions to such a superior officer for further investigation under S. 173(8) in a case beyond the jurisdiction in bribery or corruption matters even after submission of report by the previous investigating agency under Ss. 173(2) — Power under S. 173(8), held, not affected by Magistrate's power to order investigation under S. 156(3) — Entrustment of the case by the State Government to IG Vigilance for further investigation, held, warranted by the facts and circumstances of the case and not peculiar and unconventional — Hence the Magistrate, held, justified in postponing consideration of the report submitted to him upon a request made by A.P.P. till report on completion of further investigation — Police Act, 1861 — Ss. 3, 12 and 22 . State of Bihar v. J.A.C. Saldanha, (1980) 1 SCC 554: 1980 SCC (Cri) 272: AIR 1980 SC 326: 1980 Cri LJ 98: 1980 MLJ (Cri) 382: (1980) 17 ACC 279: (1980) 28 BLJR 18.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria, D.A. Desai and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-11-1979]

[2072] — Ss. 173(8) and (2) — Scope and applicability of S. 173(8) — Held, although S. 173(8) refers to the term "further investigation", however, the term has not been defined in CrPC — It must therefore depend on the facts of each case as culled from record — Nevertheless, reiterated, further investigation and not a re-investigation can be made — Nature of investigation whether amounts to a further investigation or a re-investigation has to be seen from nature of investigation conducted — On facts, investigation conducted by PW 27 (SP, CB CID), on directions of High Court, was in the nature of further investigation — Hence, conviction of appellant-accused, by looking into evidence collected by PW 27 based on such investigation, held, proper — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 302, 148 and 341 (Paras 15 and 18). Sivanmoorthy v. State, (2010) 12 SCC 29.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-11-2009]

K. Chandrasekhar v. State of Kerala, (1998) 5 SCC 223: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1291; Ramachandran v. R. Udhayakumar, (2008) 5 SCC 413: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 631; Mithabhai Pashabh Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 332: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 1047; Rama Chaudhary v. State of Bihar, (2009) 6 SCC 346: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 1059, relied on

[2073] — Ss. 173(8) & (2) and 156(1) — Scope and applicability of S. 173(8) — Fresh investigation — Impermissibility of, reiterated — Held, instead of fresh investigation or reinvestigation there can be further investigation — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 147, 148, 324, 302 and 307

A Single Judge vide the impugned order in a miscellaneous petition under Section 482 CrPC, finding the need, directed the Inspector of Police nominated by the Deputy Superintendent of Police, CB CID to investigate a case under Sections 147, 148, 324, 302 and 307 IPC afresh and thereafter file the final report.

Partly allowing the appeal,

Held :

Instead of fresh investigation there can be further investigation if required under Section 173(8) CrPC. The same can be done by CB CID as directed by the High Court. From a plain reading of Section 173 CrPC it is evident that even after completion of investigation under Section 173(2) CrPC, the police has right to further investigate under sub-section (8), but not fresh investigation or reinvestigation. (Paras 8 and 7). Ramachandran v. R. Udhayakumar, (2008) 5 SCC 413: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 631.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-2008]

K. Chandrasekhar v. State of Kerala, (1998) 5 SCC 223: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1291, relied on

[2074] — Ss. 173(8) and 401 — Power of Magistrate to order further investigation — When exercised it would not be proper for High Court to interfere in exercise of revisional powers — Further investigation, in either result, would be for ends of justice

Although sub-section (8) does not, in specific terms, mention about the powers of the court to order further investigation, the power of the police to conduct further investigation envisaged therein can be triggered into motion at the instance of the court. When any such order is passed by a court which has the jurisdiction to do so, it would not be a proper exercise of revisional powers to interfere therewith because the further investigation would only be for the ends of justice. After the further investigation, the authority conducting such investigation can either reach the same conclusion and reiterate it or it can reach a different conclusion. During such extended investigation, the officers can either act on the same materials or on other materials which may come to their notice. It is for the investigating agency to exercise its power when it is put back on that track. If they come to the same conclusion, it is of added advantage to the persons against whom the allegations were made, and if the allegations are found false again the complainant would be in trouble. So from any point of view the Special Judge's direction would be of advantage for the ends of justice. It is too premature for the High Court to predict that the investigating officer would not be able to collect any further material at all. That is an area which should have been left to the investigating officer to survey and recheck. When the Special Judge has opted to order for a further investigation the High Court should have stated to CBI to comply with that direction. (Paras 16 and 20). Hemant Dhasmana v. CBI, (2001) 7 SCC 536: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1280: AIR 2001 SC 2721.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-8-2001]

Bhagwant Singh v. Commr. of Police, (1985) 2 SCC 537: 1985 SCC (Cri) 267; India Carat (P) Ltd. v. State of Karnataka, (1989) 2 SCC 132: 1989 SCC (Cri) 306; Union Public Service Commission v. S. Papaiah, (1997) 7 SCC 614: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1112, relied on

— S. 174 See also S. 174, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 1040 et seq. in Vol. 2

— S. 174 See Ch. XII (Ss. 154 to 176) and Ss. 162 and 174

See also Ss. 154, 157 and 174
See also Ss. 154, 158, 157 and 174
See also Ss. 154, 161 and 174
See also Ss. 154 and 174
See also Ss. 162 and 174
See also Ss. 162, 174 and 175
See also Ss. 311 and 174
See also Ss. 482, 154(3) and 174

[2075] — S. 174 — Inquest is concerned with establishing the cause of death only. Shakila Khader v. Nausheer Cama, (1975) 4 SCC 122: 1975 SCC (Cri) 379: AIR 1975 SC 1324: 1975 Cri LJ 1105.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A. Alagiriswami and N.L. Untwalia, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-3-1975]

Followed in Amar Singh v. Balwinder Singh, (2003) 2 SCC 518

[2076] — S. 174 — Inquest report — All the witnesses need not be examined for the inquest — Omission of name in the inquest report not fatal to the stand of a person being eyewitness — CrPC, 1898 — S. 174. Shakila Khader v. Nausheer Cama, (1975) 4 SCC 122: 1975 SCC (Cri) 379: AIR 1975 SC 1324: 1975 Cri LJ 1105.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A. Alagiriswami and N.L. Untwalia, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-3-1975]

[2077] — S. 174 — Inquest report — Held, not an evidence by itself — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 300 & 302. Babu Poojari v. State of Karnataka, 1993 Supp (3) SCC 304: 1993 SCC (Cri) 997.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-8-1992]

[2078] — S. 174 — Investigation under — Scope of — Necessary contents of inquest report — Held, said investigation is limited in scope and is confined to ascertainment of apparent cause of death — It is concerned with discovering whether in a given case the death was accidental, suicidal or homicidal or caused by animal, and in what manner or by what weapon or instrument the injuries on the body appear to have been inflicted — Details of overt acts need not be recorded in inquest report — Question regarding details as to how the deceased was assaulted or who assaulted him or under what circumstances he was assaulted or who were the witnesses of the assault is foreign to the ambit and scope of proceedings under S. 174 — No requirement in law to mention details of FIR, names of accused or the names of eyewitnesses or the gist of their statements in inquest report, nor is the said report required to be signed by any eyewitness (Paras 14 and 15). Radha Mohan Singh v. State of U.P., (2006) 2 SCC 450: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 661: AIR 2006 SC 951: (2006) 1 KLJ 535: (2006) 2 All LJ 242: 2006 Cri LJ 1121.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, Arun Kumar and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-1-2006]

Pedda Narayana v. State of A.P., (1975) 4 SCC 153: 1975 SCC (Cri) 427; Shakila Khader v. Nausheer Cama, (1975) 4 SCC 122: 1975 SCC (Cri) 379; Eqbal Baig v. State of A.P., (1986) 2 SCC 476: 1986 SCC (Cri) 232; Amar Singh v. Balwinder Singh, (2003) 2 SCC 518: 2003 SCC (Cri) 641; Khujji v. State of M.P., (1991) 3 SCC 627: 1991 SCC (Cri) 916, followed

Meharaj Singh v. State of U.P., (1994) 5 SCC 188: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1391, overruled on this point

[2079] — S. 174 — Inquest report — Requirements of — It need not contain the name of the accused — Absence of the name of the accused in panchnamas does not lead to the inference that the name of the accused was not disclosed till they were completed

There is no requirement of law or any rule that an inquest panchnama should contain name of the accused. An inquest panchnama is a report required to be made by the Investigating Officer with respect to the apparent cause of death. It is to be prepared in the presence of two or more respectable inhabitants of the neighbourhood and has to describe the wounds, fractures, bruises and other marks of injuries as are found on the dead body and stating in what manner, or by what weapon or instrument (if any), such marks appear to have been inflicted. Therefore, from the absence of the name of accused in the Panchnamas it cannot be inferred that his name was not disclosed as the murderer till they were completed. Sk. Ayub v. State of Maharashtra, (1998) 9 SCC 521: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1055: AIR 1998 SC 1285.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and V.N. Khare, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-2-1998]

[2080] — S. 174 — Inquest report — Facts about the incident i.e. manner in which the incident took place or names of accused need not be stated

The High Court held that the details about the occurrence were not mentioned in the inquest report which showed that the investigating officer was not sure of the facts when the inquest report was prepared and this feature of the case carried weight in favour of the accused.

Held :

The requirement of Section 174 is that the police officer shall record the apparent cause of death describing the wounds as may be found on the body and also the weapon or instrument by which they appear to have been inflicted and this has to be done in the presence of two or more respectable inhabitants of the neighbourhood. The section does not contemplate that the manner in which the incident took place or the names of the accused should be mentioned in the inquest report. The basic purpose of holding an inquest is to report regarding the apparent cause of death, namely, whether it is suicidal, homicidal, accidental or by some other machinery etc. The High Court was, therefore, clearly in error in holding that as the facts about the occurrence were not mentioned in the inquest report, it would show that at least by the time the report was prepared the investigating officer was not sure of the facts of the case. (Paras 12 and 13) . Amar Singh v. Balwinder Singh, (2003) 2 SCC 518: 2003 SCC (Cri) 641: AIR 2003 SC 1164: 2003 Cri LJ 1282.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-2003]

Pedda Narayana v. State of A.P., (1975) 4 SCC 153: 1975 SCC (Cri) 427; Khujji v. State of M.P., (1991) 3 SCC 627: 1991 SCC (Cri) 916; Shakila Khader v. Nausheer Cama, (1975) 4 SCC 122: 1975 SCC (Cri) 379, relied on

[2081] — S. 174 — Scope of — Inquest to be held on the spot where dead body found — Exercise of discretion in not sending body for post-mortem

Section 174, CrPC, peremptorily requires that the officer holding an inquest on a dead body should do so at the spot. This mandate is conveyed by the word 'there' occurring in S. 174(1). Sub-section (3) of the section further requires the officer holding the inquest to forward the body with a view to its being examined by the medical man appointed by the State Government in this behalf, if the state of the weather and the distance admit of its being so forwarded without risk of such putrefaction on the road as would render such examination useless. The sub-section gives a discretion to the police officer not to send the body for post-mortem examination by the medical officer only in one case, namely, where there can be no doubt as to the cause of the death. This discretion however is to be exercised prudently and honestly. Kodali Purnachandra Rao v. Public Prosecutor, (1975) 2 SCC 570: 1975 SCC (Cri) 678: AIR 1975 SC 1925: 1975 Cri LJ 1671.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, P.N. Bhagwati and R.S. Sarkaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-9-1975]

[2082] — S. 174 — Inquest report — Object, scope, ambit and necessary contents, stated

Submission that FIR loses its authenticity if it is lodged after the inquest report is recorded is a general proposition and cannot be universally applied. No doubt the inquest report was prepared by PW 8 at 9.30 p.m. and the formal FIR was lodged by PW 1 at 11.30 p.m. But it is also relevant that the investigation was started by PW 8 after receipt of telephonic information from PW 3 at 6:30 pm that the deceased was lying in a serious condition. And thereafter inquest report was prepared. (Paras 21 and 20)

The principle of law in Sections 2(h) and 157 CrPC is that when information regarding a cognizable offence is furnished to the police that information will be regarded as the FIR and all enquiries held by the police subsequent thereto would be treated as investigation, even though the formal registration of the FIR takes place only later. (Paras 26 to 31)

Neither FIR, nor inquest report nor post-mortem can be regarded as substantive pieces of evidence. FIR or inquest report may only be used to contradict or corroborate the maker thereof. Therefore, there is no merit in the submission of the counsel for the appellants. Any discrepancy occurring in the inquest report can neither be termed to be fatal nor even a suspicious circumstance which would warrant a benefit to the accused and the resultant dismissal of the prosecution case. Assuming that some report was made on telephone and that was the real first information report, this by itself would not affect the appreciation of evidence made by the Sessions Judge and the conclusions of fact drawn by him. (Paras 31, 23 and 25)

The object of the inquest proceedings under Section 174 CrPC is to ascertain whether a person has died under unnatural circumstances or an unnatural death and if so, what the cause of death is. The question regarding the details as to how the deceased was assaulted or who assaulted him or under what circumstances he was assaulted, is foreign to the ambit and scope of the proceedings under Section 174 CrPC. Mention of the name of the accused and eyewitness in the inquest report is not necessary. Due to non-mentioning of the name of the accused in the inquest report, it cannot be inferred that FIR was not in existence at the time of inquest proceedings. (Paras 22 and 24). Sambhu Das v. State of Assam, (2010) 10 SCC 374: AIR 2010 SC 3300.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-9-2010]

Maha Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1976) 1 SCC 644: 1976 SCC (Cri) 135; State of U.P. v. Bhagwant Kishore Joshi, AIR 1964 SC 221: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 140; Pedda Narayana v. State of A.P., (1975) 4 SCC 153: 1975 SCC (Cri) 427; George v. State of Kerala, (1998) 4 SCC 605: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1232; Suresh Rai v. State of Bihar, (2000) 4 SCC 84: 2000 SCC (Cri) 764, relied on

Balaka Singh v. State of Punjab, (1975) 4 SCC 511: 1975 SCC (Cri) 601; Ramesh Baburao Devaskar v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 13 SCC 501: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 212, considered

[2083] — S. 174 — Inquest report — Object of preparing, restated — Neither necessary nor obligatory under S. 174 for the IO to investigate or find the murderer

The whole purpose of preparing an inquest report under Section 174(1) CrPC is to investigate into and draw up a report of the apparent cause of death, describing such wounds as may be found on the body of the deceased and stating in what manner, or by what weapon or instrument, if any, such wounds appear to have been inflicted. In other words, for the purpose of holding the inquest it is neither necessary nor obligatory on the part of the IO to investigate into or ascertain who were the persons responsible for the death. George v. State of Kerala, (1998) 4 SCC 605: AIR 1998 SC 1376: 1998 Cri LJ 2034.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-3-1998]

[2084] — S. 174 — Inquest report — Purpose of — Held, is only to notice as to whether the murder committed was homicidal in nature or not and not for making a note in regard to identification marks of the accused (Para 25). Ravi v. State, (2007) 15 SCC 372.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-2007]

[2085] — S. 174 — Inquest Report — Purpose of preparation — Details necessary — Absence of names of accused and details of weapons possessed by each accused participating in assault, in inquest report — No explanation as to why PW 1 (first informant and eyewitness who was also one of witnesses to inquest report) did not disclose names of all accused at time of preparation of inquest — Effect — Held, purpose of preparation of inquest report is to ascertain whether a person has died in some suspicious circumstances or an unnatural death and as to apparent cause of death — Inquest report need not contain details as to how deceased were assaulted or who assaulted them — Omission of names of accused and minute details of assault in inquest report itself is not enough to disbelieve prosecution case — Mere fact that PW 1 did not repeat names of all accused so as to be incorporated in inquest report, is of no consequence (Paras 17 to 17.3). Surendra Pal v. State of U.P., (2010) 9 SCC 399.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-2010]

Suresh Rai v. State of Bihar, (2000) 4 SCC 84: 2000 SCC (Cri) 764; Eqbal Baig v. State of A.P., (1986) 2 SCC 476: 1986 SCC (Cri) 232, relied on [2086] — Ss. 174 and 161 — Inquest — Purpose — Facts disclosed/recorded in inquest report and facts disclosed in S. 161 statement — Evidentiary value — Held, purpose of inquest is to ascertain prima facie nature of death, and to find out whether there are injuries on dead body — Inquest panchnama cannot be treated as statement of witness recorded under S. 161 CrPC wherein he is supposed to narrate facts seen by him — Hence, non-disclosure of fact by PW 3 to IO that he had seen appellant running away from place where dead body was lying, not unnatural, or in any way affecting veracity of his deposition (Para 31). Aftab Ahmad Anasari v. State of Uttaranchal, (2010) 2 SCC 583.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.M. Panchal and T.S. Thakur, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-1-2010]

Pulukuri Kotayya v. King Emperor, (1946-47) 74 IA 65: AIR 1947 PC 67, followed

[2087] — S. 174 — Inquest/ Panchnama — Purpose of — Details expected

The site plan or panchnama of the place of incident is prepared to indicate the state of things found at the place of incident. In the site plan, the investigating officer is not supposed to note whether electric line had been taken in an unauthorised manner or not. That is not the purpose for which the site plan is prepared in a criminal case. (Para 61). State of U.P. v. Krishna Master, (2010) 12 SCC 324: AIR 2010 SC 3071: 2010 Cri LJ 3889: (2010) 94 AIC 257: (2010) 5 All LJ 423.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-8-2010]

[2088] — Ss. 174 and 162 — Inquest report/ Panchnama — Evidentiary value — Previous statement of witness in panchnama — Use of — Contents of panchnama — Held, are not substantive evidence — What is substantive evidence is what has been stated by the panchas or the person concerned in the witness box — On facts held, even if the extreme proposition that anything and everything stated in the panchnama can be read as substantive evidence, is accepted, but still the fact remains that PW 1, who had identified A-3 as A-2 was not given an opportunity to explain the same — There was no cross-examination or no question put to him regarding the same — Said statement amounts to his previous statement and unless he was confronted with the statement specifically and asked to explain, such statement cannot be used — It is trite law that a previous statement of the witness, even if admissible in evidence, cannot be used against the witness unless the witness is confronted with the same and his attention is invited thereto — In his substantive evidence, the witness, PW 1 has never made a statement that he had identified A-3 as A-2 — His admitted case was that he knew A-2 even before the occurrence — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 3 and 145 (Paras 33 to 35). Murli v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 9 SCC 417: (2009) 81 AIC 43 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-8-2009]

[2089] — S. 174 — Object — Inquest report — Details of overt acts of accused to be recorded in — Whether any reflection can be cast on the credibility of eyewitnesses from such omission — CrPC, 1898 — S. 174

The object of the proceedings under S. 174 is merely to ascertain whether a person has died under suspicious circumstances or an unnatural death and if so what is the apparent cause of the death. The question regarding the details as to how the deceased was assaulted or who assaulted him or under what circumstances he was assaulted is foreign to the ambit and scope of the proceedings under S. 174. In these circumstances, therefore, neither in practice nor in law is it necessary for the police to mention these details in the inquest report.

From the mere fact that these were not noted in the inquest report it cannot be concluded that the statements given by the witnesses and read over at the inquest did not contain those overt acts and the statements produced at the trial are those of the witnesses which were taken later.

Hence the omissions in the inquest report are not sufficient to put the prosecution out of court. Pedda Narayana v. State of A.P., (1975) 4 SCC 153: 1975 SCC (Cri) 427: AIR 1975 SC 1252: 1975 Cri LJ 1062: (1975) 12 ACC 201: 1975 Cr LR (SC) 335.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N.L. Untwalia and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-4-1975]

[2090] — S. 174 — Eyewitness — Presence of, at the scene of occurrence — Cannot be doubted merely because of non-mention of his name in the statement made by a witness during inquest — Names of others who were present at scene of occurrence need not be stated by the witness during the inquest. Desaji Wadia Samkaiah v. State of A.P., 1988 Supp SCC 531: 1988 SCC (Cri) 879: 1988 BLJR 382.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Dutt and K. Jagannatha Shetty, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-2-1988]

[2091] — Ss. 174 and 161 — Absence of PW 20 in site plan — Held, does not negate her presence or establish her having not witnessed the incident, specifically when she had given her statement to the police under S. 161 CrPC on day of occurrence itself (Para 73). Manu Sharma v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 6 SCC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : P. Sathasivam and Swatanter Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision : 19-4-2010]

Mehr Vajsi Deva v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1965 Guj 143; Zahiruddin v. Emperor, AIR 1947 PC 75; Supdt. and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs v. Ram Ajudhya Singh, AIR 1965 Cal 348, referred to

Ranbir Yadav v. State of Bihar, (1995) 4 SCC 392: 1995 SCC (Cri) 728, considered

[2092] — S. 174 — Discrepancy, overwriting, omission or contradiction in inquest report — Contention as to — When could be entertained — Held, such contention could not be entertained unless the attention of the author thereof is drawn to the said fact and he is given an opportunity to explain the same when examined in court (Para 11). Radha Mohan Singh v. State of U.P., (2006) 2 SCC 450: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 661: AIR 2006 SC 951: (2006) 1 KLJ 535: (2006) 2 All LJ 242: 2006 Cri LJ 1121.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, Arun Kumar and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-1-2006]

[2093] — S. 174 — Failure to hold inquest or post-mortem examination — When inconsequential — Death of 12 persons on account of indiscriminate firing by accused persons established — Dead bodies recovered from the spot itself and necessary death certificate issued by the medical authority — Held, in the circumstances, non-holding of inquest or post-mortem examination immaterial. Banwari Ram v. State of U.P., (1998) 9 SCC 3: 1998 SCC (Cri) 835: AIR 1998 SC 674: 1998 Cri LJ 869.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-12-1997]

[2094] — S. 174 — In inquest report, gist of FIR or cause of death as narrated by the witnesses is usually noted (Para 12). Thanedar Singh v. State of M.P., (2002) 1 SCC 487: 2002 SCC (Cri) 153: AIR 2002 SC 175: 2002 Cri LJ 254.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and P. Venkatarama Reddi, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-10-2001]

Meharaj Singh v. State of U.P., (1994) 5 SCC 188: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1391, relied on

But see Radha Mohan Singh v. State of U.P., (2006) 2 SCC 450

[2095] — S. 174 — Inquest — Witnesses to also alleged to be eyewitness — Their failure to state name of assailants — Makes their alleged presence when incident occurred doubtful. Suresh Rai v. State of Bihar, (2000) 4 SCC 84: 2000 SCC (Cri) 764: AIR 2000 SC 2207: 2000 Cri LJ 3457.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad, A.P. Misra and Y.K. Sabharwal, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-3-2000]

[2096] — S. 174 — Inquest report — Absence of column about the names of the assailants and there being no occasion for anyone to mention the names of the assailants — Non-mention of names of the assailants in the inquest report therefore not fatal. Ram Sanjiwan Singh v. State of Bihar, (1996) 8 SCC 552: 1996 SCC (Cri) 701: AIR 1996 SC 3265.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-1996]

[2097] — S. 174 — Inquest report — Evidence of eyewitnesses, who were also witnesses to inquest report, cannot be rejected merely on the ground of discrepancy in their evidence regarding the time of preparation of inquest report and the absence of the names of the assailants in the same — S. 174(1) does not require mention of the names of the assailants in the inquest report

Section 174, CrPC contemplates the preparation of an inquest report by the police officer in the presence of two or more responsible inhabitants of the neighbourhood and draw up a report of apparent cause of death, describing such wounds, fractures, bruises and other marks of injury as may be found on the body stating in what manner or by what weapon or instrument (if any) such marks appeared to have been inflicted. A perusal of the section would go to show that it does not require anywhere to mention the names of the assailants. It was, therefore, neither incumbent on the police officer who prepared the inquest report, to mention the names of the assailants, nor was it necessary for the eyewitnesses, PWs 7 and 8, who are witnesses to the said inquest, to insist upon the mention of names of the assailants in the said inquest report. As regards the time of preparation of the inquest report, it is hardly of any consequence in the present case. It is just possible that the witnesses did not remember the exact time of preparation of the inquest after a long lapse of time. Their testimony, therefore, cannot be rejected on this ground alone. Mahendra Rai v. Mithilesh Rai, (1997) 10 SCC 605: 1997 SCC (Cri) 899.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-12-1996]

[2098] — S. 174 — Inquest report — In language of witness — Contents of inquest report cannot be treated as evidence but can be looked into to test veracity of DW who attested the same as Panch witness. Kuldip Singh v. State of Punjab, 1992 Supp (3) SCC 1: 1992 SCC (Cri) 946: AIR 1992 SC 1944: 1992 Cri LJ 3592.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-8-1992]

[2099] — S. 174 — Inquest report — Correction of name of informant in — Justified and did not render the name doubtful — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/149, 307/149 and 148. State of U.P. v. Ram Swarup, 1988 Supp SCC 262: 1988 SCC (Cri) 552: AIR 1988 SC 1028: 1988 ALJ 555: (1988) 1 Crimes 994.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.L. Oza, B.C. Ray and K. Jagannatha Shetty, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-2-1988]

[2100] — S. 174 — Inquest report — Non-mention of name of accused in — Effect — No column in inquest report requiring the IO to mention the names of the accused — Plea that fardbayan which gave names of the accused was drawn up after preparing inquest report not maintainable specially when no such plea was raised during the trial or before the High Court. Baleshwar Mandal v. State of Bihar, (1997) 7 SCC 219: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1042: AIR 1997 SC 3471: 1997 Cri LJ 4084.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and V.N. Khare, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-8-1997]

[2101] — S. 174 — Inquest report — Not necessary to record details of the incident — FIR mentioning that the deceased was also assaulted by banka but the inquest report not making any reference to banka — High Court disbelieving the FIR and the evidence of the eyewitness on ground that they were inconsistent with the recitals in inquest report — Held, the approach of the High Court is erroneous and not sustainable. State of U.P. v. Abdul, (1997) 10 SCC 135: 1997 SCC (Cri) 804: AIR 1997 SC 2512: 1997 All LJ 1432: 1997 Cri LJ 2997.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-1997]

Pedda Narayana v. State of A.P., (1975) 4 SCC 153: 1975 SCC (Cri) 427, followed

[2102] — S. 174 — Inquest report — Omission to mention crime number in — Merely because the Investigating Officer had not been diligent enough it would not be proper to discard reliable and clinching evidences adduced by the eyewitnesses. Krishna Pal (Dr.) v. State of U.P., (1996) 7 SCC 194: 1996 SCC (Cri) 249: AIR 1996 SC 733.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-11-1995]

Karnel Singh v. State of M.P., (1995) 5 SCC 518: 1995 SCC (Cri) 977, relied on [2103] — S. 174 — Inquest report — Extent of detail required — Held, there is no requirement in law that IO making inquest or conducting of post-mortem should describe in detail as to the nature of the injuries sustained by the deceased and/or by the type of weapons used — Failure to do so no reason to discard prosecution version. Bur Singh v. State of Punjab, (2008) 16 SCC 65: AIR 2009 SC 157.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-10-2008]

[2104] — S. 174 — Inquest report — Names of accused, held, need not be mentioned therein — Inquest report is prepared for purposes mentioned in S. 174 and not for corroborating prosecution case (Paras 36 to 38). Satbir Singh v. State of U.P., (2009) 13 SCC 790: AIR 2009 SC 2163: (2009) 3 All LJ 786: (2009) 76 AIC 120 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-2-2009]

Pedda Narayana v. State of A.P., (1975) 4 SCC 153: 1975 SCC (Cri) 427; George v. State of Kerala, (1998) 4 SCC 605: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1232, considered and relied on [2105] — Ss. 174 and 162 — Inquest report — Absence of names of all witnesses in — Validity of — Held, inquest report need not contain names of all witnesses (Para 17). State v. Rajendran, (2008) 15 SCC 425: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 957: AIR 2009 SC 925: (2008) 72 AIC 75 (SC): (2009) 2 ECrN 530 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-11-2008]

[2106] — S. 174 — Inquest report and post-mortem report — Not basic or substantive evidence — Discrepancy occurring therein, not fatal to the prosecution case, nor a suspicious circumstance so as to benefit the accused

The post-mortem report is a document which by itself is not a substantive evidence but it is the doctor's statement in court, which has the credibility of a substantive evidence and not the report, which in normal circumstances ought to be used only for refreshing the memory of the doctor witness or to contradict whatever he might say from the witness box. In a similar vein the inquest report also cannot be termed to be a basic or substantive evidence being prepared by the police personnel being a non-medical man and at the earliest stage of the proceeding. In the wake of the aforesaid, a mere omission of a particular injury or indication therein of an additional one cannot, invalidate the prosecution case. Discrepancy occurring between the inquest report and the post-mortem report can neither be termed to be fatal nor even a suspicious circumstance, which would warrant a benefit to the accused and the resultant dismissal of the prosecution case. (Para 6). Munshi Prasad v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 351: 2002 SCC (Cri) 175: AIR 2001 SC 3031.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-10-2001]

Ramaswami, In re, AIR 1938 Mad 336: 1938 MWN 36, approved

[2107] — S. 174 — Non-compliance with — Appellant Sub-Inspector of Police on receiving information about recovery of dead bodies, purporting to investigate and succeeding in having the body buried with undue hurry, feigning ignorance, though he knew the deceased, preparing false records and falsifying the available data

On facts, the appellant Sub-Inspector of Police flouted all the salutary requirements of S. 174, CrPC. His conduct in distorting and suppressing material evidence and in preparing false records as to the identity of the dead body, the cause of the death and the falsification of the data bearing on that cause, could not be explained on any reasonable hypothesis save that of his guilt. The circumstances established in this case unmistakably and irresistibly point to the conclusion that within all human probability, the appellant knew or had reasons to believe that the deceased had been done to death by some person or persons. All the elements of the charge under S. 201 had thus been proved to the hilt against him. Kodali Purnachandra Rao v. Public Prosecutor, (1975) 2 SCC 570: 1975 SCC (Cri) 678: AIR 1975 SC 1925: 1975 Cri LJ 1671.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, P.N. Bhagwati and R.S. Sarkaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-9-1975]

[2108] — S. 174 — Non-mention of names of eyewitnesses in inquest report — Held, would not render their testimony unreliable (Para 8). Khujji v. State of M.P., (1991) 3 SCC 627: 1991 SCC (Cri) 916: AIR 1991 SC 1853: 1991 Cri LJ 2653.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, V. Ramaswami and K. Ramaswamy, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-7-1991]

Pedda Narayana v. State of A.P., (1975) 4 SCC 153: 1975 SCC (Cri) 427, followed

[2109] — S. 174 — Inquest report — Truthfulness of — When doubtful

It is then noticed by the High Court that even the inquest report has been specially prepared to show the presence of PW 1 at the place of occurrence, when the investigating officer visited the spot. But PW 1, in his cross-examination, stated that after handing over the written report to the Head Constable at the police station, he went to sleep and did not know what happened after that. This report was handed over to the Head Constable at 5.20 p.m. He woke up only at about 9-10 p.m. By that time, the investigating officer had returned to the police station. He did not know whether the investigating officer had gone to the spot on the night of the occurrence. He did not know when or where documents were prepared regarding the dead body. However, he admitted his signature on the inquest report of the deceased R. He also stated that his signature was obtained at the police station. Thus, according to PW 1, he never went to the spot during the night after reporting the crime. On the other hand, the investigating officer stated that he was present at the spot between 9-10 p.m. Thus, according to the High Court, the investigating officer has been over enthusiastic to ensure the presence of PW 1, which was, to say the least, doubtful. (Para 29). State of U.P. v. Guru Charan, (2010) 3 SCC 721.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision : 23-2-2010]

[2110] — S. 174 — Rape and murder of a minor girl — Accused only admitting to have gone the house of the victim and denying the prosecution case of taking the girl away with him — Inquest report not mentioning the circumstance of the deceased having been last seen in the company of the accused — Held on facts circumstance not proved. Jaharlal Das v. State of Orissa, (1991) 3 SCC 27: 1991 SCC (Cri) 527: AIR 1991 SC 1388: (1991) 2 Crimes 268: (1991) 72 CLT 298.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-4-1991]

[2111] — S. 174 — Recovery of dead body at the instance of the accused — Circumstance not mentioned in inquest report — No panchnama prepared for the recovery made under S. 27, Evidence Act — No evidence showing that accused was present near the place where dead body was found — Though father of the victim and the investigating officer deposing about the circumstance of the recovery, their testimony contradictory and unacceptable — Held on facts, the circumstance not established. Jaharlal Das v. State of Orissa, (1991) 3 SCC 27: 1991 SCC (Cri) 527: AIR 1991 SC 1388: (1991) 2 Crimes 268: (1991) 72 CLT 298.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-4-1991]

[2112] — Ss. 174 and 162 — Inquest report — Non-mention of name of eyewitness in — Effect — Practice in Punjab to record brief facts of the case in the inquest report — Verbatim quoting of the FIR which did not mention the names of the witnesses — Hence question of inclusion of name of any witness in the inquest report did not arise — That apart statement made to the IO while conducting the inquest is hit by S. 162 — Such a statement can only be utilised for contradicting the witness in the manner provided under S. 145 Evidence Act — Evidence Act, 1872 — S. 145. Babu Singh v. State of Punjab, (1996) 8 SCC 699: 1996 SCC (Cri) 730: AIR 1996 SC 3250.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Faizan Uddin and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-4-1996]

[2113] — S. 174 — Non-examination of investigating officer (IO) — Effect — But IO had only conducted the inquest — Inquest report was exhibited without any objection and there was no challenge to correctness of the report — Held, non-examination of IO did not corrode credibility of prosecution version (Para 15). Bihari Rai v. State of Bihar, (2008) 15 SCC 778: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1209: AIR 2009 SC 18: 2009 Cri LJ 340: (2008) 71 AIC 156 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-9-2008]

Raj Pal v. State of Haryana, (2006) 9 SCC 678: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 361, relied on [2114] — Ss. 174 and 162 — Inquest report — Held, could not be used to contradict the prosecution witnesses to whom the dying declaration was made by the deceased — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 145 & 157 and 32. George v. State of Kerala, (1998) 4 SCC 605: AIR 1998 SC 1376: 1998 Cri LJ 2034.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-3-1998]

[2115] — Ss. 174(1) and 162 — Statements in inquest report as to what the IO saw and found admissible — But statements therein on the basis of what IO heard from others, held, would be hit by S. 162

Statements contained in an inquest report, to the extent they relate to what the IO saw and found are admissible but any statement made therein on the basis of what he heard from others, would be hit by Section 162 CrPC. George v. State of Kerala, (1998) 4 SCC 605: AIR 1998 SC 1376: 1998 Cri LJ 2034.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-3-1998]

— S. 175 See Ss. 162, 174 and 175

> — S. 176 See also S. 176, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 1041 in Vol. 2

[2116] — S. 176 — Inquiry into cause of death under, to be made independently by Magistrate and not jointly with the police — More so when the conduct of the police is the matter of enquiry — Joint inquiry by Executive Magistrate and Circle Inspector of Police was impermissible under S. 176

Per Verma and Venkatachala, JJ.

An inquiry under S. 176 CrPC is contemplated independently by a Magistrate and not jointly with a police officer when the role of the police officers itself is a matter of inquiry. Therefore, the joint inquiry report in this case cannot be said to have been made under S. 176 CrPC and cannot be relied on as a statutory report relating to the cause of death. Nilabati Behera v. State of Orissa, (1993) 2 SCC 746: 1993 SCC (Cri) 527: AIR 1993 SC 1960: 1993 Cri LJ 2899: (1993) 76 CLT 98: 1993 ACJ 787.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: J.S. Verma[1], Dr. A.S. Anand[2] and N. Venkatachala, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-3-1993]

[2117] — S. 176 — Custodial violence — Requirements to be followed in all cases of arrest or detention laid down in D.K. Basu case — Assessment of extent of compliance with, sought by learned Amicus — Almost all the States and Union Territories filing affidavits indicating implementation of those requirements — Learned Amicus submitting to suggest for further monitoring of the case by some other agencies to save the time of the Supreme Court — Time granted for filing suggestions — In the meanwhile, direction issued to States and Union Territories to issue instructions to agencies concerned for completing the inquiry by Magistrates into causes of custodial death within 4 months — Constitution of India — Arts. 21 and 22 (Paras 1 and 2). Dilip K. Basu v. State of W.B., (2003) 11 SCC 725.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti and P. Venkatarama Reddi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2001]

D.K. Basu v. State of W.B., (1997) 1 SCC 416: 1997 SCC (Cri) 92, followed

[2118] — S. 176 — Custodial death — High Court monitoring investigation — High Court taking strong exception to a parallel enquiry and report by Magistrate under S. 176 CrPC — By impugned order High Court staying further action on said report under S. 176 during pendency of writ petition filed by appellant mother of alleged victim — High Court also making observations on Magistrate's report prior to conclusion of its own probe and also directing an enquiry into causes of said parallel inquiry by Magistrate — Interference with stay on parallel inquiry and report, held, unwarranted — But said observations and directions for enquiry against report of Magistrate set aside and expeditious disposal directed — Constitution of India — Arts. 136 and 21

No interference is warranted in exercise of jurisdiction under Article 136. Notwithstanding the various observations made in the impugned order of the Single Judge of the High Court, the fact remains that the impugned order is ad interim in its nature. It stayed the report dated 7-9-2009 submitted by the Magistrate. The effect of the order passed by the Single Judge is that the operation of the report is kept in abeyance and therefore no further action based on the said report could be initiated in whatsoever manner. (Paras 12 and 11)

However, the observations made in the impugned order with regard to the report of the Magistrate are set aside which are totally unnecessary. The direction issued to the Registrar General to make a detailed inquiry into the matter which led to holding of inquiry by the Magistrate under Section 176 CrPC is also set aside. The observations so made if allowed to remain may result in far-reaching consequences. The Single Judge should not have made such observations while the very application filed by the State is kept pending for its adjudication. (Paras 12 and 13)

In the circumstances it would be appropriate to request the Chief Justice of the High Court to place Special Miscellaneous Application No. 822 of 2004 along with criminal miscellaneous applications including Criminal Miscellaneous Application No. 10625 of 2009 filed by the State of Gujarat for their disposal in accordance with law as expeditiously as possible preferably within six months. The Division Bench shall consider the very maintainability of the criminal miscellaneous application filed by the State of Gujarat without being influenced by the observations made. (Para 13)

In view of the final orders passed in the criminal appeals no further order is required to be passed in the impleadment application in criminal appeal arising out of SLP (Crl.) No. 7305 of 2009. The application shall accordingly stand dismissed with liberty granted to the applicant to avail such remedies as may be available in law. (Para 14). Shamima Kauser v. Union of India, (2010) 6 SCC 662.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision : 19-4-2010]

[2119] — S. 176 — Assault on prisoners and undertrials, by Munshi Kedis (criminals allegedly authorised to supervise the movement of prisoners) — Interim3 order — Prisoner dying due to injuries received during beating by "Munshi Kedis" in the jail — No legal sanction for appointment of such Munshi Kedis shown by the Government — Magistrate, holding inquest, recommending the system of Munshi Kedis to be reviewed — Neither the report of the Magistrate nor the directions of the Government given pursuant to that report, filed before Supreme Court — In such circumstances, IG (Prisons) directed to file an affidavit personally indicating as to under what authority "Munshi Kedis" were working in the jail and the action taken to prevent such events — Constitution of India — Art. 21. Watchdogs International v. Union of India, (1998) 8 SCC 338: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1525.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-9-1997]

[2120] — S. 176 — Custodial death/violence — Expeditious disposal directed — Custodial violence — Constitution of India — Arts. 226 and 21 (Paras 11 to 13)

No interference is warranted in exercise of jurisdiction under Article 136. Notwithstanding the various observations made in the impugned order of the Single Judge of the High Court, the fact remains that the impugned order is ad interim in its nature. It stayed the report dated 7-9-2009 submitted by the Magistrate. The effect of the order passed by the Single Judge is that the operation of the report is kept in abeyance and therefore no further action based on the said report could be initiated in whatsoever manner. (Paras 12 and 11)

However, the observations made in the impugned order with regard to the report of the Magistrate are set aside which are totally unnecessary. The direction issued to the Registrar General to make a detailed inquiry into the matter which led to holding of inquiry by the Magistrate under Section 176 CrPC is also set aside. The observations so made if allowed to remain may result in far-reaching consequences. The Single Judge should not have made such observations while the very application filed by the State is kept pending for its adjudication. (Paras 12 and 13)

In the circumstances it would be appropriate to request the Chief Justice of the High Court to place Special Miscellaneous Application No. 822 of 2004 along with criminal miscellaneous applications including Criminal Miscellaneous Application No. 10625 of 2009 filed by the State of Gujarat for their disposal in accordance with law as expeditiously as possible preferably within six months. The Division Bench shall consider the very maintainability of the criminal miscellaneous application filed by the State of Gujarat without being influenced by the observations made. (Para 13). Shamima Kauser v. Union of India, (2010) 6 SCC 662.

Bench Strength 2. Coram : B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision : 19-4-2010]

[2121] — S. 176 — Appreciation of evidence — Dowry death — Causing death of a housewife by strangulation in her in-laws' house — Prosecution case against A-1 and A-3 (father-in-law and mother-in-law of deceased) fully established by evidence of PW 4 — Non-mentioning name of A-3 by PW 3 in his statement made to Tahsildar while he was holding inquiry under S. 176 CrPC, held, cannot be the sole basis for discarding the evidence of

PW 3 in toto — Conviction of A-1 and A-3 under Ss. 302/34 upheld — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/34 and 498-A (Para 6). Asokan v. State, (2000) 4 SCC 68: 2000 SCC (Cri) 749: AIR 2000 SC 3444: 2000 Cri LJ 2988.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and Shivaraj V. Patil, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-2000]

[2122] — S. 176 — Contents of certified copy of statement recorded under — Held, not admissible in evidence — It has to be proved like any other previous statement — Evidence Act, 1872 — Ss. 145, 157 and 80

The contents of a certified copy of the statement recorded under S. 176 of the Code would not be admissible in evidence unless the contradiction is proved by putting it to the witness in cross-examination and the maker has had an opportunity to admit or deny it. It has to be proved like any other previous statement. Gauri Shanker Sharma v. State of U.P., 1990 Supp SCC 656: AIR 1990 SC 709: (1990) 1 Crimes 196.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-1-1990]

— S. 176(1-A) See Ss. 154 and 176(1-A)

[2123] — S. 176(3) — Shifting of graves — Muslim graves coming up unauthorisedly and illegally on others' land can be shifted in the larger interest of society for maintaining public order — Such an action would not be un-Islamic and violative of Arts. 25 and 26 — Constitution of India — Arts. 25 and 26. Abdul Jalil v. State of U.P., (1984) 2 SCC 138: 1984 SCC (Cri) 169: AIR 1984 SC 882.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.D. Tulzapurkar, D.A. Desai and A.P. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-2-1984]

Gulam Abbas v. State of U.P., (1982) 1 SCC 71: 1982 SCC (Cri) 82 and Gulam Abbas v. State of U.P., (1984) 1 SCC 81: 1984 SCC (Cri) 35, affirmed

[2124] — Ss. 176(3) and 144 — Directions for physical changes to properties connected with religion pursuant to recommendations of a committee to avoid perennial problem of clashes between two religious communities or sects, held, would not offend their religious rights being in the interest of public order — Shifting of graves where necessary to maintain public order would be constitutional and not an irreligious action — Constitution of India — Arts. 25 and 26

The exercise of fundamental rights under Arts. 25 and 26 is not absolute but must yield or give way to maintenance of public order and the impugned suggestion was mooted by the Court and has now been found to be feasible by the Chairman of the Committee in the larger interest of the society for the purpose of maintaining public order on every occasion of the performance of religious ceremonies and function by members of both the sects. If the Court finds the implementation of the suggestion to be eminently fit in the interest of maintenance of public order consent of either party would be immaterial.

Though the Shariat Law is against the shifting of graves but the religious rights of every person and every religious denomination are subject to "public order", the maintenance whereof is paramount in the larger interest of the society. The exigencies of public order provide the requisite justification for the order for shifting of the graves. The ecclesiastical edict or right not to disturb an interred corpse is not absolute as shown by S. 176(3), Cr PC which permits its exhumation for the purpose of crime detection, a provision applicable to all irrespective of the personal law governing the dead. Gulam Abbas v. State of U.P., (1984) 1 SCC 81: 1984 SCC (Cri) 35: AIR 1983 SC 1268.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.D. Tulzapurkar, D.A. Desai and A.P. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-9-1983]

— Ch. XIII (Ss. 177 to 189) See S. 4 and Chapters VII, XIII & XXXIV

— S. 177 See also S. 177, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 1041 et seq. in Vol. 2

— S. 177 See Ss. 11, 13, 14, 18, 177 to 181, 190 and Ch. XXXI

See also Ss. 154, 156 and 162, 177, 178
See also Ss. 154, 156, 177 and 178
See also S. 156 and Ss. 177, 178 & 181
See also Ss. 176, 177, 166-B, 188 and 190
See also Ss. 178(c) and 177, 162
See also Ss. 178(c) & 177 and 406
See also S. 178(d), 177 and 179
See also Ss. 178(d), 177, 179 and 482
See also Ss. 190, 193, 179 and 177
See also Ss. 228, 197 and 177
See also Ss. 406 and 177
See also Ss. 406, 177, 178 and 156
See also Ss. 406, 407 and 177
See also Ss. 407 and 177
See also Ss. 482, 177 and 178

[2125] — S. 177 — Ordinary place of enquiry and trial — Complaint filed in Sri Ganganagar (State of Rajasthan) against appellants; challan filed in Court of ACJM, Sri Ganganagar, and charges framed for offences under Ss. 498-A and 406 IPC — Complaint disclosing that complainant had left the place where she was residing with her husband and in-laws and was now residing in Sri Ganganagar and that all the alleged acts as per the complaint had taken place in the State of Punjab — Held, on the basis of the factual scenario disclosed by the complainant in the complaint, the inevitable conclusion is that no part of cause of action arose in Rajasthan and, therefore, the Magistrate concerned has no jurisdiction to deal with the matter — Hence, proceedings before ACJM, Sri Ganganagar quashed and complaint returned to complainant granting her liberty to file the same in appropriate court to deal with in accordance with law (Paras 2, 5 and 6). Bhura Ram v. State of Rajasthan, (2008) 11 SCC 103: AIR 2008 SC 2666: 2008 Cri LJ 3494.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.P. Naolekar and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-4-2008]

Y. Abraham Ajith v. Inspector of Police, (2004) 8 SCC 100: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2134, relied on

[2126] — S. 177 — Place of enquiry and trial — "Ordinarily" — Meaning and import of the word

The use of the word "ordinarily" indicates that the provision is a general one and must be read subject to the special provisions contained in the Criminal Procedure Code. That apart, the exceptions implied by the word "ordinarily" need not be limited to those specially provided for by the law and exceptions may be provided by law on considerations of convenience or may be implied from other provisions of law permitting joint trial of offences by the same court. (Para 4). Mohan Baitha v. State of Bihar, (2001) 4 SCC 350: 2001 SCC (Cri) 710: AIR 2001 SC 1490.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-3-2001]

Purushottamdas Dalmia v. State of W.B., AIR 1961 SC 1589: (1961) 2 Cri LJ 728: (1962) 2 SCR 101; L.N. Mukherjee v. State of Madras, AIR 1961 SC 1601: (1961) 2 Cri LJ 736: (1962) 2 SCR 116; Banwarilal Jhunjhunwala v. Union of India, AIR 1963 SC 1620: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 529: 1963 Supp (2) SCR 338, relied on

[2127] — Ss. 177 and 178 — Place of inquiry and trial — "Ordinarily" — Meaning and import of — Every offence shall ordinarily be inquired into and tried by a court within whose local jurisdiction it was committed, held, is the general rule — However, the said rule is subject to several exceptions — No such exception applicable to the case at hand — Held, the Magistrate concerned had no jurisdiction to deal with the matter as no part of cause of action for initiation of proceedings against accused arose within his local jurisdiction

Section 177 CrPC reiterates the well-established common-law rule referred to in Halsbury's Laws of England that the proper and ordinary venue for the trial of a crime is the area of jurisdiction in which, on the evidence, the facts occur and which are alleged to constitute the crime. There are several exceptions to this general rule and some of them are, so far as the present case is concerned, indicated in Section 178 CrPC. A significant word used in Section 177 is "ordinarily". Use of the word indicates that the provision is a general one and must be read subject to the special provisions contained in CrPC. No such exception is applicable to the case at hand. (Paras 8 and 9)

In the instant case, the complainant herself left the house of the husband on 15-4-1997 on account of alleged dowry demands by the husband and his relations. There is thereafter not even a whisper of allegations about any demand of dowry or commission of any act constituting an offence much less at place C. That being so, the logic of Section 178(c) CrPC relating to continuance of the offences cannot be applied. (Para 11)

The crucial question is whether any part of the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of the court concerned. In terms of Section 177 CrPC, it is the place where the offence was committed. In essence it is the cause of action for initiation of the proceedings against the accused. (Para 12). Y. Abraham Ajith v. Inspector of Police, (2004) 8 SCC 100: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2134: AIR 2004 SC 4286.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-8-2004]

State of Bihar v. Deokaran Nenshi, (1972) 2 SCC 890: 1973 SCC (Cri) 114, relied on

Sujata Mukherjee v. Prashant Kumar Mukherjee, (1997) 5 SCC 30: 1997 SCC (Cri) 673, distinguished on facts

[2128] — Ss. 177, 178, 156 and 190 — Territorial jurisdiction — Determination of — Investigation to elicit the facts necessary for — Permissibility of

The appellant had taken a loan from a cooperative Bank which had its business operations in the States of Gujarat, Maharashtra and other States. The Bank filed criminal complaints against the appellant in Ahmedabad in the State of Gujarat. The Magistrate issued a direction under Section 156(3) CrPC to the Economic Offences Wing, CID (Crime), Ahmedabad to conduct an investigation against the appellant. The police however filed a report that the alleged offences were committed in the State of Maharashtra inasmuch as the loan was taken by the appellant from a branch of the cooperative Bank which was situated and registered in Maharashtra, and therefore the Gujarat police did not have territorial jurisdiction to conduct investigation. It was further prayed that the competent agency to conduct the investigation was Maharashtra police. It was however on record that the appellant had applied for a loan to the Head Office of the cooperative Bank in Gujarat and loan was sanctioned by the Head Office.

The High Court held that police in Ahmedabad could not refuse to conduct investigation on the ground that it did not have territorial jurisdiction contending that the cause of action had arisen in Maharashtra.

Affirming the judgment of the High Court and dismissing the appeal,

Held :

It was not within the jurisdiction of investigating agency to refrain itself from holding a proper and complete investigation merely upon arriving at a conclusion that the offences had been committed beyond its territorial jurisdiction. The material before the Magistrate indicates that a major part of loan transaction had, in fact, taken place in the State of Gujarat and that having regard to provisions of Section 156(2) CrPC, proceedings of investigation could not be questioned on the ground of jurisdiction of the officer to conduct such investigation. It was open to the Magistrate to direct an investigation under Section 156(3) CrPC without taking cognizance on complaint and where an investigation is undertaken at the instance of the Magistrate, a police officer empowered under Section 156(1) is bound, except in specific and especially exceptional cases, to conduct such an investigation even if he was of the view that he did not have jurisdiction to investigate the matter. (Paras 27 and 28)

A complaint made in a criminal case follows the place where the cause arises, but the distinguishing feature in the instant case is that the stage of taking cognizance was yet to arrive. The investigating agency was required to place facts elicited during investigation before the court in order to enable the court to come to a conclusion as to whether it had jurisdiction to entertain the complaint or not. Without conducting such an investigation, it was improper on the part of investigating agency to forward its report with the observation that since the entire cause of action for the alleged offence had purportedly arisen in the city of Mumbai within the State of Maharashtra, the investigation should be transferred to the police station concerned in Mumbai. (Para 30)

Section 156(3) contemplates a stage where the Magistrate is not convinced as to whether process should issue on the facts disclosed in the complaint. Once the facts are received, it is for the Magistrate to decide his next course of action. In this case, there are materials to show that the appellant had filed his application for a loan with the Head Office of the Bank at Ahmedabad and that processing and sanction of loan was also done in Ahmedabad, which clearly indicates that a major part of the cause of action for complaints arose within the jurisdiction of the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Ahmedabad. It was not, therefore, desirable on the part of the investigating agency to make an observation that it did not have territorial jurisdiction to proceed with the investigation, and which was required to be transferred to the police station having jurisdiction to do so. (Paras 31 and 33). Rasiklal Dalpatram Thakkar v. State of Gujarat, (2010) 1 SCC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-11-2009]

Agencia Commercial International Ltd. v. Custodian of the Branches of Banco Nacional Ultramarino, (1982) 2 SCC 482; Satvinder Kaur v. State (NCT of Delhi), (1999) 8 SCC 728: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1503; Naresh Kavarchand Khatri v. State of Gujarat, (2008) 8 SCC 300: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 614; Asit Bhattacharjee v. Hanuman Prasad Ojha, (2007) 5 SCC 786: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 31, distinguished on facts

[2129] — Ss. 177 and 178 — Place of inquiry and trial — Factors required for consideration thereof — Dependence on fact situation in each case — Relevance of penal provisions under which accused charged — S. 178, when attracted — Held, word "ordinarily" occurring in S. 177 must be given its natural meaning — Provisions contained in S. 178 and other provisions would be attracted when S. 177 cannot be given effect to — These provisions in CrPC governing the field emanate from the doctrine that all crimes are local — Investigation into a crime, witnesses who are required to be examined for the purpose of proving commission thereof and other relevant factors which are required to be taken for consideration thereof lead to aforementioned inference — For the purpose of finding out the place, where inquiry or trial should be conducted, would be that the offence has taken place wholly or partly in the jurisdiction of one police station or wholly or partly in the jurisdiction of another police station and thus, would depend upon the fact situation obtaining in each case — Provisions of Penal Code, 1860 under which accused is charged will also play an important role (Paras 11 and 12). Premkumar v. State of Kerala, (2008) 17 SCC 264: (2009) 75 AIC 12 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-12-2008]

Y. Abraham Ajith v. Inspector of Police, (2004) 8 SCC 100: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2134; Asit Bhattacharjee v. Hanuman Prasad Ojha, (2007) 5 SCC 786: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 31; Naresh Kavarchand Khatri v. State of Gujarat, (2008) 8 SCC 300: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 614, relied on

Vidhya Devi v. State of Haryana, (2004) 9 SCC 476: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1473, considered

[2130] — Ss. 177 and 178 — Territorial jurisdiction of a court regarding criminal offence — Determination of — Held, the same would be decided on the basis of place of occurrence of the incident and not on the basis of where complaint was filed — Mere fact that FIR was registered in a particular State is not the sole criterion to decide that no cause of action has arisen even partly within the territorial limits of jurisdiction of another court — Venue of enquiry or trial is primarily to be determined by the averments contained in complaint or charge-sheet (Para 19). Rajendra Ramchandra Kavalekar v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 11 SCC 286: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1330: AIR 2009 SC 1792: (2009) 2 ECrN 1277 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 1592.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-1-2009]

Navinchandra N. Majithia v. State of Maharashtra, (2000) 7 SCC 640: 2001 SCC (Cri) 215; Asit Bhattacharjee v. Hanuman Prasad Ojha, (2007) 5 SCC 786: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 31, relied on [2131] — Ss. 177 & 178 and 482 — Proper place of inquiry and trial — Ascertainment of — Plea for quashing criminal proceeding — Tenability of — In present case, appellant securing job through fake/forged degree certificates — Allegation on appellant for obtaining such certificates by entering into criminal conspiracy — Criminal proceedings against appellant pending in State J — Part of cause of action allegedly arising in another State M — High Court of State M rejecting appellant's writ for quashing the proceedings on the ground that court of J was seized of the matter with all papers and documents pertaining to the case in custody and possession of the said court — Sustainability — Held, bare perusal of complaint filed clearly showed that cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of court at R in State J*, investigation was completed in* R*, all the records and the documents pertaining to the complaint and charge-sheet were before court at* R — Therefore, High Court was perfectly justified in declining to entertain the writ filed by appellant — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 120-B, 420, 467, 468 and 471 — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 13(2) r/w S. 13(1)(d) (Paras 2, 3, 16 and 22 to 26). Rajendra Ramchandra Kavalekar v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 11 SCC 286: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1330: AIR 2009 SC 1792: (2009) 2 ECrN 1277 (SC): 2009 Cri LJ 1592.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-1-2009]

Banwarilal Jhunjhunwala v. Union of India, AIR 1963 SC 1620, relied on

[2132] — Ss. 177 to 186 — "Cause of action" — Meaning of — Use of the said expression in civil and criminal cases — Difference between, if any — CPC, 1908, Or. 7 R. 1(e)

While in civil cases, normally the expression "cause of action" is used, in criminal cases as stated in Section 177 CrPC, reference is to the local jurisdiction where the offence is committed. These variations in etymological expression do not really make the position different. (Para 13)

The expression "cause of action" is generally understood to mean a situation or state of facts that entitles a party to maintain an action in a court or a tribunal; a group of operative facts giving rise to one or more bases for sitting; a factual situation that entitles one person to obtain a remedy in court from another person. Thus, it consists of a bundle of facts, which give cause to enforce the legal inquiry for redress in a court of law. It must include some act done by the latter since in the absence of such an act no cause of action would possibly accrue or would arise. In the restricted sense cause of action means the circumstances forming the infraction of the right or the immediate occasion for the action. In the wider sense, it means the necessary conditions for the maintenance of the proceeding including not only the alleged infraction, but also the infraction coupled with the right itself. Compendiously, the expression means every fact, which it would be necessary for the complainant to prove, if traversed, in order to support his right or grievance to the judgment of the court. Every fact, which is necessary to be proved, as distinguished from every piece of evidence, which is necessary to prove such fact, comprises in "cause of action". (Paras 17, 14 and 15). Y. Abraham Ajith v. Inspector of Police, (2004) 8 SCC 100: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2134: AIR 2004 SC 4286.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-8-2004]

Black's Law Dictionary; Halsbury's Laws of England (4th Edn.); Words and Phrases, (4th Edn.), referred to

[2133] — Ss. 177, 178, 482, 156, 162 and 154 — Quashing of FIR on ground of lack of territorial jurisdiction of police to investigate the offence improper — Police Officer competent to investigate any cognizable offence — However, the IO can forward the case to the police station having territorial jurisdiction if he comes to the conclusion that the crime was committed beyond his territorial jurisdiction — But this would not mean that in a case which requires investigation, the police officer can refuse to record the FIR and/or investigate it

The appellant wife was married to the respondent on 9-12-1990. Her parents were residents of

Delhi and the marriage was performed at Delhi. A daughter was born on 19-12-1991. It is her contention that on 19-1-1992, she was thrown out from the matrimonial home in Patiala within 4 weeks of the birth of baby girl and that at that time, she had only wearing apparel. On the same day complaint was lodged by her at PS Kotwali, Patiala making various allegations of torture and dowry demand against her husband and parents-in-law. Thereafter, she came to Delhi to live with her parents. Within that time also, threats by her husband continued. On 30-4-1992, a complaint was lodged against her husband in the Women's Cell, Delhi. Subsequently, on 23-1-1993 the impugned FIR under Sections 406 and 498-A IPC for the alleged occurrence at Patiala was lodged at Police Station Paschim Vihar, New Delhi. Thereafter, the Respondent filed petition in the Delhi High Court under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the FIR. The High Court arrived at the conclusion by appreciating the allegations made by the parties that the SHO, Police Station Paschim Vihar, New Delhi was not having territorial jurisdiction to entertain and investigate the FIR lodged by the appellant because the alleged dowry items were entrusted to the respondent at Patiala and that the alleged cause of action for the offence punishable under Section 498-A Indian Penal Code arose at Patiala. Reversing the judgment of the High Court

Held :

The findings given by the High Court are, on the face of it, illegal and erroneous because:

(1) The SHO has statutory authority under Section 156 CrPC to investigate any cognizable case for which an FIR is lodged.

(2) At the stage of investigation, there is no question of interference under Section 482 CrPC on the ground that the investigating officer has no territorial jurisdiction.

(3) After investigation is over, if the investigating officer arrives at the conclusion that the cause of action for lodging the FIR has not arisen within his territorial jurisdiction, then he is required to submit a report accordingly under Section 170 CrPC and to forward the case to the Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence. (Para 8)

It is true that territorial jurisdiction also is prescribed under sub-section (1) of Section 156 to the extent that the officer can investigate any cognizable case which a court having jurisdiction over the local area within the limits of such police station would have power to enquire into or try under the provisions of Chapter XIII. However, sub-section (2) of Section 156 makes the position clear by providing that no proceeding of a police officer in any such case shall at any stage be called in question on the ground that the case was one which such officer was not empowered to investigate. After investigation is completed, the result of such investigation is required to be submitted as provided under Sections 168, 169 and 170. Section 170 specifically provides that if, upon an investigation, it appears to the officer in charge of the police station that there is sufficient evidence or reasonable ground of suspicion to justify the forwarding of the accused to a Magistrate, such officer shall forward the accused under custody to a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence upon a police report and to try the accused or commit for trial. Further, if the investigating officer arrives at the conclusion that the crime was not committed within the territorial jurisdiction of the police station, then FIR can be forwarded to the police station having jurisdiction over the area in which the crime is committed. But this would not mean that in a case which requires investigation, the police officer can refuse to record the FIR and/or investigate it. (Para 10)

A reading of Sections 177 and 178 CrPC would make it clear that Section 177 provides for "ordinary" place of enquiry or trial. Section 178, inter alia, provides for place of enquiry or trial when it is uncertain in which of several local areas an offence was committed or where the offence was committed partly in one local area and partly in another and where it consisted of several acts done in different local areas, it could be enquired into or tried by a court having jurisdiction over any of such local areas. Hence, at the stage of investigation, it cannot be held that the SHO does not have territorial jurisdiction to investigate the crime. (Para 12)

In the present case, the High Court committed a grave error in accepting the contention of the respondent that the investigating officer had no jurisdiction to investigate the matters on the alleged ground that no part of the offence was committed within the territorial jurisdiction of the police station at Delhi. The appreciation of the evidence is the function of the courts when seized of the matter. At the stage of investigation, the material collected by an investigating officer cannot be judicially scrutinized for arriving at a conclusion that the police station officer of a particular police station would not have territorial jurisdiction. In any case, it has to be stated that in view of Section 178(c) CrPC, when it is uncertain in which of the several local areas an offence was committed, or where it consists of several acts done in different local areas, the said offence can be enquired into or tried by a court having jurisdiction over any of such local areas. Therefore, to say at the stage of investigation that the SHO, Police Station Paschim Vihar, New Delhi was not having territorial jurisdiction, is on the face of it, illegal and erroneous. That apart, Section 156(2) contains an embargo that no proceeding of a police officer shall be challenged on the ground that he has no territorial power to investigate. The High Court has completely overlooked the said embargo when it entertained the petition of Respondent 2 on the ground of want of territorial jurisdiction. (Para 15). Satvinder Kaur v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (1999) 8 SCC 728: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1503: AIR 1999 SC 3596.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-10-1999]

State of W.B. v. S.N. Basak, AIR 1963 SC 447: (1963) 2 SCR 52; State of W.B. v. Swapan Kumar Guha, (1982) 1 SCC 561: 1982 SCC (Cri) 283; Pratibha Rani v. Suraj Kumar, (1985) 2 SCC 370, 395: 1985 SCC (Cri) 180; State of Kerala v. O.C. Kuttan, (1999) 2 SCC 651: 1999 SCC (Cri) 304, followed

Rajinder Singh v. State, (1999) 1 Crimes 271 (Del), reversed

[2134] — Ss. 177 to 187 — Jurisdiction — Criminal proceedings relating to same offence cannot be continued in parallel in more than one criminal court

In view of the facts and circumstances of the case, the criminal case instituted in the Court of ACJM, Karnal should not continue since the case relating to the same incident is pending in the Sessions Court at Delhi and the same will continue in accordance with law. (Para 6). Sukhjinder Singh v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2001) 8 SCC 630: 2002 SCC (Cri) 11: AIR 2001 SC 2941.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and Shivaraj V. Patil, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-10-2001]

[2135] — Ss. 177, 178, 181 and 156 — Jurisdiction of criminal courts in inquiries and trials — Power to transfer investigation — Held, whether an officer in charge of a police station has the requisite jurisdiction to make investigation or not will depend upon a large number of factors including those contained in Ss. 177, 178 and 181 CrPC — In a case where a trial can be held in any of the places falling within the purview of the aforementioned provisions, investigation can be conducted by the officer in charge of the police station concerned which has jurisdiction to investigate in relation thereto (Para 8). Naresh Kavarchand Khatri v. State of Gujarat, (2008) 8 SCC 300: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 614: AIR 2008 SC 2180: (2008) 2 KLT 747.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-2008]

[2136] — Ss. 177, 190 and 173 — Monitoring of case by Supreme Court — Scope — Fodder Scam cases — Per Lakshmanan, J., once a charge-sheet is filed in the competent court after completion of the investigation, process of monitoring by Supreme Court comes to an end thereafter — It is only the court in which charge-sheet is filed which is to deal with all matters relating to the trial of the accused — Constitution of India — Art. 32

Per Lakshmanan, J.

Once a charge-sheet is filed in the competent court after completion of the investigation, the process of monitoring by the Supreme Court for the purpose of making CBI and other investigative agencies concerned perform their function of investigating into the offences concerned comes to an end and thereafter it is only the court in which the charge-sheet is filed which is to deal with all matters relating to the trial of the accused including matters falling within the scope of Section 173(8). Monitoring of the pending trial is subversion of criminal law as it stands to mean that the court behind the back of the accused is entering into a dialogue with the investigating agency. Therefore, there can be no monitoring, after the charge-sheet is filed. (Paras 37 and 38). Rajiv Ranjan Singh 'Lalan' (VIII) v. Union of India, (2006) 6 SCC 613: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 125.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan[1], Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan[2] and S.H. Kapadia[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 21-8-2006]

Union of India v. Sushil Kumar Modi, (1998) 8 SCC 661: 1999 SCC (Cri) 84, followed

[2137] — Ss. 177 and 173 — Officer (Legal Remembrancer) who had given opinion to submit a police report in favour of the accused, later on becoming CJM should not entertain report submitted by police recommending discharge of the accused (Para 26). Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059: AIR 1996 SC 309.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and M.K. Mukherjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-1995]

[2138] — Ss. 177, 166-B, 188 and 190 — Magisterial inquiry under Extradition Act, 1962 — Central Govt. can direct any magistrate having jurisdiction to inquire into the offence and not bound to direct only the magistrate in whose territorial jurisdiction the fugitive was arrested — S. 5 overrides Ss. 177, 188 and 190 CrPC — Magistrate directed to record evidence and send his report to Govt. of India — Extradition Act, 1962 — Ss. 5 and 2(d)

George Kutty Kuncheria, an Indian national, was wanted in the United States of America to stand trial for violation of Federal Fraud Statutes and related offences. He was alleged to have defrauded and embezzled from the Chase Manhattan Bank in New York more than one million dollars which he transferred to United Arab Emirates. The Embassy of the United States of America in New Delhi sent a letter of request dated September 20, 1988 to the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, for the extradition of George to the United States. The Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, in exercise of its powers under S. 5 of the Extradition Act, 1962 passed an order dated December 5, 1988 requesting the Additional Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Patiala House, New Delhi, to conduct an inquiry into the matter under the Act. Rosiline, wife of George, challenged the extradition proceedings by way of a writ petition before the Delhi High Court. The writ petition was dismissed by a Division Bench of the High Court by its judgment dated December 14, 1990. The two appeals by way of special leave were filed by Rosiline and George, against the judgment of the Delhi High Court. The writ petition under Art. 32 of the Constitution of India was filed by George challenging the extradition proceedings on various grounds.

Dismissing the appeals and writ petition,

Held :

Under S. 5 of the Extradition Act, 1962 the Central Government can direct any Magistrate to hold inquiry provided the said Magistrate would have had jurisdiction to inquire into the offence if it had been an offence committed within the local limits of his jurisdiction. In the present case the offence alleged in the letter of request by the United States of America to have been committed by the fugitive would, if committed in the local limits of the Magistrate, have given the Magistrate jurisdiction to inquire into the same. The Act, being a special provision dealing with the extradition of fugitive criminals, shall exclude from application the general provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973. In any case, S. 5 of the said code gives overriding effect to the special jurisdiction created under any special or local laws. Sections 177, 188 and 190 of the Code have no application to the proceedings under the Extradition Act. Rosiline George v. Union of India, (1994) 2 SCC 80: 1994 SCC (Cri) 304: (1993) 2 ALT (Cri) 672: (1994) 1 KLT 36.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and S.P. Bharucha, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-10-1993]

[2139] — Ss. 177 to 184 and 186 to 188 — Expression "cause of action" — Meaning — Question whether the cause of action in the subsequent case is identical with that in the first case — Mode of determination

The expression "cause of action" is generally understood to mean a situation or state of facts that entitles a party to maintain an action in a court or a tribunal; a group of operative facts giving rise to one or more bases of suing; a factual situation that entitles one person to obtain a remedy in court from another person. (Para 14)

"Cause of action" consists of a bundle of facts, which give cause to enforce the legal inquiry for redressal in a court of law. In other words, it is a bundle of facts, which taken with the law applicable to them, gives the plaintiff a right to claim relief against the defendant. It must include some act done by the defendant since in the absence of such an act no cause of action would possibly accrue or would arise. (Para 11)

The expression "cause of action" has acquired a judicially settled meaning. In the restricted sense "cause of action" means the circumstances forming the infraction of the right or the immediate occasion for the reaction. In the wider sense, it means the necessary conditions for the maintenance of the suit, including not only the infraction of the right, but also the infraction coupled with the right itself. Compendiously, the aforesaid expression means every fact, which it would be necessary for the plaintiff to prove, if traversed, in order to support his right to the judgment of the court. Every fact, which is necessary to be proved, as distinguished from every piece of evidence, which is necessary to prove each fact, comprises in "cause of action". (Para 12)

The rule is directed to securing the exhaustion of the relief in respect of a cause of action and not to the inclusion in one and the same action or different causes of action, even though they arise from the same transaction. One great criterion, when the question arises as to whether the cause of action in the subsequent suit is identical with that in the first suit is, whether the same evidence will maintain both actions. (Para 16). Om Prakash Srivastava v. Union of India, (2006) 6 SCC 207: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 24: (2006) 131 DLT 557.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-7-2006]

Black's Law Dictionary; Stroud's Judicial Dictionary; Words and Phrases (4th Edn.); Halsbury's Laws of England (4th Edn.), referred to Navinchandra N. Majithia v. State of Maharashtra, (2000) 7 SCC 640: 2001 SCC (Cri) 215; South East Asia Shipping Co.

Ltd. v. Nav Bharat Enterprises (P) Ltd., (1996) 3 SCC 443; Bloom Dekor Ltd. v. Subhash Himatlal Desai, (1994) 6 SCC 322; Sadanandan Bhadran v. Madhavan Sunil Kumar, (1998) 6 SCC 514: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1471; Rajasthan High Court Advocates' Assn. v. Union of India, (2001) 2 SCC 294; Gurdit Singh v. Munsha Singh, (1977) 1 SCC 791; Payana Reena Saminathan v. Pana Lana Palaniappa, (1913-14) 41 IA 142; Mohd. Khalil Khan v. Mahbub Ali Mian, (1947-48) 75 IA 121: AIR 1949 PC 78, relied on

Applied in Sandeep Polymers (P) Ltd. v. Bajaj Auto Ltd., (2007) 7 SCC 148*

[2140] — S. 177 — "Cause of action" — Meaning of — Existence thereof in a suit — Necessity of, for maintainability of suit — CPC, 1908 — S. 20(c) & Or. 7 Rr. 1(e) & 11(a) and Or. 6 Rr. 2 & 4 — Constitution of India — Art. 226(2)

The expression "cause of action" has neither been defined in the Constitution nor in CPC. It may, however, be described as a bundle of essential facts necessary for the plaintiff to prove before he can succeed. Failure to prove such facts would give the defendant a right to judgment in his favour. Cause of action thus gives occasion for and forms the foundation of the suit. If there is no cause of action, the plaint or petition has to be dismissed. (Paras 20 and 22)

For the purpose of deciding whether facts averred by the appellant-petitioner would or would not constitute a part of cause of action, one has to consider whether such facts constitute a material, essential, or integral part of the cause of action. If it is, it forms a part of cause of action. If it is not, it does not form a part of cause of action. In determining the said question, the substance of the matter and not the form thereof has to be considered. Even if a small fraction of the cause of action arises within the jurisdiction of the court, the court would have territorial jurisdiction to entertain the suit/petition. Nevertheless it must be a "part of cause of action", nothing less than that. (Paras 37 and 25). Alchemist Ltd. v. State Bank of Sikkim, (2007) 11 SCC 335: AIR 2007 SC 1812: (2007) 3 MPLJ 284: (2007) 136 Comp Cas 665: (2007) 4 Mah LJ 586.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-3-2007]

Cooke v. Gill, (1873) 8 CP 107: 42 LJCP 98; Union of India v. Oswal Woollen Mills Ltd., (1984) 2 SCC 646: 1984 SCC (Cri) 348; State of Rajasthan v. Swaika Properties, (1985) 3 SCC 217; ONGC v. Utpal Kumar Basu, (1994) 4 SCC 711; CBI, Anti-Corruption Branch v. Narayan Diwakar, (1999) 4 SCC 656: 1999 SCC (Cri) 619; Union of India v. Adani Exports Ltd., (2002) 1 SCC 567; Kusum Ingots & Alloys Ltd. v. Union of India, (2004) 6 SCC 254; National Textile Corpn. Ltd. v. Haribox Swalram, (2004) 9 SCC 786, relied on

[2141] — S. 177 — "Cause of action" — Meaning of — CPC, 1908 — S. 20

In a generic and wide sense (as in Section 20 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908) "cause of action" means every fact which it is necessary to establish to support a right or obtain a judgment. (Para 10). Prem Chand Vijay Kumar v. Yashpal Singh, (2005) 4 SCC 417: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1153: (2005) 4 Mah LJ 100: (2005) 125 Comp Cas 338.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-5-2005]

[2142] — Ss. 177, 178, Ch. 13 and S. 482 — Place of inquiry and trial — Challenge to — Procedure — Said issue, held, depends upon the facts of each case — Instead of rushing to higher courts, party aggrieved should approach trial court with suitable applications — Constitution of India, Art. 136 (Para 4). Krishna Kumar Variar v. Share Shoppe, (2010) 12 SCC 485: 2010 Cri LJ 3848.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Markandey Katju and A.K. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-2010]

— S. 178 See Ss. 11, 13, 14, 18, 177 to 181, 190 and Ch. XXXI

See also Ss. 154, 156 and 162, 177, 178
See also Ss. 154, 156, 177 and 178
See also S. 156 and Ss. 177, 178 & 181
See also Ss. 177 and 178
See also Ss. 177 to 187
See also Ss. 177 to 184 and 186 to 188
See also Ss. 177, 178, 181 and 156
See also Ss. 177, 178, 482, 156, 162 and 154
See also Ss. 181(2), 178 and 179 & 2(j)
See also Ss. 204, 190(1)(a) and 178
See also Ss. 406, 177, 178 and 156
See also Ss. 482, 177 and 178

[2143] — S. 178 — Interpretation of — Mode of — Liberal construction emphasised (Para 15). Vishwanath Gupta v. State of Uttaranchal, (2007) 11 SCC 633: (2007) 55 AIC 173 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.K. Mathur and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-3-2007]

[2144] — Ss. 178, 181(4) and 156(3) — Territorial jurisdiction of a court/Judicial Magistrate to entertain criminal matter — Determination of — Offences of cheating and criminal misappropriation — Considering S. 178 CrPC, held, commission of even a part of offence within the jurisdiction of the court/Magistrate concerned, is sufficient for exercise of jurisdiction by the said court/Magistrate in relation to the offence committed — Fraudulent representation being one of the essential ingredients of the offence of cheating, the person accused of cheating could be prosecuted at the place where such fraudulent representation was made — As regards the offence of criminal misappropriation, the court within whose jurisdiction the property had been entrusted or was to be accounted for could take the cognizance — Appellant Company, having its place of business at place C (i.e. Calcutta), filing a criminal complaint under S. 156(3) CrPC before Judicial Magistrate at C seeking direction for investigation in several offences of cheating, criminal misappropriation, etc. committed by its agents in another State i.e. State of U.P. — Agents admitting that reconciliation of accounts took place at C — Held, if there was a fraudulent representation by accused at C and a conspiracy was hatched there to commit the offences, a part of cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of Magistrate at C — On facts, the said Magistrate directing the police concerned to investigate the said offences had jurisdiction in relation to those offences in terms of S. 178 r/w S. 181(4) CrPC — High Court (functioning in State of U.P.) erred in interfering with the said order by transferring the investigation to State of U.P. where major part of offences took place — Since order of High Court had been complied with, certain necessary directions issued by Supreme Court in the matter — Constitution of India — Art. 142 — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 420 and 406

The appellant was awarded contracts for exporting wheat, rice, etc. upon purchasing the same from Food Corporation of India and certain other State Corporations. Respondents 1 and 2 allegedly approached him for appointment as its agent to arrange and supply foodgrains of Food Corporation of India on commission basis. Pursuant to the said agreement, Respondent 1 under the direction of Respondent 2 used to make arrangement of railway rakes at different railway stations in various States for export of rice and wheat from Food Corporation of India to Bangladesh for and on behalf of the appellant. Allegedly, in the course of rendition of such services, the respondents committed various acts of breach of trust, cheating, forgery, etc. Hence, a complaint petition was filed under Section 156(3) CrPC by the appellant Company before the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Calcutta. In that complaint it was alleged that the accused entered into a criminal conspiracy with a view to cheat the complainant Company and/or dishonestly misappropriate a huge amount by making forged and false documents. The accused fraudulently prepared the letterheads and seals of the appellant and used the same. They, thus, committed breach of trust and withdrew an amount of about Rs 1.5 crores.

The said purported acts were committed outside the State of West Bengal and principally in the State of U.P. Various other criminal misconducts were also said to have been committed by the accused in the State of U.P.

The Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Calcutta upon consideration of the said complaint directed the officer in charge of the police station concerned to make an investigation into the allegations contained in the complaint. Pursuant to the said direction, investigation was carried out. As the respondents did not appear before the court, warrants of arrest were issued by the said Magistrate. Thereafter, the respondents filed a criminal writ petition before the High Court of Judicature at Allahabad. The High Court allowed the said writ petition in part. While declining to quash the FIR, the High Court directed that the FIR lodged at the Calcutta police station be transmitted to the appropriate police station of U.P. Further direction was made that the investigating officer concerned would make all efforts to conclude the investigation preferably within a period of three months from the date of receipt of transmitted FIR. That apart, the arrest of the accused was stayed till the submission of charge-sheet/final report, if any. Hence, the present appeal.

Before the Supreme Court, the appellant complainant submitted that the High Court committed a manifest error in passing the impugned judgment insofar as it failed to take into consideration the effect and purport of Section 181(4) CrPC which categorically provides that a court within whose local jurisdiction the property was to be accounted for by the accused persons will also have jurisdiction to try the case. Further, the respondents having made false representations at Calcutta, a part of the offence must be held to have been committed within the jurisdiction of the Metropolitan Magistrate, Calcutta. It was contended that the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Calcutta having exercised its judicial power not only by issuing a direction in terms of Section 156(3) CrPC but also issuing a non-bailable warrant of arrest, the Allahabad High Court had no territorial jurisdiction to interfere therewith, as the said Court was not under its supervisory jurisdiction. It was further argued that only because a part of cause of action had arisen within the State of U.P., the same by itself would not entitle the respondents to pray for transfer of investigation from one State to the other. The High Court had no jurisdiction to transfer the investigation of a criminal case from one statutory authority to another in exercise of its jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution of India or otherwise.

Disposing of the appeal,

Held :

The necessary ingredients for proving a criminal offence must exist in a complaint petition. Such ingredients of offence must be referable to the places where the cause of action in regard to commission of offence has arisen. A cause of action as understood in its ordinary parlance may be relevant for exercise of jurisdiction under clause (2) of Article 226 of the Constitution of India but its definition stricto sensu may not be applicable for the purpose of bringing home a charge of criminal offence. (Para 23)

Section 178 CrPC clearly suggest that even if a part of cause of action has arisen, the police station concerned situate within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate empowered to take cognizance under Section 190(1) CrPC will have the jurisdiction to make investigation. (Paras 20 and 22)

Further, as regards commission of offence of criminal misappropriation and criminal breach of trust, Section 181(4) CrPC provides that such an offence may be inquired into or tried by the court within whose jurisdiction the accused was bound by law or by contract to render accounts or return the entrusted property, but failed to discharge that obligation. (Para 21)

Fraudulent representation being one of the essential ingredients in respect of commission of an offence under Section 420 IPC, a place where such fraudulent misrepresentation has been made would, thus, give rise to a cause of action for prosecuting the accused. Similarly, having regard to the ingredients of an offence under Section 406 IPC where the entrustments were made as also the situs where the offence was completed in the sense that the amount entrusted had not been accounted for by the agent to the principal will also have a nexus so as to enable the court concerned to exercise its jurisdiction of taking cognizance. (Para 29)

The application filed by the appellant under Section 156(3) CrPC disclosed commission of a large number of offences. The fact that major part of the offences took place outside the jurisdiction of the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Calcutta is not in dispute. But, even if a part of the offence committed by the respondents related to the appellant Company was committed within the jurisdiction of the said court, the High Court of Allahabad should not have interfered in the matter. A major part of the cause of action might have arisen in the State of U.P., but the same by itself would not mean that the Calcutta Court had no jurisdiction whatsoever. If there had been a fraudulent misrepresentation by some of the respondents at Calcutta and a conspiracy was hatched to commit offences of cheating or misappropriation, indisputably a part of cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of the Metropolitan Magistrate, Calcutta. (Paras 23, 33 and 25)

Thus, the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Calcutta had jurisdiction in the matter in terms of Section 178 read with Section 181(4) CrPC. (Para 29)

However, the order passed by the Allahabad High Court has been complied with. Some offences at various places situated within the State of U.P. had been committed. The High Court had not issued any direction as to which investigating officer attached to which police station of U.P. will have jurisdiction in the matter. The direction of the High Court, in that way is vague and indefinite. Investigating officer attached to one police station may feel handicapped in carrying out the investigation within the entire State. In this case, it may be necessary for the investigating officer to make investigation even in other States for the aforementioned purpose. (Para 36)

Therefore, by exercising extraordinary jurisdiction under Article 142 of the Constitution to subserve the interest of justice, the appeal is disposed of with directions that (i) further investigation must be carried out by CB CID of the State of U.P., (ii) the accused must surrender before the Chief Judicial Magistrate, Allahabad and their applications for grant of bail, if any, may be considered by the said court on its own merits, (iii) investigation must be carried out inter alia on the premise that the jurisdiction to make investigation would be subject to the ultimate decision of the Court of the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Calcutta as if investigations are being carried out by CB CID of the State of U.P. in continuation of the investigation made by the police officer of Calcutta, and (iv) the report on completion of the investigation must be forwarded to the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Calcutta who would determine the question of his own jurisdiction at an appropriate stage. (Para 38). Asit Bhattacharjee v. Hanuman Prasad Ojha, (2007) 5 SCC 786: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 31: AIR 2007 SC 1925: 2007 Cri LJ 3181: (2007) 104 Cut LT 488: (2007) 4 All LJ 567: (2007) 54 AIC 38 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-5-2007]

Mosaraf Hossain Khan v. Bhagheeratha Engg. Ltd., (2006) 3 SCC 658: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 98, relied on

Navinchandra N. Majithia v. State of Maharashtra, (2000) 7 SCC 640: 2001 SCC (Cri) 215, held distinguished

[2145] — S. 178 — Acquisition of assets disproportionate to known sources of income — Territorial jurisdiction of Special Court — Determination of — Accused having a part of his known sources of income at place D — Applying S. 178 CrPC, held, the said fact conferred jurisdiction upon the courts at D — Contention that since the accused was never posted at D during the check period in question, the court at D had no jurisdiction, not sustainable — Further, the question of finding out the place where the offence was completed did not arise in the present case — What is material is commission of the misconduct during the period the accused held office and not the places where he held offices — So each court, where a part of the offence was committed, can try the accused — Offence under S. 13(1)(e), PC Act distinguished from offences under Ss. 13(1)(c) & (d) of the said Act — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 — S. 5(1)(e) — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 — Ss. 13(1)(e) & 4

What would be the territorial jurisdiction of a Special Court within the meaning of the provisions of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 was the question involved in the present appeal.

The appellant was an officer working in the Customs Department. A case was registered against him under Section 13(2) read with Section 13(1)(e) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 ("the 1988 Act") for acquisition of assets disproportionate to his known sources of income in relation to the check period in question. The appellant contended that since he had never been posted in Delhi during the said period, the Delhi Court had no jurisdiction to try his case. The Special Judge as also the High Court rejected the said contention. Hence, the present appeal.

Before the Supreme Court, the appellant contended that the ingredients of an offence involving Section 13(1)(e) of the 1988 Act vis-à-vis the other provisions thereof read with Sections 177 and 178 CrPC would clearly go to show that the situs of the properties which were said to have been acquired out of the income of the employee would not confer jurisdiction upon the court. It was submitted that the only fact relevant therefor would be as to where the public servant concerned committed acts of misconduct or abused his official position, which would be the places where he had held his offices. It was urged that the principal place of commission of offence would have to be judged having regard to the area where the offence was said to have been completed.

On the other hand, the respondent CBI submitted that as by reason of Section 5(3) of the 1988 Act, the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure have been made applicable in relation to the proceedings initiated under the 1988 Act, in a case where the offence was committed at more than one place, any of the courts concerned could try the offence.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

For the purpose of proving the offence under Section 13(1)(e) of the PC Act, 1988, on the one hand, known sources of income must be ascertained vis-à-vis the possession of property or resources which were disproportionate to the known sources of income of public servant and the inability of the public servant to account for it, on the other. One of the ingredients of the said offence is known sources of income. What is material therefor is that the criminal misconduct had been committed during the period the accused held office and not the places where he had held offices. (Paras 16 and 15)

Each court, where a part of the offence has been committed, would be entitled to try an accused. The 1988 Act does not bar application of Section 178 CrPC. If application of Section 178 CrPC is not barred, the fact that the appellant has a part of his known sources of income at Delhi, would confer jurisdiction upon the Delhi Courts. (Para 21)

In a case involving Section 13(1)(e) of the 1988 Act, what is necessary is as to whether keeping in view the period in question, commonly known as check period, the public servant has acquired wealth which is disproportionate to his known sources of income. It has nothing to do with individual case of bribery. It has nothing to do with a series of acts culminated into an offence. In a case of this nature, the question of completion of any offence does not arise. A distinction exists between a case filed under Sections 13(1)(c) and 13(1)(d) of the 1988 Act, on the one hand, and Section 13(1)(e) thereof, on the other. The appellant is not accused of commission of offences under Sections 13(1)(c) and 13(1)(d). No other person has been charged with the offence of abetment and conspiracy. The question of finding out the place where the offence was completed, thus, does not arise in this case. (Paras 20, 19, 12 and 17) . V.K. Puri v. CBI, (2007) 6 SCC 91: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 57: 2007 Cri LJ 2929.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-2007]

CBI v. Braj Bhushan Prasad, (2001) 9 SCC 432: 2002 SCC (Cri) 576; Banwarilal Jhunjhunwalla v. Union of India, AIR 1959 Ker 311, distinguished [2146] — Ss. 178 and 408 — Place of trial — Carrying of smuggled goods — Court of place through which goods carried will have jurisdiction to try the offence — Appellant can move the appropriate forum for transfer of the case if holding the trial at such place is likely to cause any undue inconvenience or prejudice to him — Such application will have to be decided on its own merits. Harbans Lal v. State of Haryana, (1998) 8 SCC 319: AIR 1999 SC 326.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S. Rajendra Babu, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-11-1998]

[2147] — Ss. 178 and 200 — Place of trial — Private complaint — Cognizance by Magistrate — If justified — Private complaint alleging commission of the offences by respondents under Ss. 406 and 420 r/w S. 120-B IPC — Appointment of appellant's company as C&F agent of respondent's company for another State was agreed upon and letter of appointment delivered within jurisdictional area of the Magistrate — Appellant made several payments for supply of raw materials to different suppliers of respondents but respondents had not made any payment of the same till date — Appellant though had made repeated requests to respondents to return money paid, respondents had not acceded thereto — Held, court on basis of averments made in complaint, if prima facie is of the opinion that whole or a part of cause of action has arisen in its jurisdiction, can certainly take cognizance of complaint — There is no need to ascertain that the allegations made are true in fact — Since in present case part of the cause of action prima facie appears to have arisen in jurisdictional area of the Magistrate, he was justified in taking cognizance and issuing process to respondents (Paras 30, 32 and 35). Rajiv Modi v. Sanjay Jain, (2009) 13 SCC 241: (2009) 80 AIC 65 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-7-2009]

Union of India v. Adani Exports Ltd., (2002) 1 SCC 567; Satvinder Kaur v. State (NCT of Delhi), (1999) 8 SCC 728: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1503; V.C. Shukla v. State, 1980 Supp SCC 92: 1980 SCC (Cri) 695; Liverpool & London S.P. & I Assn. Ltd. v. M.V. Sea Success I, (2004) 9 SCC 512; Vijai Pratap Singh v. Dukh Haran Nath Singh, AIR 1962 SC 941: 1962 Supp (2) SCR 675, followed

[2148] — S. 178(c) — Territorial jurisdiction — Continuing offence committed in more local areas than one — Complaint under Ss. 498-A, 506 and 323 IPC by wife against her husband, parents-in-law and two sisters-in-law — Allegation of dowry demand, maltreatment and humiliation at the house of her in-laws — Specific allegation against the husband that he had gone to the house of her parents and had assaulted her — Held, cl. (c) of S. 178 is attracted and the Magistrate at her parents' place also has jurisdiction to entertain the complaint — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 498-A, 506 and 323

In the instant case the complaint reveals a continuing offence of maltreatment and humiliation meted out to the appellant in the hands of all the accused respondents and in such continuing offence, on some occasions all the respondents had taken part and on other occasion, one of the respondents had taken part. Therefore, clause (c) of Section 178 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is clearly attracted. Sujata Mukherjee v. Prashant Kumar Mukherjee, (1997) 5 SCC 30: 1997 SCC (Cri) 673: AIR 1997 SC 2465: 1997 Cri LJ 2985.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-4-1997]

[2149] — Ss. 178(c) and 177, 162 — Uncertain in which of the several local areas the offence was committed or where several acts done in different local areas — Held, the said offence can be enquired into or tried by a court having jurisdiction over any of such local areas. Satvinder Kaur v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (1999) 8 SCC 728: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1503: AIR 1999 SC 3596.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-10-1999]

[2150] — Ss. 178(c) & 177 and 406 — Place of inquiry and trial — Continuing offence — Territorial jurisdiction of court — Appellant 1 married with Respondent 2 and living in matrimonial home at Jabalpur (MP) — Appellant 1's father-in-law lodged a complaint with police at Jabalpur alleging ill-treatment to Respondent 2 and demand of dowry from her by Appellant 1 and his family members (appellants) — Respondent 2 also lodged FIR alleging that her husband and in-laws ill treated her so much that she had to leave the matrimonial home and to live with her parents at Datia (MP) — Whether the offence was a continuing one such that CJM at Datia had jurisdiction to take cognizance of the offence — Held, offence cannot be said to be continuing one only because complainant Respondent 2 was forced to leave her matrimonial home and stayed with her parents at Datia — High Court erred in taking the view that Respondent 2 having been forced to leave her matrimonial home on account of torture by her in-laws, it amounted to mental cruelty and harassment which continued even at the place of her father at Datia and therefore, the offence may be inquired into and tried also at Datia court — In view of S. 177, which ordains that offence shall ordinarily be inquired into and tried by a court within whose local jurisdiction it was committed, the offence in question must be inquired into and tried by court at Jabalpur and not by court at Datia where no part of cause of action arose — Therefore, interest of justice would be subserved, while setting aside the order of the High Court, if in exercise of Supreme Court's jurisdiction under Art. 142 of the Constitution transfer of the criminal case pending in the Court of Chief Judicial Magistrate, Datia to the Court of Chief Judicial Magistrate, Jabalpur is directed — Constitution of India — Art. 142. Manish Ratan v. State of M.P., (2007) 1 SCC 262: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 336: (2006) 48 AIC 93 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-11-2006]

Sujata Mukherjee v. Prashant Kumar Mukherjee, (1997) 5 SCC 30: 1997 SCC (Cri) 673, distinguished

State of Bihar v. Deokaran Nenshi, (1972) 2 SCC 890: 1973 SCC (Cri) 114; Y. Abraham Ajith v. Inspector of Police, (2004) 8 SCC 100: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2134; Ramesh v. State of T.N., (2005) 3 SCC 507: 2005 SCC (Cri) 735, relied on [2151] — Ss. 178(d), 177, 179 and 482 — Territorial jurisdiction of court for trying an offence under S. 138, NI Act — Held, it is not necessary that concatenation of five acts constituting an offence under S. 138, NI Act, 1881, "should have been perpetrated at the same locality — It is possible that each of those five acts could be done at five different localities" — Agreement between parties entered into at Bangalore and cheque was also returned at Bangalore — However, respondent issuing notice of dishonour of cheque from Mangalore and appellant giving reply to him at Mangalore address — Complaint filed at Mangalore — Appellant's plea rejected that Mangalore Court did not have jurisdiction to try offence under S. 138 — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 — S. 138 (Paras 3, 4 and 9). Shamshad Begum v. B. Mohammed, (2008) 13 SCC 77.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-11-2008]

K. Bhaskaran v. Sankaran Vaidhyan Balan, (1999) 7 SCC 510: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1284, applied

[2152] — S. 178(d), 177 and 179 — Territorial jurisdiction of courts relating to offence under S. 138 Negotiable Instruments Act — Held is clear from S. 178(d) CrPC that complainant can choose any one of those courts having jurisdiction over any one of the local areas within the territorial limits of which any one of the following five acts, the components of the offence, took place: (i) drawing of the cheque; (ii) presentation of the cheque to the bank; (iii) returning of the cheque unpaid by the drawee bank; (iv) giving of notice in writing to the drawer of the cheque demanding payment of the cheque amount; (v) failure of the drawer to make payment within 15 days of the receipt of the notice — It may therefore be an idle exercise to question jurisdiction relating to this offence — High Court in appeal rightly set aside the finding of the trial court that it had no territorial jurisdiction because the cheque had been dishonoured in a different district, outside its jurisdiction — Further on facts, High Court rightly held that trial court had jurisdiction as the cheque had been issued at a shop within its jurisdiction — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 — S. 138

This case was the result of a dispute between two brothers, the appellant and the respondent, and the issuing by one of them, the appellant, of a cheque that bounced. On 29-1-1993, the respondent, S, presented a cheque for the amount of Rs 1 lakh, bearing the signature of the appellant, B, at the Kayamkulam (Kerala) Branch of the Syndicate Bank for encashment. The cheque was returned by the bank unpaid, because of the insufficiency of funds in the account of B. S issued a notice by registered post on 2-2-1993. The notice was returned to S on 15-2-1993 with the endorsements "Addressee absent" for three dates and "Intimation served on addressee's house" for 6-2-1993. The postal article remained unclaimed till 15-2-1993 and was then returned to the sender, S, with the endorsement "unclaimed".

S, filed a complaint on 4-3-1993 before the court of the Judicial Magistrate, First Class, Adoor (District Pathanamthitta) against B under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881. B denied that the court had territorial jurisdiction on the basis that the cheque had been dishonoured in Kayamkulam District. B also denied having issued the cheque, though he did not deny his signature on it. He contended that S had snatched away some signed blank cheque leaves from him and used one for the present case. B also claimed that he did not receive notice from S about the dishonour of the cheque.

The trial court did not believe the allegation about the theft of the cheque leaves and found that B had issued the cheque to S. However, it acquitted B holding that it had no territorial jurisdiction in the case, and also that the accused had not received notice and so no cause of action had arisen.

In appeal, the High Court set aside the acquittal and convicted B, sentencing him to 6 months imprisonment and imposing a fine of Rs 1 lakh.

Upholding the conviction, but remanding the case to the trial court on the question of sentence, Held :

Under Section 177 of the Criminal Procedure Code, "every offence shall ordinarily be enquired into and tried in a court within whose jurisdiction it was committed". The locality where the Bank (which dishonoured the cheque) is situated cannot be regarded as the sole criterion to determine the place of offence. It must be remembered that offence under Section 138 would not be completed with the dishonour of the cheque. It attains completion only with the failure of the drawer of the cheque to pay the cheque amount within the expiry of 15 days mentioned in clause (c) of the proviso to Section 138 of the Act. It is normally difficult to fix up a particular locality as the place of failure to pay the amount covered by the cheque. A place, for that purpose, would depend upon a variety of factors. It can either be at the place where the drawer resides or at the place where the payee resides or at the place where either of them carries on business. (Para 11)

Section 178 of the Criminal Procedure Code suggests that if there is uncertainty as to where, among different localities, the offence would have been committed the trial can be had in a court having jurisdiction over any of those localities. The provision has further widened the scope by stating that in case where the offence was committed partly in one local area and partly in another local area the court in either of the localities can exercise jurisdiction to try the case. Further again, Section 179 of the Code stretches its scope to a still wider horizon. (Para 12)

The offence under Section 138 of the Act can be completed only with the concatenation of a number of acts. The following are the acts which are components of the said offence: (1) drawing of the cheque, (2) presentation of the cheque to the bank, (3) returning the cheque unpaid by the drawee bank, (4) giving notice in writing to the drawer of the cheque demanding payment of the cheque amount, (5) failure of the drawer to make payment within 15 days of the receipt of the notice. It is not necessary that all the above five acts should have been perpetrated at the same locality. It is possible that each of those five acts could be done at five different localities. But a concatenation of all the above five is a sine qua non for the completion of the offence under Section 138 of the Code. (Paras 14 and 15)

If the five different acts were done in five different localities any one of the courts exercising jurisdiction in one of the five local areas can become the place of trial for the offence under Section 138 of the Act. In other words, the complainant can choose any one of those courts having jurisdiction over any one of the local areas within the territorial limits of which any one of those five acts was done. As the amplitude stands so widened and so expansive it is an idle exercise to raise jurisdictional question regarding the offence under Section 138 of the Act. (Para 16). K. Bhaskaran v. Sankaran Vaidhyan Balan, (1999) 7 SCC 510: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1284: AIR 1999 SC 3762.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-9-1999]

Applied in Shamshad Begum v. B. Mohammed, (2008) 13 SCC 77

— S. 179 See also S. 179, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 1042 et seq. in Vol. 2

— S. 179 See Ss. 11, 13, 14, 18, 177 to 181, 190 and Ch. XXXI

See also Ss. 177 to 187
See also Ss. 177 to 184 and 186 to 188
See also S. 178(d), 177 and 179
See also Ss. 178(d), 177, 179 and 482
See also Ss. 181(2), 178 and 178 & 2(j)
See also Ss. 188 proviso, 179 and 2(n)
See also Ss. 190, 193, 179, 177

[2153] — S. 179 — Territorial jurisdiction of Court for trial of offence where consequence ensues — Criminal case registered at the instance of respondent-complainant against her husband and husband's sister for offences under Ss. 313 and 498-A r/w S. 34 IPC — Most of the acts alleged against the accused including physical torture to complainant when she was in the family way took place in the nuptial home at Indore where the couple resided after marriage, but later she had been taken back to her parental house at Jabalpur — Miscarriage took place while she was at Jabalpur — Hence, Court of Session at Jabalpur had jurisdiction to try the case

Section 179 CrPC contemplates two courts having jurisdiction and the trial is permitted to take place in any one of those two courts. One is the court within whose local jurisdiction the act has been done and the other is the court within whose local jurisdiction the consequence has ensued. When the allegation is that the miscarriage took place at Jabalpur it cannot be contended that the court at Jabalpur could not have acquired jurisdiction as the acts alleged against the accused took place at Indore. (Para 6). State of M.P. v. Suresh Kaushal, (2003) 11 SCC 126.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2001]

[2154] — Ss. 179 and 180 — Court having jurisdiction to try manufacturers for offence of manufacturing sub-standard article will have jurisdiction to try distributors for selling those articles even though the places of sale and manufacture are different. State of Rajasthan v. Rajesh Medical Agencies, 1987 Supp SCC 242: 1988 SCC (Cri) 58.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and V. Balakrishna Eradi, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-2-1987]

State of Punjab v. Nohar Chand, (1984) 3 SCC 512: 1984 SCC (Cri) 432, followed

[2155] — Ss. 179 and 180 — Where offence of manufacturing substandard article (fertiliser) carried on at a place different from the place of its marketing, held, court having jurisdiction to try the marketing agent will have jurisdiction to try the manufacturer also along with the agent — Essential Commodities Act, 1955 — Ss. 11 & 13-A — Fertilizer (Control) Order, 1957 — S. 13(1)(a) — Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, 1954 — Ss. 7, 16, 20

If manufacturing substandard fertiliser is by itself an offence and marketing the substandard fertiliser is itself a distinct offence but they are so interconnected as cause and effect, both can be tried at one or the other place. If one manufactures the substandard fertiliser, wherever it is marketed the interrelation or causal connection is of cause and effect. The situation will be adequately covered by Ss. 179 and 180 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and as such where the marketing agent of the manufacturer of fertiliser which is found to the substandard is being prosecuted for marketing substandard fertiliser, the manufacturer can be tried with him and the court at the place where the substandard fertiliser was marketed will have jurisdiction try them both. State of Punjab v. Nohar Chand, (1984) 3 SCC 512: 1984 SCC (Cri) 432: AIR 1984 SC 1492: 1984 Cri LJ 1153: (1984) 76 PLR 694.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.A. Desai and A.N. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-5-1984]

Incharge Production, Haryana State Coop. Supply and Marketing Federation Ltd. (HAFED) Fertilizer v. State of Punjab, Criminal Misc. No. 6763-M of 1982, dated March 9, 1983, approved

State of Gujarat v. Agro Chemical and Animal, 1980 Cri LJ 516: 1979 Cri LR (Guj) 413 and Satinder Singh v. State of Punjab, Criminal Miscellaneous Application No. 1158-M of 1981, dated February 24, 1982, overruled

Bhagwan Dass Jagdish Chander v. Delhi Administration, (1975) 1 SCC 866: 1975 SCC (Cri) 410, distinguished and limited

[2156] — S. 179 — Default in delivery of share certificates within prescribed period in compliance with S. 113(1) Companies Act, 1956 — Complaint for offence regarding, under S. 113(2), Companies Act, 1956 held, can be filed only where registered office of the company is situated as the cause of action would arise there and not where complainant is residing — Companies Act, 1956 — Ss. 113(2) and 53

Reading Sections 113 and 53 Companies Act, 1956 together, it is clear that share certificates are to be delivered in accordance with the procedure laid down in Section 53. A document is to be served either personally or by sending it by post at a registered address within India. Sub-section (2) specifically mentions that where a document is sent by post, such service thereof shall be deemed to be effected by properly addressing, prepaying and posting the letter containing the document. Hence, once there is a statutory mode of delivering the document by post and deeming provision of such delivery, the place where such posting is done is the place of performance of statutory duty and the same stands discharged as soon as the document is posted. Hence the cause of action for default of not sending the share certificates within the stipulated time would arise at the place where the registered office of the company is situated as from that place the share certificates can be posted and are usually posted. If the addressee is available at the same locality where the registered office of the company is situated, it is reasonable to think that service of documents may be effected by personally delivering to him. But if the addressee is residing at a distant place it is unreasonable to expect the company to depute somebody to travel up to that distance to personally deliver it to him. The only usual mode which any company would then adopt is to send it to him by post. For such default, as contemplated under Section 113(1), there is no question of any cause of action arising at the place where the complainant was to receive postal delivery. Cause of action for failure to deliver the share certificates or documents within the prescribed time would arise where the registered office of the company is situated. What is punishable under subsection (2) of Section 113 is non- delivery, in accordance with the provision laid down under Section 53, of the certificates of shares within the prescribed time. So, if the documents are posted within the stipulated time, there would be compliance with Section 113 and that there would not be any offence. (Paras 7 and 9). H.V. Jayaram v. Industrial Credit & Investment Corpn. of India Ltd., (2000) 2 SCC 202: AIR 2000 SC 579: 2000 Cri LJ 736.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-12-1999]

H.P. Gupta v. Hiralal, (1970) 1 SCC 437: 1970 SCC (Cri) 190, relied on

Upendra Kumar Joshi v. Manik Lal Chatterjee, (1982) 52 Comp Cas 177 (Pat), approved

Ranbaxy Laboratories Ltd. v. Indra Kala, (1997) 24 CLA 203: (1997) 88 Com Cas 348 (Raj), distinguished

— S. 180 See Ss. 11, 13, 14, 18, 177 to 181, 190 and Ch. XXXI

See also Ss. 177 to 187

See also Ss. 177 to 184 and 186 to 188

See also Ss. 179 and 180

— S. 181 See also S. 181, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 1043 in Vol. 2

— S. 181 See Ss. 11, 13, 14, 18, 177 to 181, 190 and Ch. XXXI

See also S. 156 and Ss. 177, 178 & 181

See also Ss. 177 to 187

See also Ss. 177 to 184 and 186 to 188

See also Ss. 177, 178, 181 and 156

[2157] — Ss. 181(2), 178 and 179 & 2(j) — Offence under S. 364-A IPC — Territorial jurisdiction in relation to — Determination of — Applicability of S. 181(2) CrPC — Offence under S. 364-A IPC, held, not covered under S. 181(2) CrPC — Distinguishing the said offence from ordinary case of abduction or kidnapping, the three ingredients of offence under S. 364-A IPC stated — Held, the offence under S. 364-A IPC could be tried by the court within whose jurisdiction any of the said ingredients had taken place — Victims abducted at place L in State of U.P. — Demand for ransom made by phone call at the house of victims situated at place N in another State — Victims put to death at place U in State of U.P. — Held, the trial courts at all the three places i.e. L, N and U had jurisdiction to try the offence in question — Since the offence was registered at place N, the trial court at N could try the offence — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 364-A

The present matter involved the question as to which court had jurisdiction to try the instant criminal case which was lodged under Section 364-A IPC.

One R, who was resident of the State of Uttaranchal, had gone to the State of U.P. along with a contractor S. Both R and S were abducted at place L in the State of U.P. The accused made phone calls to the family members of R at their house, which was situated at place N in the State of Uttaranchal, and by threatening them demanded ransom money. When the said demand was not met, R and S were murdered. The dead bodies of R and S were recovered at place U in the State of U.P. A first information report in relation to the said case was lodged at the police station concerned in the State of Uttaranchal. An application was filed before the Sessions Court at N that the said court had no jurisdiction to frame the charges as the offence had been committed in another State i.e. State of U.P. The court at N held that merely because the telephone calls relating to demand for ransom were received at N, it would not confer jurisdiction on it to try the case. The said court held that in view of the provisions of Section 181(2) CrPC, the case should be tried in the court located at place U or place L in the State of U.P. Thereafter, the matter was taken up before the High Court. The High Court set aside the above order on the basis of the order passed by the Supreme Court on 24-4-2006. Hence, the present SLP was preferred.

Dismissing the SLP,

Held :

Offence under Section 364-A IPC is not covered under Section 181(2) CrPC. It is not simply abduction or kidnapping. In the case of Section 364-A IPC something more is there. There are three stages in Section 364-A IPC, one is the kidnapping or abduction, second is threat of death coupled with the demand of money and lastly when the demand is not met, then causing death. If the three ingredients are available, that will constitute the offence under Section 364-A IPC. Any of the three ingredients can take place at one place or at different places. (Paras 17 and 9)

As per Section 178 CrPC, in case an offence has been committed in two local areas then it can be tried by any of them. Further, as per Section 179 CrPC, when an act is an offence by reason of anything which has been done and consequence which has ensued in another area, the offence may be inquired into or tried by a court within whose local jurisdiction such thing has been done or such consequence has ensued. (Para 15)

In the present case, all the ingredients of offence under Section 364-A IPC have not taken place at one place. It is a case wherein the offence has taken place at three places i.e. at place N where the threat to the life of the deceased was given and demand of money was raised, at place L from where the deceased were abducted and at place U where they were ultimately put to death. (Para 17)

Therefore, all the three courts i.e. the trial court at N in the State of Uttaranchal and the trial courts at L and U in the State of U.P. will have territorial jurisdiction to try the matter. The trial could be conducted in any of the said courts. (Paras 10 and 17)

The present case was registered at place N and the investigation started in that district. The trial court at N erred in taking view that it had no jurisdiction to try the matter. (Para 17). Vishwanath Gupta v. State of Uttaranchal, (2007) 11 SCC 633: (2007) 55 AIC 173 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.K. Mathur and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-3-2007]

— S. 181(4) See Ss. 4 and 181(4)

See also Ss. 178, 181(4) and 156(3)

[2158] — S. 181(4) — Proceedings under Prevention of Corruption Act (relating to Bihar Fodder Scam cases) pending immediately before the appointed day — Special Court created under PC Act to deal with such cases prior to creation of Jharkhand out of State of Bihar — Territorial jurisdiction of the Special Court after the appointed day — S. 4(2) of PC Act requiring that the offence shall be tried by the Special Judge "for the area within which it was committed" — When charge contains main offence under S. 13 of PC Act as well as allied offence of conspiracy or attempt to commit or abetment of the main offence as envisaged in S. 3(1) of PC Act, held, jurisdiction of the Special Court would be determined on the basis of the area within which the main offence and not where any of the said allied offence was committed — Distinction between S. 4(2) of PC Act and S. 181(4) CrPC in this regard pointed out — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 — Ss. 3, 4, 13(1)(c) & (d) — Bihar Reorganisation Act, 2000 — S. 89

On the appointed day i.e. 15-11-2000 under the Bihar Reorganisation Act, 2000 the erstwhile State of Bihar was bifurcated into two States. One region of it became a new State called Jharkhand while the remaining region became the present State of Bihar. Long before the division of the State of Bihar courts were established for the trial of offences under the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988. As per the notification issued by the Government of Bihar on 19-4-1994, three Courts of Special Judges were created, one at Dhanbad, the second at Ranchi and the third at Patna. The court so created at Dhanbad was conferred with the jurisdiction over "all areas under the division of North Chhotanagpur". The court so created at Ranchi was given jurisdiction over "all areas under the division of South Chhotanagpur". The court so created at Patna was given the jurisdiction over the remaining regions. Another Court of Special Judge was established at Patna by notification issued by the Government on 22-5-1996, as per which jurisdiction was given over all Patna areas barring north and south of Chhotanagpur. This means, there were two courts at Patna having territorial jurisdiction over the same areas. Yet another Court of Special Judge was established at Patna itself by notification issued on 5-6-1996. This court was conferred with the territorial jurisdiction over the "entire area of the State of Bihar". CBI had investigated several cases relating to Bihar Fodder Scam and filed charge-sheets before the appointed day in 36 cases before the Special Court situated at Patna. The Registrar of the High Court sent a letter to the District and Sessions Judge, Patna on 13-6-1996 directing him to inform the Special Judge appointed as per the notification of 5-6-1996 "to deal with all the cases pertaining to the Animal Husbandry Scam (same as Fodder Scam) without any restrictions of the area". The legal validity of the said letter of the Registrar was doubted by the Full Bench of the High Court in the impugned judgment. That letter was assailed before the Supreme Court also on the premise that only the Central Government has the power to specify, which out of the two courts, can try any particular class of cases. This is so provided in Section 4(2) of the PC Act.

Disposing of the appeals,

Held :

Section 89 of the Act deals with what should have happened on the appointed day i.e. 15-11-2000 in respect of every proceeding "relating exclusively to the territory" of Jharkhand State. Every such proceedings "shall stand transferred to the corresponding court, tribunal, authority or officer" of Jharkhand State. (Para 20)

Transfer of criminal cases is not the only subject covered by Section 89. The provision seeks to allocate the files or records relating to all proceedings, after the bifurcation if they were to be instituted after the appointed day. Any interpretation should be one which achieves that object and not that which might create confusion or perplexity or even bewilderment to the officers of the respective States. In other words, the interpretation should be made with pragmatism, not pedantically or in a stilted manner. For the purpose of criminal cases, we should bear in mind the subject-matter of the case to be transferred. When so considering, Court has to take into account further that all the 36 cases are primarily for the offences under the PC Act and hence they are all triable before the Courts of Special Judges. Hence, the present question can be determined by reference to the provisions of the PC Act. (Para 29)

By virtue of Section 4(2) of the PC Act the only court which has jurisdiction to try the offences under the PC Act is the Court of Special Judge appointed for the areas within which such offences were committed. When such an offence is being tried sub-section (3) enables the same Special Judge to try any other offence which could as well be charged against that accused in the same trial. So the pivot of the matter is to determine the area within which the offence was committed. Section 3(1) of that Act empowers the Government to appoint a Special Judge to try two categories of offences. The first is, "any offence punishable under this Act" and the second is, "any conspiracy to commit or any attempt to commit or any abetment of any of the offences specified" in the first category. So when a court has jurisdiction to try the offence punishable under the PC Act on the basis of the place where such offence was committed, the allied offences such as conspiracy, attempt or abetment to commit that offence are only to be linked with the main offence. When the main offence is committed and is required to be tried, it is rather inconceivable that jurisdiction of the court will be determined on the basis of where the conspiracy or attempt or abetment of such main offence was committed. It is only when the main offence was not committed, but only the conspiracy to commit that offence or the attempt or the abetment of it alone was committed, then the question would arise whether the Court of the Special Judge within whose area such conspiracy etc. was committed could try the case. For the present purpose it is unnecessary to consider that aspect because the charges proceed on the assumption that the main offence was committed. (Para 33)

The main offence in all the 36 cases was under Sections 13(1)(c) and 13(1)(d) of the PC Act. The hub of the act envisaged in the first of those two offences is "dishonestly or fraudulently misappropriates". Similarly the hinge of the act envisaged in the second section is "obtains" for himself or for any other person, any valuable thing or pecuniary advantage by corrupt or illegal means. The above acts were completed in the present cases when the money has gone out of the public treasuries and reached the hands of any one of the persons involved. Hence, so far as the offences under Sections 13(1)(c) and 13(1)(d) are concerned the place where the offences were committed could easily be identified as the place where the treasury concerned was situated. It is an undisputed fact that in all these cases the treasuries were situated within the territories of Jharkhand State. Thus, when it is certain where exactly the offence under Section 13 of the PC Act was committed it is an unnecessary exercise to ponder over the other areas wherein certain allied activities, such as conspiracy or preparation, or even the prefatory or incidental acts were done, including the consequences that ensued. (Paras 35 to 37)

Section 181 CrPC pertains to "place of trial in case of certain offences". By sub-section (4) thereof at least four different courts have been envisaged having jurisdiction for trial of the said offence any one of which can be chosen. However, there is distinction between Section 181(4) of the Code and Section 4(2) of the PC Act. When the former provision envisaged at least four courts having jurisdiction to try a case involving misappropriation the latter provision of the PC Act has restricted it to one court i.e. the Court of the Special Judge for the area "within which the offence was committed". No other court is envisaged for trial of that offence. When the charge contains the offence or offences punishable under the PC Act as well as the offence of conspiracy to commit or attempt to commit or any abetment of any such offence, the court within whose local jurisdiction the main offence was committed alone has jurisdiction. (Paras 38 and 39)

It must, therefore, be held that all the 36 cases involved in these appeals stood transferred to the corresponding courts situated within the territories of Jharkhand State on the appointed day (i.e. 15-11-2000) by the operation of Section 89 of the Act. Therefore, the Registrar of the High Court of Patna is directed to instruct the officers concerned for dispatching the records of all these 36 cases, to the corresponding courts at Jharkhand State forthwith. The Registrar of the High Court of Jharkhand is also directed to do whatever is needed for reaching such records in the appropriate courts. (Para 49)

The evidence already recorded in any of the 36 cases will be treated as evidence recorded by the proper court having jurisdiction. In other words, the Special Judge need not call the witnesses already examined over again for repetition of what has already come on record. (Para 50). CBI v. Braj Bhushan Prasad, (2001) 9 SCC 432: AIR 2001 SC 4014.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.T. Thomas, S.S.M. Quadri and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-10-2001]

— S. 182 See Ss. 177 to 184

See also Ss. 177 to 184 and 186 to 188

— S. 183 See Ss. 177 to 187

See also Ss. 177 to 184 and 186 to 188

— S. 184 See Ss. 177 to 184

See also Ss. 177 to 184 and 186 to 188

— S. 185 See Ss. 177 to 187

— S. 186 See 177 to 187

See also Ss. Ss. 177 to 184 and 186 to 188

— S. 187 See Ss. 177 to 187
See also Ss. 177 to 184 and 186 to 188

— S. 188 See also S. 188, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 1044 et seq. in Vol. 2

— S. 188 See Ss. 4 and 188
See also Ss. 176, 177, 166-B, 188 and 190
See also Ss. 177 to 184 and 186 to 188

[2159] — S. 188 — Extra-territorial offence — Commission of, by a person not an Indian citizen and outside India — Applicability of CrPC and IPC — Held, the Penal Code and CrPC not applicable — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 4

The appellant's daughter-in-law filed a complaint against the appellant that she instigated the complainant's husband to commit atrocities against the complainant. The complaint was filed in Gujarat, and cognizance of offence was taken by the Chief Judicial Magistrate. However, it turned out that appellant was a citizen of Mauritius and the alleged offence took place when the complainant and her husband were residing in Kuwait.

The question was whether the appellant could be tried in India for an offence under the Penal Code.

Allowing the appeal with costs,

Held :

In the constitutional scheme of India, all laws made by Parliament primarily are applicable only within the country. Ordinarily, therefore, all persons who commit a crime in India can be tried at any place where the offence is committed. Section 4 IPC, however, extends scope of applicability of territorial jurisdiction of the court of India to try a case, the cause of action of which took place outside the geographical limits. Parliament can enact a legislation having extra-territorial application but the same must be applied subject to fulfilment of the requirements contained therein. (Para 13)

If the appellant is not a citizen of India, having regard to provisions contained in Section 4 IPC and Section 188 CrPC, the order taking cognizance must be held to be illegal. In terms of Section 4 IPC, the Indian courts will have jurisdiction to try an accused only if the accused is a citizen of India even if the offence was committed outside India or by any person on any ship or aircraft registered in India wherever it may be. Neither of the aforementioned contingencies is attracted in the instant case. Section 188 CrPC also deals with offences committed outside India. Clause (a) brings within its sweep a citizen of India, whether on the high seas or elsewhere, or by a person, although not citizen of India when the offence is committed on any ship or aircraft registered in India. In view of the fact that the offence is said to have been committed in Kuwait, the provisions of the Penal Code or the Code of Criminal Procedure cannot be said to have any application in the present case. (Paras 14 to 16). Fatma Bibi Ahmed Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2008) 6 SCC 789: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 151: AIR 2008 SC 2392: (2008) 2 KLT 907: 2008 Cri LJ 3065.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-2008]

Central Bank of India Ltd. v. Ram Narain, AIR 1955 SC 36, relied on

Ajay Aggarwal v. Union of India, (1993) 3 SCC 609: 1993 SCC (Cri) 961, discussed

[2160] — S. 188 — Offence committed abroad by an Indian — Jurisdiction of courts within India to take cognizance of — Place where victim can file complaint — Held, victim can complain about the said offence to any competent court in India which he may find convenient — Expression "at which he may be found" as used in S. 188 interpreted by holding that the "finding" of the accused under S. 188 has to be by the court and not by the police or the complainant — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 4

Respondent 2, a Dubai-based bank, filed a complaint against one O in the court at G in India. It was alleged in the complaint that O cheated and defrauded the bank in obtaining loan facilities knowing fully well that he had no intention to pay it back and fled from UAE. The Magistrate took cognizance of the offence and issued processes and non-bailable warrants against O. O challenged the said order and sought quashing of the complaint case by filing a petition under Section 482 CrPC before the High Court. O submitted that he was residing in city M in India and doing business there. It was contended that no cause of action or part thereof had occurred within the territorial jurisdiction of the court at G; O was not residing within the jurisdiction of that court nor the complainant had any office at G and, thus, the court at G had no jurisdiction to take cognizance of the offence. The High Court rejected the said contention. Aggrieved, O filed the present special leave petition.

The sole question for determination was about the interpretation of the expression "at which he may be found" in Section 188 CrPC. On whom, under Section 188, does the responsibility to find the accused lie — the complainant, the police or the court?

Dismissing the special leave petition,

Held :

The scheme underlying Section 188 is to dispel any objection or plea of want of jurisdiction at the behest of a fugitive who has committed an offence in any other country. If such a person is found anywhere in India, the offence can be inquired into and tried by any court that may be approached by the victim. The victim who has suffered at the hands of the accused on a foreign land can complain about the offence to a court, otherwise competent, which he may find convenient. The convenience is of the victim and not that of the accused. It is not the requirement of Section 188 that the victim shall state in the complaint as to which place the accused may be found. It is enough to allege that the accused may be found in India. (Para 15)

From the scheme of Chapter XIII CrPC, it is clear that neither the place of business nor place of residence of the accused and for that matter of even the complainant is of any relevance. The relevant factor is the place of commission of offence. By legal fiction, Section 188 which deals with offence committed outside India, makes the place at which the offender may be found, to be a place of commission of offence. Section 188 proceeds on the basis that a fugitive from justice may be found anywhere in India. The finding of the accused has to be by the court where the accused appears. From the plain and clear language of the section, it is evident that the finding of the accused cannot be by the complainant or the police. Thus, the court where the complaint may be filed and the accused either appears voluntarily pursuant to issue of process or is brought before it involuntarily in execution of warrants, would be the competent court within the meaning of Section 188 as that court would find the accused before him when he appears. (Paras 9 and 15)

Regarding the abuse of such wide option to the victim, there are enough provisions in the Code for redressal of any particular abuse. Whether a particular case is an abuse or not would depend on its own facts. (Para 16). Om Hemrajani v. State of U.P., (2005) 1 SCC 617: 2005 SCC (Cri) 443: AIR 2005 SC 392: (2005) 2 Mah LJ 442: (2005) 123 Comp Cas 234: 2005 Cri LJ 665: (2005) 2 KLJ 364.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-11-2004]

R. v. Benito Lopez, (1858) 7 Cox CC 431: (1843-60) All ER Rep 1029: 169 ER 1105, relied on

Empress v. Maganlal, ILR (1882) 6 Bom 622; Emperor v. Vinayak Damodar Savarkar, ILR (1911) 35 Bom 225: 12 Cri LJ 356; Sahebrao Bajirao v. Suryabhan Ziblaji, AIR 1948 Nag 251: 49 Cri LJ 376, approved

[2161] — S. 188 — Offence committed outside India — Place of commission of offence — Held, is the place at which the offender may be found

By legal fiction, Section 188 which deals with offence committed outside India, makes the place at which the offender may be found, to be a place of commission of offence. Section 188 proceeds on the basis that a fugitive from justice may be found anywhere in India. The finding of the accused has to be by the court where the accused appears. From the plain and clear language of the section, it is evident that the finding of the accused cannot be by the complainant or the police. Thus, the court where the complaint may be filed and the accused either appears voluntarily pursuant to issue of process or is brought before it involuntarily in execution of warrants, would be the competent court within the meaning of Section 188 as that court would find the accused before him when he appears. (Paras 9 and 15). Om Hemrajani v. State of U.P., (2005) 1 SCC 617: 2005 SCC (Cri) 443: AIR 2005 SC 392: (2005) 2 Mah LJ 442: (2005) 123 Comp Cas 234: 2005 Cri LJ 665: (2005) 2 KLJ 364.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-11-2004]

R. v. Benito Lopez, (1858) 7 Cox CC 431: (1843-60) All ER Rep 1029: 169 ER 1105, relied on [2162] — S. 188 proviso — Previous sanction of Central Govt. — Not a condition precedent to taking cognizance of offence — Sanction can be obtained before commencement of trial. Ajay Aggarwal v. Union of India, (1993) 3 SCC 609: 1993 SCC (Cri) 961: AIR 1993 SC 1637: 1993 Cri LJ 2516: (1993) 2 ALT (Cri) 396.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and R.M. Sahai, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-1993]

[2163] — Ss. 188 proviso, 179 and 2(n) — Applicability of the proviso to S. 188 requiring previous sanction of Central Government where offence committed outside India — 'Offence' — Meaning of — Appellant, an NRI carrying on business in Dubai, charged under Ss. 120-B, 420, 468 and 471 IPC for conspiring with others residing in India to cheat a bank in India and in furtherance thereof committing offences of cheating and forgery partly in India and partly in Dubai — Criminal conspiracy under Ss. 120-A and 120-B IPC itself is a substantive and continuing offence — Its essential ingredient is agreement between two or more persons and not residence of such persons — Even if part of the acts in pursuance of the conspiracy done in India, cognizance of the offences can be taken in India without prior sanction of Central Govt. — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 120-A, 120-B, 468, 471 and 4

According to the prosecution, the appellant, a non-resident Indian running a concern at Dubai and four others residing in India hatched a conspiracy at Chandigarh to cheat Punjab National Bank. In pursuance thereof they acted and succeeded in cheating the bank of an amount of Rs 40,30,329. It was found that foreign letters of credit were fabricated on the basis of false and forged shipping documents submitted by the appellant to a Dubai bank. Accordingly charge- sheet was laid against the appellant and others for offences under Ss. 120-B, 420, 468 and 471. The CJM, Chandigarh discharged all the accused of the offences on the ground that conspiracy and the acts done in furtherance thereof had taken place outside India and, therefore the sanction under S. 188 CrPC, 1973 was mandatory, and no such sanction having been produced the prosecution was not maintainable. On revision, the High Court set aside the order of discharge taking the view that no prior sanction of Central Govt. was required. Two submissions were advanced by the accused appellant, one — that even though criminal conspiracy was itself an offence but if another offence was committed in pursuance of it outside India then sanction was necessary; second — an offence is constituted of a number of ingredients and even if one of them was committed outside the country S. 188 of the CrPC was attracted.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

Per K. Ramaswamy, J.

Conspiracy was initially hatched at Chandigarh. It itself is a completed offence. It being a continuing offence, even accepting appellant's case that he was at Dubai and part of conspiracy and overt acts in furtherance thereof had taken place at Dubai and partly at Chandigarh; and in consequence thereof other offences had been ensued, since the offences have been committed during the continuing course of transaction culminated in cheating PNB at Chandigarh, the need to obtain sanction for various offences under proviso to S. 188 is obviated. Therefore, there is no need to obtain sanction from Central Government. The case may be different if the offences were committed outside India and are completed in themselves without conspiracy, for which no opinion is expressed.

Section 188 by fiction dealt with offences committed by a citizen of India or a foreigner outside India or on high seas or elsewhere or on any ship or aircraft registered in India. Such person was directed to be dealt with, in respect of such offences, as if he had committed them at any place within India at which he may be found. But the proviso thereto puts an embargo that notwithstanding anything in any of the preceding sections of this Chapter such offences shall not be inquired into or tried in India except with the previous sanction of the Central Government. The provisions in Chapter VIII are elastic and not peremptory. The procedure is handmaid to substantive justice, namely, to bring the offenders to justice to mete out punishment under IPC or special law as the case may be, in accordance with the procedure prescribed under the Code or special procedure under that Act constituting the offence. Sanction under S. 188 is not a condition precedent to take cognizance of the offence. If need be it could be obtained before trial begins.

Conspiracy to commit a crime itself is punishable as a substantive offence and every individual offence committed pursuant to the conspiracy is separate and distinct offence to which individual offenders are liable to punishment, independent of the conspiracy.

A conspiracy is a continuing offence and continues to subsist and committed wherever one of the conspirators does an act or series of acts. So long as its performance continues, it is a continuing offence till it is executed or rescinded or frustrated by choice or necessity. A crime is complete as soon as the agreement is made, but it is not a thing of the moment. It does not end with the making of the agreement. It will continue so long as there are two or more parties to it intending to carry into effect the design. Its continuance is a threat to the society against which it was aimed at and would be dealt with as soon as that jurisdiction can properly claim the power to do so. The conspiracy designed or agreed abroad will have the same effect as in India, when part of the acts, pursuant to the agreement are agreed to be finalised or done, attempted or even frustrated and vice versa. Being a continuing offence, if any acts or omissions which constitute an offence are done in India or outside its territory the conspirators continuing to be parties to the conspiracy and since part of the acts were done in India, they would obviate the need to obtain sanction of the Central Government. All of them need not be present in India nor continue to remain in India.

Conspiracy may be considered to be a march under a banner and a person may join or drop out in the march without the necessity of the change in the text on the banner. In the comity of International Law, in these days, committing offences on international scale is a common feature. The offence of conspiracy would be a useful weapon and there would exist no conflict in municipal laws and the doctrine of autrefois convict or acquit would extend to such offences. Under the comity of nations countries are duty-bound to apprehend the conspirators as soon as they set their feet on the country's territorial limits and nip the offence in the bud. Judicial power of a State extends to the punishment of all offences against the municipal laws of the State by whomsoever committed within the territory. It also has the power to punish all such offences wherever committed by its citizen. The general principle of international law is that every person be it a citizen or foreigner who is found within a foreign State is subjected to, and is punishable by, its law. Otherwise the criminal law could not be administered according to any civilised system of jurisprudence.

Per Sahai, J. (concurring)

Section 188 operates where an offence is committed by a citizen of India outside the country. Requirements are, therefore, one — commission of an offence; second — by an Indian citizen; and third — that it should have been committed outside the country. Since the proviso to S. 188 requiring previous sanction of the Central Govt. begins with a non obstante clause its observance is mandatory. But it would come into play only if the principal clause is applicable, namely, it is established that an offence as defined in clause (n) of S. 2 of the CrPC has been committed and it has been committed outside the country. The effect of S. 4 IPC and S. 188 CrPC is that an offence committed by an Indian citizen outside the country is deemed to have been committed in India.

An offence is defined in the CrPC to mean an act or omission made punishable by any law for the time being in force. None of the offences for which the appellant has been charged has residence as one of its ingredients. It is thus the commission of offence and not the residence of the accused which is decisive of jurisdiction. When two or more persons agree to do or cause to be done an illegal act or an act which is not illegal by illegal means such agreement is designated a criminal conspiracy under S. 120-A of the IPC. The ingredients of the offence are agreement and not the residence. Meeting of minds of more than two persons is the primary requirement. Even if it is assumed that the appellant was at Dubai and he entered into an agreement with his counterpart sitting in India to do an illegal act in India the offence of conspiracy came into being when agreement was reached between the two. The two minds met when talks, oral or in writing, took place in India. Therefore, the offence of conspiracy cannot be said to have been committed outside the country.

Preparation of bill of lading at Dubai or payment at Dubai were not isolated acts. They were part of chain activities between the appellant and his associates with whom he entered into agreement to cheat the bank at Chandigarh. Any isolated act or omission committed at Dubai was insufficient to constitute an offence. The illegal act of dishonestly inducing the bank at Chandigarh was committed not by preparation of bill at Dubai but its presentation in pursuance of agreement to cheat. The submissions thus founded on residence or on preparation of bills of lading or encashment at Dubai are of no consequence.

Nor is there any merit in the submission that even part of the offence would attract S. 188 as the section operates when offence is committed outside India. An offence is committed when all the ingredients are satisfied. The section having used the woprd offence it cannot be understood as part of the offence. Section 179 CrPC empowers a court to try an offence either at a place where the offence is committed or the consequences ensue. On the allegations in the complaint the act or omissions were committed in India. In any case the consequence of conspiracy, cheating and forgery having taken place at Chandigarh the offence was not committed outside the country. Therefore the provisions of S. 188 CrPC were not attracted. Ajay Aggarwal v. Union of India, (1993) 3 SCC 609: 1993 SCC (Cri) 961: AIR 1993 SC 1637: 1993 Cri LJ 2516: (1993) 2 ALT (Cri) 396.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and R.M. Sahai, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-1993]

— S. 190 See Ss. 11, 12, 13, 190, 129 and 151
See also Ss. 11, 13, 14, 18, 177 to 181, 190 and Ch. XXXI
See also Ss. 154, 159, 190 and 482
See also Ss. 154, 190, 156 and 157
See also Ss. 154, 190, 195, 196, 197 and 200
See also Ss. 154, 190 and 200
See also S. 156, 154, 157 and 190
See also Ss. 156, 157, 154, 190 and Ch. XII
See also Ss. 156, 157, 169, 173 and 190
See also Ss. 156, 157, 170, 173(8) and 190
See also Ss. 156, 157 and 190
See also Ss. 156 & 157 and 190 & 200 to 203
See also Ss. 156 and 190
See also Ss. 156, 190 and 200
See also Ss. 156(3), 157(1) proviso (b) & (2), 190, 200 and 154
See also Ss. 156(3), 173(8), 190, 200 and 204
See also Ss. 156(3) and 190
See also Ss. 156(3), 190 and 200
See also Ss. 157 & 155 and 190
See also Ss. 157, 156, 154 and 190
See also Ss. 157, 156, 169, 170, 173 and 190 & 173(8)
See also Ss. 157, 160, 167, 170, 190 and 319
See also Ss. 167, 309, 173 and 190
See also Ss. 167(2) proviso, 309, 173 and 190

See also Ss. 173 and 190
See also Ss. 173, 190 and 2(d)
See also Ss. 173(2), 169, 190, 200 and 203
See also Ss. 173(2) and 190
See also Ss. 173(2), (8), 190 and 203
See also Ss. 173(8), (2) and 190
See also Ss. 176, 177, 166-B, 188 and 190
See also Ss. 177, 190 and 173
See also Ss. 192 and 190
See also Ss. 193, 190, 156, 157 and 173
See also Ss. 195 and 190
See also Ss. 195, 190 and 340
See also Ss. 196, 190, 193 and 209
See also Ss. 197 and 190
See also Ss. 197, 190 and 173
See also Ss. 200, 204 and 190
See also Ss. 200 proviso (a) and 190
See also Ss. 202, 190 and 173
See also Ss. 202, 190 and 204
See also Ss. 204, 200, 190
See also Ss. 204, 203, 227, 228 and 190
See also Ss. 207, 209, 309, 170, 190 and 2(g)
See also Ss. 228, 167, 173, 2(g) & (h), 190 and 309
See also Ss. 239, 190 and 173
See also Ss. 319, 154, 156, 173, 190, 204, 209
See also Ss. 319 and 190
See also Ss. 319 and 190, 193 & 209
See also Ss. 397(2), 190 and 204
See also Ss. 468, 473 and 190
See also Ss. 475, 190, 200 to 204
See also Ss. 482 and 2(d), 154, 155 and 190, 200
See also Ss. 482 and 190
See also Ss. 482, 190 and 200
See also Ss. 482, 190, 203, 211, 227, 239 and 245
See also Ss. 482, 190 & 204
See also Ss. 482, 190, 228, 240 & 246
See also Ss. 482, 190, 301, 302 & 225
See also Ss. 482, 190, 468(2) and 473
See also Ss. 482 and 193, 190, 156 & 157
See also Ss. 482, 227 and 190

[2164] — Ss. 190, 200, 204, 173 and 482 — Power to take cognizance — Procedural safeguards like notice to complainant and application of mind to issues involved — Compliance with

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

It is not explained as to how the order of the High Court is prejudicial to the appellant. The High Court has directed all procedural safeguards to be followed. The High Court observed that the order of taking cognizance deserved to be set aside. The Magistrate was directed to consider the relevant materials as well as the earlier charge-sheet. It was directed that while taking note of the matter for fresh consideration a notice was required to be sent to the de facto complainant and giving the de facto complainant an opportunity of hearing which was to be done before the order was passed. The High Court also referred to applicability of Section 319 CrPC in appropriate cases. There is no infirmity in the High Court's order. (Paras 12 and 7 to 9). Chittaranjan Mirdha v. Dulal Ghosh, (2009) 6 SCC 661.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-2009]

Gangadhar Janardan Mhatre v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 7 SCC 768: 2005 SCC (Cri) 404, relied on

Bhagwant Singh v. Commr. of Police, (1985) 2 SCC 537: 1985 SCC (Cri) 267; Abhinandan Jha v. Dinesh Mishra, AIR 1968 SC 117; India Carat (P) Ltd. v. State of Karnataka, (1989) 2 SCC 132: 1989 SCC (Cri) 306, cited

[2165] — Ss. 190, 156(3) and 173(2) — "Taking cognizance" — Connotation of — Held, being an expression of indefinite import, it is neither practicable nor desirable to precisely define as to what is meant by "taking cognizance" — Whether the Magistrate has or has not taken cognizance of the offence will depend upon the circumstances of the particular case, including the mode in which the case is sought to be instituted and the nature of the preliminary action — Nevertheless before a Magistrate can be said to have taken cognizance of an offence, it is imperative that he must have taken notice of the accusations and applied his mind to the allegations made in the complaint or in the police report or the information received from a source other than a police report, as the case may be, and the material filed therewith — It is only when the Magistrate applies his mind and is satisfied that the allegations, if proved, would constitute an offence and decides to initiate proceedings against the alleged offender, that it can be positively stated that he has taken cognizance of the offence — Further held, cognizance is in regard to the offence and not the offender — In the instant case, after perusing the complaint made by complainant (Respondent 2) against appellant alleging commission of offences punishable under Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 478 IPC, Magistrate had ordered investigation under S. 156(3) CrPC — At this initial stage Magistrate could not be said to have taken cognizance — It was only after the police had finally submitted the police report that the Magistrate had taken cognizance (Paras 13 to 17). Fakhruddin Ahmad v. State of Uttaranchal, (2008) 17 SCC 157: (2008) 6 All LJ 249: (2009) 1 ECrN 455 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 4377: (2008) 3 APLJ 163 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-9-2008]

Ajit Kumar Palit v. State of W.B., AIR 1963 SC 765: 1963 Supp (1) SCR 953; R.R. Chari v. State of U.P., AIR 1951 SC 207, considered and relied on

Chief Enforcement Officer v. Videocon International Ltd., (2008) 2 SCC 492: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 471, relied on

Emperor v. Sourindra Mohan Chuckerbutty, ILR (1910) 37 Cal 412; Supdt. & Remembrancer of Legal Affairs v. Abani Kumar Banerjee, AIR 1950 Cal 437, approved

[2166] — S. 190 — Court's jurisdiction to take cognizance — Foundation of — Though police report is material on which cognizance is taken, held (per curiam), from that it cannot be said that a valid and legal police report is the foundation of the court's jurisdiction to take cognizance

Though a police report which results from an investigation as provided for in Section 190 CrPC is the material on which cognizance is taken, from that it cannot be said that a valid and legal police report is the foundation of the jurisdiction of the court to take cognizance. (Para 20). M.C. Mehta (Taj Corridor scam) v. Union of India, (2007) 1 SCC 110: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 264: AIR 2007 SC 1087: (2007) 53 AIC 192 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.B. Sinha[2], S.H. Kapadia[1] and D.K. Jain[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 27-11-2006]

[2167] — Ss. 190, 202 and 482 — Morally provocative statement not making out any offence — Role of criminal law — Abuse of process of court — Proper course for Magistrate at cognizance stage — Where numerous complaints under provisions of IPC and Indecent Representation of Women (Prohibition) Act for statement made by accused did not make out a prima facie case for any offence, held, Magistrate ought to have directed investigation into the allegations before taking cognizance — Striking caveat against lightly interfering with constitutional right to freedom of speech and expression, held, there is a presumption in favour of accused in such cases — Appellant's call for social acceptance of premarital sex, held, could not be subjected to interference under criminal law — Further, held, morality and criminality cannot be treated to be coextensive — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 153-A, 499, 500, 509, 292 — Indecent Representation of Women (Prohibition) Act, 1986, Ss. 4 and 6 — Constitution of India — Arts. 19(1)(a) & (2)

I, a news magazine conducted a survey on the subject of sexual habits of people residing in the bigger cities of India. One of the issues discussed therein was the increasing incidence of premarital sex. Thereafter, the magazine published the views expressed by various persons, including the appellant, a well-known actress. Expressing her personal opinion, she noted the increasing incidence of premarital sex, especially in the context of live-in relationships and called for societal acceptance of the same. Subsequently, D, a Tamil daily reproduced the appellant's statement published in the said magazine. It added that in a conversation with its correspondent, the appellant had defended her views and stated: "The persons who are protesting against my interview, are talking about which culture? Is there anyone who does not know about sex in Tamil Nadu? Is there anyone who does not know about AIDS? How many men and women do not have sex before marriage?" The appellant, however, in a legal notice to the editor of the said daily denied the said statement.

Several persons and organisations, particularly functionaries of a political party PMK filed as many as 23 criminal complaints against the appellant for the offences contemplated under Sections 499, 500, 509, 153-A and 292 IPC read with Sections 4 and 6 of the Indecent Representation of Women (Prohibition) Act, 1986. Most of the complaints were filed in various districts of T.N. State while one was filed in M.P.

The appellant then approached Madras High Court under Section 482 CrPC seeking quashment of said proceedings. Taking the view that the questions involved in the complaints required consideration by a trial Judge, the High Court rejected the plea of the appellant. However, the High Court directed all the complaints to be consolidated and tried by CJM at E. Aggrieved thereby, the appellant filed the present batch of appeals by special leave.

Before the Supreme Court, the appellant contended that: (i) the respondent complainants were not "persons aggrieved" within the meaning of Section 199(1) CrPC and could not therefore maintain the complaints; (ii) the opinion expressed by the appellant was protected by Article 19(1)(a) of the Constitution; (iii) the allegations made in the complaints, even if taken on their face value, did not disclose any offence under the provisions specified therein; and (iv) the criminal proceedings were instituted in a mala fide manner by workers of a particular political party to vilify the appellant and gain undue political mileage.

The respondents supported the order of the High Court.

Allowing the appeals,

Held :

The Framers of the Constitution recognised the importance of safeguarding the freedom of speech and expression since the free flow of opinions and ideas is essential to sustain the collective life of the citizenry. While an informed citizenry is a precondition for meaningful governance in the political sense, a culture of open dialogue must also be promoted when it comes to societal attitudes. (Para 45)

No doubt, in India, marriage is an important social institution, that there are certain individuals or groups who do not hold the same view. Notions of social morality are inherently subjective and the criminal law cannot be used as a means to unduly interfere with the domain of personal autonomy. Morality and criminality are not coextensive. (Paras 46 and 50)

If the complainants vehemently disagreed with the appellant's views, then they should have contested her views through the news media or any other public platform. The law should not be used in a manner that has chilling effects on the freedom of speech and expression. Dissemination of news and views for popular consumption is permissible under our constitutional scheme. An expression of opinion in favour of non-dogmatic and non-conventional morality has to be tolerated as the same cannot be a ground to penalise the author. (Paras 47, 50 and 45)

In order to establish the offence under Section 509 IPC it is necessary to show that the modesty of a particular woman or a readily identifiable group of women has been insulted by a spoken word, gesture or physical act. Clearly this offence cannot be made out when the complainants' grievance is with the publication of what the appellant had stated in a written form. (Para 23)

Likewise Section 153-A IPC has no application to the present case since the appellant was not speaking on behalf of one group and the content of her statement was not directed against any particular group either. (Para 23)

References to sex cannot be considered obscene in the legal sense without examining the context of the reference. (Paras 25 and 32)

There are numerous decisions, both from India and foreign countries which mandate that "obscenity" should be gauged with respect to contemporary community standards that reflect the sensibilities as well as the tolerance levels of an average reasonable person. (Para 27)

In the present case, the appellant has merely referred to the increasing incidence of premarital sex and called for its societal acceptance. At no point of time the appellant described the sexual act or said anything that could arouse sexual desires in the mind of a reasonable and prudent reader. Furthermore, the statement has been made in the context of a survey which has touched on numerous aspects relating to the sexual habits of people in big cities. It was published in a news magazine thereby serving the purpose of communicating certain ideas and opinions on the abovementioned subject. In the long run, such communication prompts a dialogue within society wherein people can choose to either defend or question the existing social mores. It is not possible to hold that the statements published as part of the survey were in the nature of obscene communications. (Paras 28 and 24)

The respondents' claim that the appellant's remarks could have the effect of misguiding young people by encouraging them to indulge in premarital sex is a little far-fetched since the appellant had not directed her remarks towards any individual or group in particular. For the sake of argument, even if it were to be assumed that the appellant's statements could encourage some people to engage in premarital sex, no legal injury has been shown since the latter is not an offence. (Para 29)

"Offence" means "an act or instance of offending"; "commit an illegal act" and "illegal" means, "contrary to or forbidden by law". "Offence" has to be read and understood in the context as it has been prescribed under the provisions of Sections 40, 41 and 42 IPC which cover the offences punishable under IPC or under special or local law or as defined under Section 2(n) CrPC or Section 3(38) of the General Clauses Act, 1897. (Para 30)

There is no statutory offence that takes place when adults willingly engage in sexual relations outside the marital setting, with the exception of "adultery" as defined under Section 497 IPC. (Para 31)

Moreover, it is necessary to fully understand the context and the purpose for which references to sex have been made in any given setting. (Paras 32 and 25)

There is no prima facie case of defamation in the present case. There was neither any intent on the part of the appellant to cause harm to the reputation of the complainants as contemplated by Section 499 IPC nor can one discern any actual harm done to their reputation. In short, both the elements i.e. mens rea and actus reus are missing. The appellant's statement published in I is a rather general endorsement of premarital sex and her remarks are not directed at any individual or even at a "company or an association or collection of persons". Even in the remarks published in D which have been categorically denied by the appellant, there is no direct attack on the reputation of anyone in particular. Instead, the purported remarks are in the nature of rhetorical questions wherein it was asked if people in Tamil Nadu were not aware of the incidence of sex. Even if those remarks are considered in their entirety, nowhere has it been suggested that all women in Tamil Nadu have engaged in premarital sex. (Paras 34 and 35)

The fact that most of the complainants are associated with PMK, a political party does add weight to the suggestion that the impugned complaints had been filed with the intention of gaining undue political mileage. (Para 36)

In respect of the offence of defamation, Section 199 CrPC mandates that the Magistrate can take cognizance of the offence only upon receiving a complaint by a person who is aggrieved. This limitation on the power to take cognizance of defamation serves the rational purpose of discouraging the filing of frivolous complaints which would otherwise clog the Magistrates' Courts. In the given facts of the present case, the complainants cannot be properly described as "persons aggrieved" within the meaning of Section 199(1) CrPC as there was no specific legal injury caused to any of them. (Para 37)

In the present case, the complainants have alleged defamation in respect of imputations against the character of Tamil-speaking women, which could perhaps be viewed as a class of persons. However, the appellant's remarks did not suggest that all women in Tamil Nadu have engaged in premarital sex. Even if it were assumed that the news item carried in D caused mental agony to some sections of women in Tamil Nadu, there is no prima facie case for any offence. (Para 43)

Thus, it has to be held that the institution of the numerous criminal complaints against the appellant was done in a mala fide manner. In order to prevent the abuse of the criminal law machinery, it would be appropriate to grant the relief sought by the appellant. In such cases, the proper course for Magistrates is to use their statutory powers to direct an investigation into the allegations before taking cognizance of the offences alleged. It is not the task of the criminal law to punish individuals merely for expressing unpopular views. The threshold for placing reasonable restrictions on the freedom of speech and expression is indeed a very high one and there should be a presumption in favour of the accused in such cases. It is only when the complainants produce materials that support a prima facie case for a statutory offence that Magistrates can proceed to take cognizance of the same. (Para 44)

In conclusion, it is held that the various complaints filed against the appellant do not support or even draw a prima facie case for any of the statutory offences as alleged. Therefore, the impugned judgment and order of the High Court is set aside. (Para 54). S. Khushboo v. Kanniammal, (2010) 5 SCC 600.

Bench Strength 3. Coram : K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and Deepak Verma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision : 28-4-2010]

S. Rangarajan v. P. Jagjivan Ram, (1989) 2 SCC 574; Ranjit D. Udeshi v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1965 SC 881: (1965) 2 Cri LJ 8; Samaresh Bose v. Amal Mitra, (1985) 4 SCC 289: 1985 SCC (Cri) 523; Gillick v. West Norfolk and Wisbech Area Health Authority, 1986 AC 112: (1985) 3 WLR 830: (1985) 3 All ER 402 (HL); M.S. Jayaraj v. Commr. of Excise, (2000) 7 SCC 552, followed

Proprietary Articles Trade Assn. v. Attorney General of Canada, AIR 1931 PC 94; Thomas Dana v. State of Punjab, AIR 1959 SC 375: 1959 Cri LJ 392; Jawala Ram v. State of Pepsu, AIR 1962 SC 1246: (1962) 2 Cri LJ 303; Standard Chartered Bank v. Directorate of Enforcement, (2006) 4 SCC 278: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 221; Lata Singh v. State of U.P., (2006) 5 SCC 475: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 478, relied on

G. Narasimhan v. T.V. Chokkappa, (1972) 2 SCC 680: 1972 SCC (Cri) 777; Knupffer v. London Express Newspaper Ltd., 1944 AC 116: (1944) 1 All ER 495 (HL), considered

[2168] — S. 190 — Cognizance of offence — When can be taken — At least some material indicating guilt of accused necessary, reiterated — Accused wife having illicit relations alleged to have poisoned husband — Medical report not showing poisoning as the cause — Only that in-laws did not participate in cremation of deceased — Cognizance based on suspicion, not sustainable — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302, 201, 328 and 120-B

It is well settled by a series of decisions of the Supreme Court that cognizance cannot be taken unless there is at least some material indicating the guilt of the accused. In the present case, there is not even an iota of material indicating the guilt of the accused persons. It is true that at the stage of taking cognizance, adequacy of evidence will not be seen by the court, but there has to be at least some material implicating the accused, and cognizance cannot be taken merely on the basis of suspicion, as it appears to have been done in the present case. To take a contrary view would only lead to harassment of people. (Paras 12 and 13)

Since there is no material on the basis of which cognizance was taken, the order taking cognizance of the offence is quashed. Resultantly, the impugned judgment of the High Court is set aside. (Para 15). Harishchandra Prasad Mani v. State of Jharkhand, (2007) 15 SCC 494.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-2007]

R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: (1960) 3 SCR 388: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Raghubir Saran (Dr.) v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 1: (1964) 2 SCR 336: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 1; State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539; Zandu Pharmaceutical Works Ltd. v. Mohd. Sharaful Haque, (2005) 1 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 283, relied on

[2169] — S. 190 — Filing of a complaint in court will not amount to taking cognizance of offence — Where a special statute bars taking cognizance beyond a specified period, held, magistrate is incompetent to take cognizance after expiry of that period. Krishna Pillai v. T.A. Rajendran, 1990 Supp SCC 121: 1990 SCC (Cri) 646.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Ranganath Misra, P.B. Sawant and K. Ramaswamy, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-11-1989]

A.R. Antulay v. Ramdas Sriniwas Nayak, (1984) 2 SCC 500: 1984 SCC (Cri) 277, relied on [2170] — Ss. 190, 156(3), 159 and 173 — Cognizance of offence by Magistrate — Directions that may be issued — Discretion as to filing of charge-sheet — Final report by police under S. 173 found no case against accused — Reiterated, Magistrate cannot direct filing of charge-sheet — However, he has power either to take cognizance of offence or direct further investigation. Ram Naresh Prasad v. State of Jharkhand, (2009) 11 SCC 299: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1336: (2009) 77 AIC 221 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-2-2009]

Abhinandan Jha v. Dinesh Mishra, AIR 1968 SC 117, impliedly followed

[2171] — Ss. 190, 200, 227, 228, 239, 240 and 319 — Standards of proof required to be applied at different stages of trial — Held, different standards are required to be applied at different stages — Whereas test of prima facie case may be sufficient for taking cognizance of an offence at stage of framing of charge, court must be satisfied that there exists a strong suspicion at stage of S. 319 CrPC (Para 22). Sarabjit Singh v. State of Punjab, (2009) 16 SCC 46.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-5-2009]

[2172] — Ss. 190, 202 and 482 — Audi alteram partem — Show-cause notice before issue of adverse directions by Court — Directions issued by High Court for initiating prosecution against a police official (appellant) — High Court while considering case of another police official regarding proportionality of sentence imposed on him, taking the view that appellant too should have been prosecuted at least for the offences for which the other police official had been prosecuted because appellant was considered to be the main offender — Home Secretary of the State and Director General of Police directed to look into the matter and take steps to prosecute appellant — Notice to appellant not issued by High Court before giving such directions — Held, High Court directions not sustainable in law for want of show-cause notice to appellant (Paras 5, 6 and 8). Gurmej Singh v. State of Punjab, (2009) 12 SCC 440: AIR 2009 SC 2699.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-4-2009]

Canara Bank v. V.K. Awasthy, (2005) 6 SCC 321: 2005 SCC (L&S) 833, relied on

[2173] — Ss. 190, 204 and 173 — Passing order taking cognizance of offence — Obligation of Judicial Magistrate to apply his mind to contents of charge-sheet — Need of application of mind to be reflected in said order

In a case of this nature where no case has been made out for taking cognizance of an offence under Section 420 of the Penal Code, it was obligatory on the part of the Chief Judicial Magistrate to apply his mind to the contents of the charge-sheet. Such application of mind on his part should have been reflected from the order. (Para 28). Devendra v. State of U.P., (2009) 7 SCC 495: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 461.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

State of Karnataka v. Pastor P. Raju, (2006) 6 SCC 728: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 179; Pawan Kumar Sharma v. State of Uttaranchal, Criminal Appeal No. 1692 of 2007 decided on 10-12-2007, relied on

[2174] — S. 190 — High Courts must also keep in mind the doctrine of forum non conveniens — Power of High Court to interfere with order of Magistrate taking cognizance under S. 190 CrPC — Scope — High Court should not ordinarily interfere with the order passed by a competent court except in a proper case — Only such High Court within whose jurisdiction the subordinate court passed the order has jurisdiction to entertain application under Art. 227 — Constitution of India, Arts. 226 and 227

In a criminal matter also the High Court may exercise its extraordinary writ jurisdiction but interference with an order of the Magistrate taking cognizance under Section 190 CrPC will stand somewhat on a different footing as an order taking cognizance can be the subject-matter of a revisional jurisdiction as well as of an application invoking the inherent jurisdiction of the High Court. A writ of certiorari ordinarily would not be issued by a writ court under Article 226 of the Constitution against a judicial officer. The High Court under Article 226 should not ordinarily interfere with an order taking cognizance passed by a competent court of law except in a proper case. Furthermore only such High Court within whose jurisdiction the order of the subordinate court has been passed, would have the jurisdiction to entertain an application under Article 227 of the Constitution unless it is established that the earlier cause of action arose within the jurisdiction thereof. The High Courts, however, must remind themselves about the doctrine of forum non conveniens also. (Paras 25, 28 and 29). Mosaraf Hossain Khan v. Bhagheeratha Engg. Ltd., (2006) 3 SCC 658: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 98: AIR 2006 SC 1288: 2006 Cri LJ 1683: (2006) 2 KLT 525.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-2-2006]

Naresh Shridhar Mirajkar v. State of Maharashtra, (1966) 3 SCR 744: AIR 1967 SC 1; Surya Dev Rai v. Ram Chander Rai, (2003) 6 SCC 675; Rupa Ashok Hurra v. Ashok Hurra, (2002) 4 SCC 388; Ranjeet Singh v. Ravi Prakash, (2004) 3 SCC 682; State of U.P. v. Surendra Kumar, (2005) 9 SCC 161; Kusum Ingots & Alloys Ltd. v. Union of India, (2004) 6 SCC 254; Union of India v. Adani Exports Ltd., (2002) 1 SCC 567; Mayar (H.K.) Ltd. v. Owners & Parties, Vessel M.V. Fortune Express, (2006) 3 SCC 100, relied on

[2175] — S. 190 — Magistrate — Meaning of Section 190 CrPC confers power on the Magistrate to take cognizance of an offence in one of the manners therein prescribed. The expression 'Magistrate' in S. 190 is a compendious term which includes Judicial Magistrate of the first class, Metropolitan Magistrate, Judicial Magistrate of the second class and Executive Magistrate. All the three are comprehended in S. 190. A.R. Antulay v. Ramdas Sriniwas Nayak, (1984) 2 SCC 500: 1984 SCC (Cri) 277: AIR 1984 SC 718: 1984 Cri LJ 647: 1984 Bom LR 228.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: D.A. Desai, R.S. Pathak, O. Chinnappa Reddy, A.P. Sen and V. Balakrishna Eradi, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-2-1984]

[2176] — S. 190 — Object — 'Take cognizance of offence' — Meaning of — The object of S. 190 is to ensure the safety of a citizen against the vagaries of the police by giving him the right to approach the Magistrate directly if the police does not take action or he has reason to believe that no such action will be taken by the police — Even though the expression 'take cognizance' is not defined, it is well settled by a catena of decisions of this Court that when the Magistrate takes notice of the accusations and applies his mind to the allegations made in the complaint or police report or information and on being satisfied that the allegations, if proved, would constitute an offence decides to initiate judicial proceedings against the alleged offender he is said to have taken cognizance of the offence — Cognizance is in regard to the offence, not the offender. Kishun Singh v. State of Bihar, (1993) 2 SCC 16: 1993 SCC (Cri) 470: 1993 Cri LJ 1700: (1993) 1 Crimes 494: (1993) 1 BLJR 309.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-1-1993]

[2177] — S. 190 — Pari materia provision — S. 190 CrPC, 1898, held was in pari materia with S. 190 CrPC, 1973 — CrPC, 1898, S. 190 (Para 26). Chief Enforcement Officer v. Videocon International Ltd., (2008) 2 SCC 492: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 471: AIR 2008 SC 1213: 2008 Cri LJ 1636.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-1-2008]

[2178] — S. 190 — Private complainant indulging in vexatious litigation based on half-baked knowledge of law wasting time of court — Held, should be retrained in the interests of administration of justice from filing similar applications — If still he persists, such application/complaint should be dismissed in limine and appropriate proceedings be initiated against him (Para 16). N. Natarajan v. B.K. Subba Rao, (2003) 2 SCC 76: 2003 SCC (Cri) 437: AIR 2003 SC 541: 2003 Cri LJ 820.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-12-2002]

[2179] — S. 190 — "Taking cognizance" — Meaning of

The expression "taking cognizance" in S. 190 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 merely means judicial application of mind of the Magistrate to the facts mentioned in the complaint with a view to taking further action. Thus what S. 190 contemplates is that the Magistrate takes cognizance once he makes himself fully aware of the allegations made in the complaint and decides to examine or test the validity of the said allegations. Tula Ram v. Kishore Singh, (1977) 4 SCC 459: 1977 SCC (Cri) 621: AIR 1977 SC 2401: 1978 Cri LJ 8.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and P.S. Kailasam, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-10-1977]

[2180] — S. 190 — 'Taking cognizance' — Meaning of — Different from initiation of proceedings — Cognizance is taken of cases and not of persons

Section 190 of the Code talks of cognizance of offences by Magistrates. This expression has been defined in the Code. In its broad and literal sense, it means taking notice of an offence. This would include the intention of initiating judicial proceedings against the offender in respect of that offence or taking steps to see whether there is any basis for initiating judicial proceedings or for other purposes. The word 'cognizance' indicates the point when a Magistrate or a Judge first takes judicial notice of an offence. It is entirely a different thing from initiation of proceedings; rather than it is the condition precedent to the initiation of proceedings by the Magistrate or the Judge. Cognizance is taken of cases and not of persons. It has, thus, reference to the hearing and determination of the case in connection with an offence. (Paras 43 and 44). State of W.B. v. Mohd. Khalid, (1995) 1 SCC 684: 1995 SCC (Cri) 266: AIR 1995 SC 785: (1995) 1 Crimes 397.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Mohan and M.K. Mukherjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-1994]

[2181] — S. 190 — Taking cognizance of complaint filed before cause of action matured — Complaint — If pre-mature — Minimum time-limit for filing, if any — Held, there is no minimum time-limit — Where the complaint was filed before the arising of cause of action in terms of S. 138 proviso (c) NI Act, 1881, held, instead of dismissing the complaint, taking of cognizance could be postponed till the arising of cause of action — In the instant case although complaint was filed before the expiry of the statutory period prescribed in proviso (c) to S. 138, trial court had taken cognizance after the expiry of that period — Hence, conviction by the trial and appellate courts upheld — High Court erred in reversing the said decisions on the ground that the complaint was premature — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 142(b) and 138 proviso (c)

The respondent borrowed Rs 2,30,000 from the appellant and issued a post-dated cheque in his favour. On 6-10-1994, the cheque was dishonoured by the bank due to "insufficient funds". The appellant served a notice upon the respondent on 26-10-1994 intimating him of the bouncing of the cheque and demanding repayment of the amount. The respondent did not respond. Therefore, the appellant filed a complaint under the Negotiable Instruments Act on 8-11-1994. The complaint was returned due to some defects therein. After the same was refiled the Court took cognizance on 17-11-1994. The trial court found the respondent to be guilty and sentenced him to simple imprisonment for six months. The appellate court upheld the decision but the High Court set aside the conviction on the ground that the complaint, having been filed within less than 15 days from the date of the notice, was premature. Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The compliance of proviso (c) to Section 138 enables the court to entertain a complaint. Section 142(b) prescribes a period within which the complaint can be filed from the date of the cause of action arising under proviso (c) to Section 138. No period is prescribed before which the complaint could not be filed, and if filed without disclosing the cause of action in terms of proviso (c) to Section 138, the court may not take cognizance till the time the cause of action arises to the complainant. (Para 7)

"Taking cognizance of an offence" by the court has to be distinguished from the filing of the complaint by the complainant. Taking cognizance would mean the action taken by the court for initiating judicial proceedings against the offender in respect of the offence regarding which the complaint is filed. Before it can be said that any Magistrate or court has taken cognizance of an offence, it must be shown that he has applied his mind to the facts for the purpose of proceeding further in the matter at the instance of the complainant. If the Magistrate or the court is shown to have applied his mind not for the purpose of taking action upon the complaint but for taking some other kind of action contemplated under CrPC such as ordering investigation under Section 156(3) or issuing a search warrant, he cannot be said to have taken cognizance of the offence. (Para 8)

Mere presentation of the complaint in the court cannot be held to mean that its cognizance had been taken by the Magistrate. If the complaint is found to be premature, it can await maturity or be returned to the complainant for filing later and its mere presentation at an earlier date need not necessarily render the complaint liable to be dismissed or confer any right upon the accused to absolve himself from the criminal liability for the offence committed. (Para 10)

In the instant case mere presentation of the complaint on 8-11-1994 when it was returned to the appellant-complainant on the ground that the verification was not signed by the counsel, could not be termed to be an action of the Magistrate taking cognizance within the meaning of Section 142 of the Act. No cognizance was taken on 8-11-1994, but the Magistrate applied his mind and took cognizance only on 17-11-1994. The High Court erred in holding the complaint to be premature and dismissing the same on that ground. (Paras 10 and 11)

Therefore, the impugned order of the High Court is set aside and the conviction of the respondent is upheld. (Para 12)

However, the respondent has admittedly paid the appellant a sum of Rs 3,94,243.33 which includes the cheque amount and the interest payable thereon. Therefore, no useful purpose would be served by sending the respondent back to jail as the interests of justice would be served by imposing a penalty of fine alone. Hence, the sentence of imprisonment awarded to the respondent is substituted with the imposition of fine of Rs 5000 provided that the same is deposited within two months. (Para 14). Narsingh Das Tapadia v. Goverdhan Das Partani, (2000) 7 SCC 183: AIR 2000 SC 2946: (2000) 3 KLT 605.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-9-2000]

Narayandas Bhagwandas Madhavdas v. State of W.B., AIR 1959 SC 1118: 1959 Cri LJ 1368; Gopal Das Sindhi v. State of Assam, AIR 1961 SC 986: (1961) 2 Cri LJ 39; Nirmaljit Singh Hoon v. State of W.B., (1973) 3 SCC 753: 1973 SCC (Cri) 521; Devarapalli Lakshminarayana Reddy v. V. Narayana Reddy, (1976) 3 SCC 252: 1976 SCC (Cri) 380, relied on [2182] — S. 190 — Taking cognizance of offence — Court not required to pass a reasoned order — It can take into consideration not only police report but also other materials on record (Paras 78 and 81). State of W.B. v. Mohd. Khalid, (1995) 1 SCC 684: 1995 SCC (Cri) 266: AIR 1995 SC 785: (1995) 1 Crimes 397.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Mohan and M.K. Mukherjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-1994]

[2183] — S. 190 — That offenders have to be put on trial is a social need — Criminal jurisprudence — Pursuit, apprehension, and punishment of an offender, held, subserve a critical social need — Society cannot afford to allow a criminal to escape his liability as the result of doing so would be social pollution

To pursue an offender in the event of commission of an offence is to subserve a social need — society cannot afford to have a criminal escape his liability, since that would bring about a state of social pollution, which is neither desired nor warranted and this is irrespective of the concept of locus — the doctrine of locus standi is totally foreign to criminal jurisprudence. (Para 5). Manohar Lal v. Vinesh Anand, (2001) 5 SCC 407: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1322: AIR 2001 SC 1820: 2001 Cri LJ 2044.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Misra and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-4-2001]

A.R. Antulay v. Ramdas Sriniwas Nayak, (1984) 2 SCC 500: 1984 SCC (Cri) 277, relied on

[2184] — Ss. 190, 154, 173, 200 and 204 — Filing of complaint or initiation of criminal proceedings distinguished from taking of cognizance of offence or issuing of process

The two things, namely, (1) filing of complaint or initiation of criminal proceedings; and (2) taking cognizance or issuing process are totally different, distinct and independent. So far as the complainant is concerned, as soon as he files a complaint in a competent court of law, he has done everything which is required to be done by him at that stage. Thereafter, it is for the Magistrate to consider the matter, to apply his mind and to take an appropriate decision of taking cognizance, issuing process or any other action which the law contemplates. The complainant has no control over those proceedings. Because of several reasons it may not be possible for the court or the Magistrate to issue process or take cognizance. But a complainant cannot be penalised for such delay on the part of the court nor can he be non-suited because of failure or omission by the Magistrate in taking appropriate action under CrPC. No criminal proceeding can be abruptly terminated when a complainant approaches the court well within the time prescribed by law. In such cases, the doctrine actus curiae neminem gravabit (an act of court shall prejudice none) would indeed apply. One of the first and highest duties of all courts is to take care that an act of court does no harm to suitors. (Paras 47 to 49). Japani Sahoo v. Chandra Sekhar Mohanty, (2007) 7 SCC 394: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 388: AIR 2007 SC 2762: (2007) 3 KLT 760: 2007 Cri LJ 4068.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2007]

[2185] — Ss. 190, 309, 320 and 482 — Concurrent civil and criminal liability — Maintainability of criminal action — Effect of judgment in civil proceedings — Loan obtained by fraud — Continuance of criminal proceedings after settlement and repayment of loan — Appellant and co-accused persons prosecuted for commission of offences under Ss. 120-B, 420, 467, 468 and 471 IPC — Allegation on appellant for taking part in conspiracy in defrauding the Bank for taking loan — Suit for recovery thereof filed by Bank before DRT in which settlement arrived at between Bank and appellant and loan repayed by appellant — Effect, if any, on maintainability of criminal action — Held, civil and criminal proceedings can proceed simultaneously — Bank is entitled to recover the amount of loan given to debtor — If in connection with obtaining loan, criminal offences were committed by persons accused thereof, including officers of Bank, criminal proceedings would also indisputably be maintainable — When a settlement is arrived at by and between creditor (Bank) and debtor (appellant), the offence committed as such does not come to an end — Judgment of Tribunal in civil proceeding and that too when it is rendered on the basis of settlement entered into between parties, would not be of much relevance in a criminal proceeding having regard to provisions contained in S. 43, Evidence Act — Judgment in civil proceedings will be admissible in evidence only for a limited purpose — Herein, prima facie case found out against appellant — There was no error apparent on face of the record warranting interference therewith — High Court rightly refused to quash the criminal proceedings — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 120-B, 420, 467, 468 and 471 — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 43 — CPC, 1908, S. 9 — Recovery of Debts Due to Banks and Financial Institutions Act, 1993, Ss. 18 and 19

It is not a case where the parties have entered into a compromise in relation to the criminal charges. In fact, the offence alleged against the accused being an offence against society and the allegations contained in the FIR having been investigated by CBI, the Bank could not have entered into any settlement at all. CBI has not filed any application for withdrawal of the case. Not only a charge-sheet has been filed, charges have also been framed. (Paras 2, 3, 10, 13 to 16 and 20). Rumi Dhar v. State of W.B., (2009) 6 SCC 364.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-4-2009]

Nikhil Merchant v. CBI, (2008) 9 SCC 677: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 858, referred to

CBI v. Duncans Agro Industries Ltd., (1996) 5 SCC 591: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1045, distinguished

[Ed.: See also (2009) 5 SCC 528 on the question of concurrent civil and criminal proceedings.]

[2186] — Ss. 190, 154, 200 and 482 — Principles as to res judicata — Not applicable in criminal proceeding — CPC, 1908, S. 11

The principle of res judicata has no application in a criminal proceeding. The principles of res judicata as adumbrated in Section 11 CPC or the general principles thereof will have no application in a case of this nature. (Para 25). Devendra v. State of U.P., (2009) 7 SCC 495: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 461.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

[2187] — Ss. 190, 154 and 200 — Simultaneous civil and criminal proceedings in a given case — Reiterated, permissible — But result in one proceeding not binding in another — CPC, 1908, Ss. 9, 15 & 33 and Or. 4 R. 1 and Or. 20 — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 43

In a given case, a civil suit as also a criminal proceeding would be maintainable. They can run simultaneously. Result in one proceeding would not be binding on the court determining the issue before it in another proceeding. (Para 13). Devendra v. State of U.P., (2009) 7 SCC 495: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 461.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

P. Swaroopa Rani v. M. Hari Narayana, (2008) 5 SCC 765: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 79; Seth Ramdayal Jat v. Laxmi Prasad, (2009) 11 SCC 545, relied on

[2188] — Ss. 190 & 200 — Simultaneous proceedings of civil and criminal nature by creditor against debtor i.e. civil suit for recovery of alleged loan amount and criminal proceedings under NI Act for dishonour of cheque allegedly issued for repayment of said loan — Permissibility — Subsequent acquittal in criminal proceedings — Effect — Rejection of plaint in civil suit, under Or. 7 R. 11(d) CPC on basis of said acquittal — Tenability of — Applicability of principles of res judicata — Continuance of civil proceedings after said acquittal if abuse of process of court — (1) Reiterating right of creditor to maintain both civil and criminal proceedings simultaneously; (2) distinguishing standard of proof required in civil proceedings from that in criminal proceedings, particularly where relevant statutory provisions impose reverse burden on accused [as under S. 139 of NI Act involved herein]; and (3) considering that civil suit was not barred on day it was filed, held, acquittal in the criminal proceedings would not make continuation of the civil proceedings abuse of process of court — Principle of res judicata as contained in S. 11 CPC or even general principles thereof not attracted in present case — Thus impugned judgment of High Court rejecting plaint under Or. 7 R. 11(d) CPC on ground of acquittal, by applying principles of res judicata, not sustainable — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 115 — CPC, 1908, Ss. 9, 11 and 12 & Or. 7 R. 11(d)

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

In the present case, the cause of action for institution of the civil suit was grant of loan whereas that of the criminal case (under Section 138, NI Act) was return of a cheque inter alia on the premise that the account of the accused was insufficient to honour it or that it exceeded the amount arranged to be paid from that account by an agreement with the Bank. (Para 10)

Section 138 of the NI Act contains a non obstante clause. In terms of Section 139 of the NI Act, a presumption in favour of the holder of the cheque may be raised that he had received the cheque of the nature referred to in Section 138 for the discharge, in whole or in part, of any debt or other liability. (Para 11)

There is no doubt or dispute that a creditor can maintain a civil and criminal proceeding at the same time. Both the proceedings, thus, can run parallelly. The fact required to be proved for obtaining a decree in the civil suit and a judgment of conviction in the criminal proceedings may be overlapping but the standard of proof in a criminal case vis-à-vis a civil suit is different. Whereas in a criminal case the prosecution is bound to prove the commission of the offence on the part of the accused beyond any reasonable doubt, in a civil suit "preponderance of probability" would serve the purpose for obtaining a decree. (Para 8)

Further, in a criminal proceeding, although upon discharge of initial burden by the complainant, the burden of proof may shift on an accused, the court must apply the principles of "presumption of innocence as a human right". The statutory provisions containing the doctrine of reverse burden must therefore be construed strictly. Whereas a provision containing reverse burden on an accused would be construed strictly and subject to the strict proof of the foundational fact by the complainant, in a civil proceeding no such restriction can be imposed. In a civil suit such strict compliance may not be insisted upon. If that be so, it may not be correct to contend that a judgment rendered in a criminal proceeding would make continuation of a civil proceeding an abuse of the process of court. (Paras 13 and 19)

Any person may as of right have access to the courts of justice. Section 9 CPC enables him to file a suit of civil nature excepting those, the cognizance whereof is expressly or by necessary implication barred. Order 7 Rule 11(d) CPC is one of such provisions which provides for rejection of plaint, if it is barred by any law. Order 7 Rule 11(d) CPC being one of the exceptions, thus, must be strictly construed. The embargo thereunder against the maintainability of the suit must be apparent from the averments made in the plaint. (Paras 20 and 7)

The civil suit was not barred on the day on which it was filed. If as on the date of institution of the suit, the plaint could not be rejected in terms of Order 7 Rule 11(d) CPC, its continuation would not attract the principles of abuse of processes of court only because the accused was acquitted in the criminal proceeding. (Para 21)

The principle of res judicata as contained in Section 11 CPC is not attracted in this case. Even general principle of res judicata would also not be attracted. A suit cannot be held to be barred only because the principle of estoppel subject to requisite pleading and proof may be applied. The said principle may not be held to be applicable only at a later stage of the suit. (Paras 22 and 31)

Hence, the impugned judgment cannot be sustained. It is set aside accordingly. (Para 32). Vishnu Dutt Sharma v. Daya Sapra, (2009) 13 SCC 729.
Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2009]

Krishna Janardhan Bhat v. Dattatraya G. Hegde, (2008) 4 SCC 54: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 166; Bharat Barrel & Drum Mfg. Co. v. Amin Chand Payrelal, (1999) 3 SCC 35; Noor Aga v. State of Punjab, (2008) 16 SCC 417, relied on [2189] — S. 190 — Criminal action also maintainable along with civil suit if the act constituted both a civil wrong and a criminal wrong. CBI v. Duncans Agro Industries Ltd., (1996) 5 SCC 591: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1045: AIR 1996 SC 2452.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-7-1996]

Distinguished in State, CBI v. Sashi Balasubra- manian, (2006) 13 SCC 252: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 337*

[2190] — S. 190 — Prosecution of ex-employee of company — Competency to file complaint — Divisional Sales Manager of company, held, competent to file complaint on behalf of company as per instructions given to him from head office — High Court's views affirmed — Companies Act, 1956 — Ss. 621 and 630. Atul Mathur v. Atul Kalra, (1989) 4 SCC 514: 1989 SCC (Cri) 761.
Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and S. Ratnavel Pandian, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-8-1989]

[2191] — S. 190 — Complaint under, for wrongful withholding of company's property — Merely because a civil suit filed by accused prior to institution of complaint criminal court not debarred from proceeding with complaint — Companies Act, 1956 — S. 630

Merely because the accused had schemingly filed a suit in civil court it can never be said that the civil court was in seisin of a bona fide dispute between the parties and as such the criminal court should have stayed its hands when the company filed a complaint under S. 630 of the Act. If such a view is taken it would not only lead to miscarriage of justice but also render ineffective the salutary provision of S. 630. Atul Mathur v. Atul Kalra, (1989) 4 SCC 514: 1989 SCC (Cri) 761.
Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Natarajan and S. Ratnavel Pandian, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-8-1989]

[2192] — S. 190 — Allegation that accused persons transferred shares on the basis of forged and fabricated signatures — Mere filing of a claim before the Consumer Forum would not make the dispute a civil dispute — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 406, 420, 467, 468 and 120-B. Ashok Chaturvedi v. Shitul H. Chanchani, (1998) 7 SCC 698: AIR 1998 SC 2796.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Sujata V. Manohar and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-1998]

[2193] — Ss. 190, 156(3) and 482 — Cognizance of offence taken by the Magistrate without referring the matter to the police under S. 156(3) — Propriety — Held, the Magistrate was justified in doing so where after examining the complainant on oath he was satisfied that prima facie the alleged offence was made out — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 499 and 503 (Para 3). Ram Swarup v. Mohd. Javed Razack, (2005) 10 SCC 393: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1549: AIR 2005 SC 2005: 2005 Cri LJ 1725.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-2-2005]

[2194] — Ss. 190, 173, 200 and 202 — At the stage of taking cognizance of offence the court should consider only averments made in the complaint or charge-sheet — Court is not required to sift and appreciate evidence at that stage

At the time of taking cognizance of the offence, the Court has to consider only the averments made in the complaint or in the charge-sheet filed under Section 173, as the case may be. It is not open for the Court to sift or appreciate the evidence at that stage with reference to the material and come to the conclusion that no prima facie case is made out for proceeding further in the matter. It is equally settled law that it is open to the Court, before issuing the process, to record the evidence and on consideration of the averments made in the complaint and the evidence thus adduced, it is required to find out whether an offence has been made out. On finding that such an offence has been made out and after taking cognizance thereof, process would be issued to the respondent to take further steps in the matters. If it is a charge-sheet filed under Section 173 of the Code, the facts stated by the prosecution in the charge-sheet, on the basis of the evidence collected during investigation, would disclose the offence for which cognizance would be taken by the court to proceed further in the matter. Thus it is not the province of the court at that stage to embark upon and sift the evidence to come to the conclusion whether offence has been made out or not. Rashmi Kumar v. Mahesh Kumar Bhada, (1997) 2 SCC 397: 1997 SCC (Cri) 415.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Ramaswamy, S.B. Majmudar and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-12-1996]

[2195] — Ss. 190, 173(2), 169, 200, 202 and 204 — Jurisdiction of Magistrate in respect of issuance of process or taking cognizance of offence — Conditions precedent to exercise of

The jurisdiction of the learned Magistrate in the matter of issuance of process or taking of cognizance depends upon existence of conditions precedent therefor. The Magistrate has jurisdiction in the event a final form is filed (i) to accept the final form; (ii) in the event a protest petition is filed to treat the same as a complaint petition and if a prima facie case is made out, to issue processes; (iii) to take cognizance of the offences against a person, although a final form has been filed by the police, in the event he comes to the opinion that sufficient materials exist in the case diary itself therefor; and (iv) to direct reinvestigation into the matter. (Para 54). Popular Muthiah v. State, (2006) 7 SCC 296: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 245.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-7-2006]

Abhinandan Jha v. Dinesh Mishra, (1967) 3 SCR 668: AIR 1968 SC 117: 1968 Cri LJ 97; Minu Kumari v. State of Bihar, (2006) 4 SCC 359: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 310, relied on [2196] — Ss. 190 and 193 — New Code provides for cognizance of an offence and committal of a case, as contradistinguished from cognizance of an offender or committal of an accused to Court of Session as was in the old Code — CrPC, 1898, Ss. 190, 193 and 206 (Para 23). Popular Muthiah v. State, (2006) 7 SCC 296: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 245.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-7-2006]

[2197] — Ss. 190 and 193 — Mere application of mind does not amount to taking cognizance unless the Magistrate does so for proceeding under Ss. 200/204. Kishun Singh v. State of Bihar, (1993) 2 SCC 16: 1993 SCC (Cri) 470: 1993 Cri LJ 1700: (1993) 1 Crimes 494: (1993) 1 BLJR 309.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-1-1993]

[2198] — Ss. 190, 193, 179 and 177 — Magistrate taking cognizance of offence need not have territorial jurisdiction to try the case as well — Any Judicial Magistrate of First Class has power to take cognizance of any offence, whether committed within his jurisdiction or not — Quashment by High Court of complaint on the ground that Magis- trate who took cognizance had no territorial jurisdiction to try that case, held, was improper and premature — Power of Judicial Magistrate of the First Class to take cognizance is not impaired by territorial restrictions

The Chairman of the appellant Company filed a complaint before the Judicial Magistrate of the First Class alleging that the directors of another company offered to supply "toasted soyabean extractions" for a price higher than the market price. The appellant had to pay the price in advance as demanded by the accused. So the same was paid through cheques. But the accused sent the commodity which was of the most inferior and sub-standard quality, thereby the complainant suffered a loss of Rs 17 lakhs. According to the appellant he was induced to pay the price on the representation that the best quality commodity would be supplied and the price was paid on such representation. But by supplying the most inferior quality the accused deceived the complainant. The Magistrate forwarded the complaint of the appellant for investigation as per his order passed under Section 156(3) CrPC. The accused Directors thereupon moved the High Court of Gujarat under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the complaint. The respondent's counsel in the High Court put forward mainly two contentions. The first was that the dispute was purely of a civil nature and hence no prosecution should have been permitted, and the second was that the Judicial Magistrate of the First Class had no jurisdiction to entertain the complaint. On the first count the Single Judge pointed out that there was a specific clause in the memorandum of understanding arrived at between the parties that disputes, if any, arising between them in respect of any transaction could be resolved through arbitration. The High Court took the view that the question whether the complainant Company did suffer the loss as alleged by it are matters to be adjudicated by the civil court and cannot be the subject-matter of criminal prosecution. The Single Judge also accepted the alternative contention regarding want of jurisdiction of the Magistrate.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

It is an erroneous view that the Magistrate taking cognizance of an offence must necessarily have territorial jurisdiction to try the case as well. The provisions of Sections 177 and 179 CrPC do not trammel the powers of any court to take cognizance of the offence. The only restriction contained in Section 190 is that the power to take cognizance is "subject to the provisions of this chapter". Section 193 imposes a restriction on the Court of Session to take cognizance of any offence as a court of original jurisdiction. But "any" Magistrate of the First Class has the power to take cognizance of any offence, no matter that the offence was committed within his jurisdiction or not. There is nothing in Chapter XIV of the Code to impair the power of a Judicial Magistrate of the First Class taking cognizance of the offence on the strength of any territorial reason. It is, therefore, impermissible to deprive such a Magistrate of the power to take cognizance of an offence — of course, in certain special enactments special provisions are incorporated for restricting the power of taking cognizance of offences falling under such acts. (Paras 11 and 13)

The jurisdictional aspect becomes relevant only when the question of enquiry or trial arises. It is therefore a fallacious thinking that only a Magistrate having jurisdiction to try the case has the power to take cognizance of the offence. If he is a Magistrate of the First Class his power to take cognizance of the offence is not impaired by territorial restrictions. After taking cognizance he may have to decide as to the court which has jurisdiction to enquire into or try the offence and that situation would reach only during the post-cognizance stage and not earlier. (Para 14)

The High Court, without considering any of the aforesaid legal aspects, rushed to the erroneous conclusion that the "Judicial Magistrate of the First Class, Gandhidham has no power to take cognizance of the offences alleged" merely because such offences could have been committed outside the territorial limits of the State of Gujarat. Even otherwise, without being apprised of the fuller conspectus a decision on the question of jurisdiction should not have been taken by the High Court at a grossly premature stage as this. (Para 15). Trisuns Chemical Industry v. Rajesh Agarwal, (1999) 8 SCC 686: AIR 1999 SC 3499: 1999 Cri LJ 4325.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-1999]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Rajesh Bajaj v. State (NCT of Delhi), (1999) 3 SCC 259, relied on

[2199] — Ss. 190, 193 and 195 to 199 & 204 — Word "cognizance" — Meaning of — Explained — Distinguished from "issuance of process" — Order remanding accused to judicial custody does not amount to taking cognizance of the offence

Several provisions in Chapter XIV of the Criminal Procedure Code use the word "cognizance". However, the word "cognizance" has not been defined in the Criminal Procedure Code. The dictionary meaning of the word "cognizance" is — "judicial hearing of a matter". Taking cognizance of an offence is not the same thing as issuance of process. Cognizance is taken at the initial stage when the Magistrate applies his judicial mind to the facts mentioned in a complaint or to a police report or upon information received from any other person that an offence has been committed. The issuance of process is at a subsequent stage when after considering the material placed before it the court decides to proceed against the offenders against whom a prima facie case is made out. (Paras 10 and 13). State of Karnataka v. Pastor P. Raju, (2006) 6 SCC 728: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 179: AIR 2006 SC 2825: (2006) 102 Cut LT 612: (2006) 3 KLT 830.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.P. Mathur and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2006]

[2200] — Ss. 190, 198-A, 209, 239, 240, 242 and 323 — Appreciation of prosecution evidence by Magistrate — Pursuant to a complaint filed by petitioner wife, investigation conducted and charge-sheet filed by police against her husband and others — CJM taking cognizance of offences under Ss. 498-A and 313 IPC and Ss. 3 and 4 of Dowry Prohibition Act — But subsequently CJM deleting the charge under S. 313 IPC by an order allowing accused's application in that behalf — That order not challenged but later application made by petitioner before CJM to proceed for trial of accused under S. 313 IPC — That application dismissed by CJM — Revision petition filed against CJM's order dismissed by High Court with the observation that previous order of CJM discharging the accused persons of offence under S. 313 IPC would be no bar to committal of case in accordance with S. 323 CrPC and that if on examination of the remaining witnesses and on looking to the relevant documents the Magistrate finds that the accused persons were shown to have committed offence under S. 313 IPC, he may commit the case to Sessions Court — Revisional order of High Court not challenged by petitioner — Accordingly, Magistrate continuing the trial, recording evidence of remaining PWs and passing a detailed order holding that it was not necessary to commit the case to Sessions Court and posting the case for recording the statement of the accused persons — Revision petition against that order dismissed by High Court — Held, no fault can be found with the order of Magistrate who had acted in compliance with the direction of the High Court

It was contended on behalf of the petitioner that the Magistrate committed a manifest error in appreciating the evidence produced by the prosecution as required for final disposal of the case either to convict or acquit the accused instead of considering only as to whether there was prima facie material to constitute a charge for offence under Section 313 IPC.

Dismissing the SLP,

Held :

The Magistrate was bound to follow the directions given by the High Court in the earlier revision petition. When the petitioner did not challenge the order of the High Court, she cannot now say that the Magistrate should not have taken into account the evidence of the witnesses examined in passing the order. (Para 5). Harijinder Kaur v. State of Jharkhand, (2001) 8 SCC 394: 2002 SCC (Cri) 88: AIR 2001 SC 3716.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and Shivaraj V. Patil, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-8-2001]

[2201] — Ss. 190, 200, 202 and 482 — Taking cognizance — Material relevant for — Where the statement made in the complaint and statements made under S. 202 taken on face value made out the offence, taking of cognizance, held, justified — At this stage other materials could not be considered by High Court to quash the cognizance — However, at the stage of framing of charge, the accused could argue as to whether the materials permitted the framing of the charge — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 406 and 420

On the basis of a complaint under Sections 406 and 420 IPC, the Magistrate issued process but subsequently recalled the same in respect of Section 420. The High Court refused relief to the accused under Section 482 and directed the Magistrate to reconsider the framing of charge under Section 420. The Supreme Court on facts found that the accused could not be required to face trial under Section 420.

In respect of the offence under Section 406 IPC, the accused contended that while framing of charge the court was duty-bound to look into the prima facie materials.

Rejecting this contention,

Held :

But that stage has not reached in the present case. The Magistrate has merely taken cognizance of the offence and has issued process and therefore at this stage the question of consideration of other materials does not arise and the court will have to take a view taking into account the fact that all the statements made in the complaint as well as the statement made under Section 202, if taken on their face value, an offence can be said to have been made out. Applying that standard, it is held that there was no error in taking cognizance of the offence. However, it would be open to the accused while framing charge to argue as to whether the materials do permit framing of a charge. (Para 4). Ajay Mehra v. Durgesh Babu, (2002) 9 SCC 709.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-2-2001]

[2202] — Ss. 190, 200, 204 and 156(3) — A Magistrate on receiving complaint under S. 190 may not take cognizance and order investigation under S. 156(3) (even if offence charged is exclusively triable by Court of Session) — Having done so he is not debarred on receiving final report of police from taking cognizance and proceeding with the complaint according to Ss. 200 and 204

While Chapter 14 (under which S. 190 falls) deals with post-cognizance stage, Chapter 12 (under which S. 156 falls), so far as the Magistrate is concerned, deals with pre-cognizance stage. Sections 190 and 156(3) are mutually exclusive and work in totally different spheres. A Magistrate can order investigation under S. 156(3) only at the pre-cognizance, stage that is to say before taking cognizance under Ss. 190, 200 and 204 and where a Magistrate decides to take cognizance under the provisions of Chapter 14 he is not entitled in law to order any investigation under S. 156(3) though in cases not falling within the proviso to S. 202 he can order an investigation by the police which would be in the nature of an enquiry as contemplated by S. 207 of the Code.

Where a Magistrate orders investigation by the police under S. 156(3) before taking cognizance and receives the report thereupon he can act on the report and discharge the accused or straightaway issue process against the accused or apply his mind to the complaint filed before him and take action under S. 190.

In the instant case, there is nothing to show that the Magistrate had taken cognizance of the complaint. Even though the complaint was filed before the Magistrate, he did not pass any order indicating that he had applied his judicial mind to the facts of the case for the purpose of proceeding with the complaint. What he had done was to keep the complaint aside and order investigation even before deciding to take cognizance on the basis of the complaint. After the final report was received the Magistrate decided to take cognizance of the case on the basis of complaint and accordingly issued notice to the complainant. As the allegation made against the accused made out a case exclusively triable by the Court of Session the Magistrate was clearly debarred from ordering any investigation, but he was not debarred from making any enquiry himself into the truth of the complaint. This is what exactly the Magistrate purported to have done in the instant case. Thus, the action taken by the Magistrate was fully supportable in law and he did not commit any error in recording the statement of the complainant and the witnesses and thereafter issuing process against the appellants. Tula Ram v. Kishore Singh, (1977) 4 SCC 459: 1977 SCC (Cri) 621: AIR 1977 SC 2401: 1978 Cri LJ 8.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and P.S. Kailasam, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-10-1977]

[2203] — Ss. 190, 161, 165 and 173 — Criminal proceedings commence only on taking cognizance of offence — Magistrate is not empowered to interfere with the police investigation

Per K. Ramaswamy, J.

It is only when Magistrate takes cognizance of the offence upon consideration of the material placed before him that proceedings in a criminal case stand commenced. Taking cognizance of the offence is coterminus with the power of the police to investigate in the crime. Until then there is no power to the Magistrate except on a private complaint in a cognizable/non-cognizable offence to direct the police to investigate into the offence. The Magistrate is not empowered to interfere with the investigation by the police. State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192: AIR 1991 SC 1260.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh[1] and K. Ramaswamy[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 2-4-1991]

[2204] — Ss. 190, 200 and 157 — Refusal of police to register FIR — Refusal by High Court to direct police to file FIR — Filing of criminal complaint before competent court as permitted by High Court — Effect of — Held, if a criminal complaint is filed, the same shall be considered on its own merit without being prejudiced by any observation made either in impugned order of High Court refusing to direct police to register FIR or in report submitted by the District Judge. Ravinder Kaur v. State of Punjab, (2006) 9 SCC 188: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 617.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-11-2005]

[2205] — Ss. 190 & 200 to 203 and 156 & 157 — Information to police regarding commission of cognizable offence — No action taken by police — Course open to complainant — Held, in such a case, complainant is given power under S. 190 read with S. 200 CrPC to lay down the complaint before the Magistrate concerned — Then the Magistrate is required to enquire into the complaint as provided in Ch. XV CrPC — Writ petition in such a case, held, not maintainable

When the information is laid with the police, but no action in that behalf is taken, the complainant is given power under Section 190 read with Section 200 of the Criminal Procedure Code to lay the complaint before the Magistrate having jurisdiction to take cognizance of the offence and the Magistrate is required to enquire into the complaint as provided in Chapter XV of the Code. In case the Magistrate after recording evidence finds a prima facie case, instead of issuing process to the accused, he is empowered to direct the police concerned to investigate into offence under Chapter XII of the Code and to submit a report. If he finds that the complaint does not disclose any offence to take further action, he is empowered to dismiss the complaint under Section 203 of the Code. In case he finds that the complaint/evidence recorded prima facie discloses an offence, he is empowered to take cognizance of the offence and would issue process to the accused. A writ petition in such cases is not to be entertained. (Para 16). Minu Kumari v. State of Bihar, (2006) 4 SCC 359: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 310: AIR 2006 SC 1937: 2006 Cri LJ 2468: (2006) 2 KLT 588: (2006) 3 Guj LR 2013.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-4-2006]

All India Institute of Medical Sciences Employees' Union (Regd.) v. Union of India, (1996) 11 SCC 582: 1997 SCC (Cri) 303; Gangadhar Janardan Mhatre v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 7 SCC 768: 2005 SCC (Cri) 404, relied on

[2206] — Ss. 190, 154, 156 & 157 — Direction by High Court to register case and conduct investigation in offence which took place about 18 years ago — Challenge to, by aggrieved appellant — Sustainability — Writ petition filed in 2004 by Respondent 3 seeking direction for registration of case against appellant in respect of case relating to year 1986 in which Respondent 3 was attacked and had suffered injuries — Impugned direction based on enquiry report of Dy. Inspector General, CID who conducted enquiry at the instance of High Court — Considering the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case, held, judgment of High Court not liable to be interfered with — Hence, upheld — Constitution of India, Art. 226

A writ petition was filed by Respondent 3 before the High Court alleging inaction on the part of the police authorities in not registering his complaint and taking action against the persons who had caused injuries to him and his sons in an incident occurring on 8-11-1986. The Single Judge of the High Court directed the Director General of Police (DGP) to appoint a senior police officer to conduct an enquiry into the matter. Pursuant to that order, the Dy. Inspector General, CID conducted the enquiry and submitted a report. The Single Judge held that once it was established that Respondent 3 had sustained injuries in the incident and injuries on his person were confirmed in the medical examination, the police authorities ought to have registered a case and taken appropriate steps in accordance with law. On the basis of the final report of the inquiry, the Single Judge directed the Superintendent of Police to register a case in the police station of competent jurisdiction and take action in accordance with law. The application filed by the appellant for recalling the said order was dismissed. Hence, the present appeal.

As per the appellant, he was tenant in the house of Respondent 3. Respondent 3 attempted to illegally evict the appellant from his rented house with the help of antisocial elements who came to his house armed with weapons on 8-11-1986. Respondent 3 along with his men started dismantling the house of the appellant without prior permission and/or notice to him. The appellant was seriously injured when he tried to obstruct them from dismantling the house. The appellant lodged a first information report under Sections 147/307 IPC against Respondent 3 and his men. Later, the said criminal case was withdrawn by the Public Prosecutor. The revision filed before the High Court against the said withdrawal was dismissed.

Before the Supreme Court the appellant contended that the High Court ought not to have passed any direction in the writ petition filed by Respondent 3 because it was filed after undue delay. The appellant was also aggrieved by the order of withdrawal of the prosecution against Respondent 3.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

The order of the High Court was primarily based on the report of the DIG, CID, Gwalior who had conducted the inquiry at the instance of the Court and submitted the report. On the basis of the inquiry report, the High Court directed the Superintendent of Police, Gwalior to take action for registration of the case and conduct the investigation and inquiry in accordance with law. (Para 21)

The impugned judgment of the High Court has been carefully examined. There is no infirmity therein. In the backdrop of the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case, no interference is called for. (Paras 22 and 23). Ghanshyam v. State of M.P., (2006) 10 SCC 473: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 602.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-9-2006]

[2207] — Ss. 190, 200, 203 and 156 & 157 — CBI enquiry — Writ petition seeking Court's direction to conduct enquiry by CBI into murder of petitioner's son, no action having been taken by police on FIR lodged by him — Held, cannot be entertained in view of relevant provisions of CrPC — Constitution of India, Art. 32

When the information is laid with the police, but no action in that behalf is taken, the complainant can under Section 190 read with Section 200 of the Code lay the complaint before the Magistrate having jurisdiction to take cognizance of the offence and the Magistrate is required to enquire into the complaint as provided in Chapter XV of the Code. In case the Magistrate after recording evidence finds a prima facie case, instead of issuing process to the accused, he is empowered to direct the police concerned to investigate into the offence under Chapter XII of the Code and to submit a report. If he finds that the complaint does not disclose any offence to take further action, he is empowered to dismiss the complaint under Section 203 of the Code. In case he finds that the complaint/evidence recorded prima facie discloses an offence, he is empowered to take cognizance of the offence and would issue process to the accused. A writ petition in such cases is not to be entertained. It is the case of the petitioner that he is under constant threat by some persons and his life and property are in danger. If he seeks any protection, it is the duty of the police officials concerned to provide such security as is warranted in the circumstances in accordance with law. (Paras 4 to 6). Hari Singh v. State of U.P., (2006) 5 SCC 733: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 63: AIR 2006 SC 2464: (2006) 130 DLT 591: (2006) 3 KLT 269: (2006) 5 All LJ 345: 2006 Cri LJ 3283.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-6-2006]

All India Institute of Medical Sciences Employees' Union (Regd.) v. Union of India, (1996) 11 SCC 582: 1997 SCC (Cri) 303; Gangadhar Janardan Mhatre v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 7 SCC 768: 2005 SCC (Cri) 404; Minu Kumari v. State of Bihar, (2006) 4 SCC 359: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 310, relied on

Applied in Aleque Padamsee v. Union of India, (2007) 6 SCC 171

[2208] — Ss. 190, 204, 173(2), 154, 162 and 319 — Person not included as accused in charge-sheet — If could be summoned after the cognizance of offence is taken — Held, such person can also be summoned by Magistrate after taking cognizance of offence, if some material is found against him having regard to the FIR, his statement recorded by police and other documents — S. 319 does not operate in such a situation — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420, 406 and 120-B

The appellant Company lodged an FIR against another concern MCIP and its partners. During investigation, it was revealed that Respondent 2 was the Managing Director of another sister Company PIC and two letters of credit given by the appellant were transferred by one of the accused S to PIC. On this discovery, notice under Section 160 CrPC was issued to Respondent 2 by the police. Because of stay order issued by the High Court, it was not possible for the police to interrogate Respondent 2 and to ascertain whether he was involved in the conspiracy. He was, therefore, not joined as accused in the charge-sheet submitted by the police, but his name was shown in column 2, which is meant for the accused who are not sent for the trial. It was also stated that the accused had cheated, misappropriated and caused wrongful loss to the appellant to the tune of Rs 2,10,60,000. On the basis of the said charge-sheet, the Metropolitan Magistrate issued summons against all the accused shown in the FIR for the offence under Sections 420/406/120-B IPC. On the next date of posting, he also issued the summons to Respondent 2. That part of the order was challenged by Respondent 2 by filing a criminal miscellaneous petition before the High Court. The High Court held that "the court was totally unjustified in summoning the petitioner when the petitioner was not shown in the column of accused persons in the charge-sheet". Relying on Section 319 CrPC, the High Court held that such persons could be summoned by the court under Section 319 only after the evidence has been recorded. Allowing the appeal,

Held :

At the stage of taking cognizance of the offence, provisions of Section 190 CrPC would be applicable. As per this provision, the Magistrate takes cognizance of an offence and not the offender. After taking cognizance of the offence, the Magistrate under Section 204 CrPC is empowered to issue process to the accused. At the stage of issuing process, it is for the Magistrate to decide whether process should be issued against particular person/persons named in the charge-sheet and also not named therein. For that purpose, he is required to consider the FIR and the statements recorded by the police officer and other documents tendered along with charge- sheet. Further, upon receipt of police report under Section 173(2) CrPC, the Magistrate is entitled to take cognizance of an offence under Section 190(1)(b) even if the police report is to the effect that no case is made out against the accused by ignoring the conclusion arrived at by the investigating officer and independently applying his mind to the facts emerging from the investigation by taking into account the statement of the witnesses examined by the police. At this stage, there is no question of application of Section 319 CrPC. That provision would come into operation in the course of any enquiry into or trial of an offence. In the present case, neither the Magistrate was holding enquiry as contemplated under Section 2(g) CrPC nor had the trial started. He was exercising his jurisdiction under Section 190 by taking cognizance of an offence and issuing process. There is no bar under Section 190 CrPC that once the process is issued against some accused, on the next date, the Magistrate cannot issue process to some other person against whom there is some material on record, but his name is not included as accused in the charge-sheet. (Paras 6 and 7). SWIL Ltd. v. State of Delhi, (2001) 6 SCC 670: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1205: AIR 2001 SC 2747.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-8-2001]

Raghubans Dubey v. State of Bihar, AIR 1967 SC 1167: 1967 Cri LJ 1081: (1967) 2 SCR 423, relied on [2209] — Ss. 190, 211 and 228 — Offences for which accused should be tried — Proper stage for considering — Offences indicated in police report — Relevance — Held, Magistrate is not bound to take cognizance of offences indicated in the police report — Proper stage for considering the offences for which the accused should be tried is the stage of framing of charge(s) — Magistrate taking cognizance of offence under Ss. 498-A, 323, 504 IPC r/w Ss. 3 and 4 of Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961 — Informant filing an application before the Magistrate concerned to the effect that on the basis of evidence collected by the investigating officer, cognizance ought to have been taken for offence punishable under Ss. 406 and 307 IPC — Magistrate of the view that after evidence was adduced, if commission of the offence punishable under Ss. 406 and 307 IPC was made out, then the prayer of the informant could be considered — Respondent filing a petition before the High Court stating that the materials collected by the investigating officer and contained in the case diary itself justified trial under Ss. 307 and 406 IPC and hence the case should be tried by the Court of Session — High Court on that basis opined that in such cases the Magistrate should at the time of framing charges consider and decide points so that unnecessary proceedings are not taken up if the case is to ultimately go before the Sessions Judge — Consequently it issued direction to consider and decide the matter afresh — Having opined that the proper stage for consideration was stage of framing charge, held, there was no necessity for further observations and/or directions (Paras 3 and 5). Anurag Rastogi v. State of U.P., (2007) 4 SCC 771: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 410: (2007) 51 AIC 4 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 1454: (2007) 2 All LJ 742.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Lokeshwar Singh Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-2-2007]

[2210] — Ss. 190 and 173 — Complaint — Police report filed thereupon — But complaint accompanied by a false affidavit — Effect — Held, on facts, cognizance was taken on the police report and not on the complaint (Paras 2, 3, 6 and 8). Har Prasad v. Ranveer Singh, (2008) 11 SCC 431: AIR 2008 SC 1265: 2008 Cri LJ 1655: (2008) 2 All LJ 792.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-2-2008]

Abhinandan Jha v. Dinesh Mishra, AIR 1968 SC 117, relied on

[2211] — Ss. 190 and 173 — Magistrate's power to take cognizance — Investigation pending against person and offence not made out as per charge-sheet — Effect — Held, depending on the nature of the charge-sheet (police report), cognizance may be taken as against such a person as well

Even in the same case, depending upon the nature of charge-sheet filed by the investigating officer in terms of Section 173 CrPC, cognizance may be taken as against the person against whom an offence is said to have been made out and against whom no such offence has been made out even when investigation is pending. (Para 38). Dinesh Dalmia v. CBI, (2007) 8 SCC 770: (2007) 59 AIC 145 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-2007]

[Ed.: See also (2006) 4 SCC 359, (2004) 7 SCC 768, (2003) 12 SCC 129 and (1989) 2 SCC 132.]

[2212] — Ss. 190 and 357 — Cognizance without adjudication, held, not sufficient to award compensation — Compensation for custodial death — Entitlement to relief, prior to adjudication of question of custodial death — Petitioner's son allegedly committing suicide inside police lock-up — FIR lodged, police officials concerned arrested, charge-sheet for offences under Ss. 330, 342 and 306 IPC filed, cognizance taken by court and bail applications rejected — Held, no compensation can be granted in the absence of any adjudication on the issue as to whether there was custodial death — Universal Declaration of Human Rights, 1948, Art. 5 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 330, 342 and 306 — Constitution of India, Arts. 32, 21 and 22

The petitioner lodged an FIR for the custodial death of his son. The police alleged that the deceased who had been arrested for the theft of some mobile phone committed suicide inside the lockup. Allegedly attempts by the petitioner to have an impartial post-mortem of the body of the deceased were thwarted by the police who was insisting on the theory of the suicide by hanging with the help of a shirt. It was alleged that the external injuries all over the body of the deceased were not explained and in fact the post-mortem report itself was not accurate as compared with the photographs. The petitioner and his other family members gave a statement setting out the facts.

Pursuant to notice issued in this case, the State filed its response that an FIR had been registered and certain police officials had been charged for commission of offences punishable under Sections 330, 342 and 306 IPC. Sanction for prosecution had been given and the charge-sheet had been filed. The accused persons had surrendered before the CJM and their bail applications had been rejected. Cognizance of the aforesaid offences had been taken. It was submitted that the police after investigation had not found any evidence of murder and, therefore, the charge-sheet had been filed accordingly. Counsel for the petitioner submitted that it was a clear case of custodial torture and death and by giving a colour of Section 306 IPC, an attempt was being made to protect the erring police officials. It was also stated that the compensation should be paid.

Disposing of the petition in the terms below,

Held:

No compensation can be granted in the absence of any adjudication on the issue as to whether there was custodial death. In view of the fact that sanction for prosecution had been granted, charge-sheet had been filed and cognizance had been taken, no further direction at present is necessary. If at any point of time, evidence surfaces before the court concerned to show that some other offences appear to have been committed, necessary orders can be passed. (Paras 14 and 15). Dalbir Singh v. State of U.P., (2009) 11 SCC 376: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1388: AIR 2009 SC 1674: 2009 Cri LJ 1543: (2009) 75 AIC 115 (SC): (2009) 2 All LJ 661: (2009) 1 APLJ 110 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-2-2009]

Shakila Abdul Gafar Khan v. Vasant Raghunath Dhoble, (2003) 7 SCC 749, relied on

[2213] — Ss. 190 and 173 — Recalling of order taking cognizance — Permissibility — Held, ordinarily, the same is not permissible

In the present case, if it is to be accepted that the appellant-accused was entitled to the protection of Section 167, even after cognizance had been taken the Magistrate was not only required to declare the charge-sheet illegal, he was also required to recall his own order of taking cognizance. Ordinarily, he could not have done so. (Para 30). Dinesh Dalmia v. CBI, (2007) 8 SCC 770: (2007) 59 AIC 145 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-2007]

Adalat Prasad v. Rooplal Jindal, (2004) 7 SCC 338: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1927; Subramanium Sethuraman v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 13 SCC 324: 2005 SCC (Cri) 242; Everest Advertising (P) Ltd. v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (2007) 5 SCC 54: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 444, relied on [2214] — Ss. 190 and 192 — Police inaction in murder or suicide — Only proper court can investigate — Supreme Court cannot in a petition determine such matter. Bhagwant Singh v. Commr. of Police, (1983) 3 SCC 344: 1983 SCC (Cri) 637: AIR 1983 SC 826: 1983 Cri LJ 1081.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and R.S. Pathak, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-1983]

[2215] — Ss. 190 and 193 — Cognizance of offence to be taken by Magistrate even if the case is exclusively triable by Sessions Court — Magistrate's function under S. 190 is judicial

Taking cognizance of an offence under S. 190 is a purely judicial function subject to judicial review by court of appeal or revision to which the Magistrate is subject. Cognizance of an offence even if exclusively triable by the Court of Session has to be taken by the Magistrate because S. 193 precludes the Court of Session from taking cognizance of any offence. State of U.P. v. Lakshmi Brahman, (1983) 2 SCC 372: 1983 SCC (Cri) 489: AIR 1983 SC 439: 1983 Cri LJ 839: 1983 ALJ 419.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.A. Desai and R.B. Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-1983]

[2216] — Ss. 190 and 193 — Methods of taking cognizance of offence

The Code of Criminal Procedure has prescribed four known methods of taking cognizance of offences by the courts competent to try the same. The court has to take cognizance of the offence before initiation of the proceeding can be contemplated. The court called upon to take cognizance of the offence must apply its mind to the facts placed before it either upon a police report or upon a complaint or in some other manner the court came to know about it and in the case of Court of Session upon commitment of the case by the Magistrate. A.R. Antulay v. Ramdas Sriniwas Nayak, (1984) 2 SCC 500: 1984 SCC (Cri) 277: AIR 1984 SC 718: 1984 Cri LJ 647: 1984 Bom LR 228.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: D.A. Desai, R.S. Pathak, O. Chinnappa Reddy, A.P. Sen and V. Balakrishna Eradi, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-2-1984]

[2217] — Ss. 190 and 197 — Proper materials should be placed before the court to substantiate the claim that the allegations made in the complaint were false — There must be some foundation for the allegation and minute details are not neces- sary — At the cognizance stage, veracity of the allegations are not examined. B. Saha v. M.S. Kochar, (1979) 4 SCC 177: 1979 SCC (Cri) 939: AIR 1979 SC 1841: 1979 Cri LJ 1367: (1979) 16 ACC 318.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria, P.N. Shinghal and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-1979]

[2218] — Ss. 190 and 200 to 203, 154 and 156 — Information to police regarding commission of cognizable offence — Accused alleged to have made speeches likely to disturb communal harmony — No action taken by police — Proper remedy in case of — Held, in such a case, complainant is given power under S. 190 r/w S. 200 CrPC to lay the complaint before the Magistrate concerned — Then Magistrate is required to enquire into the complaint as provided in Ch. XV CrPC — Writ petition in such a case, held, not maintainable — Constitution of India, Arts. 32 and 226 (Paras 6 to 8). Aleque Padamsee v. Union of India, (2007) 6 SCC 171: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 1: 2007 Cri LJ 3729: (2007) 56 AIC 20 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, P.K. Balasubramanyan and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-7-2007]

All India Institute of Medical Sciences Employees' Union (Regd.) v. Union of India, (1996) 11 SCC 582: 1997 SCC (Cri) 303; Gangadhar Janardan Mhatre v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 7 SCC 768: 2005 SCC (Cri) 404; Minu Kumari v. State of Bihar, (2006) 4 SCC 359: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 310; Hari Singh v. State of U.P., (2006) 5 SCC 733: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 63, applied

Ramesh Kumari v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2006) 2 SCC 677: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 678; Lallan Chaudhary v. State of Bihar, (2006) 12 SCC 229: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 684, clarified and distinguished [2219] — Ss. 190 and 200 to 203, 154 and 156 — Information to police regarding commission of cognizable offence — No action taken by police — Held, in such a case, complainant is given power under S. 190 r/w S. 200 CrPC to lay the complaint before the Magistrate concerned — Then the Magistrate is required to enquire into the complaint as provided in Ch. XV CrPC — Writ petition in such a case, held, not maintainable (Para 13). Gangadhar Janardan Mhatre v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 7 SCC 768: (2004) 114 DLT 193.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-9-2004]

All India Institute of Medical Sciences Employees' Union (Regd.) v. Union of India, (1996) 11 SCC 582: 1997 SCC (Cri) 303, relied on

Applied in Aleque Padamsee v. Union of India, (2007) 6 SCC 171

[2220] — Ss. 190, 154, 173 and 200 — Serious offences — Delay in institution of prosecution — Effect of — Held, mere delay in approaching a court of law is not a ground for dismissing the case though it may be a relevant circumstance in reaching a final verdict — Maxims — Nullum tempus aut locus occurrit regi

The provisions as to limitation have been inserted by Parliament in the larger interest of administration of criminal justice keeping in view two conflicting considerations:

(i) the interest of persons sought to be prosecuted (prospective accused);

(ii) and organs of State (prosecuting agencies). (Para 20)

The general rule of criminal justice is that "a crime never dies". The principle is reflected in the well-known maxim nullum tempus aut locus occurrit regi (lapse of time is no bar to Crown in proceeding against offenders). The Limitation Act, 1963 does not apply to criminal proceedings unless there are express and specific provisions to that effect, for instance, Articles 114, 115, 131 and 132 of the Act. It is settled law that a criminal offence is considered as a wrong against the State and the society even though it has been committed against an individual. Normally, in serious offences, prosecution is launched by the State and a court of law has no power to throw away prosecution solely on the ground of delay. Mere delay in approaching a court of law would not by itself afford a ground for dismissing the case though it may be a relevant circumstance in reaching a final verdict. (Para 14)

But it also cannot be overlooked that no person can be kept under continuous apprehension that he can be prosecuted at "any time" for "any crime" irrespective of the nature or seriousness of the offence. "People will have no peace of mind if there is no period of limitation even for petty offences." (Para 16). Japani Sahoo v. Chandra Sekhar Mohanty, (2007) 7 SCC 394: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 388: AIR 2007 SC 2762: (2007) 3 KLT 760: 2007 Cri LJ 4068.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2007]

Asstt. Collector of Customs v. L.R. Melwani, AIR 1970 SC 962: (1969) 2 SCR 438: 1970 Cri LJ 885, relied on [2221] — S. 190 — Cognizance of offence taken after more than 21 years of lodging of FIR — FIR lodged on 5-8-1979, but for unknown reasons, proceedings not placed before the Magistrate, who was to take cognizance, for more than ten years (from year 1990 to 2000) — Who played that mischief not found out — Due to the efforts of appellant, case placed before the ACJM and cognizance of the offence under S. 302 IPC taken against the respondent on 28-1-2000 — Considering respondent's contention that the case had been dragged on for a long period of 21 years without any fault on the part of the accused, High Court dropping the prosecution by holding that the cognizance of the matter was taken in a mechanical manner — Held, it is the duty of the courts to see that neither the victim nor the accused suffers by mischief of the investigating agency or the staff of the court — Further, the said ground was not sufficient for dropping the prosecution where the accused were involved for the offences punishable under Ss. 302, 147, 148 and 149 IPC — The instant case, held, revealed a sorry state of affairs in administration of justice by the court concerned. Ram Ekbak Missir v. Ram Niwash Pandey, (2002) 8 SCC 161: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1870: AIR 2002 SC 3523.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-10-2002]

[2222] — S. 190 — Complaint — Three/four months' delay in filing — On facts, held, not fatal to the maintainability of the complaint — Infraction of person of lady outraging her modesty despite her objection, with culpable intention — Conviction under, held on facts, was justified — Senior police officer (DGP in the present case) despite objection from a lady gently slapping her on her posterior in the presence of guests at a dinner party — By doing so with culpable intention, held, he committed the offence under Ss. 354 and 509 IPC — Since immediately thereafter the victim reported the matter to various officers present there and pursued the matter with other authorities including the Chief Secretary and the Governor and after 10 days lodged an FIR with the police but finding those efforts to have gone in vain her husband filed a complaint with the CJM after a period of three/four months, such delay, held, not fatal to the maintainability of the complaint — Moreover, in view of the concurrent findings of fact recorded by two courts and affirmed by High Court in revision, held, High Court's order upholding the conviction could not be set aside on mere assertion by the accused that the whole incident was falsely foisted on him with ulterior motives — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 354 and 509

On 18-7-1988, a senior IAS officer invited some IAS and IPS officers, advocates and journalists for a dinner at 8.30 p.m. at his residence. Ladies were sitting in a semi-circle slightly away from the male guests. The appellant accused, who was the then DGP of the State of Punjab, allegedly came and occupied a chair which was lying vacant at the place where the ladies were sitting. On the pretext of some intended talks the accused asked the prosecutrix to sit near him and when she intended to do so the accused pulled the chair close to his chair and on resistance from the prosecutrix repeated that act. The prosecutrix then returned to her original seat. The accused again reached there and despite objection from the prosecutrix, pressed her to accompany him. Moreover, the accused blocked her way. The prosecutrix then tried to get away from the place whereupon the accused slapped on the posterior of the prosecutrix in the presence of other guests. The prosecutrix then made a complaint to the host who got the accused gently removed from that place. She thereafter brought the matter to the notice of the Chief Secretary with the request to take suitable action against the accused. She also met the Advisor to the Governor, the Secretary to the Governor as well as the Governor with the same purpose. On 29-7-1988, she gave a written complaint to the police and a case was registered but no further step was taken. After about four months, the husband of the prosecutrix filed a complaint before the CJM. The complaint culminated in conviction of the accused under Sections 354 and 509, IPC. He was sentenced to undergo a sentence of imprisonment and to pay fine but the appellate court directed the accused to be released on probation in lieu of custodial sentence. However, it enhanced the amount of fine to Rs 50,000. The High Court upheld the conviction but enhanced the fine further to Rs 2,00,000, the entire of which was directed to be given to the prosecutrix. The present cross appeals were filed against that judgment.

Denying the correctness of the findings, the appellant accused contended that the entire case was falsely foisted on him. Much emphasis was laid by him on the delay of three months in the filing of the complaint.

On the other hand the complainant in her cross appeal solicited enhancement of the appeal. Moreover, she submitted that the amount of compensation awarded in her favour should instead be given to any women's organisation engaged in doing service for the cause of women.

Dismissing both the appeals, but referring the matter of disposal of the compensation to the High Court,

Held :

Although there was some delay in filing the complaint before the Magistrate, but that by itself was not sufficient to reject the complaint put forward by the prosecutrix. It is important that she recounted the entire incident immediately to the

Chief Secretary and other officers and raised objections and also sought for stringent action against the accused. When she failed in all these attempts, she and her husband filed a criminal complaint before the Chief Judicial Magistrate. There is nothing to suggest that the prosecutrix acted in connivance with some others and that she hatched a conspiracy to malign the accused. If the whole incident is viewed in correct perspective, it is clear that the behaviour of the accused on the date of the incident was not consistent with the high standard expected of a top-ranking police officer. The findings of the various courts is to the effect that the accused gently slapped on the posterior of the prosecutrix in the presence of some guests. This act on the part of the accused would certainly constitute the ingredient of Section 354 IPC. It is proved that the accused used criminal force with the intent to outrage the modesty of the complainant and that he knew fully well that gently slapping on the posterior of the prosecutrix in the presence of other guests would embarrass her. Knowledge can be attributed to the accused that he was fully aware that touching the body of the prosecutrix at that place and time would amount to outraging her modesty. Had it been without any culpable intention on the part of the accused, nobody would have taken notice of the incident. The prosecutrix made such a hue and cry immediately after the incident and the reaction of the prosecutrix is very much relevant to take note of the whole incident. The accused being a police officer of the highest rank should have been exceedingly careful and failure to do so and by touching the body of the complainant with culpable intention he committed the offence punishable under Sections 354 and 509 IPC. In view of the findings of fact recorded by the two courts and affirmed by the High Court in revision, the order of the High Court cannot be set aside on mere assertion by the accused that the whole incident was falsely foisted on him with ulterior motives. (Para 4)

As regards the appeal filed by the complainant, it is relevant that the incident happened in 1988. Despite the accused holding a high position in the State police, the various courts found him guilty of the offence punishable under Sections 354 and 509 IPC and that by itself is setting a model for others and would enhance the faith in the judicial system. The accused has completed the period of probation. There was no occasion for any complaint or violation of any of the terms of the bond. At this juncture, it would not be just and proper to resort to any other punishment. (Para 6). Kanwar Pal Singh Gill v. State, (2005) 6 SCC 161: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1420: AIR 2005 SC 3104: 2005 Cri LJ 3443.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2005]

[2223] — Ss. 190 and 319 — Maxims — Generalia specialibus non derogant — Contention that court takes cognizance of an offence and not of an offender and hence where cognizance had already been taken as against one J, no fresh sanction was required against D for same offence — Held, such contention holds good only when Magistrate takes cognizance under S. 190 CrPC — Further held, Prevention of Corruption Act is a special statute and hence maxim generalia specialibus non derogant would apply — Hence, S. 19 of PC Act, will have an overriding effect over the general provisions of S. 190 or S. 319 CrPC — Special Judge trying an offence under the PC Act cannot summon another accused and proceed against him in purported exercise of power under S. 319 CrPC in absence of valid sanction — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 13(2) and 19(1) (Paras 3 and 8). Dilawar Singh v. Parvinder Singh, (2005) 12 SCC 709.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-11-2005]

Raghubans Dubey v. State of Bihar, (1967) 2 SCR 423: AIR 1967 SC 1167: 1967 Cri LJ 1081, distinguished on facts

Godde Venkateswara Rao v. Govt. of A.P., (1966) 2 SCR 172: AIR 1966 SC 828; State of Bihar v. Dr. Yogendra Singh, (1982) 1 SCC 664: 1982 SCC (L&S) 142; Maharashtra State Board of Secondary and Higher Secondary Education v. Paritosh Bhupeshkumar Sheth, (1984) 4 SCC 27, relied on

Followed in Paul Varghese v. State of Kerala, (2007) 14 SCC 783*

[2224] — Ss. 190 and 482 — Power of Magistrate to issue process against more persons on the basis of private complaint — Power of High Court to interfere with such exercise of power — Propriety of High Court going into merits at such stage — Right of such accused to pray for discharge upon committal under S. 227, CrPC, 1973

Under S. 190, Criminal Procedure Code, 1973, the Magistrate takes cognizance of an offence made out in the police report or in the complaint and there is nothing like taking cognizance of the offenders at that stage. As to who actually the offenders are is to be decided by the Magistrate after taking cognizance of the offence.

The Magistrate is restricted to find out whether there was a prima facie case or not for proceeding against the accused, and he cannot enter into a detailed discussion of the merits and demerits of the case, and hence, the scope of the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court is limited and the High Court cannot launch on a detailed and meticulous examination of the merits of the case.

The respondents, however, are at liberty to invoke the provisions of S. 227 of the Criminal Procedure Code and it is open to the Court of Session, after committal of the case, to discharge the accused if, upon a consideration of the record it considers that there are no sufficient grounds for proceeding against the accused. Hareram Satpathy v. Tikaram Agarwala, (1978) 4 SCC 58: 1978 SCC (Cri) 496: AIR 1978 SC 1568: 1978 Cri LJ 1687.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Jaswant Singh and P.S. Kailasam, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-8-1978]

[2225] — Ss. 190, 193, 238 to 250 — Court of Special Judge — Position of — Enjoys all powers conferred on court of original jurisdiction functioning under High Court except those specifically conferred under the Act — For enjoying powers under the Code, Special Judge need not fall within the category of 'Magistrate' or 'Sessions Judge' specified in the Code — Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, 1952, Ss. 8 and 9

The Court of Special Judge is a court of original jurisdiction under the High Court. As such in order to make it functionally oriented some powers were conferred by the statute setting up the court. Except those specifically conferred and specifically denied, it has to function as a court of original criminal jurisdiction not being hidebound by the terminological status description of Magistrate or a Court of Session. Therefore, the view that a Special Judge must fit in the slot of a 'Magistrate' or a 'Court of Session' in order to make the provisions of CrPC applicable is erroneous.

The provisions in the CrPC relating to trial of warrant cases by Magistrate, which has been made applicable by S. 8(1) of the Act, include both the trial of cases initiated upon police report and those initiated otherwise than on police report. In order to give full effect to S. 8(1), the word 'Special Judge' has to be read in Ss. 238 to 250, CrPC wherever the expression 'Magistrate' occurs. This is legislation by incorporation. A.R. Antulay v. Ramdas Sriniwas Nayak, (1984) 2 SCC 500: 1984 SCC (Cri) 277: AIR 1984 SC 718: 1984 Cri LJ 647: 1984 Bom LR 228.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: D.A. Desai, R.S. Pathak, O. Chinnappa Reddy, A.P. Sen and V. Balakrishna Eradi, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-2-1984]

[2226] — Ss. 190 and 193 — Power of Court of Special Judge to take cognizance of offence enumerated in Ss. 6(1)(a) and (b), PC Act — Includes taking cognizance upon private complaint but excludes that upon commitment of accused by Magistrate under S. 193, CrPC — Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, 1952, S. 8(1)

Section 5-A of the Prevention of Corruption Act is a safeguard against investigation of offences committed by public servants, by petty or lower rank police officer. It has nothing to do directly or indirectly with the mode and method of taking cognizance of offences by the Court of Special Judge.

Code of Criminal Procedure is the parent statute which provides for investigation, inquiring into and trial of cases by criminal courts of various designations. Therefore, in the absence of a specific provision made in the statute indicating that offences will have to be investigated, inquired into, tried and otherwise dealt with according to that statue, the same will have to be investigated, inquired into, tried and otherwise dealt with according to the Code. The Code prescribes four methods for taking cognizance upon a complaint, or upon a report of the police officer or where the Magistrate himself comes to know of the commission of offence through some other source and in the case of Sessions Court upon a commitment by the Magistrate. The Court of the Special Judge as the expression is used in S. 8(3) of the 1952 Act is a criminal court and in view of S. 9 of that Act it is under the appellate and administrative control of the High Court. It must take cognizance of offences with a view to trying the same but it shall not take it on commitment of the accused to the court, as provided under S. 193, CrPC. Thus under S. 8(1) the Special Judge can take cognizance of offences enumerated in Ss. 6(1)(a) and (b) upon a complaint or upon a police report or upon his coming to know in some manner of the offence having been committed. Therefore, the Special Judge can take cognizance of offences committed by public servants upon receiving a complaint of facts constituting such offences.

There is no warrant for the approach that on receipt of the private complaint the Special Judge must direct an investigation under S. 5-A, for to a person accused of an offence there is no better safeguard than a court. This is constitutionally epitomised under Art. 22 and equally accepted by the Legislature as is evidenced from numerous provisions of CrPC such as Ss. 161, 164 and also S. 25 of the Evidence Act.

Section 8(1) does not show any preference in the matter of modes of taking cognizance of offences. If S. 190, CrPC is not attracted in case of the Special Judge, all the three modalities of taking cognizance would not be available. A.R. Antulay v. Ramdas Sriniwas Nayak, (1984) 2 SCC 500: 1984 SCC (Cri) 277: AIR 1984 SC 718: 1984 Cri LJ 647: 1984 Bom LR 228.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: D.A. Desai, R.S. Pathak, O. Chinnappa Reddy, A.P. Sen and V. Balakrishna Eradi, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-2-1984]

[2227] — Ss. 190 (Ch. XIV), 200, 202 (Ch. XV) and 204 (Ch. XVI) — Cognizance of offences under FERA, 1973 after coming into effect of FEMA, 1999 — Limitation period for — Applicability — Word "cognizance" — Meaning of, point in time and determination of occurrence of cognizance — Distinction with issuance of process — When used with reference to a court or Judge, "cognizance" connotes "to take notice of judicially" — It occurs simultaneously with the application of mind by the court or Magistrate to the suspected commission of an offence — Moreover, it precedes commencement of criminal proceedings — Whether cognizance of an offence was taken or not depends on the facts and circumstances of each case and no rule of universal application can be laid down to determine it — Hence, where complaint under Ss. 18(2) & (3), 68(1) and 56(1)(ii), Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, 1973 was filed as well as cognizance thereof taken after the commencement of Foreign Exchange Management Act, 1999 but within the limitation period under S. 49(3) of the latter Act, held, High Court erred in equating issuance of process with taking cognizance and quashing the proceedings as time-barred merely because the process was issued after the limitation period under S. 49(3) — FERA, 1973, Ss. 18(2) & (3), 68(1), 56(1)(ii) and 40 — Foreign Exchange Management Act, 1999, S. 49(3)

The respondent Company entered into an agreement with a foreign (Russian) importer for supply of certain goods for a certain amount. Pursuant to summons issued under Section 40 of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, 1973 (FERA), a Director of the Company appeared before the Department on 25-4-1999. He stated that he had procured the goods for export from certain other foreign suppliers (Japanese and Korean) and due to fluctuation in rate of exchange of the relevant currency, he had to pay more rupees to the said foreign suppliers than received from the foreign (Russian) importer. On 24-5-2002, the appellant complainant, in his official capacity, filed a criminal complaint alleging that the respondent Company had failed to take steps to realise the export proceeds to the extent specified within the stipulated period of six months and had thereby contravened Sections 18(2) and 18(3) read with Section 68(1), punishable under Section 56(1)(ii) of FERA. On the same day i.e. on 24-5-2002, after hearing the Department, the Magistrate took cognizance of the offence and issued summons to the accused. On 3-2-2003 he issued process requiring the respondent to appear before the court and answer the charge under FERA.

At the instance of the respondent Company, the High Court quashed the proceedings initiated against it, on the ground that cognizance could be said to have been taken when process was issued and since process was issued in February 2003, the proceedings were time-barred. The complainant Department then filed the present appeal by special leave.

Before the Supreme Court, the appellant Department contended that the High Court erred in equating taking cognizance of an offence with issuance of process and in holding that the cognizance was taken after the limitation period. That under Section 49(3) of the Foreign Exchange Management Act, 1999 (FEMA) which came into force from 1-6-2000, cognizance of an offence under FERA could have been taken within a period of two years from the date of commencement thereof. That cognizance was taken by the Magistrate on 24-5-2002 i.e. the day when complaint was filed which was well within the limitation period. It was alternatively submitted that the relevant date for counting the limitation period was not the date of taking cognizance or issuance of process by the court but the date of filing the complaint. That the complaint filed on 24-5-2002 was within limitation.

On the other hand, supporting the order of the High Court, the respondent Company contended, inter alia, that cognizance of an offence under FERA could have been taken under FEMA latest by 1-6-2002. That therefore the process issued in February 2003 was time-barred. It added that the material date for computing the limitation period was the date of taking cognizance by the court and not the date of filing of the complaint.

Allowing the appeal,

Held:

The High Court was in error in equating issuance of process with taking cognizance by a criminal court and in quashing the proceedings treating them as time-barred. (Para 18)

The expression "cognizance" has not been defined in CrPC. But the word (cognizance) is of indefinite import. It has no esoteric or mystic significance in criminal law. It merely means "become aware of" and when used with reference to a court or a Judge, it connotes "to take notice of judicially". It indicates the point when a court or a Magistrate takes judicial notice of an offence with a view to initiating proceedings in respect of such offence said to have been committed by someone. (Para 19)

"Taking cognizance" does not involve any formal action of any kind. It occurs as soon as a Magistrate applies his mind to the suspected commission of an offence. Cognizance is taken prior to commencement of criminal proceedings. Taking of cognizance is thus a sine qua non or condition precedent for holding a valid trial. Cognizance is taken of an offence and not of an offender. Whether or not a Magistrate has taken cognizance of an offence depends on the facts and circumstances of each case and no rule of universal application can be laid down as to when a Magistrate can be said to have taken cognizance. (Para 20)

The underlying object of the inquiry under Section 202 is to ascertain whether there is prima facie case against the accused. It thus allows a Magistrate to form an opinion whether the process should or should not be issued. The scope of inquiry under Section 202 is extremely limited. At that stage, what a Magistrate is called upon to see is whether there is sufficient ground for proceeding with the matter and not whether there is sufficient ground for conviction of the accused. (Para 22)

Chapter XVI (Commencement of proceedings before Magistrates) containing Section 204, whereunder process can be issued, will apply only after cognizance of an offence has been taken by a Magistrate under Chapter XIV containing Section 190 which empowers a Magistrate to take cognizance of an offence in certain circumstances. (Paras 23 and 21)

Thus, from the scheme of CrPC it is clear that "Initiation of proceedings", dealt with in Chapter XIV, is different from "Commencement of proceedings" covered by Chapter XVI. For commencement of proceedings, there must be initiation of proceedings. In other words, initiation of proceedings must precede commencement of proceedings. Without initiation of proceedings under Chapter XIV, there cannot be commencement of proceedings before a Magistrate under Chapter XVI. The High Court was not right in equating initiation of proceedings under Chapter XIV with commencement of proceedings under Chapter XVI. (Para 24)

In the present case, cognizance of the offence was taken by the Magistrate on 24-5-2002 i.e. the day on which the complaint was filed. The Magistrate, after hearing the Department, took cognizance of the offence and passed the order for issuing summons to the accused under Sections 18(2), (3) of FERA, 1973 read with Central notification and Sections 68(1) and 56(1) of the said Act and Sections 49(3) and (4) of FEMA, 1999. Undoubtedly, the process was issued on 3-2-2003. However, it was in pursuance of the cognizance taken by the court on 24-5-2002 that a subsequent action was taken under Section 204 under Chapter XVI. Taking cognizance of offence was entirely different from initiating proceedings; râther it was the condition precedent to the initiation of the proceedings. The High Court therefore, was not right in equating taking cognizance with issuance of process and in holding that the complaint was barred by law and criminal proceedings were liable to be quashed. (Paras 35 to 37). Chief Enforcement Officer v. Videocon International Ltd., (2008) 2 SCC 492: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 471: AIR 2008 SC 1213: 2008 Cri LJ 1636.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-1-2008]

R.R. Chari v. State of U.P., AIR 1951 SC 207: 1951 SCR 312; Narayandas Bhagwandas Madhavdas v. State of W.B., AIR 1959 SC 1118: (1960) 1 SCR 93; Ajit Kumar Palit v. State of W.B., AIR 1963 SC 765: 1963 Supp (1) SCR 953; Hareram Satpathy v. Tikaram Agarwala, (1978) 4 SCC 58: 1978 SCC (Cri) 496; Gopal Das Sindhi v. State of Assam, AIR 1961 SC 986; Nirmaljit Singh Hoon v. State of W.B., (1973) 3 SCC 753: 1973 SCC (Cri) 521; Darshan Singh Ram Kishan v. State of Maharashtra, (1971) 2 SCC 654: 1971 SCC (Cri) 628; Devarapalli Lakshminarayana Reddy v. V. Narayana Reddy, (1976) 3 SCC 252: 1976 SCC (Cri) 380; M.L. Sethi v. R.P. Kapur, AIR 1967 SC 528: (1967) 1 SCR 520, relied on

Supdt. & Remembrancer of Legal Affairs v. Abani Kumar Banerjee, AIR 1950 Cal 437, approved

[2228] — Ss. 190 to 210, 225 to 235 and 238 to 250 — Army Rules, 1954 — Rr. 45, 41, 43 and 48 — Limitation of six months prescribed for commencement of trial of an offender who ceases to be subject to the provisions of the Act — Trial when commences — Expression "trial commenced" in S. 123(2), Army Act, 1950 — Meaning of — Held, trial commences when GCM assembles and examination of charge is undertaken and not when oath is administered to the members, etc. — Even on narrow interpretation, accused himself being responsible for delay by escaping from detention, he cannot take advantage of his own wrong — Maxim "nullus commodum capere potest de injuria sua propria" would apply — Army Act, 1950, Ss. 123(2) (as it stood prior to amendment by Act 37 of 1992) and 122(3)

At the relevant time the respondent was working as Major General, Army Ordnance Corps, Southern Command, Pune and was in charge of purchase. The Controller General of Defence Accounts in special audit on the local purchases sanctioned by the respondent prima facie found that the respondent had derelicted his duty and action under the Army Act was initiated against him. The respondent had retired from service on 31-8-1986. He was kept under open arrest from 26-8-1986. General Court Martial (GCM) was ordered on 24-2-1987 and the GCM assembled to try the respondent on 25-2-1987. The respondent was directed to be produced on 26-2-1987 but he escaped from lawful military custody on the intervening night of 15 and 16-2-1987 and voluntarily surrendered on 1-3-1987. The respondent challenged the jurisdiction of the court martial to try him. The Division Bench of the Bombay High Court allowed the writ petition and held that the trial of the accused had not commenced within six months of his ceasing to be subject to the Army Act. The trial by the court martial was, therefore, held to be illegal and accordingly writ was issued. The question before the Supreme Court was on which date did the trial of the respondent commence? In other words, whether the trial of the respondent commenced within six months from the date of his retirement viz. 31-8-1986? By prescription of six months' limitation under sub-section (2), the trial of the respondent was to commence before 28-2-1987. Consequently, the question, therefore, is: what is the meaning of the words "trial commenced" as used in sub-section (2) of Section 123 and as to when it commences?

Held :

The words "trial commences" employed in Section 123(2) shall be required to be understood in the light of the scheme of the Act and the Rules. Trial means act of proving or judicial examination or determination of the issues including its own jurisdiction or authority in accordance with law or adjudging guilt or innocence of the accused including all steps necessary thereto. The trial commences with the performance of the first act or steps necessary or essential to proceed with the trial.

It would be seen from the scheme of the Act and the Rules that constitution of court martial for trial of an offence under the Act is a precondition for commencement of trial. Members of the court martial and the presiding officer on nomination get jurisdiction to try the person for offence under the Act. Before actual trial begins, oath would be administered to the members of the court martial, the Judge-Advocate and the staff. The regular trial begins and ends with recording the proceedings either convicting and sentencing or acquitting the accused. Thus two views would be possible while considering as to when the trial commences. The broader view is that the trial commences the moment the GCM assembles for proceeding with the trial, consideration of the charge and arraignment of the accused to proceed further with the trial including all preliminaries like objections to the inclusion of the members of the court martial, reading out the charge/charges, amendment thereof etc. The narrow view is that trial commences with the actual administration of oath to the members etc. and to the prosecution to examine the witnesses when the accused pleads not guilty.

It is true that the legislature has made a distinction between Section 122(3) and Section 123(2). While in the former, power to exclude time taken in specified contingencies is given, in the latter, no such provision is made for exclusion of the time since the accused will be kept under detention after he ceased to be governed by the Act. It is equally settled law that penal provisions would be construed strictly. From a conspectus of the scheme of the Act and the Rules, the broader view appears to be more conducive to and consistent with the scheme of the Act and the Rules. As soon as GCM assembles the members are charged with the duty to examine the charge/charges framed in summary trial, to give an opportunity to the accused to exercise his right to object to the empanelment of member/members of the GCM, to amend the charge and the right to plead guilty or not guilty. These procedural steps are integral and inseparable parts of the trial. If the accused pleads guilty, further trial by adducing evidence by the prosecution is obviated. The need for adduction of evidence arises only where the accused pleads "not guilty". In that situation, the members are required to take oath or affirmation according to Rule 45. The members get right, power and duty to try an accused only on appointment and the same ends with the close of the particular case. Therefore, Rule 45 insists on administration of oath in the prescribed manner. Therefore, the occasion to take oath as per the procedure for GCM and the right of the members of the GCM arises with their empanelment as GCM and they get power to try the accused the moment they assemble and commence examination of the case, i.e., charge-sheet and the record. The trial, therefore, must be deemed to have commenced the moment the GCM assembles and examination of the charge is undertaken.

Under the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 trial commences the moment cognizance of the offence is taken and process is issued to the accused for his appearance etc. Equally, at a sessions trial, the court considers the committal order under Section 209 by the Magistrate and proceeds further. It takes cognizance of the offence from that stage and proceeds with the trial. The trial begins with the taking of the cognizance of the offence and taking further steps to conduct the trial.

Even if a narrow interpretation is plausible, on the facts in this case, the trial began on 25-2-1987 on which date the court martial assembled, considered the charge and the prosecution undertook to produce the respondent who was found escaped from the open detention, before the Court. On consideration of the charge, the proceedings were adjourned from day to day till the respondent appeared on 2-3-1987. It is obvious that the respondent had avoided trial to see that the trial would not get commenced. Under the scheme of the Act and the Rules, presence of the accused is a precondition for commencement of trial. In his absence and until his presence was secured, it became difficult, nay impossible, to proceed with the trial of the respondent-accused. In this behalf, the maxim nullus commodum capere potest de injuria sua propria — meaning no man can take advantage of his own wrong — squarely stands in the way of avoidance by the respondent and he is estopped from pleading the bar of limitation contained in Section 123(2). Therefore, even on the narrow interpretation continuation of trial from 2-3-1987 which commenced on 25-2-1987 is not a bar and it is a valid trial.

The respondent had frustrated the trial by escaping from detention and reappeared after the limitation for trial of the offence was barred. Therefore, disallowing the trial on ground of delay would amount to putting a premium on avoidance. Union of India v. Madan Lal Yadav, (1996) 4 SCC 127: 1996 SCC (Cri) 592: AIR 1996 SC 1340.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Ramaswamy, S. Saghir Ahmad and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-3-1996]

Harish Chandra Bajpai v. Triloki Singh, AIR 1957 SC 444: 1957 SCR 370; Om Prabha Jain v. Gian Chand, AIR 1959 SC 837: ILR 1959 Punj 1631, relied on

Devi Lal v. State of Rajasthan, (1971) 3 SCC 471: 1971 SCC (Cri) 719, distinguished

Gulab Nath Singh v. Chief of the Army Staff, 1974 Ass LR 260, overruled

— S. 190(1) See Ss. 156(3), 190(1), 200 and 4

See also Ss. 173(2), 169 and 203 & 190(1)

See also Ss. 203, 173(1) and 190(1)

See also Ss. 239, 240, 227, 190(1), 156(3) and 468

See also Ss. 309 & 190(1)

See also Ss. 482, 190(1) & 204

See also Ss. 482, 190(1), 204, 233 & 243

[2229] — S. 190(1) — Magistrate not debarred from taking cognizance on a complaint merely on the ground that he had earlier declined to take cognizance on police report. Gopal Vijay Verma v. Bhuneshwar Prasad Sinha, (1982) 3 SCC 510: 1983 SCC (Cri) 110.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: O. Chinnappa Reddy and V. Balakrishna Eradi, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-11-1982]

[2230] — S. 190(1) — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 6 — Court takes cognizance of an offence and not an offender. State of W.B. v. Manmal Bhutoria, (1977) 3 SCC 440: 1977 SCC (Cri) 520: AIR 1977 SC 1772: 1977 Cri LJ 1164: 1977 MLJ (Cri) 592.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.K. Goswami and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-1977]

[2231] — Ss. 190(1), 173(2), 169, 200 and 202 — Magistrate's power to take cognizance of offence — Conclusion drawn by IO — Effect — Report forwarded by police to Magistrate that no case made out against accused — Held, the Magistrate can ignore the conclusion arrived at by IO — He can independently apply his mind to the facts emerging from investigation and take cognizance, if he thinks fit, by exercising powers under S. 190(1)(b) CrPC — Not bound to follow the procedure under Ss. 200 and 202 for taking cognizance under S. 190(1)(a) CrPC though open to him to act under S. 200 or S. 202 also

There is no obligation on the Magistrate to accept the police report if he does not agree with the opinion formed by the police. The power to take cognizance notwithstanding formation of the opinion by the police which is the final stage in the investigation has been provided for in Section 190(1)(c). (Para 10)

When a report forwarded by the police to the Magistrate under Section 173(2)(i) is placed before him several situations arise: the report may conclude that an offence appears to have been committed by a particular person or persons and in such a case, the Magistrate may either (1) accept the report and take cognizance of the offence and issue process, or (2) may disagree with the report and drop the proceeding, or (3) may direct further investigation under Section 156(3) and require the police to make a further report. The report may on the other hand state that according to the police, no offence appears to have been committed. When such a report is placed before the Magistrate he again has option of adopting one of the three courses open i.e. (1) he may accept the report and drop the proceeding; or (2) he may disagree with the report and take the view that there is sufficient ground for further proceeding, take cognizance of the offence and issue process; or (3) he may direct further investigation to be made by the police under Section 156(3). The position is, therefore, now well settled that upon receipt of a police report under Section 173(2) a Magistrate is entitled to take cognizance of an offence under Section 190(1)(b) of the Code even if the police report is to the effect that no case is made out against the accused. The Magistrate can take into account the statements of the witnesses examined by the police during the investigation and take cognizance of the offence complained of and order the issue of process to the accused. Section 190(1)(b) does not lay down that a Magistrate can take cognizance of an offence only if the investigating officer gives an opinion that the investigation has made out a case against the accused. The Magistrate can ignore the conclusion arrived at by the investigating officer and independently apply his mind to the facts emerging from the investigation and take cognizance of the case, if he thinks fit, exercise his powers under Section 190(1)(b) and direct the issue of process to the accused. The Magistrate is not bound in such a situation to follow the procedure laid down in Sections 200 and 202 of the Code for taking cognizance of a case under Section 190(1)(a) though it is open to him to act under Section 200 or Section 202 also. (Para 11). Minu Kumari v. State of Bihar, (2006) 4 SCC 359: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 310: AIR 2006 SC 1937: 2006 Cri LJ 2468: (2006) 2 KLT 588: (2006) 3 Guj LR 2013.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-4-2006]

Abhinandan Jha v. Dinesh Mishra, (1967) 3 SCR 668: AIR 1968 SC 117: 1968 Cri LJ 97; India Carat (P) Ltd. v. State of Karnataka, (1989) 2 SCC 132: 1989 SCC (Cri) 306; Gangadhar Janardan Mhatre v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 7 SCC 768: 2005 SCC (Cri) 404, relied on

Applied in Aleque Padamsee v. Union of India, (2007) 6 SCC 171

[2232] — Ss. 190(1), 173(2), 169, 200 and 202 — Magistrate's power to take cognizance of offence — Report forwarded by police to Magistrate that no case made out against accused — Held, the Magistrate can ignore the conclusion arrived at by IO — He can independently apply his mind to the facts emerging from investigation and take cognizance, if he thinks fit, by exercising powers under S. 190(1)(b) CrPC — Not bound to follow the procedure under Ss. 200 and 202 for taking cognizance under S. 190(1)(a) CrPC though open to him to act under S. 200 or S. 202 also

The functions of the magistracy and the police are entirely different, and the Magistrate cannot impinge upon the jurisdiction of the police, by compelling them to change their opinion so as to accord with his view. However, he is not deprived of the power to proceed with the matter. There is no obligation on the Magistrate to accept the report if he does not agree with the opinion formed by the police. The power to take cognizance notwithstanding formation of opinion by the police which is the final stage in the investigation has been provided for in Section 190(1)(c) CrPC. (Para 8)

When a report forwarded by the police to the Magistrate under Section 173(2)(i) is placed before him several situations arise. The report may conclude that an offence appears to have been committed by a particular person or persons and in such a case, the Magistrate may either (1) accept the report and take cognizance of the offence and issue process, or (2) may disagree with the report and drop the proceeding, or (3) may direct further investigation under Section 156(3) and require the police to make a further report. The report may on the other hand state that according to the police, no offence appears to have been committed. When such a report is placed before the Magistrate he has again option of adopting one of the three courses open i.e. (1) he may accept the report and drop the proceeding; or (2) he may disagree with the report and take the view that there is sufficient ground for further proceeding, take cognizance of the offence and issue process; or (3) he may direct further investigation to be made by the police under Section 156(3). (Para 9)

Therefore, upon receipt of a police report under Section 173(2) CrPC a Magistrate is entitled to take cognizance of an offence under Section 190(1)(b) CrPC even if the police report is to the effect that no case is made out against the accused. The Magistrate can take into account the statements of the witnesses examined by the police during the investigation and take cognizance of the offence complained of and order the issue of process to the accused. Section 190(1)(b) does not lay down that a Magistrate can take cognizance of an offence only if the investigating officer gives an opinion that the investigation has made out a case against the accused. The Magistrate can ignore the conclusion arrived at by the investigating officer and independently apply his mind to the facts emerging from the investigation and take cognizance of the case, if he thinks fit, exercise his powers under Section 190(1)(b) and direct the issue of process to the accused. The Magistrate is not bound in such a situation to follow the procedure laid down in Sections 200 and 202 CrPC for taking cognizance of a case under Section 190(1)(a) though it is open to him to act under Section 200 or Section 202 also. (Para 9).

Gangadhar Janardan Mhatre v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 7 SCC 768: (2004) 114 DLT 193.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-9-2004]

Abhinandan Jha v. Dinesh Mishra, AIR 1968 SC 117: 1968 Cri LJ 97: (1967) 3 SCR 668; India Carat (P) Ltd. v. State of Karnataka, (1989) 2 SCC 132: 1989 SCC (Cri) 306: AIR 1989 SC 885, relied on [2233] — Ss. 190(1)(b), 173(2), 209, 228, 227 and 319 — Power of Magistrate to take cognizance against accused named in FIR but not in charge-sheet, on basis of police report itself — Held, even if investigating authority is of view that no case is made out against accused, Magistrate can apply his mind independently to materials contained in police report and take cognizance based thereupon under S. 190(1)(b) — In instant case investigation had been handed over to CID and both CID and local police had submitted their reports in final form exonerating petitioner of allegations made against him in FIR — However, CJM was entitled to take cognizance under S. 190(1)(b) on basis of police report itself — Moreover, petitioner's application for discharge had been dismissed and a date was fixed for framing of charge by Sessions Court — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 302 and 291/34 (Paras 19 to 21). Uma Shankar Singh v. State of Bihar, (2010) 9 SCC 479: (2010) 4 UPLJ 39.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and A.K. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-9-2010]

India Carat (P) Ltd. v. State of Karnataka, (1989) 2 SCC 132: 1989 SCC (Cri) 306; Abhinandan Jha v. Dinesh Mishra, AIR 1968 SC 117: 1968 Cri LJ 97: (1967) 3 SCR 668, relied on

Dharam Pal v. State of Haryana, (2004) 13 SCC 9: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 273, clarified and distinguished on facts

Raj Kishore Prasad v. State of Bihar, (1996) 4 SCC 495: 1996 SCC (Cri) 772; Ranjit Singh v. State of Punjab, (1998) 7 SCC 149: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1554; Kishun Singh v. State of Bihar, (1993) 2 SCC 16: 1993 SCC (Cri) 470; Kishori Singh v. State of Bihar, (2004) 13 SCC 11: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 275, considered

[2234] — Ss. 190(1), 209, 216 and 223 — Cognizance of offence not included in charge-sheet — Permissibility — Cognizance can be taken by Magistrate of an offence (under S. 395 IPC) not included in the charge-sheet submitted by police and thereafter, on being prima facie satisfied on the basis of evidence collected by police, about commission of that offence also by some persons other than those arrested by police, it is the duty of the Magistrate to proceed against those persons also — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 147, 148, 323, 324, 149, 427 and 395

A Magistrate has jurisdiction to take cognizance of offences against such persons also who have not been arrested by the police as accused persons, if it appears from the evidence collected by the police that they were prima facie guilty of the offence alleged to have been committed. Section 209 refers back to Section 190, as is evident from the words "instituted on a police report" used in Section 190(1)(b) of the Code. The cognizance taken by the Magistrate was of the offence and not of the offenders. Having taken cognizance of the offence, a Magistrate can find out who the real offenders were and if he comes to the conclusion that apart from the persons sent by the police some other persons were also involved, it is his duty to proceed against those persons as well. (Para 11). Rajinder Prasad v. Bashir, (2001) 8 SCC 522: 2002 SCC (Cri) 28: AIR 2001 SC 3524.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-9-2001]

Krishnan v. Krishnaveni, (1997) 4 SCC 241: 1997 SCC (Cri) 544; Raghubans Dubey v. State of Bihar, AIR 1967 SC 1167: (1967) 2 SCR 423: 1967 Cri LJ 1081; SWIL Ltd. v. State of Delhi, (2001) 6 SCC 670, relied on

(2001) 1 Raj Cri Cas 33, reversed

[2235] — Ss. 190(1) and 173 — Where police filed a final report that no offence as alleged in FIR was made out — Magistrate passing an order accepting the final report by observing that despite service of notice the aggrieved person had failed to appear to oppose the final report but the protest complaint was passed thereafter on the same allegations — Whether Magistrate can take cognizance of the case and initiate proceedings on the protest complaint — Question referred to a larger Bench for deciding the legal position involved in the case. Kishore Kumar Gyanchandani v. G.D. Mehrotra, (2001) 10 SCC 59.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-1-2001]

[2236] — Ss. 190(1) and 200 & 154, 156 — Simultaneous proceedings of civil and criminal nature in a given matter — Permissibility of — Initiation of criminal proceedings on basis of observations made by trial court in civil matter — Stay of criminal proceedings by High Court in civil appeal — Challenge to — Sustainability of — Held, civil and criminal proceedings in a given matter can proceed simultaneously — Question whether civil or criminal proceedings must be stayed would depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case — Where an independent criminal proceeding was filed in terms of certain observations/findings made by trial court in civil case, the said criminal proceeding was not barred under any statute — Although High Court in civil appeal could go into the correctness of the said observations/findings and could set aside these observations/findings, it could not stay the investigation in the criminal case — Thus, the order passed by High Court in relation to the said stay, not sustainable — Hence, set aside — CPC, 1908, Ss. 96 and 9 (Paras 11, 13, 14, 18, 10 and 16)

The appellant was owner of a cinema theatre. An agreement of sale was entered into between the appellant and the respondent in respect of the said property for a consideration of Rs 64 lakhs. The respondent made an advance of Rs 32,97,000. A suit for specific performance of contract was filed by the respondent as no deed of sale was executed in terms of the said agreement. During hearing of the said suit, a receipt was filed by the respondent showing payment of a sum of Rs 4,03,000 to the appellant. The said receipt was marked as Exhibit A-15. On the said basis, allegedly, possession of the theatre was obtained by the respondent. The trial court found that the respondent-plaintiff failed to prove its case. The said court opined that the signature of DW 1 was forged in Ext. A-15. In this view it was held that the contention of the plaintiff and the evidence of PW 1 that on 18-9-2002 the plaintiff paid Rs 4,03,000 towards part of sale consideration and DW 1 delivered possession of plaint schedule theatre to him was not true. The trial court observed that the respondent-plaintiff approached the court with unclean hands. In these facts and circumstances, the trial court dismissed the said suit.

On the basis of the above observations made by the trial court regarding the forgery of document i.e. Ext. A-15, a first information report was lodged by the appellant-defendant. On the other hand, the respondent-plaintiff preferred an appeal against the said judgment and decree passed by the trial court. In the said appeal, the High Court granted interim relief to the plaintiff (respondent herein) and also stayed the investigation of the criminal case.

Allowing the appeal filed against the stay of the investigation in the criminal case, the Supreme Court decided as above. P. Swaroopa Rani v. M. Hari Narayana, (2008) 5 SCC 765: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 79: AIR 2008 SC 1884: (2008) 3 CHN 95 (SC): (2008) 106 Cut LT 539.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-3-2008]

M.S. Sheriff v. State of Madras, AIR 1954 SC 397; Iqbal Singh Marwah v. Meenakshi Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1101; Institute of Chartered Accountants of India v. Assn. of Chartered Certified Accountants, (2005) 12 SCC 226: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 544, relied on

Mahar Jahan v. State of Delhi, (2004) 13 SCC 421: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 320, distinguished on facts

[2237] — Ss. 190(1) & 200 and 204 — Taking cognizance of the offence — Meaning of — Held, once the court on perusal of the complaint is satisfied that the complaint discloses the commission of an offence and there is no reason to reject the complaint at that stage, and proceeds further in the matter, it must be held to have taken cognizance of the offence — Absence of words "cognizance taken" in the order would make no difference — Taking of cognizance distinguished from issuance of process — Complaint under S. 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 — High Court holding that Magistrate issued process against the respondents without taking cognizance of the offence, and since taking of cognizance was a condition precedent, the issuance of process was bad — Record indicating that Magistrate had taken cognizance — The said order passed by High Court, held, not sustainable — Contention that cognizance taken was improper due to non-application of mind by Magistrate, not acceptable — Hence, High Court's order set aside — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 138 and 141

Cognizance is taken of the offence and not of the offender and, therefore, once the court on perusal of the complaint is satisfied that the complaint discloses the commission of an offence and there is no reason to reject the complaint at that stage, and proceeds further in the matter, it must be held to have taken cognizance of the offence. The record shows that the Magistrate took cognizance and fixed the matter for recording of the statement of the complainant on 1-6-2000. Even if it is assumed, though that is not the case, that the words "cognizance taken" were not to be found in the order recorded by him on that date, that would make no difference. (Para 10)

One should not confuse taking of cognizance with issuance of process. Cognizance is taken at the initial stage when the Magistrate peruses the complaint with a view to ascertain whether the commission of any offence is disclosed. The issuance of process is at a later stage when after considering the material placed before it, the court decides to proceed against the offenders against whom a prima facie case is made out. It is possible that a complaint may be filed against several persons, but the Magistrate may choose to issue process only against some of the accused. It may also be that after taking cognizance and examining the complainant on oath, the court may come to the conclusion that no case is made out for issuance of process and it may reject the complaint. It may also be that having considered the complaint, the court may consider it appropriate to send the complaint to the police for investigation under Section 156(3) CrPC. Many other situations can be conceived in which a Magistrate may not take cognizance at all, for instance, a case where he finds that the complaint is not made by the person who in law can lodge the complaint, or that the complaint is not entertainable by that court, or that cognizance of the offence alleged to have been committed cannot be taken without the sanction of the competent authority, etc. These are cases where the Magistrate will refuse to take cognizance and return the complaint to the complainant. But if he does not do so and proceeds to examine the complainant and such other evidence as the complainant may produce before him then, it should be held to have taken cognizance of the offence and proceeded with the inquiry. (Para 10)

Therefore, in the facts and circumstances of this case, the High Court erred in holding that the Magistrate had not taken cognizance, and that being a condition precedent, issuance of process was illegal. (Para 10)

It is further submitted that cognizance even if taken was improperly taken because the Magistrate had not applied his mind to the facts of the case. There is no merit in this submission. So far as taking of cognizance is concerned, in the facts and circumstances of this case, it has been taken properly after application of mind. The Magistrate issued process only after considering the material placed before him. Therefore, the judgment and order of the High Court is unsustainable and must be set aside. (Para 11). CREF Finance Ltd. v. Shree Shanthi Homes (P) Ltd., (2005) 7 SCC 467: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1697: (2005) 127 Comp Cas 311.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-8-2005]

Ajit Kumar Palit v. State of W.B., 1963 Supp (1) SCR 953: (1963) 1 Cri LJ 797, relied on

— S. 190(1)(a) See Ss. 2(c) & (d), 154, 155(2) & 190(1)(a) and (b)

See also Ss. 154(1), 154(2), 154(3), 157(1), 190(1)(a) and 200

See also Ss. 156(3), 173(2), 154 and 190(1)(a) & (b)

See also Ss. 200, 190(1)(a), 204, 300 and 482

See also Ss. 204 and 190(1)(a)

See also Ss. 204, 190(1)(a) and 178

See also Ss. 204, 190(1)(a) and 200

See also Ss. 482 and 200 first proviso, 190(1)(a) & 204

[2238] — S. 190(1)(a) — Corporate criminal liability — TDS — AY 1989-1990 — Liability of company and Directors — Where the assessee company failed to pay into the account of Central Government the amount of tax deducted at source, the company or its directors, held, not immune from prosecution — That a company is not a natural person, inconsequential — IT Act, 1961, Ss. 200, 201 (Ch. XVII), 276-B, 278-B (Ch. XXII) and 2(20), (31) & (35) — Companies Act, 1956, S. 2(13)

The appellant Company filed its returns for AY 1989-1990 on 29-12-1989. A certain amount deducted by it as TDS was not credited by it in time as required by Sections 194-C and 200 of the Income Tax Act, 1961 (for short "the Act") read with Rule 30 of the Income Tax Rules, 1962 (for short "the Rules"). However, it credited the same with interest later on. Therefore, alleging that having violated Section 276-B of the Act, the Company had committed an offence punishable under Section 278-B of the Act, the Department required the appellant Company and its Directors (Appellants 2 to 4 herein) to show cause against the proposed proceedings. The show-cause notice added that Appellants 2 to 4 were to be considered as "principal officers" within the meaning of Section 2(35) of the Act.

In its reply, the Company denied any violation of the provisions of the Act on its part and stated that there was "reasonable cause" for the delay in payment. In that regard, it stated certain circumstances. Rejecting the Company's reply, the CIT granted sanction under Section 279 of the Act to prosecute the Company and its Directors. Accordingly, a complaint was filed against the appellants in the trial court. The appellants filed applications under Section 245 CrPC for discharge.

The trial court rejected the said applications. After unsuccessfully approaching the revisional court thereagainst, the appellants approached the High Court by a petition under Section 482 CrPC. That petition was dismissed for default of appearance. However, at the appellant's instance, it was restored to file but was heard on the same day, and was summarily rejected. The appellants then filed the present appeal by special leave and obtained stay against the impugned order.

Before the Supreme Court, the appellants submitted that: (i) the Company was not a natural person but merely a legal or juristic person and hence neither the Company nor its Directors and officers could be punished for such an act, (ii) Appellants 2 to 4 could not be said to be "principal officers" under the Act and no prosecution could be initiated against them, and moreover, a separate notice and/or communication ought to have been issued before issuance of show-cause notice under Section 276-B read with Section 278-B of the Act that the Directors were to be treated as principal officers under the Act, (iii) the present case was not one of non-payment of tax but merely of some delay in crediting the amount and therefore there was no reason for prosecuting the Company and/or its Directors, (iv) the appellants had shown "reasonable cause" for delay in depositing the amount and therefore, the sanction for prosecution granted by CIT suffered from non-application of mind as in view of Section 278-AA of the Act, the present case was not a fit one for prosecution, (v) criminal prosecution was a drastic step and should not be taken lightly particularly when there were several provisions in the Act for payment of interest, penalty, etc., (vi) Appellant 4 was a lady who could not be said to be in charge of business or management and therefore, the order to prosecute her was not sustainable, (vii) the alleged defaults were committed almost two long decades ago whereas the Revenue had not suffered and, therefore, by exercising plenary powers under Article 136 read with Article 142 of the Constitution, the proceedings should be ordered to be dropped, and (viii) an appropriate direction should be issued to the trial court to dispense with the personal presence of Respondents 2-4, (ix) on restoring the matter, the High Court could not have insisted on the appellants to proceed with the matter on merits on the same day, and (x) since the matter raised important questions of law, the same could not have been dismissed by the High Court by a non-speaking order.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

From Sections 200, 201 (Ch. XVII), 276-B, 278-B (Ch. XXII) and 2(20), (31), & (35) of the Act, it is clear that wherever a company is required to deduct tax at source and to pay it to the account of the Central Government, failure on the part of the company in deducting or in paying such amount is an offence under the Act and has been made punishable. It, therefore, cannot be said that the prosecution against a company or its Directors in default of deducting or paying tax is not envisaged by the Act. (Para 27)

Although a company is not a natural person but "legal" or "juristic" person, that does not mean that company is not liable to prosecution under the Act. "Corporate criminal liability" is not unknown to law. (Paras 28 and 29). Madhumilan Syntex Ltd. v. Union of India, (2007) 11 SCC 297: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 143: AIR 2007 SC 1481: (2007) 210 ELT 484: (2007) 290 ITR 199.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-3-2007]

Standard Chartered Bank v. Directorate of Enforcement, (2005) 4 SCC 530: 2005 SCC (Cri) 961, followed

[2239] — S. 190(1)(a) — Complaint against Directors of company — Necessary averments in, for maintainability of complaint — Maintainability — AY 1989-1990 — Company defaulting in paying into the account of Central Government the amount of TDS — Show-cause notice issued under Ss. 276-B and 278-B, IT Act to the company and its Directors as well as the complaint filed against them stating that the said Directors were considered to be principal officers under S. 2(35), Income Tax Act — Such a complaint, held, maintainable — Whether the said allegation was correct or incorrect would be a matter of evidence and could be decided at the trial but such a complaint could not be held to be not maintainable — Moreover, in such a case no separate notice stating that the Directors were to be treated as principal officers need be issued to them — Therefore, grant of sanction by CIT to prosecute them, held, valid — IT Act, 1961, Ss. 276-B, 278-B, 2(35) and 279

From the statutory provisions, it is clear that to hold a person responsible under the Act, it must be shown that he/she is a "principal officer" under Section 2(35) of the Act or is "in charge of" and "responsible for" the business of the company or firm. It is also clear from case law that where necessary averments have been made in the complaint, initiation of criminal proceedings, issuance of summons or framing of charge, cannot be held illegal and the court would not inquire into or decide correctness or otherwise of the allegations levelled or averments made by the complainant. It is a matter of evidence and an appropriate order can be passed at the trial. (Para 43)

In the present case, in the show-cause notice issued under Section 276-B read with Section 278-B of the Act, it was expressly stated that the Directors were considered to be principal officers under Section 2(35) of the Act. In the complaint filed by the CIT also, it was stated that the appellants were considered as principal officers. Therefore, it cannot be held that the complaint filed against the appellants, particularly against Appellants 2-4 was ill-founded or not maintainable. (Para 44)

No independent and separate notice to the effect that the Directors were to be treated as principal officers under the Act was necessary and when in the show-cause notice it was stated that the Directors were to be considered as principal officers under the Act and a complaint was filed, such complaint was entertainable by a court provided it was otherwise maintainable. (Para 45). Madhumilan Syntex Ltd. v. Union of India, (2007) 11 SCC 297: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 143: AIR 2007 SC 1481: (2007) 210 ELT 484: (2007) 290 ITR 199.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-3-2007]

MCD v. Ram Kishan Rohtagi, (1983) 1 SCC 1: 1983 SCC (Cri) 115, explained

MCD v. Purshottam Das Jhunjhunwala, (1983) 1 SCC 9: 1983 SCC (Cri) 123; Monaben Ketanbhai Shah v. State of Gujarat, (2004) 7 SCC 15: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1857; S.M.S. Pharmaceuticals Ltd. v. Neeta Bhalla, (2005) 8 SCC 89: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1975, followed

Puran Devi v. Z.S. Klar, (1988) 169 ITR 608 (P&H); K. Subramanyam v. ITO, (1993) 199 ITR 723 (Mad); Jamshedpur Engg. & Machine Mfg. Co. Ltd. v. Union of India, (1995) 214 ITR 556 (Patna); M.A. Unneerikutty v. CIT, (1996) 218 ITR 606 (Kerala), approved

Sham Sunder v. State of Haryana, (1989) 4 SCC 630: 1989 SCC (Cri) 783; State of Karnataka v. Pratap Chand, (1981) 2 SCC 335: 1981 SCC (Cri) 453, considered

[2240] — S. 190(1)(a) — Expression "taking cognizance of an offence" — Meaning of

This expression has not been defined in the Code. But from the scheme of the Code, the content and marginal heading of S. 190 and the caption of Chapter XIV under which Ss. 190 to 199 occur, it is clear that a case can be said to be instituted in a court only when the court takes cognizance of the offence alleged therein. The ways in which such cognizance can be taken are set out in cls. (a), (b) and (c) of S. 190(1). Whether the magistrate has or has not taken cognizance of the offence will depend on the circumstances of the particular case including the mode in which the case is sought to be instituted, and the nature of the preliminary action, if any, taken by the magistrate. Broadly speaking, when on receiving a complaint, the magistrate applies his mind for the purposes of proceeding under S. 200 and the succeeding sections in Chapter XV of the Code of 1973, he is said to have taken cognizance of the offence within the meaning of S. 190(1)(a). If, instead of proceeding under Chapter XV, he has, in the judicial exercise of his discretion, taken action of some other kind, such as issuing a search warrant for the purpose of investigation, or ordering investigation by the police under S. 156(3), he cannot be said to have taken cognizance of any offence. Devarapally Lakshminarayana Reddy v. V. Narayana Reddy, (1976) 3 SCC 252: 1976 SCC (Cri) 380: AIR 1976 SC 1672: 1976 Cri LJ 1361.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria, P.N. Shinghal and Jaswant Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-5-1976]

Distinguished in State, CBI v. Sashi Balasubra- manian, (2006) 13 SCC 252: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 337

[2241] — S. 190(1)(a) — Private complaint — Unexplained delay of a long period of more than one year in filing — Such delay rightly held by High Court to be a vulnerable circumstance (Para 23). Shakila Abdul Gafar Khan v. Vasant Raghunath Dhoble, (2003) 7 SCC 749: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1918: AIR 2003 SC 4567.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-9-2003]

[2242] — Ss. 190(1)(a), 200, 204, 173 and 482 — Power to take cognizance of offence — Final report submitted by police stating the complaint to be false — Held, notwithstanding the opinion of police, a Magistrate is empowered to take cognizance if the material on record makes out a case for the said purpose — At this stage, a Magistrate has only to decide whether there is sufficient ground to proceed and not whether there is sufficient ground for conviction — Order passed by Magistrate taking cognizance of offence — Challenge to, before High Court under S. 482 CrPC — On facts, held, High Court rightly declined to interfere

The complainant R was a Class IV employee in Ayurvedic Aushdhalaya, Fatehgarh. According to R on 7-11-1985 when the appellant, a District Ayurvedic Officer, visited the said place several patients were present. The appellant asked R to bring water. When R brought water, he was insulted by the appellant who said to him that he did not want to spoil his religion by drinking water from the hands of R. Thereafter, the appellant started abusing R. Hence, R filed a complaint in the Court of Chief Judicial Magistrate alleging commission of offence under Section 7 of the Protection of Civil Rights Act, 1955. The said complaint was sent to police for investigation. After completing the investigation the police submitted a final report under Section 173 CrPC stating that the complaint was false. After the submission of the final report, R filed another complaint. On considering the said complaint, the Additional Chief Judicial Magistrate (ACJM) found a prima facie case and so he took cognizance and issued process against the appellant. The order issuing the process was challenged by the appellant in a revision petition filed before the Sessions Judge which was dismissed. On a petition filed under Section 482 CrPC, the orders of the ACJM and the Sessions Judge were set aside by the High Court. The case was remanded to the trial court with direction that the trial court should consider the entire material available on record before deciding whether the process should be issued against the appellant or not. After remand, the Magistrate again reached the same conclusion and took cognizance by order dated 22-1-1990. This led to filing of another petition under Section 482 CrPC by the appellant. The High Court set aside the order dated 22-1-1990 and observed that the ACJM while disagreeing with the final report should have given some reasons for not accepting it. This time also the case was remanded to the Magistrate directing him to consider the material available on record and thereafter pass an appropriate order. The Magistrate again considered the matter for the third time, but reached the same conclusion. Hence, the appellant filed a third petition under Section 482 CrPC challenging the order taking cognizance. But this time the High Court held that no case for exercising inherent powers under Section 482 CrPC was made out. Therefore, the appellant challenged the said judgment of the High Court by filing the instant appeal.

One of the contentions urged in this appeal for quashing the criminal proceedings was long delay of 19 years.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

It is well settled that notwithstanding the opinion of the police, a Magistrate is empowered to take cognizance if the material on record makes out a case for the said purpose. The investigation is the exclusive domain of the police. The taking of cognizance of the offence is an area exclusively within the domain of a Magistrate. At this stage, the Magistrate has to be satisfied whether there is sufficient ground for proceeding and not whether there is sufficient ground for conviction. Whether the evidence is adequate for supporting the conviction, can be determined only at the trial and not at the stage of inquiry. Further, at the stage of issuing the process to the accused, the Magistrate is not required to record reasons. (Para 10)

The order passed by the Magistrate taking cognizance is a well-written order. The High Court has rightly concluded that the said order does not call for any interference under Section 482 CrPC. (Paras 10 and 11). Jagdish Ram v. State of Rajasthan, (2004) 4 SCC 432: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1294: AIR 2004 SC 1734.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-3-2004]

Chief Controller of Imports & Exports v. Roshanlal Agarwal, (2003) 4 SCC 139: 2003 SCC (Cri) 788, relied on

[2243] — Ss. 190(1)(a), 200 and 204 — Cognizance of offences under Ss. 403, 406, 420 and 120-B IPC — Validity — Essential ingredients of S. 403 — Held, words "dishonestly" and "misappropriate" used in S. 403 are the necessary ingredients of the said section — Neither of these ingredients satisfied where a contractor having received payments for works completed failed to pay his sub-contractor, the complainant — Order taking cognizance of the offences under Ss. 403, 406, 420 and 120-B IPC, held, was therefore not proper — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 403, 406, 420 and 120-B

Bokaro Steel Plant awarded a contract of certain works to TCPL company. But, TCPL instead getting the said work done by the complainant company after entering into a separate contract with it. On completion of the said work, TCPL failed to pay the balance amount due under the contract to the complainant. Hence, a complaint under Sections 403, 406, 420 and 120-B IPC was filed against the appellants alleging therein that TCPL misappropriated the money received from Bokaro Steel Plant instead of paying it to the complainant company. The Magistrate concerned took cognizance of the alleged offences and issued summons to the appellants. The High Court declined to interfere in the said order.

Allowing the appeals,

Held :

Section 403 IPC uses the words "dishonestly" and "misappropriate". These are necessary ingredients of an offence under the said section. (Para 7)

The rights and obligations of the parties i.e. the complainant and TCPL are to be governed by the contract between them for which the contract between TCPL and Bokaro Steel (SAIL) has no relevance. Therefore, even if Bokaro Steel has made the payment to TCPL under its contract with the latter, it will not give rise to plea of misappropriation of money because that money is not money or movable property of the complainant. Thus, it cannot be said that there is any dishonest intention on the part of the appellants nor can it be said that TCPL or the appellants have misappropriated or converted the movable property of the complainant to their own use. (Paras 6 and 8)

Since the basic ingredients of Section 403 are not satisfied, the impugned orders of the High Court as well as of the Chief Judicial Magistrate are hereby ordered to be quashed. (Para 8). U. Dhar v. State of Jharkhand, (2003) 2 SCC 219: 2003 SCC (Cri) 490: AIR 2003 SC 974: 2003 Cri LJ 1224.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-1-2003]

[2244] — Ss. 190(1)(a) and 200 — Cognizance of offence when can be said to have been taken, explained

As to when cognizance of an offence is taken will depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case and it is not possible to state the same with precision. Obviously, it is only when the Magistrate applies his mind for the purpose of proceeding under Section 200 CrPC and subsequent sections that it can positively be stated that he has taken cognizance. (Para 4). Bhagat Ram v. Surinder Kumar, (2004) 11 SCC 622.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu, B.N. Agrawal and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-2-2004]

Narayandas Bhagwandas Madhavdas v. State of W.B., AIR 1959 SC 1118: 1959 Cri LJ 1368; Devarapalli Lakshminarayana Reddy v. V. Narayana Reddy, (1976) 3 SCC 252: 1976 SCC (Cri) 380, relied on [2245] — Ss. 190(1)(a) & 200 and 173 — Cognizance of an offence on a protest/complaint petition after the acceptance of final report — Held, merely because the Magistrate has accepted a final report, the same by itself would not stand in his way to take cognizance of the offence on a protest/complaint petition (Para 12). Mahesh Chand v. B. Janardhan Reddy, (2003) 1 SCC 734: 2003 SCC (Cri) 425: AIR 2003 SC 702.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.B. Shah, D.M. Dharmadhikari and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-12-2002]

[2246] — Ss. 190(1)(a) & (b) and 173(2), 200 & 202 — Powers of Magistrate under — Cognizance of an offence by Magistrate — Held, Magistrate has ample power to take cognizance even when the police report is to the effect that the investigation has not made out any offence against the accused — In such cases, further held, he is not bound to follow the procedure laid down in Ss. 200 and 202, though it is open to him to act under those provisions also

The respondent, a Minister holding different portfolios, was charged under Section 13(1)(e) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, for acquiring disproportionate assets to a tune of about Rs 14 lakhs. The period under consideration was from June 1980 to November 1989. A charge-sheet was thereafter submitted and cognizance was taken by the Special Court on 27-3-1991. A petition filed by the accused on 25-7-1997 seeking reinvestigation was rejected by the Special Court on 3-1-1998. Thereafter a representation was again made by the respondent in July 1998 when he was a Minister to consider his income from the sale of paddy in the said case and sought reinvestigation on that basis. Accordingly, an application was made by the investigating officer before the Special judge seeking reinvestigation. The Special Judge ordered that it was open to the IO to do so. In the final report after reinvestigation dated 29-9-1998, it was observed that no material to prove the charge of disproportionate assets was made out. The Special Court did not accept the final report and concluded that there was prima facie case requiring the framing of charge. The order framing the charge was quashed by the High Court. Hence the present appeal by the appellant State.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

A Magistrate has ample power to take cognizance of an offence under Section 190(1)(b) even when the police report is to the effect that the investigation has not made out any offence against an accused. A Magistrate is not bound in such a situation to follow the procedure laid down in Sections 200 and 202 CrPC for taking cognizance of a case under Section 190(1)(a) CrPC though it is open to him to act under Section 200 or Section 202. (Para 4). State of Orissa v. Habibullah Khan, (2003) 12 SCC 129.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and B.N Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-12-2003]

Abhinandan Jha v. Dinesh Mishra, AIR 1968 SC 117: (1967) 3 SCR 668: 1968 Cri LJ 97; H.S. Bains v. State (Union Territory of Chandigarh), (1980) 4 SCC 631: 1981 SCC (Cri) 93; India Carat (P) Ltd. v. State of Karnataka, (1989) 2 SCC 132: 1989 SCC (Cri) 306, relied on

— S. 190(1)(b) See Ss. 2(c) & (d), 154, 155(2) & 190(1)(a) and (b)

See also Ss. 156(3), 173(2), 154 and 190(1)(a) & (b)

See also Ss. 173 and 190(1)(b)

See also Ss. 173, 190(1)(b), 156(3), 200, 203 and 204

See also Ss. 173(8) & (2) and 190(1)(b)

See also Ss. 190(1)(a) & (b) and 173(2), 200 & 202

See also Ss. 197 and 190(1)(b) & (c)

See also Ss. 437, 173(2) and 190(1)(b)

See also Ss. 482, 156, 190(1)(b) & 204

See also Ss. 482, 190(1)(b), 204, 173, 169 and 362

[2247] — S. 190(1)(b) — Appeal against quashing of FIR/complaint by High Court — Police report that allegations made in FIR not made out accepted by Magistrate — Instead of directing the Magistrate to decide afresh, Supreme Court itself deciding whether prima facie it was a fit case for taking cognizance under S. 190(1)(b) CrPC — Sufficient material prima facie found to be existing for taking cognizance of the offence — Order quashing FIR set aside and CJM directed to take cognizance and try the case himself — Constitution of India, Art. 136

Two courses are left open to the Court: to direct the Magistrate to hear the parties afresh on the question of acceptance of the police report and pass a reasoned order or to decide for itself whether it is a fit case for taking cognizance under Section 190(1)(b) CrPC. Keeping in view the fact that the case is pending for the last seven years only on the threshold question it is not desirable to take the former course as that would only delay the matter further. Instead thereof, looking carefully into the police report and its accompaniments, keeping in view the observations in H.S. Bains case, it must be held that the opinion of the Investigating Officer that the allegations contained in the FIR were not substantiated by the statements of witnesses recorded during investigation is not a proper one, for there are sufficient materials for taking cognizance of the offences under Sections 354 and 509

IPC. (Paras 28 and 29). Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059: AIR 1996 SC 309.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and M.K. Mukherjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-1995]

[2248] — Ss. 190(1)(b), 200, 202 and 204 — Despite police report that no case made out against the accused, magistrate can take cognizance of offence under S. 190(1)(b) taking into account the statement of witnesses made under police investigation and issue process — Whether investigation commenced pursuant to a complaint made before the magistrate or a report made to the police would not make any difference in this context

On the basis of a report made to Commissioner of Police by the appellant against the second respondent alleging commission of cheating and criminal breach of trust, the police made investigation and submitted a 'B' report to the court stating that further investigation was not required as the case was of a civil nature. The appellant approached the Second Additional Chief Metropolitan Magistrate for quashing the report and for grant of permission to him to prove the commission of offences by the second respondent. The Magistrate, after perusing the investigation records came to the view that a prima facie case was made out against the second respondent and consequently he passed an order for registering a calendar case against him under Ss. 408 and 420 IPC and for issuing summons to him under S. 204 CrPC. The second respondent thereupon preferred a petition under S. 428 CrPC before High Court for setting aside the order of the Magistrate on the ground that the Magistrate had not followed the procedure laid down by the Code for taking cognizance of the case and issuing process to the accused after the police had sent a 'B' report in the case. The High Court allowed the petition. Allowing the present appeal by special leave, quashing the order of the High Court and restoring that of the Magistrate,

Held :

The Magistrate was entitled to direct the registration of a case against the second respondent and order the issue of summons to him.

Upon receipt of a police report under S. 173(2), CrPC a Magistrate is entitled to take cognizance of an offence under S. 190(1)(b) even if the police report is to the effect that no case is made out against the accused. The Magistrate can ignore the conclusion arrived at by the investigating officer and independently apply his mind to the facts emerging from the investigation taking into account the statements of the witnesses examined by the police during the investigation and take cognizance of the case, if he thinks fit, in exercise of his powers under S. 190(1)(b) and direct the issue of process to the accused. The Magistrate is not bound in such a situation to follow the procedure laid down in Ss. 200 and 202 for taking cognizance of a case under S. 190(1)(a) though it is open to him to act under S. 200 or S. 202 also. The fact that in this case the investigation had not originated from a complaint preferred to the Magistrate but had been made pursuant to a report given to the police would not alter the situation in any manner. Even if complaint had been preferred before the Magistrate and the Magistrate had ordered investigation under S. 156(3), the police would have to submit a report under S. 173(2). India Carat (P) Ltd. v. State of Karnataka, (1989) 2 SCC 132: 1989 SCC (Cri) 306: AIR 1989 SC 885: 1989 Cri LJ 963: (1989) 2 Crimes 483.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.S. Pathak, C.J. and S. Natarajan and M.N. Venkatachaliah, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-2-1989]

[2249] — Ss. 190(1)(b) and 173(2) — Power of Magistrate to take cognizance — Relevance of opinion of investigating officer — Held, it is trite that the Magistrate is not bound by the opinion of the investigating officer and he is competent to exercise his discretion irrespective of the view expressed by the police in their report and decide whether an offence has been made out or not — This is because the purpose of the police report under S. 173(2), which will contain the facts discovered or unearthed by the police as well as the conclusion drawn by the police therefrom is primarily to enable the Magistrate to satisfy himself whether on the basis of the report and the material referred therein, a case for cognizance is made out or not (Paras 11 and 12). Fakhruddin Ahmad v. State of Uttaranchal, (2008) 17 SCC 157: (2008) 6 All LJ 249: (2009) 1 ECrN 455 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 4377: (2008) 3 APLJ 163 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-9-2008]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, followed

[2250] — Ss. 190(1)(b) and 173 — Magistrate can take cognizance on a police report filed under S. 173 of the Code regarding an offence under Essential Commodities Act, 1955 — Court can look into other papers and documents accompanying the report. Satya Narain Musadi v. State of Bihar, (1980) 3 SCC 152: 1980 SCC (Cri) 660: AIR 1980 SC 506: 1980 Cri LJ 227.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.A. Desai and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-1979]

[2251] — Ss. 190(1)(b), 173(2), 209, 228, 227 and 319 — Magistrates' power of enquiry if he disagreed with final report submitted by investigating authorities — Issue pending reference before larger Bench — Effect — In present case, held, it is not necessary to wait for outcome of decision of said reference because in instant case issue was whether Magistrate can take cognizance against accused not named in charge-sheet on basis of police report itself, which is well settled — Magistrate in present case had not ordered any further enquiry — Constitution of India — Art. 141 (Paras 16 to 18). Uma Shankar Singh v. State of Bihar, (2010) 9 SCC 479: (2010) 4 UPLJ 39 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and A.K. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-9-2010]

India Carat (P) Ltd. v. State of Karnataka, (1989) 2 SCC 132: 1989 SCC (Cri) 306; Abhinandan Jha v. Dinesh Mishra, AIR 1968 SC 117: 1968 Cri LJ 97: (1967) 3 SCR 668, relied on

Dharam Pal v. State of Haryana, (2004) 13 SCC 9: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 273, clarified and distinguished on facts

Raj Kishore Prasad v. State of Bihar, (1996) 4 SCC 495: 1996 SCC (Cri) 772; Ranjit Singh v. State of Punjab, (1998) 7 SCC 149: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1554; Kishun Singh v. State of Bihar, (1993) 2 SCC 16: 1993 SCC (Cri) 470; Kishori Singh v. State of Bihar, (2004) 13 SCC 11: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 275, considered

[2252] — Ss. 190(1)(b) & 204, 200, 156(3), 468 and 401 — Private complaint — Order taking cognizance of alleged offence — Sustainability of — Delay/laches in filing complaint — Dispute of civil nature — Absence of ingredients of alleged offence of cheating — As per the complaint A-1 executed an agreement to sell dated 25-12-1988 in respect of a house in favour of the wife of the complainant C and a sum of Rs 1,25,000 was paid in advance in respect thereof — Allegation that A-1 instead sold the said property to wife of A-4 — Legal notice dated 11-7-1996 issued by C calling upon A-1 to execute the sale deed — Replying to that notice on 18-7-1996, A-1 specifically denying the very existence of the said agreement and the receipt of Rs 1,25,000 — C, after keeping quiet for nearly 3 years from the date of reply of A-1, filing complaint on 17-5-1999 i.e. after a lapse of 101/2 years from the date of the alleged agreement — Held, the said complaint was not at all maintainable at this distance of time — It was liable to be dismissed on the question of inordinate laches on the part of the complainant himself — Further, the allegations in complaint were of a civil nature and did not prima facie disclose commission of alleged offence under S. 420 IPC — Police had given clean chit to A-2 to A-4 — Hence, the order of the Magistrate taking cognizance of the alleged offence, as confirmed by High Court in revision, was not sustainable — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420 and 415 (Paras 10 to 12). Suresh v. Mahadevappa Shivappa Danannava, (2005) 3 SCC 670: 2005 SCC (Cri) 783: AIR 2005 SC 1047.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ashok Bhan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-2-2005]

Suresh v. Mahadevappa Shivappa Danannavar, 2004 Cri LJ 3580 (Kant), reversed

[2253] — Ss. 190(1)(b) and 173(2) — Magistrate can take cognizance of offence if he is satisfied that material placed by the prosecution is sufficient for taking cognizance — He is not debarred from doing so merely because police has filed an application, after submission of the charge-sheet, seeking permission to file supplementary charge-sheet — Power of Magistrate not controlled by the investigating agency — That the investigating officer termed the police report "incomplete" immaterial

The purpose of submission of the police report with the details mentioned in sub-section (2) of Section 173 is to enable the Magistrate to satisfy himself, whether on the basis of the report and the material filed along with the police report, a case for taking cognizance has been made out or not. After applying his mind to the police report and the material submitted therewith, if the Magistrate is satisfied that cognizance of the offence is required to be taken, he shall proceed further in accordance with the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Section 190(1)(b) CrPC provides that a Magistrate has the power to take cognizance upon a police report of such facts as are provided therein on being satisfied that the case is a fit one for taking cognizance of the offence. Therefore, if the police report and the material filed therewith is sufficient to satisfy the Magistrate that he should take cognizance, his power is not fettered by the label which the investigating agency chooses to give to the report submitted by it under Section 173(2) CrPC. Merely, because the prosecution had filed an application, after submission of the charge-sheet, seeking permission to file "supplementary charge-sheet", it could not affect the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to take cognizance, if he was otherwise satisfied from the material placed before him along with the charge-sheet that cognizance of the offence was required to be taken. It is the jurisdiction of the Magistrate and Magistrate alone to decide whether the material placed by the prosecution with the report (charge-sheet) was sufficient to take cognizance or not. The power of the Magistrate to take cognizance cannot be controlled by the investigating agency, whose duty is only to investigate and place the facts and the evidence before the Magistrate. (Para 7)

In the present case the High Court quashed the order only because it was influenced by the application filed by the prosecution seeking permission to record additional evidence and file a "supplementary charge-sheet" and from that it inferred that the report filed by the prosecution was 'incomplete'. It cannot be said that if the investigating officer terms a police report as 'incomplete', it takes away the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to take cognizance of the offence, even if in the opinion of the Magistrate, the material is sufficient for him to be satisfied that it was a fit case for him to take cognizance of the offence. The Magistrate is not bound by the label given to the report or the charge-sheet by the investigating officer and it is for him to decide whether the report and the material on which it is based, is sufficient for him to take cognizance or not. (Para 8). State of Maharashtra v. Sharadchandra Vinayak Dongre, (1995) 1 SCC 42: 1995 SCC (Cri) 16: AIR 1995 SC 231: (1995) 1 Mah LJ 432: (1995) 32 ACC 25: 1995 Cr LR (SC) 114.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.M. Sahai, Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-10-1994]

— S. 190(1)(c) See Ss. 197 and 190(1)(b) & (c)

— S. 191 See Ss. 190 to 210, 225 to 235 and 238 to 250

— S. 192 See also S. 192, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 1051 in Vol. 2

— S. 192 See Ss. 190 to 210, 225 to 235 and 238 to 250

See also Ss. 190 and 192

See also Ss. 340, 192 to 196, 227 and 482

[2254] — Ss. 192 and 190 — Transfer of case — Illegality in — Effect — Transfer of case by the Chief Judicial Magistrate to the Magistrate without taking cognizance — Magistrate not debarred from taking cognizance of the offence

A Magistrate who receives the case on transfer and takes cognizance would not become incompetent to do so merely because the sanction of transfer of the case to his file is not in accordance with law. The power to take cognizance has been conferred on a Magistrate by Section 190(1) of the Code and he would not be denuded of this power because the case has come to his file pursuant to some illegal order of the Chief Judicial Magistrate. The former would be exercising his power of taking cognizance even in such a case, because of his having received a complaint constituting the offence. It would not be material, for this purpose, as to how he came to receive the complaint — directly or on transfer from the Chief Judicial Magistrate. (Para 6). Anil Saran v. State of Bihar, (1995) 6 SCC 142: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1051: AIR 1996 SC 204.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and B.L. Hansaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-8-1995]

— S. 193 See also S. 193, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 1051 in Vol. 2

— S. 193 See Ss. 190 to 210, 225 to 235 and 238 to 250

See also Ss. 190 & 193

See also Ss. 190, 193, 179 and 177

See also Ss. 190, 193 and 195 to 199 & 204

See also Ss. 190, 193, 238 to 250

See also Ss. 196, 190, 193 and 209

See also Ss. 209, 193, 26 and 306

See also Ss. 227, 193, 204, 211

See also Ss. 319 and 190, 193 & 209

See also Ss. 319, 193 and 209

See also S. 319 read with Ss. 209 and 193, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231 and 482

See also Ss. 340, 192 to 196, 227 and 482

See also Ss. 482 and 193, 190, 156 & 157

[2255] — S. 193 — Cognizance is taken of offence, not of offender

It is essential to bear in mind the fact that cognizance is in regard to the offence and not the offender. Kishun Singh v. State of Bihar, (1993) 2 SCC 16: 1993 SCC (Cri) 470: 1993 Cri LJ 1700: (1993) 1 Crimes 494: (1993) 1 BLJR 309.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-1-1993]

[2256] — S. 193 — "Except as otherwise expressly provided" — Means except positively provided differently in clear and unambiguous language

Section 193 of the Code has to be understood in the aforesaid backdrop. The section imposes an interdict on all Courts of Session against taking cognizance of any offence as a court of original jurisdiction. A Court of Session can take cognizance only if "the case has been committed to it by a Magistrate", as provided in the Code. Two segments have been indicated in Section 193 as exceptions to the aforesaid interdict. One is, when the Code itself has provided differently in express language regarding taking of cognizance, and the second is, when any other law has provided differently in express language regarding taking cognizance of offences under such law. The word "expressly" which is employed in Section 193 denoting those exceptions is indicative of the legislative mandate that a Court of Session can depart from the interdict contained in the section only if it is provided differently in clear and unambiguous terms. In other words, unless it is positively and specifically provided differently no Court of Session can take cognizance of any offence directly, without the case being committed to it by a Magistrate. Neither in the Code nor in the Act is there any provision whatsoever, not even by implication, that the specified Court of Session (Special Court) can take cognizance of the offence under the Act as a court of original jurisdiction without the case being committed to it by a Magistrate. It can be discerned from the hierarchical settings of criminal courts that the Court of Session is given a superior and special status. Hence the legislature would have thoughtfully relieved the Court of Session from the work of performing all the preliminary formalities which Magistrates have to do until the case is committed to the Court of Session. (Paras 11 and 12). Moly v. State of Kerala, (2004) 4 SCC 584: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1348: AIR 2004 SC 1890: 2004 Cri LJ 1812.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-3-2004]

[2257] — S. 193 — "Except otherwise expressly provided" — Means except positively provided differently in clear and unambiguous language

Section 193 of the Code imposes an interdict on all Courts of Session against taking cognizance of any offence as a court of original jurisdiction. It can take cognizance only if "the case has been committed to it by a Magistrate", as provided in the Code. Two segments have been indicated in Section 193 as exceptions to the aforesaid interdict. One is, when the Code itself has provided differently in express language regarding taking of cognizance, and the second is when any other law has provided differently in express language regarding taking cognizance of offences under such law. The word "expressly" which is employed in Section 193 denoting those exceptions is indicative of the legislative mandate that a Court of Session can depart from the interdict contained in the section only if it is provided differently in clear and unambiguous terms. In other words, unless it is positively and specifically provided differently no Court of Session can take cognizance of any offence directly, without the case being committed to it by a Magistrate. Neither in the Code nor in the Act is there any provision whatsoever, not even by implication, that the specified Court of Session (Special Court) can take cognizance of the offence under the Act as a court of original jurisdiction without the case being committed to it by a Magistrate. As such the charge-sheet or complaint cannot straight away be filed before such Special Court for offences under the Act. It can be discerned from the hierarchical settings of criminal courts that the Court of Session is given a superior and special status. Hence the legislature would have thoughtfully relieved the Court of Session from the work of performing all the preliminary formalities which Magistrates have to do until the case is committed to the Court of Session. (Paras 10 and 11). Gangula Ashok v. State of A.P., (2000) 2 SCC 504: 2000 SCC (Cri) 488: AIR 2000 SC 740: 2000 Cri LJ 819: (2000) 1 KLT 609.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-2000]

[2258] — S. 193 — Sessions Court has no jurisdiction to take cognizance of an offence directly except expressly provided so — Special Court presided by Additional Sessions Judge constituted under S. 12-A of E.C. Act cannot get jurisdiction by a mere transfer of a case by the High Court — Essential Commodities Act, 1955, Ss. 12-A and 12-AA — Cognizance of offence under. Jagdish Prasad Gupta v. State of Rajasthan, 1995 Supp (3) SCC 386: 1995 SCC (Cri) 924.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and Dr. A.S. Anand, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-3-1994]

[2259] — S. 193 — Summoning any person — Once the case is committed to the Court of Session, bar under is lifted and the Court of Session can summon any person whose complicity in the commission of the crime can prima facie be gathered from the material on record (Para 9). Nisar v. State of U.P., (1995) 2 SCC 23: 1995 SCC (Cri) 306: 1995 Cri LJ 2118: (1995) 32 ACC 148.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and M.K. Mukherjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-11-1994]

Kishun Singh v. State of Bihar, (1993) 2 SCC 16: 1993 SCC (Cri) 470, followed

[2260] — Ss. 193 to 196, 199, 200, 205 to 211 — Ordering prosecutions casually — Direction to — High Court by impugned judgment, besides holding that persons whose names were entered in revenue records, were alone entitled to notice, and others though may have an interest, were not so entitled directing Respondents 1 and 2 to initiate criminal action against appellants and private Respondents 7 to 18 "for playing fraud on the Government and the court, for making wrongful gains by filing writ petition which was not maintainable" — No finding that their claim was false or that they had furnished false information — Writ petition seeking to enforce or protect rights of the writ petitioners, purely based on legal contentions, cannot be termed as "playing of a fraud by the writ petitioners against the Government or the court" — Further held, power to order a prosecution has to be used sparingly and in exceptional circumstances, either to maintain majesty of law or to ensure that clearly established offences relating to fraud/forgery with reference to court proceedings do not go unprosecuted or unpunished — Ordering prosecutions in a casual manner while reversing the decision of a Single Judge in a writ petition, without any investigation or enquiry either by itself or by any independent investigation agency, is to be deprecated — Criminal law cannot be set into motion against a litigant, as a matter of course —

Besides, provisions under which they were to be prosecuted were also not specified — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 191 to 196, 198 to 210 and 228 (Paras 17 to 26). S. Palani Velayutham v. Collector, (2009) 10 SCC 664.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-2009]

[2261] — Ss. 193, 190, 156, 157 and 173 — Error or irregularity in investigation — Cognizance on the basis of such investigation — Validity of — Held, even if CBI committed an error or irregularity in submitting the charge-sheet without the approval of CVC, the cognizance taken by the Special Judge on the basis of such a charge-sheet could not be set aside

The Supreme Court in H.N. Rishbud case has held that if cognizance is in fact taken on a police report initiated by the breach of a mandatory provision relating to investigation, the result of the trial, which follows it, cannot be set aside unless the illegality in the investigation can be shown to have brought about a miscarriage of justice and that an illegality committed in the course of investigation does not affect the competence and the jurisdiction of the court for trial. Hence, even assuming for the sake of argument that CBI committed an error or irregularity in submitting the charge-sheet without the approval of CVC, the cognizance taken by the learned Special Judge on the basis of such a charge-sheet could not be set aside nor could further proceedings in pursuance thereof be quashed. (Para 21). Union of India v. Prakash P. Hinduja, (2003) 6 SCC 195: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1314: AIR 2003 SC 2612: 2003 Cri LJ 3117.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-7-2003]

H.N. Rishbud v. State of Delhi, AIR 1955 SC 196: (1955) 1 SCR 1150: 1955 Cri LJ 526, followed

[2262] — Ss. 193, 209 and 319 — Cognizance of offences against persons not charge-sheeted, whose complicity in the crime comes to light from material available on record — Power of Sessions Court to take such cognizance at stage of committal of case to it — In view of disagreement with ruling in Ranjit Singh case, (1998) 7 SCC 149, which had held that such power did not exist, matter referred to larger Bench. Dharam Pal v. State of Haryana, (2004) 13 SCC 9.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal, Tarun Chatterjee and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-12-2004]

Kishun Singh v. State of Bihar, (1993) 2 SCC 16: 1993 SCC (Cri) 470, affirmed

Ranjit Singh v. State of Punjab, (1998) 7 SCC 149: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1554, doubted

[2263] — Ss. 193, 209 and 319 — Sessions Court has jurisdiction, on committal of a case to it, to take cognizance of offence of persons not named as offenders, whose complicity in the crime comes to light from the material available on record — Hence on committal under S. 209, Sessions Judge justified in summoning, without recording evidence, the appellants not named in police report under S. 173 to stand trial along with those already named therein — Sessions Court having jurisdiction under S. 193, mere exercise of power under a wrong provision (S. 319) would not render its order invalid

An FIR was lodged naming 20 persons, including the two appellants, as assailants of the deceased who died in the occurrence. After investigation police submitted its report under S. 173 CrPC showing 18 persons other than the two appellants as offenders. The Magistrate committed the 18 persons named in the report to the Court of Session under S. 209 of the Code to stand trial. Before the Sessions Court, an application was presented under S. 319 of the Code praying that the material on record annexed to the report under S. 173 revealed the involvement of the two appellants also and hence they should be summoned and arraigned before the Court as accused persons along with the eighteen already named in the charge-sheet. Thereupon a show-cause notice was issued to the present two appellants in response whereto they contended that though they were not present at the place of occurrence, they were falsely named in the First Information Report and the investigating officer had rightly omitted their names from the charge-sheet filed in Court. The Sessions Judge rejected the plea and in exercise of discretion under S. 319 impleaded the appellants as co-accused along with 18 others before any evidence was recorded i.e. before the commencement of the actual trial. The appellants thereupon filed a criminal revision application before the High Court which was dismissed.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

In the present case, the stage for the exercise of power under S. 319 of the Code had not reached, inasmuch as the trial had not commenced and evidence was not led.

The Court of Session had the power under S. 193 of the Code to summon the appellants as their involvement in the commission of the crime prima facie appeared from the record of the case. Though power was exercised under S. 319, there is no reason to interfere with the impugned order as it is well settled that once it is found that the power exists the exercise of power under a wrong provision will not render the order illegal or invalid.

Once the Magistrate takes cognizance of the offence he may proceed to try the offender (except where the case is transferred under S. 191) or commit him for trial under S. 209 if the offence is triable exclusively by a Court of Session. Cognizance is taken of the offence and not the offender. There is a difference in the language of S. 193 of the two Codes; under the old Code the Court of Session was precluded from taking cognizance of any offence as a court of original jurisdiction unless the accused was committed to it whereas under the present Code the embargo is diluted by the replacement of the words the accused by the words the case. Thus, on a plain reading of S. 193, as it presently stands, once the case is committed under S. 209 to the Court of Session by a Magistrate under the Code, the restriction placed on the power of the Court of Session to take cognizance of an offence as a court of original jurisdiction gets lifted thereby investing the Court of Session complete and unfettered jurisdiction of the court of original jurisdiction to take cognizance of the offence which would include the summoning of the person or persons whose complicity in the commission of the crime can prima facie be gathered from the material available on record. For the limited purpose of deciding whether or not to frame a charge against the accused, the Judge would be required to examine the record of the case and the documents submitted therewith, which would comprise the police report, the statements of witnesses recorded under S. 161 of the Code, the seizure-memoranda, etc. Once the court takes cognizance of the offence (not the offender) it becomes the court's duty to find out the real offenders and if it comes to the conclusion that besides the persons put up for trial by the police some others are also involved in the commission of the crime, it is the court's duty to summon them to stand trial along with those already named, since summoning them would only be a part of the process of taking cognizance. Kishun Singh v. State of Bihar, (1993) 2 SCC 16: 1993 SCC (Cri) 470: 1993 Cri LJ 1700: (1993) 1 Crimes 494: (1993) 1 BLJR 309.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-1-1993]

Raghubans Dubey v. State of Bihar, AIR 1967 SC 1167: (1967) 2 SCR 423: 1967 Cri LJ 1081; Hareram Satpathy v. Tikaram Agarwala, (1978) 4 SCC 58: 1978 SCC (Cri) 496, relied on

Sk. Lutfur Rahman v. State, 1985 PLJR 640: 1985 Cri LJ 1238 (Pat HC) (FB), affirmed

Affirmed in Dharam Pal v. State of Haryana, (2004) 13 SCC 9*

[2264] — Ss. 193, 4, 5 and 2(g) — Special Court — Held, it is a Court of Session — It is specified for trial of offences as distinguished from "inquiry" as defined in S. 2(g) CrPC — Therefore, it cannot take cognizance directly as a court of original jurisdiction without the case being committed to it by a Magistrate in view of S. 193 CrPC — Ss. 4 and 5 CrPC do not indicate any departure from this position — Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989, Ss. 14 and 2(1)(d)

Pursuant to a complaint lodged against the appellants the police filed charge-sheet directly before the Sessions Court which was designated as Special Court for trial of offences under the Scheduled Castes and the Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act. A charge was framed by the Special Judge against both the appellants for the alleged offences under the Act. At that stage the appellants moved the High Court for quashing the charge as well as the charge-sheet on various reasons. A Single Judge of the High Court of Andhra Pradesh found that the procedure adopted by the investigating officer in filing the charge-sheet straight away to the Special Court was not in accordance with law, and the Special Judge had no jurisdiction to take cognizance of any offence under the Act without the case having been committed to that Court. Accordingly the Single Judge set aside the proceedings of the Special Court and directed the charge-sheet and the connected papers to be returned to the police officer concerned who, in turn, was directed to present the same before a Judicial Magistrate of Ist Class "for the purpose of committal to the Special Court". The Single Judge further directed that "on such committal the Special Court shall frame appropriate charges in the light of the observations in the order". Disposing of the appeal,

Held :

It is clear from Sections 14 and 2(1)(d) of the Act that it is for trial of the offences under the Act that a particular Court of Session in each district is sought to be specified as a Special Court. Though the word "trial" is not defined either in the Code or in the Act it is clearly distinguishable from inquiry. Inquiry must always be a forerunner to the trial. Thus the Court of Session is specified to conduct a trial and no other court can conduct the trial of offences under the Act. Evidently the legislature wanted the Special Court to be a Court of Session. Hence the particular Court of Session, even after being specified as a Special Court, would continue to be essentially a Court of Session and designation of it as a Special Court would not denude it of its character or even powers as a Court of Session. The trial in such a Court can be conducted only in the manner provided in Chapter XVIII of the Code which contains a fasciculus of provisions for "trial before a Court of Session". (Paras 8 and 9)

Section 193 of the Code has to be understood in the aforesaid backdrop. The section imposes an interdict on all Courts of Session against taking cognizance of any offence as a court of original jurisdiction. It can take cognizance only if "the case has been committed to it by a Magistrate", as provided in the Code. Two segments have been indicated in Section 193 as exceptions to the aforesaid interdict. One is, when the Code itself has provided differently in express language regarding taking of cognizance, and the second is when any other law has provided differently in express language regarding taking cognizance of offences under such law. The word "expressly" which is employed in Section 193 denoting those exceptions is indicative of the legislative mandate that a Court of Session can depart from the interdict contained in the section only if it is provided differently in clear and unambiguous terms. In other words, unless it is positively and specifically provided differently no Court of Session can take cognizance of any offence directly, without the case being committed to it by a Magistrate. Neither in the Code nor in the Act is there any provision whatsoever, not even by implication, that the specified Court of Session (Special Court) can take cognizance of the offence under the Act as a court of original jurisdiction without the case being committed to it by a Magistrate. As such the charge-sheet or complaint cannot straight away be filed before such Special Court for offences under the Act. It can be discerned from the hierarchical settings of criminal courts that the Court of Session is given a superior and special status. Hence the legislature would have thoughtfully relieved the Court of Session from the work of performing all the preliminary formalities which Magistrates have to do until the case is committed to the Court of Session. (Paras 10 and 11)

Contentions based on Sections 4 and 5 of the Code as suggesting that a departure from Section 193 of the Code is permissible under special enactments cannot be accepted. Section 4(2) CrPC makes it clear that if another enactment contains any provision which is contrary to the provisions of the Code, such other provision would apply in place of the particular provision of the Code. If there is no such contrary provision in other laws, then provisions of the Code would apply to the matters covered thereby. Section 5 of the Code cannot also be brought in aid for supporting the view that the Court of Session specified under the Act can obviate the interdict contained in Section 193 of the Code as long as there is no provision in the Act empowering the Special Court to take cognizance of the offence as a court of original jurisdiction. (Paras 12 to 14)

It must, therefore, be held that a Special Court under this Act is essentially a Court of Session and it can take cognizance of the offence when the case is committed to it by the Magistrate in accordance with the provisions of the Code. In other words, a complaint or a charge-sheet cannot straight away be laid down before the Special Court under the Act. (Para 16)

So the High Court of Andhra Pradesh has rightly set aside, as per the impugned order, the proceedings initiated by the Special Court specified under the Act. But it is not possible to support the directions given by the Single Judge in his order that after committal of the case the Special Court shall frame charge against the appellants. It is for the Special Court to decide regarding the action to be taken next, after hearing both sides as provided in Section 227 of the Code. No direction can be given to the Special Court at this premature stage as to what course the court should adopt then. It is open to the appellants to raise all their contentions at that stage if they wish to make a plea for discharge. If any such plea is made, the Judge of the Special Court shall pass appropriate orders untrammelled by the observations made in the impugned order. (Para 26). Gangula Ashok v. State of A.P., (2000) 2 SCC 504: 2000 SCC (Cri) 488: AIR 2000 SC 740: 2000 Cri LJ 819: (2000) 1 KLT 609.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-2000]

Directorate of Enforcement v. Deepak Mahajan, (1994) 3 SCC 440: 1994 SCC (Cri) 785, relied on

Meerabai v. Bhujbal Singh, 1995 Cri LJ 2376 (MP); Pappu Singh v. State of U.P., 1995 Cri LJ 2803 (All); Jhagru Mahto v. State of Bihar, (1993) 1 Crimes 643 (Pat) (DB); Jyoti Arora v. State of Haryana, (1998) 2 Cri LR 73 (P&H); Referring Officer rep. by State of A.P. v. Shekar Nair, (1999) 3 An LT 533: 1999 Cri LJ 4173 (AP) (DB), approved

Director General of Prosecution, In re, 1993 Cri LJ 760: (1992) 2 KLT 748 (Ker); Hareendran v. Sarada, (1996) 1 An LT (Cri) 162: (1995) 1 KLT 231 (Ker) (FB), overruled

A.R. Antulay v. Ramdas Sriniwas Nayak, (1984) 2 SCC 500: 1984 SCC (Cri) 277, distinguished

[2265] — Ss. 193, 4(2), 5, 2(g) and 6(i) — Requirements for exception from interdiction under S. 193 CrPC — Whether Special Court under the Act a Court of Session and reason therefor — Whether "Special Court" under the 1989 Act, being a Court of Session, excepted from interdict of S. 193 CrPC — Whether there was any express provision in the Act or in CrPC excepting the Special Court — Whether a combined reading of Ss. 4(2) and 5 CrPC excepted the Special Court — Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989, Ss. 2(1)(d) and 14

(i) Whether Special Court under the Act a Court of Session and reason therefor

The Court of Session is specified to conduct a trial and no other court can conduct the trial of offences under the Act. Evidently, the legislature wanted the Special Court to be a Court of Session. Hence the particular Court of Session, even after being specified as a Special Court, would continue to be essentially a Court of Session and designation of it as a Special Court would not denude it of its character or even powers as a Court of Session. The trial in such a court can be conducted only in the manner provided in Chapter XVIII of the Code which contains a fascicule of provisions for "trial before a Court of Session". (Para 17)

It can be discerned from the hierarchical settings of criminal courts that the Court of Session is given a superior and special status. Therefore the legislature would have thoughtfully relieved the Court of Session from the work of performing all the preliminary formalities which Magistrates have to do until the case is committed to the Court of Session. (Para 19)

(ii) Whether Special Court excepted from interdict of S. 193 CrPC, 1973

Section 193 of the Code has to be understood in the aforesaid backdrop. The section imposes an interdict on all Courts of Session against taking cognizance of any offence as a court of original jurisdiction. It can take cognizance only if "the case has been committed to it by a Magistrate", as provided in the Code. Two segments have been indicated in Section 193 as exceptions to the aforesaid interdict. One is, when the Code itself has provided differently in express language regarding taking of cognizance, and the second is when any other law has provided differently in express language regarding the taking of cognizance of offences under such law. The word "expressly" which is employed in Section 193 denoting those exceptions is indicative of the legislative mandate that a Court of Session can depart from the interdict contained in the section only if it is provided differently in clear and unambiguous terms. In other words, unless it is positively and specifically provided differently, no Court of Session can take cognizance of any offence directly, without the case being committed to it by a Magistrate. (Para 18)

(a) Whether there was any express provision in the Act or in CrPC excepting the Special Court

Neither in the Code nor in the Act is there any provision whatsoever, not even by implication, that the specified Court of Session (Special Court) can take cognizance of the offence under the Act as a court of original jurisdiction without the case being committed to it by a Magistrate. Therefore there is no reason to think that a charge-sheet or a complaint can straight away be filed before such Special Court for offences under the Act. (Para 19)

(b) Whether a combined reading of Ss. 4(2) and 5 CrPC excepted the Special Court

Section 5 of the Code cannot be brought in aid for supporting the view that the Court of Session specified under the Act obviates the interdict contained in Section 193 of the Code so long as there is no provision in the Act empowering the Special Court to take cognizance of the offence as a court of original jurisdiction. (Paras 20 and 21)

The Sessions Court in the case at hand, undisputedly, has acted as one of original jurisdiction, and the requirements of Section 193 of the Code were not met. (Para 23)

The inevitable conclusion is that the learned Sessions Judge, as the undisputed factual position goes to show, could not have convicted the appellant for the offence relatable to Section 3(1)(xi) of the Act in the background of the legal position noted supra. That is, accordingly, set aside. However, for the offence under Sections 354 and 448 IPC, custodial sentence for the period already undergone, which as the records reveal is about three months, would meet the ends of justice considering the background facts and the special features of the case. The appeal is accordingly disposed of. (Para 24). Vidyadharan v. State of Kerala, (2004) 1 SCC 215: 2004 SCC (Cri) 260: AIR 2004 SC 536: (2004) 1 KLT 105: 2004 Cri LJ 605: (2004) 2 MPLJ 251.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-11-2003]

A.R. Antulay v. Ramdas Sriniwas Nayak, (1984) 2 SCC 500: 1984 SCC (Cri) 277; Directorate of Enforcement v. Deepak Mahajan, (1994) 3 SCC 440: 1994 SCC (Cri) 785, relied on

Gangula Ashok v. State of A.P., (2000) 2 SCC 504: 2000 SCC (Cri) 488, followed

[2266] — Ss. 193, 4(2), 5, 2(g) and 6(i) — "Special Court" under the 1989 Act, held, is a Court of Session — It is specified for trial of offences as distinguished from "inquiry" — Cognizance by said court directly as a court of original jurisdiction without the case being committed to it by a Magistrate — Permissibility of — Held, in view of S. 193 CrPC, not permissible in the absence of any contrary provision in the 1989 Act or in CrPC in that regard — S. 5 CrPC cannot be brought in aid for supporting the contrary view — Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989, Ss. 14 and 2(1)(d)

The appellants faced trial for alleged commission of offences punishable under Sections 3(1)(iii), 3(1)(v) and 3(1)(x) of the Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989 (in short "the Act"). The trial court (Special Court under the Act) found the appellants guilty and imposed sentences. The said court had suo motu entertained and registered the complaint and, thus, it had taken cognizance of the offence straight away without the case being committed to it. The issues involved in these appeals were whether the Special Court under the Act is a Court of Session and, if so, whether in view of the interdict contained in Section 193 CrPC it cannot take cognizance without the case being committed to it.

Held :

Section 193 of the Code has to be understood in the aforesaid backdrop. The section imposes an interdict on all Courts of Session against taking cognizance of any offence as a court of original jurisdiction. A Court of Session can take cognizance only if "the case has been committed to it by a Magistrate", as provided in the Code. Two segments have been indicated in Section 193 as exceptions to the aforesaid interdict. One is, when the Code itself has provided differently in express language regarding taking of cognizance, and the second is, when any other law has provided differently in express language regarding taking cognizance of offences under such law. The word "expressly" which is employed in Section 193 denoting those exceptions is indicative of the legislative mandate that a Court of Session can depart from the interdict contained in the section only if it is provided differently in clear and unambiguous terms. In other words, unless it is positively and specifically provided differently no Court of Session can take cognizance of any offence directly, without the case being committed to it by a Magistrate. Neither in the Code nor in the Act is there any provision whatsoever, not even by implication, that the specified Court of Session (Special Court) can take cognizance of the offence under the Act as a court of original jurisdiction without the case being committed to it by a Magistrate. It can be discerned from the hierarchical settings of criminal courts that the Court of Session is given a superior and special status. Hence the legislature would have thoughtfully relieved the Court of Session from the work of performing all the preliminary formalities which Magistrates have to do until the case is committed to the Court of Session. (Paras 11 and 12)

A reading of the provisions concerned [provisions under Section 4(2) CrPC] makes it clear that if another enactment contains any provision which is contrary to the provisions of the Code, such other provision would apply in place of the particular provision of the Code. If there is no such contrary provision in other laws, then provisions of the Code would apply to the matters covered thereby. Section 5 of the Code cannot be brought in aid for supporting the view that the Court of Session specified under the Act obviates the interdict contained in Section 193 of the Code so long as there is no provision in the Act empowering the Special Court to take cognizance of the offence as a court of original jurisdiction. (Paras 13 and 14)

Hence, there is no doubt that a Special Court under the Act is essentially a Court of Session and it can take cognizance of the offence when the case is committed to it by the Magistrate in accordance with the provisions of the Code. In other words, a complaint or a charge-sheet cannot straight away be laid down before the Special Court under the Act. The Sessions Court in the case at hand, undisputedly has acted as one of original jurisdiction, and the requirements of Section 193 of the Code were not met. (Para 16). Moly v. State of Kerala, (2004) 4 SCC 584: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1348: AIR 2004 SC 1890: 2004 Cri LJ 1812.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-3-2004]

A.R. Antulay v. Ramdas Sriniwas Nayak, (1984) 2 SCC 500: 1984 SCC (Cri) 277; Directorate of Enforcement v. Deepak Mahajan, (1994) 3 SCC 440: 1994 SCC (Cri) 785, relied on

Gangula Ashok v. State of A.P., (2000) 2 SCC 504: 2000 SCC (Cri) 488; Vidyadharan v. State of Kerala, (2004) 1 SCC 215: 2004 SCC (Cri) 260, followed

[2267] — S. 193 — Special Judge constituted under Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989 — Has no jurisdiction to entertain complaint alleging offence under S. 3(1)(x) thereof, take cognizance and issue process without the case being committed to it by a competent Magistrate — Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989, Ss. 3(1)(x) and 14 (Para 10). M.A. Kuttappan v. E. Krishnan Nayanar, (2004) 4 SCC 231: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1073: 2004 Cri LJ 1770: (2004) 2 KLT 145.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-2-2004]

Gangula Ashok v. State of A.P., (2000) 2 SCC 504: 2000 SCC (Cri) 488; Vidyadharan v. State of Kerala, (2004) 1 SCC 215: 2004 SCC (Cri) 260, relied on

— S. 194 See also S. 193, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 1051 in Vol. 2

— S. 194 See Ss. 9(6), 194, 327 and 2(p)

See also Ss. 190 to 210, 225 to 235 and 238 to 250

See also Ss. 340, 192 to 196, 227 and 482

See also Ss. 407 and 194

See also Ss. 409(2) & 194, 407 and 462 & 465

[2268] — S. 194 — Case made over by an order of Sessions Judge to Additional Sessions Judge wrongly under S. 409(1) instead of S. 194 — Held, order would not become invalid merely because of recitation of a wrong provision

Mere recital of a wrong provision of law does not have the effect of invalidating an order which is otherwise within the power of the authority making it. The Sessions Judge's order making over the case to the Additional Sessions Judge was within his power; the only error was that he recited a wrong section of the Code viz. S. 409(1) instead of S. 194. Therefore, this order must be read as an order made under S. 194 so far as the direction making over the case to the Additional Sessions Judge is concerned. State of Karnataka v. Muniyalla, (1985) 1 SCC 196: 1985 SCC (Cri) 50: AIR 1985 SC 470: 1985 Cri LJ 751.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and V. Khalid, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-11-1984]

[2269] — S. 194 — Scope of High Court's power to issue 'special order' under S. 194 — High Court can allot a case to a particular Judge. Kehar Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1988) 3 SCC 609: 1988 SCC (Cri) 711: AIR 1988 SC 1883.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.L. Oza[1], B.C. Ray[2] and K. Jagannatha Shetty[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 3-8-1988]

— S. 195 See also S. 195, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 1052 et seq. in Vol. 2

— S. 195 See Ss. 154, 190, 195, 196, 197 and 200

See also Ss. 156, 195 & 340 and 341

See also Ss. 156(3), 340 and 195

See also Ss. 169 and 195

See also Ss. 190 to 210, 225 to 235 and 238 to 250

See also Ss. 190, 193 and 195 to 199 & 204

See also Ss. 196, 195 and 197

See also Ss. 340, 192 to 196, 227 and 482

See also Ss. 340 and 195

See also Ss. 482 and 195

[2270] — S. 195 — Applicability — Question whether it applies to documents forged/fabricated prior to their being produced in court — Held, that question arises only after the court takes cognizance — At the stage of investigation S. 195 has no application — Hence, on facts, the Supreme Court was not concerned with the said question — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 468, 471, 470 and 120-B

It is to be seen that the High Court does not quash the complaint on the ground that Section 195 applied and that the procedure under Chapter XXVI had not been followed. Thus such a ground could not be used to sustain the impugned judgment. (Para 8). M. Narayandas v. State of Karnataka, (2003) 11 SCC 251: 2004 SCC (Cri) 118.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-9-2003]

[2271] — S. 195 — Mandatory nature and requirements of, reiterated — Test of whether there is evasion or non-compliance with S. 195, laid down

There was no wrong in clubbing together of the two crimes. Keeping in view the totality of the circumstances and evidence, the second occurrence was nothing but a fallout of the first occurrence. Merely because two separate complaints had been lodged, did not mean that they could not be clubbed together and one charge-sheet could not be filed. (Paras 37, 8 and 36)

Therefore although the charges under Section 188 are quashed as no complaint in this regard had ever been filed, it would by no means have any bearing on the case of the prosecution, so far as the charges for other offences are concerned. It cannot be accepted that absence of a complaint under Section 195 CrPC falsifies the genesis of the prosecution case and is fatal to the entire prosecution case. (Paras 36 and 35)

The legislative intent behind Section 195(1)(a)(i) CrPC read with Section 188 is that an individual should not face criminal prosecution instituted upon insufficient grounds by persons actuated by malice, ill will or frivolity of disposition and to save the time of the criminal courts being wasted by endless prosecutions. This provision has been carved out as an exception to the general rule contained under Section 190 CrPC. (Para 28)

Thus, there must be a complaint by the public servant whose lawful order has not been complied with. The complaint must be in writing. The provisions of Section 195 CrPC are mandatory. Non-compliance with it would vitiate the prosecution and all other consequential orders. The court cannot assume the cognizance of the case without such complaint. In the absence of such a complaint, the trial and conviction will be void ab initio being without jurisdiction. (Para 33)

The test of whether there is evasion or non-compliance with Section 195 CrPC or not, is whether the facts disclose primarily and essentially an offence for which a complaint of the court or of a public servant is required. The provisions of this section cannot be evaded by describing the offence as one being punishable under some other sections of IPC, though in truth and substance, the offence falls in a category mentioned in Section 195 CrPC. Thus, cognizance of such an offence cannot be taken by misdescribing it or by putting a wrong label on it. (Para 29). C. Muniappan v. State of T.N., (2010) 9 SCC 567: (2010) 5 CTC 794 .

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.S. Singhvi and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-8-2010]

T.T. Antony v. State of Kerala, (2001) 6 SCC 181: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1048; Govind Mehta v. State of Bihar, (1971) 3 SCC 329: 1971 SCC (Cri) 608; Patel Laljibhai Somabhai v. State of Gujarat, (1971) 2 SCC 376: 1971 SCC (Cri) 548; Surjit Singh v. Balbir Singh, (1996) 3 SCC 533: 1996 SCC (Cri) 521; State of Punjab v. Raj Singh, (1998) 2 SCC 391: 1998 SCC (Cri) 642; K. Vengadachalam v. K.C. Palanisamy, (2005) 7 SCC 352: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1673; Iqbal Singh Marwah v. Meenakshi Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1101; M.S. Ahlawat v. State of Haryana, (2000) 1 SCC 278: 2000 SCC (Cri) 193; Sachida Nand Singh v. State of Bihar, (1998) 2 SCC 493: 1998 SCC (Cri) 660; Daulat Ram v. State of Punjab, AIR 1962 SC 1206: (1962) 2 Cri LJ 286; Basir-ul-Haq v. State of W.B., AIR 1953 SC 293: 1953 Cri LJ 1232; Durgacharan Naik v. State of Orissa, AIR 1966 SC 1775: 1966 Cri LJ 1491, relied on

[2272] — S. 195 — Discretion of the court to order prosecution — How to be exercised — Explained

Provisions of Section 195 CrPC are mandatory and no court has jurisdiction to take cognizance of any of the offences mentioned therein unless there is a complaint in writing as required under that section. It is settled law that every incorrect or false statement does not make it incumbent upon the court to order prosecution, but requires the court to exercise judicial discretion to order prosecution only in the larger interest of the administration of justice. Section 340 CrPC prescribes the procedure as to how a complaint may be preferred under Section 195 CrPC. A complaint outside the provisions of Section 340 CrPC cannot be filed by any civil, revenue or criminal court under its inherent jurisdiction. (Paras 5 and 6). M.S. Ahlawat v. State of Haryana, (2000) 1 SCC 278: 2000 SCC (Cri) 193: AIR 2000 SC 168: 2000 Cri LJ 388.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and S. Rajendra Babu and R.C. Lahoti, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-10-1999]

Chajoo Ram v. Radhey Shyam, (1971) 1 SCC 774: 1971 SCC (Cri) 331, relied on [2273] — S. 195 — "Civil court" — What is — Debts Recovery Tribunal (DRT) — Nature of, and extent of powers of — If civil court — Held, DRT cannot be treated as civil court — Specific Relief Act, 1963, S. 34 — Recovery of Debts Due to Banks and Financial Institutions Act, 1993, Ss. 17, 19 and 22. Nahar Industrial Enterprises Ltd. v. Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corpn., (2009) 8 SCC 646.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-7-2009]

[2274] — S. 195 — Inconsistent stand or pleas taken by counsel at different stages of the proceedings — S. 195, held, not attracted (Para 10). N. Natarajan v. B.K. Subba Rao, (2003) 2 SCC 76: 2003 SCC (Cri) 437: AIR 2003 SC 541: 2003 Cri LJ 820.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-12-2002]

[2275] — S. 195 — Investigation into offences against public justice — Bar under S. 195 against cognizance except on complaint in writing of court concerned — Investigation on basis of information received should not be quashed at initial stage more so when charges are grave — Bar under S. 195 can be gone into when court takes cognizance of the offence (Paras 3 and 5). Manohar M. Galani v. Ashok N. Advani, (1999) 8 SCC 737: AIR 2000 SC 202.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-11-1999]

[2276] — S. 195 — Offences under Ss. 420, 467, 471 and 474 IPC — Bar under S. 195 regarding court's power to take cognizance — Applicability — High Court not expressing any view on this aspect — Since it was a contentious issue and High Court's order under Ss. 482 and 468 CrPC found unsustainable, held, proper course would be to remit the matter to the High Court for fresh consideration (Para 7). Harnam Singh v. Everest Construction Co., (2004) 6 SCC 754: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1828.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-8-2004]

[2277] — Ss. 195, 190 and 340 — Power of police to investigate into a cognizable offence not controlled by S. 195 — Charge-sheet filed by police in respect of offence covered by S. 195 — Court not competent to take cognizance thereof in view of S. 195(1)(b)(ii) — However, court not debarred from filing a complaint on the basis of FIR and other materials collected during investigation provided it forms the requisite opinion and follows the procedure laid down in S. 340. State of Punjab v. Raj Singh, (1998) 2 SCC 391: 1998 SCC (Cri) 642: AIR 1998 SC 768.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-1998]

Gopalakrishna Menon v. D. Raja Reddy, (1983) 4 SCC 240: 1983 SCC (Cri) 822, distinguished

[2278] — Ss. 195 and 190 — Nature of S. 195 — Held, it is an exception to general provision under S. 190 regarding cognizance of offences by Magistrates — It creates an embargo upon the power of the court to take cognizance of certain types of offences enumerated therein

Section 190 CrPC provides that a Magistrate may take cognizance of any offence (a) upon receiving a complaint of facts which constitute such offence, (b) upon a police report of such facts, and (c) upon information received from any person other than a police officer, or upon his own knowledge, that such offence has been committed. Section 195 CrPC is a sort of exception to this general provision and creates an embargo upon the power of the court to take cognizance of certain types of offences enumerated therein. (Para 21). Iqbal Singh Marwah v. Meenakshi Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1101: AIR 2005 SC 2119: (2005) 3 Mah LJ 530: 2005 Cri LJ 2161.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and B.N. Agrawal, H.K. Sema, G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-2005]

[2279] — Ss. 195 and 340 — Bar to take cognizance of private complaint in respect of offences covered by S. 195 — Object of — Cognizance of private complaint already taken by the Magistrate before filing of the alleged forged document in civil court — Held, bar of S. 195(1)(b)(ii) not attracted — High Court was right in granting liberty to the Magistrate to proceed with the trial of the criminal case

The object of Section 195 is to protect persons from needless harassment by prosecution for private vendetta; to preserve purity of the judicial process and unsullied administration of justice; to prevent the parties of the temptation to pre-empt the proceedings pending in a court and to pressurise and desist parties from proceeding with the case. Equally when the act complained of relates to an offence, i.e., contempt of lawful authority of public servant, or against public justice or for offences relating to documents produced or given in evidence, public justice demands absolute bar of private prosecution and that power be given to the court to lay complaint under Section 340 of the Code as per the procedure prescribed therein.

For taking cognizance of an offence, the document, the foundation for forgery, if produced before the court or given in evidence, the bar of taking cognizance under Section 195(1)(b)(ii) gets attracted and the criminal court is prohibited from taking cognizance of offence unless a complaint in writing is filed as per the procedure prescribed under Section 340 of the Code by or on behalf of the court. The object thereby is to preserve purity of the administration of justice and to allow the parties to adduce evidence in proof of certain documents without being compelled or intimidated to proceed with the judicial process. The bar of Section 195 is to take cognizance of the offences covered thereunder.

In the present case cognizance was taken by the criminal court on 27-9-1983 and the original agreement appears to have been filed in the civil court on 9-2-1984 — long after cognizance was taken by the Magistrate. It is settled law that once cognizance is taken, two courses are open to the Magistrate, namely, either to discharge the accused if the evidence does not disclose the offence or to acquit the accused after a full trial. Unless either of the two courses is taken and orders passed, the cognizance duly taken cannot be set at naught. In this case since cognizance was already taken before filing of the document in the civil court and the original has not been filed before cognizance was taken, the High Court was right in directing that the Magistrate is at liberty to proceed with the trial of the criminal case. Surjit Singh v. Balbir Singh, (1996) 3 SCC 533: 1996 SCC (Cri) 521: AIR 1996 SC 1592.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Ramaswamy, S. Saghir Ahmad and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-2-1996]

Harmonised in Iqbal Singh Marwah v. Meenakshi Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370

[2280] — Ss. 195 and 340 — Perjury before Supreme Court — Powers of Supreme Court when perjury is committed before it — Where Supreme Court found the writ petitioner before it to have filed affidavits with forged signatures and made false statements at different stages before it, infliction of punishment under S. 193 IPC on the writ petitioner by Supreme Court after a show-cause notice, held, was without jurisdiction — Supreme Court ought to have rather followed the procedure under Ss. 195 and 340 CrPC — Hence, conviction of the writ petitioner by Supreme Court set aside but in the peculiar circumstances of the case, filing of a complaint under S. 340 at this stage, held, was not expedient — However, the writ petitioner restrained from claiming any compensation or initiating any judicial proceedings on account of the conviction — Constitution of India, Arts. 142 and 129 — Penal Code, 1860, S. 193

While disposing of an earlier writ petition, the Supreme Court found the writ petitioner to have filed affidavits before it with forged signatures. He was also found to have made false statements at different stages in the court. Therefore, after a show-cause notice, the Supreme Court convicted the writ petitioner under Section 193 of the Penal Code and also under Article 129 of the Constitution for committing contempt of the Supreme Court. The writ petitioner filed the instant writ petition to challenge his conviction under Section 193 IPC on the ground that the Supreme Court could not itself inflict the punishment under Section 193 IPC. It ought to have, instead follow the procedure under Sections 195 and 340 CrPC. However, he did not challenge his conviction under Article 129. By the time of the decision in the instant case, he had already undergone the sentence under the said provisions. Allowing the instant writ petition, although simultaneously upholding his conviction under Article 129,

Held :

Under Article 142 of the Constitution the Supreme Court cannot altogether ignore the substantive provisions of a statute and pass orders concerning an issue which can be settled only through a mechanism prescribed in another statute. (Para 10)

Provisions of Section 195 CrPC are mandatory and no court has jurisdiction to take cognizance of any of the offences mentioned therein unless there is a complaint in writing as required under that section. It is settled law that every incorrect or false statement does not make it incumbent upon the court to order prosecution, but requires the court to exercise judicial discretion to order prosecution only in the larger interest of the administration of justice. Section 340 CrPC prescribes the procedure as to how a complaint may be preferred under Section 195 CrPC. A complaint outside the provisions of Section 340 CrPC cannot be filed by any civil, revenue or criminal court under its inherent jurisdiction. (Paras 5 and 6)

The Supreme Court has always adopted the procedure prescribed by Section 195 CrPC whenever it is noticed that proceedings before it have been tampered with by production of forged or false documents or any statement has been found to be false. In the present case also the Supreme Court could not have assumed jurisdiction by issue of a notice proposing conviction for forgery and making false statements at different stages in the Court punishable under Section 193 IPC without following the procedure prescribed under Sections 195 and 340 CrPC. Primarily the Supreme Court does not exercise any original criminal jurisdiction in relation to offences arising under Section 193 IPC and secondly the seriousness of the charge arising under Section 193 IPC requires an elaborate inquiry and trial into the matter by the competent criminal court and a summary inquiry by mere issuing a show-cause notice and considering affidavits or inquiry reports would not tantamount to the procedure provided under the CrPC. The order made by the Supreme Court convicting the petitioner under Section 193 IPC is, therefore, one without jurisdiction and without following the due procedure prescribed under law. Though it is not clear from the impugned order whether the powers under Article 142 of the Constitution were exercised to convict the petitioner under Section 193 IPC, one can presume that it is by exercise of that power that the impugned order had been made for there is no other provision enabling the passing of such an order. (Paras 12 and 13)

To perpetuate an error is no virtue but to correct it is a compulsion of judicial conscience. Therefore, the conviction of the petitioner under Section 193 IPC has to be set aside. Moreover, at this stage it is not expedient to direct the filing of a complaint in the competent court as envisaged by Section 340 CrPC because the petitioner has already undergone the sentence imposed upon him for an offence under Section 193 IPC. However, the instant order will not enable the petitioner to claim any compensation or initiate any proceedings in any court arising out of his conviction under Section 193 IPC except to use the same in any proceeding initiated against the petitioner departmentally regarding his services. (Paras 15 and 16)

The petitioner's conviction and sentence imposed under Article 129 of the Constitution of India for committing contempt of court is upheld. (Para 15). M.S. Ahlawat v. State of Haryana, (2000) 1 SCC 278: 2000 SCC (Cri) 193: AIR 2000 SC 168: 2000 Cri LJ 388.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and S. Rajendra Babu and R.C. Lahoti, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-10-1999]

Chajoo Ram v. Radhey Shyam, (1971) 1 SCC 774: 1971 SCC (Cri) 331; Supreme Court Bar Assn. v. Union of India, (1998) 4 SCC 409; Mohan Singh v. Amar Singh, (1998) 6 SCC 686, relied on

Afzal v. State of Haryana, (1996) 7 SCC 397, partly overruled

[2281] — Ss. 195 to 199 — Locus standi of a private complainant — General principle that a private complainant has locus standi to present a complaint before a court is applicable unless there is a specific statutory provision to the contrary

It is a well recognised principle of criminal jurisprudence that anyone can set or put the criminal law into motion except where the statute enacting or creating an offence indicates to the contrary. The scheme of the Code of Criminal Procedure envisages two parallel and independent agencies for taking criminal offences to court. Even for the most serious offence of murder, it was not disputed that a private complaint can, not only be filed but can be entertained and proceeded with according to law. Locus standi of the complainant is a concept foreign to criminal jurisprudence save and except that where the statute creating an offence provides for the eligibility of the complainant, by necessary implication the general principle gets excluded by such statutory provision. While S. 190 of the Code of Criminal Procedure permits anyone to approach the Magistrate with a complaint, it does not prescribe any qualification the complainant is required to fulfil to be eligible to file a complaint. But where an eligibility criterion for a complainant is contemplated specific provisions have been made such as to be found in Ss. 195 to 199 of the CrPC. These specific provisions clearly indicate that in the absence of any such statutory provision, a locus standi of a complainant is a concept foreign to criminal jurisprudence. In other words, the principle that anyone can set or put the criminal law in motion remains intact unless contra-indicated by a statutory provision. This general principle of nearly universal application is founded on a policy that an offence i.e. an act or omission made punishable by any law for the time being in force [see S. 2(n), CrPC] is not merely an offence committed in relation to the person who suffers harm but is also an offence against society. Punishment of the offender in the interest of the society being one of the objects behind penal statutes enacted for larger good of the society, right to initiate proceedings cannot be whittled down, circumscribed or fettered by putting it into a strait-jacket formula of locus standi unknown to criminal jurisprudence, save and except specific statutory exception. To hold that such an exception exists that a private complaint for offences of corruption committed by public servant is not maintainable, the court would require an unambiguous statutory provision and a tangled web of argument for drawing a far fetched implication, cannot be a substitute for an express statutory provision. A.R. Antulay v. Ramdas Sriniwas Nayak, (1984) 2 SCC 500: 1984 SCC (Cri) 277: AIR 1984 SC 718: 1984 Cri LJ 647: 1984 Bom LR 228.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: D.A. Desai, R.S. Pathak, O. Chinnappa Reddy, A.P. Sen and V. Balakrishna Eradi, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-2-1984]

[2282] — S. 195 — Provision in S. 142(2-A), IT Act, 1961 empowering the assessing officer to direct, with the approval of Commissioner, for special audit — Conditions precedent for exercise of such power, applicability of principles of natural justice and nature of such direction — AYs falling within block period 1-4-1996 to 18-12-2002 — The word "and" occurring in S. 142(2-A) between the expressions "complexity of the accounts of assessee" and "the interests of the Revenue", held, is conjunctive and not disjunctive — The expression "complexity" in S. 142(2-A) means intricate or difficult to understand — Therefore, opinion for issuing such a direction must be formed on an objective consideration all the three factors stated in that provision — The expression "having regard to" requires to have regard to the said factors together with all relevant factors — In the absence of even one of them, no direction can be issued — The direction under S. 142(2-A) is, by virtue of the legal fiction in S. 136, a judicial proceeding and not administrative or quasi-judicial — It leads to civil consequences and is prejudicial to the assessee and therefore principles of natural justice have to be treated as implicit in S. 142(2-A) — A prior notice to the assessee would enable him to show that the nature of his accounts did not warrant appointment of special auditor or that the proposal therefor was not bona fide and was meant only for extension of limitation period in terms of Expln. 2 to S. 158-BE — That the assessee was maintaining two sets of account books would not by itself lead to the conclusion that the same involved "complexity" — Moreover, approval should be granted by Commissioner not mechanically but having record to the material on record and the explanation, if any, given by the assessee — However, the hearing need not be elaborate and the notice may only contain the necessary issues in brief — The reasons for appointment of special auditor must be assigned albeit they need not be detailed — Otherwise there would be no remedy to cure a wrong exercise of the power — CPC, 1908, Or. 12 and S. 105 — IT Act, 1961, Ss. 142(2-A), 158-BC, 158-BE & Expln. 2, 136, 139, 139-A, 140, 141-A, 142(1) & (3) and 44-AB. Rajesh Kumar v. CIT, (2007) 2 SCC 181: AIR 2007 SC 181: (2006) 287 ITR 91.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-11-2006]

[2283] — Ss. 195 and 340 — Writ petition challenging conviction of petitioner under S. 193 IPC for forgery of signature of a Superintendent of Police on affidavits — Conviction of the Superintendent of Police under similar circumstances, set aside by Supreme Court — By accepting the plea of non-compliance with the procedure required under S. 195 r/w S. 340 CrPC and also on account of want of original jurisdiction of Supreme Court to try criminal offence under S. 193 IPC, Supreme Court in that case holding that punishment was liable to be quashed — Situation in the case of the petitioner identical on this aspect — Following the judgment of the Supreme Court in the case of the Superintendent of Police and for the reasons stated therein, held, sentence imposed on the petitioner under S. 193 IPC also liable to be quashed — Considering the special features of the case, held, this is not a fit case to direct the filing of a complaint in the competent court as envisaged by S. 340 CrPC because the petitioner has already undergone the sentence imposed upon him for an offence under S. 193 IPC although set aside now by this order — Penal Code, 1860, S. 193 — Constitution of India, Art. 32. Randhir Singh v. State of Haryana, (2000) 1 SCC 760: 2000 SCC (Cri) 308: AIR 2000 SC 544: 2000 Cri LJ 755.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and S. Rajendra Babu and R.C. Lahoti, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-1-2000]

M.S. Ahlawat v. State of Haryana, (2000) 1 SCC 278, followed

[2284] — Ss. 195 and 340 — Refusal to grant liberty to reagitate the grievances before an appropriate forum, while permitting the withdrawal of the appeal, when improper — Single Judge although dismissing the writ petition on the ground that the same involved disputed questions of fact, opining that the writ petitioner could agitate his grievances before an appropriate forum — Writ petitioner then filing Letters Patent Appeal — Question arising therein as to whether the same had been filed by the appellant or some one else — Hand writing expert opining against the appellant but the Division Bench not passing any order upon taking cognizance thereof — At this stage, appellant seeking to withdraw the LPA with liberty to reagitate the grievances before an appropriate forum — In such circumstances, order of Division Bench permitting withdrawal of the writ appeal but refusing such liberty, held, improper as it placed the appellant in a worse position — Letters Patent of Gujarat High Court, Cl. 15 — CPC, 1908, Or. 23 R. 1(3)

An order of preventive detention was passed against the appellant under the Conservation of Foreign Exchange and Prevention of Smuggling Activities Act, 1974 (for short "the COFEPOSA Act"). Certain immovable and movable properties belonging to him were forfeited under the Smugglers and Foreign Exchange Manipulators (Forfeiture of Property) Act, 1976 (for short "SAFEMA"). He successfully challenged both the orders. Pursuant thereto, the competent authority cancelled the order of forfeiture. However, whereas the movable properties were returned to him, the immovable properties were not. He then filed a writ petition. Allegations made in the said writ petition were denied and disputed. Respondent 4 herein contended that the appellant had transferred the said property in his favour. A Single Judge of the High Court dismissed the said writ petition on the ground that the same involved disputed questions of fact. He further observed that the appellant could initiate appropriate proceedings before appropriate court. The Single Judge, therefore, did not go into the question, as to whether the appellant had transferred the said property in favour of Respondent 4 herein or not. The appellant then filed a Letters Patent Appeal. A question arose therein as to whether the same was filed by the appellant or some other person. A handwriting expert opined that two signatures on the application and two signatures on a certified photostat copy of affidavit were not that of the appellant. However, no order was passed upon taking cognizance thereof, even no proceeding under Section 340 CrPC was initiated. Before the Division Bench, the appellant purportedly admitted that he had executed a sale deed in favour of Respondent 4. He then made a request for withdrawal of the appeal reserving right to agitate the grievances before an appropriate forum. The Division Bench while granting permission to withdraw the appeal, refused to grant liberty to reagitate the grievances and observed that looking to the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case and the seriousness of the matter, it might rather like to decide the appeal on merits and that ultimately the person concerned in the matter might have to face the consequences. Thereupon, the appellant gave up his request. Thereafter, he filed the present appeal by special leave.

Before the Supreme Court, the appellant contended that by preferring the appeal before the Division Bench, he could not have been put in a worse condition.

On the other hand, Respondent 4 contended that the appellant was guilty of making a misrepresentation before the Division Bench. That moreover, having admitted the execution of the sale deed in favour of Respondent 4 herein, the appellant could not be permitted to litigate before any other forum. However, the appellant denied and disputed the said allegation of guilt.

Allowing the appeal in part,

Held:

The Single Judge refused to entertain the writ petition on the premise that the same involved disputed questions of fact. He opined that the appellant may agitate his grievances before an appropriate forum. An intra-court appeal was filed thereagainst by the appellant alone. The respondent did not do so. The jurisdiction of the appellate court, thus, should have been kept confined only to the question as to whether the writ petition should have been determined on merit by the Single Judge. (Para 9)

A party having a grievance must have a remedy. Access to justice is a human right. When there exists such a right, a disputant must have a remedy in terms of the doctrine ubi jus ibi remedium. (Para 10)

There is nothing on record to show that the Division Bench while entertaining the Letters Patent Appeal intended to enter into any other question. Judges' record is final and conclusive. Any dispute in relation thereto must be raised before the same court. (Para 13)

The Division Bench did not go into the correctness or otherwise of the allegations and counter-allegations made by the parties before it. Whether the appellant was guilty of any forgery or not was not determined. It allowed the appellant to withdraw the appeal. By doing so, the parties were relegated to the same position to which they had been viz. when the Single Judge dismissed the writ petition. The appellant, thus, could not have been placed in a worse position. (Paras 16 and 18)

Therefore, the part of the impugned order whereby and whereunder the Division Bench refused to grant leave to the appellant to ventilate his grievances before an appropriate forum, cannot be sustained. (Para 19). Bhagubhai Dhanabhai Khalasi v. State of Gujarat, (2007) 4 SCC 241: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 260: (2007) 53 AIC 8 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-2007]

Dwarka Prasad Agarwal v. Ramesh Chander Agarwal, (2003) 6 SCC 220; Dwarka Prasad Agarwal v. B.D. Agarwal, (2003) 6 SCC 230; Swamy Atmananda v. Sri Ramakrishna Tapovanam, (2005) 10 SCC 51; Associated Tubewells Ltd. v. R.B. Gujarmal Modi, AIR 1957 SC 742; State of Maharashtra v. Ramdas Shrinivas Nayak, (1982) 2 SCC 463: 1982 SCC (Cri) 478; Guruvayoor Devaswom Managing Committee v. C.K. Rajan, (2003) 7 SCC 546, relied on [2285] — S. 195(1) — Where some offences are covered by S. 195(1) and some are not, compliance with S. 195(1) required only for those covered by it provided the two kinds of offences are separate and distinct and do not form part of the same transaction. State of U.P. v. Suresh Chandra Shrivastava, (1984) 3 SCC 92: 1984 SCC (Cri) 415: AIR 1984 SC 1108: 1984 Cri LJ 926.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, A. Varadarajan and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-1984]

[2286] — S. 195(1) — Where though offences stated in the complaint are covered by S. 195(1) but on facts and in substance the offences do not appear to be so covered, held, compliance with S. 195(1) not required. State of U.P. v. Suresh Chandra Shrivastava, (1984) 3 SCC 92: 1984 SCC (Cri) 415: AIR 1984 SC 1108: 1984 Cri LJ 926.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, A. Varadarajan and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-1984]

— S. 195(1)(a) See also Ss. 204 and 195(1)(a)

[2287] — S. 195(1)(a) — Object and scope of — Court is barred from taking cognizance of offences mentioned therein except on a written complaint by the public servant concerned — Private compliant not maintainable — If the public servant concerned does not or refuses to make a complaint some other public servant to whom he is administratively subordinate can prefer a complaint — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 172 to 188. State of U.P. v. Mata Bhikh, (1994) 4 SCC 95: 1994 SCC (Cri) 831.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and P.B. Sawant, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-3-1994]

[2288] — S. 195(1)(a) — "Complaint in writing of the public servant concerned...." — Interpretation of the expression — Appellant who was aggrieved against trade mark and copyright violations by Respondent 2, initially approaching SHO of the area for taking criminal action against Respondent 2 — SHO in turn directed appellant to approach Senior Superintendent of Police (SSP) — SSP got the complaint investigated and finding it to be false, action initiated against appellant under S. 182 IPC — Held, proper authority to initiate action under S. 195(1)(a) CrPC for breach of S. 182 IPC was SSP and not SHO — There was no provision for delegation of power under S. 195(1)(a) — Proceedings initiated under S. 182 IPC against complainant company by SHO were incompetent — Penal Code, 1860, S. 182

— Copyright Act, 1957, S. 63 — Trade and Merchandise Marks Act, 1958, Ss. 78 and 79 (Paras 13 to 16). P.D. Lakhani v. State of Punjab, (2008) 5 SCC 150: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 553: (2008) 2 KLT 575.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-4-2008]

Daulat Ram v. State of Punjab, AIR 1962 SC 1206: 1962 Supp (2) SCR 812; State of U.P. v. Mata Bhikh, (1994) 4 SCC 95: 1994 SCC (Cri) 831, relied on

[2289] — S. 195(1)(a) — Expression "public servant concerned" — Meaning of — Held, includes successor in office also

A successor in office of a public servant concerned will also fall within the ambit of the expression 'public servant concerned'. Any other view contrary to it will only create difficulties in certain situations. The successor in office of the public servant gets into the same position of the public servant concerned and he is in law eligible to file a complaint against wrongdoers. To say in other words, the successor in office falls within the ambit of the expression 'public servant concerned'. State of U.P. v. Mata Bhikh, (1994) 4 SCC 95: 1994 SCC (Cri) 831.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and P.B. Sawant, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-3-1994]

Ajaib Singh v. Joginder Singh, AIR 1968 SC 1422: 1969 Cri LJ 4: 70 Pun LR 1131, followed

P.D. Patel v. Emperor, AIR 1933 Rang 292: 146 IC 653; Subramanian Chettiar, Re, AIR 1957 Mad 442: 1957 Cri LJ 765; Public Prosecutor v. Mohammed Ali, AIR 1969 AP 41: 1969 Cri LJ 145; Government Advocate, Bihar v. Kumar Singh, AIR 1938 Pat 83: 173 IC 432: 39 Cri LJ 314; Manik Lal Bhagat v. State, 1982 Cri LJ 1473: (1982) 1 Cal HN 149, approved

Mata Bhikh v. State, 1980 Cri LJ 575: 1979 All Cri R 454: 1980 All Cri C 72, overruled

[2290] — Ss. 195(1)(a) and 340(3) — Delegation of power to file complaint — Need for express provision permitting delegation — Held, CrPC, where delegation is permitted, makes express provision to this effect as in the case of S. 340(3) — S. 195(1)(a) does not contemplate any delegation — Cognizance for offence under S. 182 IPC could not therefore be taken unless there was a written complaint from the public servant concerned, who in the present case was SSP — SHO's complaint was therefore incompetent — Penal Code, 1860, S. 182 (Paras 16 and 18). P.D. Lakhani v. State of Punjab, (2008) 5 SCC 150: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 553: (2008) 2 KLT 575.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-4-2008]

— S. 195(1)(b) See also Ss. 340 and 195(1)(b)

[2291] — S. 195(1)(b) — Applicability — Complaint by a private party (landlord), inter alia under S. 467 read with S. 114 and S. 193, IPC for forgery of sale deed of land, filed subsequent to his filing suit for redemption of mortgage of the land — But sale deed allegedly forged by the accused prior to filing the suit not produced by the plaintiff-landlord before the court in the proceedings of suit — Held, S. 195(1)(b) not applicable and committal court could not take cognizance of offence under S. 193, Penal Code, 1860 — But complaint under S. 467 read with S. 114, Penal Code, 1860 be maintainable as no complaint under S. 195(1)(b) required to be made by the court in regard to offence under S. 467 read with S. 114, Penal Code, 1860

In cases where in the course of the same transaction an offence for which no complaint by a court is necessary under S. 195(1)(b), CrPC and an offence for which a complaint of a court is necessary under that sub-section, are committed, it is not possible to split up and hold that the prosecution of the accused for the offences not mentioned in S. 195(1)(b) should be upheld. However, it cannot be said that the complaint in the present case given by the private individual for the offence under S. 467 read with S. 114, IPC was not cognizable and that S. 195(1)(b), CrPC was attracted as regards the accused- respondent.

The legislature did not intend to extend the prohibition contained in S. 195(1), CrPC to the offences mentioned therein when committed by a party to a proceeding in that Court prior to his becoming such party. S. 195(1)(b) requires that the offence under S. 193, IPC should be alleged to have been committed in or in relation to, any proceeding in any court. Since the forged sale deed was not produced in evidence in any stage of the redemption suit, S. 195(1)(b), CrPC is not attracted. Therefore, the Magistrate who committed the accused to the Sessions, could not have taken cognizance of any offence under S. 193, IPC. The complaint could have been taken on file only for an offence punishable under S. 467 read with S. 114, IPC, so far as that accused is concerned. It would follow that no complaint by the court for prosecuting the accused for the offence under S. 467 read with S. 114, IPC is required, and she could be validly convicted for that offence on the complaint given by the private individual. State of Karnataka v. Hemareddy, (1981) 2 SCC 185: 1981 SCC (Cri) 395: AIR 1981 SC 1417: (1981) 2 SCR 695: 1981 Cri LJ 1019.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A. Varadarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-1-1981]

[The Supreme Court overruled the view expressed in Re Vasudeo Ramchandra Joshi, AIR 1923 Bom 105: 24 Bom LR 1153: 71 IC 523, that even when the offence of instigating the witnesses to give false evidence was committed in relation to a proceeding which was not actually pending in the court but was only under contemplation the provisions of S. 195 (1)(b), CrPC would be attracted.]

[2292] — S. 195(1)(b) — Commission of inquiry appointed to probe into unnatural death of patients after administration of contaminated glycerol — Allegation of giving false evidence under Ss. 193 and 228, Penal Code, 1860, by former Health Minister — Held, Commission is not a 'Court'. Baliram Waman Hiray v. Justice B. Lentin, (1988) 4 SCC 419: 1988 SCC (Cri) 941: AIR 1988 SC 2267.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and L.M. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-9-1988]

[2293] — Ss. 195(1)(b) and 340 — Inquiry/Complaint, in respect of offences specified under S. 195(1)(b) which had been committed in or in relation to a proceeding in any court, by some other court to which that court is subordinate — Judicial subordination contemplated in cl. (b) of S. 195(1) — Determination of hierarchy of courts for purpose of S. 195 — Held, the said hierarchy will have to be determined having regard to the nature of proceedings and the statutes under which the same is required to be determined — Subordination of courts as specified in S. 3 CPC is only for the purpose of the said Code and not for the purpose of a special Act, although the provisions thereof may be applicable to a case arising thereunder — CPC, 1908, S. 3 — Land Acquisition Act, 1894, S. 53

The Court of the Subordinate Judge may be subordinate to the District Judge for administrative purpose. He may be a court subordinate to it under the Code of Civil Procedure. But in relation to a proceeding under the Land Acquisition Act, it would not be. In terms of Section 53 of the Land Acquisition Act, the procedures laid down under the Civil Procedure Code would apply but the same is subject to the exceptions specified therein viz. save insofar as they may be inconsistent with anything contained therein. The Land Acquisition Act is a special statute. It provides for the forums, both original and appellate. The subordination of courts as specified in Section 3 CPC, is only for the purpose of the said Code and not for the purpose of a special Act, although the provisions thereof may be applicable to a case arising thereunder. The civil courts exercise their jurisdiction not only in respect of a suit filed before it, they do so under various special statutes. The hierarchy of the courts for the purpose of Section 195 CrPC, therefore, will have to be determined, having regard to the nature of the proceedings and the statutes under which the same is required to be determined. The Act makes a distinction between filing a complaint by a public servant and a court. Whereas clause (a) of sub-section (1) of Section 195 contemplates administrative subordination, clause (b) contemplates judicial subordination. Each expression used in CrPC, therefore, must be understood upon reading the provisions thereof in their entirety and not in isolation. (Paras 16, 17 and 25). State of A.P. v. V. Sarma Rao, (2007) 2 SCC 159: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 535: AIR 2007 SC 137: 2007 Cri LJ 289.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-11-2006]

[2294] — Ss. 195(1)(b)(i) and (ii) — Prosecution for offences against public justice and for offences relating to forged documents given in evidence — Procedure for prosecution — Direction to Registrar of High Court to file criminal complaint — Appellant-Federation filing an application in the High Court under S. 195 for initiating criminal proceedings against respondent for submitting forged documents but the application dismissed by the High Court — On the directions of the Supreme Court, District Judge submitting a report that documents submitted by respondent were forged — Respondent's objections against the report rejected and findings of the report accepted — Registrar of the High Court, directed to take necessary steps to file a criminal complaint in the competent court. Punjab State Coop. Supply & Marketing Federation Ltd. v. B.S. Aulakh, (1997) 4 SCC 756: 1997 SCC (L&S) 1169: AIR 1997 SC 2001: (1997) 2 SLR 565.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.C. Agrawal and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-4-1997]

[2295] — S. 195(1)(b)(i) — Applies in case of offences under Ss. 191 and 192, IPC which are punishable under S. 193, Indian Penal Code. Premjit Kaur v. Harsinder Singh, (1982) 2 SCC 167: 1982 SCC (Cri) 379(1).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.D. Tulzapurkar and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-3-1980]

[2296] — Ss. 195(1)(b)(i) and 195(3) — Rent Control Officer deemed to be a 'civil court' within the meaning of Ss. 345 and 346, CrPC and any proceeding before him deemed to be a judicial proceeding within Ss. 193 and 228, IPC by virtue of S. 34(2) of U.P. Urban Buildings (Regulation of Letting, Rent and Eviction) Act, 1972 (U.P. Act 13 of 1972) — Cognizance of alleged offence under S. 193, IPC committed by one of the parties to the allotment proceedings before Rent Control Officer, held, cannot be taken in absence of any complaint in that regard by that Officer/Court

The Rent Control Officer being an officer authorised by District Magistrate under S. 3(c) of the Rent Act, the proceedings commencing upon the intimation of a vacancy for release or allotment of the premises under S. 15(1) and (2) of that Act will be conducted before him and in view of S. 34(2) of the Act he shall be deemed to be a 'civil court' within the meaning of Ss. 345 and 346, CrPC, 1973(corresponding to Ss. 480 and 482 respectively of the old Code) and any proceeding before him shall be deemed to be a judicial proceeding within the meaning of Ss. 193 and 228, IPC. If, therefore, according to the complainant false evidence was given in a judicial proceeding before the Rent Control Officer, which is civil court, and the persons giving such false evidence have committed an offence under S. 193, IPC in or in relation to a proceeding before the Rent Control Officer, S.195(1)(b)(i), CrPC would be attracted and consequently, no court can take cognizance of such offence except on a complaint in writing of that Officer or Court. Kalloomal Tapeswari Prasad (HUF) v. CIT, (1982) 1 SCC 447: AIR 1982 SC 760: (1982) 133 ITR 690: 1982 Tax LR 314.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Pathak and E.S. Venkataramiah, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-1-1982]

[2297] — Ss. 195(1)(b)(i) and 340 — Offences under Ss. 193, 194, 211 and 218 IPC committed in, or in relation to, any proceedings in a court — Complaint by court concerned after holding a preliminary enquiry under S. 340 necessary — Supreme Court cannot direct the CBI to file challan for said offences in the court concerned and direct that court to try those offences — Direction given by the Supreme Court in Punjab and Haryana High Court Bar Assn. case does not run counter to the provisions of Ss. 195 and 140 as interpreted in Raj Singh case — On facts, CBI misunderstood the directions in Punjab and Haryana High Court Bar Assn. case and instead of filing a challan for offences of abduction and murder filed it for offences under Ss. 193, 194, 211 and 218 IPC — Order taking cognizance of offences under Ss. 193, 194, 211 and 218 IPC quashed and the court directed to make a complaint to a Magistrate having jurisdiction in respect of those offences — However, enquiry under S. 340 having already been held by the Supreme Court, which it was competent to undertake under S. 340(2), process issued by the Designated Court against the accused persons need not be set aside — CBI also directed to file an additional challan against the accused persons as directed in Punjab and Haryana High Court Bar Assn. case. Arvindervir Singh v. State of Punjab, (1998) 6 SCC 352: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1448: AIR 1998 SC 2950.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.T. Nanavati, S.P. Kurdukar and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-8-1998]

State of Punjab v. Raj Singh, (1998) 2 SCC 391: 1998 SCC (Cri) 642; Punjab and Haryana High Court Bar Assn. v. State of Punjab, (1996) 4 SCC 742: 1996 SCC (Cri) 858, explained and harmonised

— S. 195(1)(b)(ii) See Ss. 195(1)(b)(i) and (ii)
See also Ss. 340 and 195(1)(b)(ii)

[2298] — S. 195(1)(b)(ii) — An unworkable or impracticable result should be avoided — Hence, the interpretation which was capable of great misuse and was leading to a situation where the victim of crime was rendered remediless, discarded (Para 23). Iqbal Singh Marwah v. Meenakshi Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1101: AIR 2005 SC 2119: (2005) 3 Mah LJ 530: 2005 Cri LJ 2161.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and B.N. Agrawal, H.K. Sema, G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-2005]

[2299] — S. 195(1)(b)(ii) — Language employed in a heading — Value of, while construing the sections which immediately follow it — Held, as a general rule, it cannot be used to give a different effect to clear words of the section where there cannot be any doubt as to their ordinary meaning — However, headings constitute an important part of the Act itself — In comparison to preamble of statute, they may provide a better key to the construction of the sections which follow them

The heading of Chapter XXVI CrPC is — "Provisions as to Offences Affecting the Administration of Justice". Though, as a general rule, the language employed in a heading cannot be used to give a different effect to clear words of the section where there cannot be any doubt as to their ordinary meaning, but they are not to be treated as if they were marginal notes or were introduced into the Act merely for the purpose of classifying the enactments. They constitute an important part of the Act itself, and may be read not only as explaining the sections which immediately follow them, as a preamble to a statute may be looked to explain its enactments, but as affording a better key to the constructions of the sections which follow them than might be afforded by a mere preamble. The fact that the procedure for filing a complaint by court has been provided in Chapter XXVI CrPC dealing with offences affecting administration of justice, is a clear pointer to the legislative intent that the offence committed should be of such type which directly affects the administration of justice viz. which is committed after the document is produced or given in evidence in court. Any offence committed with respect to a document at a time prior to its production or giving in evidence in court cannot, strictly speaking, be said to be an offence affecting the administration of justice. (Para 11). Iqbal Singh Marwah v. Meenakshi Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1101: AIR 2005 SC 2119: (2005) 3 Mah LJ 530: 2005 Cri LJ 2161.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and B.N. Agrawal, H.K. Sema, G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-2005]

[2300] — S. 195(1)(b)(ii) — Applicability of — Forgery of document committed prior to that document being produced or given in evidence in court proceedings — Reiterated, S. 195(1)(b)(ii) would not be attracted in such a case — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 463 to 465 and 471 (Para 12). P. Swaroopa Rani v. M. Hari Narayana, (2008) 5 SCC 765: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 79: AIR 2008 SC 1884: (2008) 3 CHN 95 (SC): (2008) 106 Cut LT 539.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-3-2008]

Iqbal Singh Marwah v. Meenakshi Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1101, followed

Francis Bennion: Statutory Interpretation, 3rd Edn., Para 313, cited

[2301] — S. 195(1)(b)(ii) — Bar under — Applicability — Challan under Ss. 471 & 474, Indian Penal Code for producing copy of forged document in Court and obtaining injunction on its strength — Bar under S. 195(1)(b)(ii), held, not applicable to taking cognizance in such a case. Sushil Kumar v. State of Haryana, 1987 Supp SCC 654: 1988 SCC (Cri) 136: AIR 1988 SC 419.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and L.M. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-12-1987]

[2302] — S. 195(1)(b)(ii) — Bar under, on taking cognizance of certain offences — Applicability — Whether applicable to a private complaint for an offence under Ss. 467 and 471 IPC committed in respect of a document forged prior to filing thereof in the court — In view of conflicting views expressed by Supreme Court in earlier decisions some of which were delivered by three-Judge Benches, matter referred by two-Judge Bench to a larger Bench — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 467 and 471 (Para 4). Balasubramaniam v. State, (2002) 7 SCC 649: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1812.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and N. Santosh Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-9-2001]

[2303] — S. 195(1)(b)(ii) — Commission of forgery in respect of a document produced or given in evidence in a proceeding in any court — Bar under S. 195(1)(b)(ii) that no court shall take cognizance of any such offence except on the complaint in writing of the court concerned — Scope and applicability of — Private complaint in such matter — Maintainability — Held, the said bar would be attracted only when the offences enumerated in S. 195(1)(b)(ii) have been committed with respect to a document after it has been produced or given in evidence in a proceeding in any court i.e. during the time when the document was in custodia legis — If such offence is committed prior to its production or giving in evidence in court, no complaint by court would be necessary and a private complaint would be maintainable — Scheme of S. 195, taken note of — Heading of Ch. XXVI CrPC — Consideration of — Further held, complaint as to offence referred to in S. 195(1)(b) was to be made by the court concerned only if it was expedient in the interests of justice and not in every case — Thus, broad view of clause (b)(ii) of S. 195(1) i.e. extending it to cases where forgery of a document is committed prior to that document being produced or given in evidence in a proceeding in any court would render the victim of such forgery or forged document remediless in cases where the court may not consider it expedient in the interests of justice to make a complaint — Further, the procedure for filing a complaint by court was such that it may delay the trial and thus lead to loss of evidence — That apart, the enlarged interpretation was capable of great misuse — Hence, broad view of S. 195(1)(b)(ii) not acceptable — Contention that due to above interpretation by Supreme Court there was possibility of conflicting findings being recorded by the civil or revenue court where the document had been produced or given in evidence and that recorded by the criminal court on the basis of private complaint, not sustainable

As per Section 195(1)(b)(ii) CrPC, 1973, no court shall take cognizance of an offence relating to forgery of a document, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in respect of a document produced or given in evidence in a proceeding in any court, except on the complaint in writing of that court, or of some other court to which that court is subordinate. The question involved in the instant case was whether the bar contained in Section 195(1)(b)(ii) would apply where forgery of a document was committed before the said document was produced in court. The Supreme Court in Sachida Nand Singh case, (1998) 2 SCC 493 observed that the said bar would not be applicable to a case where forgery of the document was committed before the document was produced in a court. But, in view of conflict of opinion between decisions of the Supreme Court in Sachida Nand Singh case and Surjit Singh case, (1996) 3 SCC 533, the instant appeal was placed before the present Bench.

The facts giving rise to the instant appeal were that the appellants filed proceedings before the District Judge for grant of probate of a Will allegedly executed by the deceased M (brother of the appellants). The respondents filed a criminal complaint for prosecution of the appellants and their mother under Sections 192, 193, 463, 464, 465, 467, 469, 471, 499 and 500 IPC on the ground that the said

Will produced by the appellants was a forged and fictitious document. In view of the bar contained in Section 195(1)(b)(ii) CrPC, the Magistrate dismissed the complaint. In revision, relying upon Sachida Nand Singh case, the Sessions Judge held that the bar contained in Section 195(1)(b)(ii) would not apply where forgery of a document was committed before the said document was produced in court. The High Court upheld the order of the Sessions Judge. Hence, the present appeal by the accused.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

Clause (b)(ii) of Section 195(1) CrPC contemplates a situation where the offences enumerated therein are committed with respect to a document subsequent to its production or giving in evidence in a proceeding in any court. The scheme of clauses (a) and (b)(i) of Section 195(1) being that the offence described therein should be such which has direct bearing or affects the functioning or discharge of lawful duties of a public servant or has a direct correlation with the proceedings in a court of justice, the expression "when such offence is alleged to have been committed in respect of a document produced or given in evidence in a proceeding in any court" occurring in clause (b)(ii) should normally mean commission of such an offence after the document has actually been produced or given in evidence in the court. The situation or contingency where an offence as enumerated in this clause has already been committed earlier and later on the document is produced or is given in evidence in court, does not appear to be in tune with clauses (a)(i) and (b)(i) and consequently with the scheme of Section 195 CrPC. (Para 10)

The heading of Chapter XXVI CrPC is — "Provisions as to Offences Affecting the Administration of Justice". Though, as a general rule, the language employed in a heading cannot be used to give a different effect to clear words of the section where there cannot be any doubt as to their ordinary meaning, but they are not to be treated as if they were marginal notes or were introduced into the Act merely for the purpose of classifying the enactments. They constitute an important part of the Act itself, and may be read not only as explaining the sections which immediately follow them, as a preamble to a statute may be looked to explain its enactments, but as affording a better key to the constructions of the sections which follow them than might be afforded by a mere preamble. The fact that the procedure for filing a complaint by court has been provided in Chapter XXVI CrPC dealing with offences affecting administration of justice, is a clear pointer to the legislative intent that the offence committed should be of such type which directly affects the administration of justice viz. which is committed after the document is produced or given in evidence in court. Any offence committed with respect to a document at a time prior to its production or giving in evidence in court cannot, strictly speaking, be said to be an offence affecting the administration of justice. (Para 11)

Further, the provisions of Sections 340, 341 and 343(2) CrPC show that, in reality, the procedure prescribed for filing a complaint by the court is such that it may not fructify in the actual trial of the offender for an unusually long period. Delay in prosecution of a guilty person comes to his advantage as witnesses become reluctant to give evidence and the evidence gets lost. This important consideration is against accepting the broad interpretation sought to be placed upon clause (b)(ii) of Section 195(1). (Para 24)

That apart, an enlarged interpretation to Section 195(1)(b)(ii) CrPC, whereby the bar created by the said provision would also operate where after commission of an act of forgery the document is subsequently produced in court, is capable of great misuse. After preparing a forged document or committing an act of forgery, a person may manage to get a proceeding instituted in any civil, criminal or revenue court, either by himself or through someone set up by him and simply file the document in the said proceeding. He would thus be protected from prosecution, either at the instance of a private party or the police until the court, where the document has been filed, itself chooses to file a complaint. The litigation may be a prolonged one due to which the actual trial of such a person may be delayed indefinitely. Such an interpretation would be highly detrimental to the interest of the society at large. (Para 25)

Judicial notice can be taken of the fact that the courts are normally reluctant to direct filing of a criminal complaint and such a course is rarely adopted. It will not be fair and proper to give an interpretation which leads to a situation where a person alleged to have committed an offence of the type enumerated in clause (b)(ii) of Section 195(1) CrPC is either not placed for trial on account of non-filing of a complaint or if a complaint is filed, the same does not come to its logical end. Judging from such an angle will be in consonance with the principle that an unworkable or impracticable result should be avoided. (Para 26)

Therefore, in order that a victim of a crime of forgery, namely, the person aggrieved is able to exercise his right conferred by law to initiate prosecution of the offender, it is necessary to place a restrictive interpretation on clause (b)(ii) of Section 195(1) CrPC. (Para 28)

Hence, in view of the above, it is held that Sachida Nand Singh, (1998) 2 SCC 493 has been correctly decided and the view taken therein is the correct view. Section 195(1)(b)(ii) CrPC would be attracted only when the offences enumerated in the said provision have been committed with respect to a document after it has been produced or given in evidence in a proceeding in any court i.e. during the time when the document was in custodia legis. (Para 33)

In the present case, the Will has been produced in the court subsequently. Therefore, the bar created by Section 195(1)(b)(ii) CrPC would not come into play. The view taken by the learned Additional Sessions Judge and the High Court is perfectly correct and calls for no interference. (Para 34). Iqbal Singh Marwah v. Meenakshi Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1101: AIR 2005 SC 2119: (2005) 3 Mah LJ 530: 2005 Cri LJ 2161.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and B.N. Agrawal, H.K. Sema, G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-2005]

Sheffield City Council v. Yorkshire Water Services Ltd., (1991) 1 WLR 58: (1991) 2 All ER 280; S.J. Grange Ltd. v. Customs and Excise Commrs., (1979) 2 All ER 91: (1979) 1 WLR 239; Patel Laljibhai Somabhai v. State of Gujarat, (1971) 2 SCC 376: 1971 SCC (Cri) 548; Raghunath v. State of U.P., (1973) 1 SCC 564: 1973 SCC (Cri) 448; Mohan Lal v. State of Rajasthan, (1974) 3 SCC 628: 1974 SCC (Cri) 118; Legal Remembrancer, Govt. of W.B. v. Haridas Mundra, (1976) 1 SCC 555: 1976 SCC (Cri) 67; Mahadev Bapuji Mahajan v. State of Maharashtra, 1994 Supp (3) SCC 748: 1995 SCC (Cri) 198, relied on

Surjit Singh v. Balbir Singh, (1996) 3 SCC 533: 1996 SCC (Cri) 521, harmonised

Sachida Nand Singh v. State of Bihar, (1998) 2 SCC 493: 1998 SCC (Cri) 660, affirmed

Emperor v. Kushal Pal Singh, AIR 1931 All 443: 32 Cri LJ 1105 (SB), approved

Gopalakrishna Menon v. D. Raja Reddy, (1983) 4 SCC 240: 1983 SCC (Cri) 822, considered and distinguished

Followed in P. Swaroopa Rani v. M. Hari Narayana, (2008) 5 SCC 765*

[2304] — S. 195(1)(b)(ii) — Expression "when such offence is alleged to have been committed in respect of a document produced or given in evidence in a proceeding in any court" — Meaning of — Held, would normally mean commission of such an offence after the document has actually been produced or given in evidence in court. Iqbal Singh Marwah v. Meenakshi Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1101: AIR 2005 SC 2119: (2005) 3 Mah LJ 530: 2005 Cri LJ 2161.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and B.N. Agrawal, H.K. Sema, G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-2005]

[2305] — S. 195(1)(b)(ii) — Nature of — Held, is not a penal provision — Penal statute, what is — Explained — Hence, principle that a penal statute should be strictly construed is not applicable while interpreting S. 195(1)(b)(ii) — Thus, contention relating to broad interpretation of S. 195(1)(b)(ii) i.e. extending it to cases where forgery of document is committed prior to that document being produced or given in evidence in a proceeding in any court, rejected

Section 195(1)(b)(ii) CrPC which is required to be interpreted is not a penal provision but is part of a procedural law, namely, the Code of Criminal Procedure which elaborately gives the procedure for trial of criminal cases. The provision only creates a bar against taking cognizance of an offence in certain specified situations except upon complaint by court. A penal statute is one upon which an action for penalties can be brought by a public officer or by a person aggrieved and a penal Act in its wider sense includes every statute creating an offence against the State, whatever is the character of the penalty for the offence. The principle that a penal statute should be strictly construed, as projected by the appellants can, therefore, have no application here. (Paras 31 and 29). Iqbal Singh Marwah v. Meenakshi Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1101: AIR 2005 SC 2119: (2005) 3 Mah LJ 530: 2005 Cri LJ 2161.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and B.N. Agrawal, H.K. Sema, G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-2005]

[2306] — S. 195(1)(b)(ii) — Offence punishable under S. 467 Penal Code is "offence described in S. 463 IPC" and hence cannot be taken cognizance of in absence of a written complaint by court

Section 195(1)(b)(ii) CrPC uses two different expressions viz. "offence described" in regard to S. 463 IPC and 'punishable' in regard to S. 471, 475 or 476, IPC. The opening S. 463 of Chapter XVIII IPC defines the offence of forgery and S. 467 IPC punishes forgery of a particular category. Thus the offence punishable under S. 467 is an "offence described in S. 463 "within the meaning of S. 195(1)(b)(ii), CrPC. Therefore, in absence of a complaint from the appropriate civil court prosecution under S. 467, IPC on the basis of a private complaint would not be maintainable. Gopalakrishna Menon v. D. Raja Reddy, (1983) 4 SCC 240: 1983 SCC (Cri) 822: AIR 1983 SC 1053: 1983 Cri LJ 1599.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.A. Desai and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-9-1983]

S.L. Goswami v. High Court of M.P., (1979) 1 SCC 373: 1979 SCC (Cri) 311, applied

[2307] — Ss. 195(1)(b)(ii), 156(3) and 482 — Private complaint — Bar under S. 195(1)(b)(ii) that no court shall take cognizance of any offence described in S. 463 IPC, or punishable under S. 471, S. 475 or S. 476 IPC, committed in respect of a document produced or given in evidence in a proceeding in the court, except on complaint in writing of the court concerned — Private complaint in such matter — Maintainability — Held, said bar not attracted, as offence committed by respondent-accused in collusion with Area Lekhpal was not in relation to court proceedings — It was behind the back of appellant and as soon as he came to know about the illegal designs of accused, he lodged a private complaint under S. 156(3), which was maintainable — Magistrate directed to proceed with criminal complaint — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 463, 471, 475 and 476

The appellant purchased land from one M (vendor) and pursuant to the execution of sale deed in his favour, he was handed over possession. Respondent-accused (Respondents 2 to 4 herein) contended that land in question was recorded in their names. On inquiries made by both appellant and vendor in Tahsildar's court, they came to know that accused, in collusion with the Area Lekhpal, got their names mutated on the basis of Area Lekhpal's report. Area Lekhpal had given a totally untrue statement, and by showing an alive person, appellant's vendor as dead had got the names of the accused mutated. Appellant filed an application before SDM to set aside such mutation order, which was allowed and appeal of respondent-accused thereagainst dismissed. Thus, matter relating to mutation proceedings came to an end.

However, the appellant initiated criminal proceedings against respondent-accused by filing application/complaint under Section 156(3) CrPC, alleging the aforesaid facts. The said application/complaint of the appellant was allowed and police registered the FIR and started investigation. Ultimately, after further litigation, police completed the investigation and the investigating officer submitted the charge-sheet for commission of alleged offences under Sections 420, 467, 468, 471 and 120-B IPC and criminal case was registered against the respondents and cognizance taken against them. Respondent-accused then filed petition under Section 482 CrPC before the High Court for quashing the charge-sheet and taking cognizance thereof, which was allowed.

The High Court held that the application under Section 156(3) CrPC was barred in view of the provisions of Section 195 CrPC. However, appellant complainant was given liberty to move an application before the court concerned for taking action against the accused persons in accordance with the provisions of Section 340 CrPC.

Allowing the appeal,

Held:

Section 195(1)(b)(ii) CrPC contemplates a situation where offences enumerated therein are committed with respect to a document, subsequent to its production or giving in evidence in a proceeding in any court. (Para 23)

The impugned order was passed by the High Court on total non-application of law with regard to provision contained in Section 195 CrPC, which cannot be sustained in law. It proceeded on absolutely wrong facts and incorrect principles of law were applied. It completely lost sight of the fact that the offence committed by the accused in collusion with the Area Lekhpal was not in relation to court proceedings. It was in any case behind the back of the appellant and as soon as he came to know with regard to the illegal designs of the accused he lodged a complaint under Section 156(3) CrPC. (Paras 16 and 22)

The High Court further committed a gross error in resorting to Section 340 CrPC as provisions of the said section can be invoked only when it is established that offence of forgery had already been committed. (Para 24)

The accused had miserably failed for grant of any relief under Section 482 CrPC. The limit of exercising jurisdiction conferred on the High Court under Section 482 CrPC is well defined and by no stretch of imagination, it could be said that petition filed by the accused under Section 482 CrPC had fulfilled the requirement as contemplated in this section. (Para 25)

Hence, the impugned order cannot be sustained. The same is, accordingly, set aside and quashed. As a necessary consequence thereof, the Magistrate is directed to proceed with the criminal complaint filed by the appellant against respondent-accused in accordance with law and on merits. (Para 26). Mahesh Chand Sharma v. State of U.P., (2009) 15 SCC 519: (2009) 82 AIC 227 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-8-2009]

Sachida Nand Singh v. State of Bihar, (1998) 2 SCC 493: 1998 SCC (Cri) 660; Iqbal Singh Marwah v. Meenakshi Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1101, followed

[2308] — S. 195(1)(b)(ii) — Offence under S. 471 IPC committed before the start of the proceedings — Complaint by the court concerned not nec- essary either in the old Code or in the new Code. Mahadev Bapuji Mahajan v. State of Maharashtra, 1994 Supp (3) SCC 748: AIR 1994 SC 1549: 1994 Cri LJ 1389.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-1993]

[2309] — S. 195(1)(b)(ii) — Words "by a party to any proceeding in any court" occurring in S. 195(1)(c) CrPC, 1898 — Omission of, in the corresponding provision of new CrPC of 1973 i.e. S. 195(1)(b)(ii) — Object of, held, is to afford protection against vexatious prosecutions to witnesses also — CrPC, 1898, S. 195(1)(c) (Paras 20 and 19). Iqbal Singh Marwah v. Meenakshi Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1101: AIR 2005 SC 2119: (2005) 3 Mah LJ 530: 2005 Cri LJ 2161.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and B.N. Agrawal, H.K. Sema, G.P. Mathur and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-2005]

[2310] — Ss. 195(1)(b)(ii) and 195(3) — "Court" — Does not include Compensation Officer appointed under S. 19 of Bihar Land Reforms Act, 1950 for determination of compensation for divesting proprietor, tenure-holder or intermediary of his right in the estate or tenure under the Act — Such Compensation Officer is neither a civil court even though he possesses certain powers possessed by civil court under Civil Procedure Code, nor a revenue court, nor a criminal court as defined in S. 195(3) — Bihar Land Reforms Act, 1950, S. 19

The appellants are facing trial in the Court of Special Judge (Vigilance), Patna wherein it is alleged that in pursuance of a conspiracy entered into by them, payment of Rs 2 crores by way of compensation was fraudulently obtained by them and thus they have committed offences punishable under Sections 120-B, 420, 467, 468, 471 and 477 of the Indian Penal Code and under Section 5(2) read with sub-sections (1)(c) and (d) of Section 5 of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947. The appellants raised a preliminary objection before the Special Judge that the aforesaid offences are alleged to have been committed by the appellants in respect of a document produced in the compensation proceedings before the Compensation Officer and as Compensation Officer appointed under the Bihar Land Reforms Act is a "court" within the meaning of Section 195(1)(b), the complaint could have been filed only by that Compensation Officer and as that has not been done in this case, the Special Judge (Vigilance) had no jurisdiction to take cognizance of those offences. The Special Judge overruled the objection. A Full Bench of the High Court also held that Compensation Officer appointed under the Act is not a court within the meaning of Section 195(1)(b) of the Code. The correctness of that decision is questioned in this appeal. Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

The word "court" is a word of very wide connotation. In legal parlance it indicates a place where justice is judicially administered. But for the purposes of Section 195(1)(b) of the Code, definition of "court" contained in sub-section (3) of Section 195 of the Code has to be seen. The term "court" had a wider meaning under the old Code but under the new Code it is given a restricted meaning. Now the word "court" in Section 195 does not include all the judicial bodies and authorities constituted for administering justice. The courts contemplated now by Section 195 are only civil courts, revenue courts and criminal courts and those tribunals which are required by the Acts constituting them to be courts for the purposes of Section 195. (Para 7)

Assuming that the Compensation Officer appointed under the Act can be said to be a court, it is not possible to hold that he is a civil court. Neither the Act nor any other legislation expressly provides that the Compensation Officer is a civil court. Though he possesses certain powers which a civil court possesses under the Code of Civil Procedure and the proceedings before him are deemed to be judicial proceedings he does not possess all the attributes of a civil court. Though proceedings before him are to be considered as judicial proceedings and is of a civil nature, it is of a limited nature. His appointment is under a special law and for a specific and limited purpose. His main function is to determine the amount of compensation. The amount of compensation is to be determined by finding out the rent and then making certain additions, subtractions and multiplications as provided in the Act itself. He cannot determine the questions of title or rights of the rival claimants except for the purpose of determining who should be paid compensation. The party claiming compensation cannot lead evidence as regards the value of his interest in the estate or tenure. Nor does a Compensation Officer has the discretion to decide independently the amount of compensation on the basis of such evidence. (Para 9)

Determination of compensation for divesting a tenure-holder or an intermediary of his right in the estate or tenure is not a matter pertaining to revenue. For that reason he is not a revenue court also. (Para 9)

The Compensation Officer cannot also be said to be a criminal court merely because the Bihar Land Reforms Act provides imposition of penalty for non-compliance with the requisition to give true information or produce a document, An argument on this point was, however, not pressed on behalf of the appellants. (Para 6). Keshab Narayan Banerjee v. State of Bihar, (2000) 1 SCC 607: 2000 SCC (Cri) 272: AIR 2000 SC 485: 2000 Cri LJ 595.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-12-1999]

Canara Bank v. Nuclear Power Corpn. of India Ltd., 1995 Supp (3) SCC 81; Baliram Waman Hiray (Dr.) v. Justice B. Lentin, (1988) 4 SCC 419: 1988 SCC (Cri) 941, relied on

Chandra Kishore Jha v. State of Bihar, 1975 BBCJ 656 (DB), overruled

[2311] — Ss. 195(1)(b)(ii) and 340(1) — Bar under S. 195(1)(b)(ii) of taking cognizance of offence if offence described in S. 463 or punishable under Ss. 471, 475, 476 IPC committed in respect of a document produced or given in evidence in a proceeding in a court — Held, bar not applicable where the said offence was committed before document was produced in a court

A complaint was filed by the second respondent in the Court of the Chief Judicial Magistrate alleging offences, inter alia, under Sections 468, 469 and 471 of the Indian Penal Code on the facts that the appellants had forged a document (certified copy of Jamabandi-Rent Roll) and produced it in the Court of the Executive Magistrate which was then dealing with proceedings under Section 145 of the Code. The Chief Judicial Magistrate forwarded the complaint to the police as provided in Section 156(3) of the Code. Police registered an FIR on the basis of the said complaint and after investigation laid a charge-sheet against appellants for those offences. The Chief Judicial Magistrate took cognizance of those offences and issued process to the accused. The appellants then moved the Patna High Court under Section 482 of the Code for quashing the prosecution on the main ground that the Magistrate could not have taken cognizance of the said offences in view of the bar contained in Section 195(1)(b)(ii) of the Code. Before the High Court the appellants cited the decision of the Supreme Court in Gopalakrishna Menon v. V.D. Raja Reddy, (1983) 4 SCC 240. But the High Court relying on the Supreme Court's decision in Patel Laljibhai Somabhai v. State of Gujarat, (1971) 2 SCC 376 dismissed the petition of the appellant. Dismissing the present appeal,

Held:

Section 195(1)(b)(ii) CrPC reveals two main postulates for operation of the bar mentioned there. First is, there must be allegation that an offence (it should be either an offence described in Section 463 or any other offence punishable under Sections 471, 475, 476 of the IPC) has been committed. Second is that such offence should have been committed in respect of a document produced or given in evidence in a proceeding in any court. It is undisputed that if forgery has been committed while the document was in the custody of a court, then prosecution can be launched only with a complaint made by that court. Again, if forgery was committed with a document which has not been produced in a court then the prosecution would lie at the instance of any person. A question arises whether in the latter situation production of such document in Court will make any difference. Now, even if the clause is capable of two interpretations the narrower interpretation has to be chosen. Provision curbing the general jurisdiction of the court must normally receive strict interpretation unless the statute or the context requires otherwise.

That apart it is difficult to interpret Section 195(1)(b)(ii) as containing a bar against initiation of prosecution proceedings merely because the document concerned was produced in a court albeit the act of forgery was perpetrated prior to its production in the Court. Any such construction is likely to ensue unsavoury consequences. It is a settled proposition that if the language of a legislation is capable of more than one interpretation, the one which is capable of causing mischievous consequences should be averted.

As Section 340(1) of the Code has an interlink with Section 195(1)(b) it is necessary to refer to that sub-section in the present context. No complaint can be made by a court regarding any offence falling within the ambit of Section 195(1)(b) of the Code without first adopting the procedural requirement of Section 340(1). The scope of the preliminary enquiry envisaged in Section 340(1) is to ascertain whether any offence affecting administration of justice has been committed in respect of a document produced in court or given in evidence in a proceeding in that Court. So the offences envisaged in Section 195(1)(b) must involve acts which would have affected the administration of justice. The offence should have been committed during the time when the document was in custodia legis.

It would be a strained thinking that any offence involving forgery of a document if committed far outside the precincts of the Court and long before its production in the Court, could also be treated as one affecting administration of justice merely because that document later reached the court records. It must therefore be held that the bar contained in Section 195(1)(b)(ii) of the Code is not applicable to a case where forgery of the document was committed before the document was produced in a court. Sachida Nand Singh v. State of Bihar, (1998) 2 SCC 493: 1998 SCC (Cri) 660: AIR 1998 SC 1121.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.M. Punchhi, C.J. and K.T. Thomas and M. Srinivasan, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-2-1998]

Patel Laljibhai Somabhai v. State of Gujarat, (1971) 2 SCC 376: 1971 SCC (Cri) 548, affirmed

Gopalakrishna Menon v. D. Raja Reddy, (1983) 4 SCC 240: 1983 SCC (Cri) 822, overruled

Mahadev Bapuji Mahajan v. State of Maharashtra, 1994 Supp (3) SCC 748: 1995 SCC (Cri) 198; Raghunath v. State of U.P., (1973) 1 SCC 564: 1973 SCC (Cri) 448; Mohan Lal v. State of Rajasthan, (1974) 3 SCC 628: 1974 SCC (Cri) 118; Legal Remembrancer of Govt. of W. B. v. Haridas Mundra, (1976) 1 SCC 555: 1976 SCC (Cri) 67, relied on

Harbans Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1987 P&H 19: 1986 Cri LJ 1834; T. Govindaraju v. State of Karnataka, 1995 Cri LJ 1491 (Kant); Alka Bhagwant Jadhav v. State of Maharashtra, ILR 1986 Bom 64, approved

Affirmed in Iqbal Singh Marwah v. Meenakshi Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370; Rugmini Ammal v. V. Narayana Reddiar, (2007) 12 SCC 611*

[2312] — Ss. 195(1)(b)(ii) and 482 — Commission of forgery in respect of a document produced or given in evidence in a proceeding in any court — Bar under S. 195(1)(b)(ii) that no court shall take cognizance of any such offence except on the complaint in writing of the court concerned — Scope and applicability — Forgery committed before the document was filed in court — Held, provisions of S. 195(1)(b)(ii) not applicable in such a case — Hence, High Court was not justified in quashing the prosecution launched under Ss. 467, 468, 471, 472 and 477-A r/w S. 34 IPC on the ground that the complaint was barred under S. 195(1)(b)(ii) — Iqbal Singh Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370, followed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 467, 468, 471, 472 and 477-A r/w S. 34 (Paras 3 and 4). K. Vengadachalam v. K.C. Palanisamy, (2005) 7 SCC 352: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1673.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-8-2005]

Iqbal Singh Marwah v. Meenakshi Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1101, followed

[2313] — Ss. 195(1)(b)(ii) and (3) — Impersonation as CA, etc. — "Offence committed in respect of a document produced or given in evidence in proceedings in any court" — "Court" — Tax authorities — Income Tax Department and authorities constituted under M.P. Trade Tax Act do not fall within ambit of "court" as defined in S. 195(3) — Hence failure to file complaint by said authorities, not being "court", against respondent did not attract bar of S. 195

The further submission that the respondent cannot be prosecuted for the offences defined under IPC because no complaint had been filed against him by the court concerned or authority as per the requirement of Section 195(1)(b)(ii) CrPC sounds attractive but lacks merit. The prohibition contained in Section 195 CrPC against taking of cognizance by the court except on a complaint in writing made by the court concerned before which the document is produced or given in a proceeding is not attracted in the case like the present one because the officers of the Income Tax Department and the authorities constituted under the Madhya Pradesh Trade Tax Act, 1995 before whom the respondent is alleged to have acted on the basis of power of attorney or as legal representative or produced audit report do not fall within the ambit of the term "court" as defined in Section 195(3) CrPC. Such officer/authorities were neither discharging the functions of a civil, revenue or criminal court nor could they be treated as tribunal constituted by or under the Central or State Act, which is declared to be a court for the purpose of Section 195. (Para 42). Institute of Chartered Accountants of India v. Vimal Kumar Surana, (2011) 1 SCC 534.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.S. Singhvi and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-12-2010]

Iqbal Singh Marwah v. Meenakshi Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1101, relied on

Emperor v. Kushal Pal Singh, AIR 1931 All 443; Raghunath v. State of U.P., (1973) 1 SCC 564: 1973 SCC (Cri) 448; Patel Laljibhai Somabhai v. State of Gujarat, (1971) 2 SCC 376: 1971 SCC (Cri) 548; Mohan Lal v. State of Rajasthan, (1974) 3 SCC 628: 1974 SCC (Cri) 118; Legal Remembrancer, Govt. of W.B. v. Haridas Mundra, (1976) 1 SCC 555: 1976 SCC (Cri) 67; Mahadev Bapuji Mahajan v. State of Maharashtra, 1994 Supp (3) SCC 748: 1995 SCC (Cri) 198; Sachida Nand Singh v. State of Bihar, (1998) 2 SCC 493: 1998 SCC (Cri) 660, cited

Craies on Statute Law, 7th Edn., pp. 207, 209, cited

— S. 195(3) See Ss. 195(1)(b)(i) and 195(3)

See also Ss. 195(1)(b)(ii) and 195(3)

See also Ss. 340 and 195(3)

[2314] — S. 195(3) — Provision in statute deeming a tribunal as a court essential

Sub-section (3) of S. 195 of the CrPC, 1973 has brought about a change in law. In view of this change, a tribunal constituted by or under a Central, Provincial or State Act can be deemed to be a 'Court' only if it is declared to be so by that Act for the purposes of S. 195. It is now a familiar feature of recent Acts to insert a specific provision deeming a tribunal to be a court and wherever such a provision is not there, the court cannot deem a tribunal to be a court. It is no more a question of interpretation but one of express enactment.

To construe sub-s. (3) of S. 195 of the Code it is not only legitimate but highly convenient to refer both to the former Code and the state of uncertainty brought about due to conflict of views between different High Courts, and to the present Code which seeks to provide the remedy. It was to cure this mischief that Parliament brought in sub-sec. (3) of S. 195 of the Code and put an end to the controversy. The principles laid down in Heydon case are still in full force and effect, with the addition that regard must now be had not only to the existing law but also to prior legislation and to the judicial interpretation thereof.

The decision in Lalji Haridas case was rendered prior to the enactment of sub-sec. (3) of S. 195 of the present Code. The court was therefore concerned with the definition of the term 'Court' under S. 195 (2) of the earlier Code which was an inclusive one. There being no express provision akin to S. 40 of the Indian Railways Act, S. 23 of the Workmen's Compensation Act or S. 18 of the Payment of Wages Act, the matter was one of construction than of express enactment. The decision of the majority in Lalji Haridas case is now more of academic interest. The decision in Balwant Singh case does not carry the matter any further. Baliram Waman Hiray v. Justice B. Lentin, (1988) 4 SCC 419: 1988 SCC (Cri) 941: AIR 1988 SC 2267.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and L.M. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-9-1988]

Heydon case, (1584) 3 Co Rep 7a: 76 ER 637, approved and applied

Bengal Immunity Co. Ltd. v. State of Bihar, (1955) 2 SCR 603: AIR 1955 SC 661: (1955) 6 STC 446; R.M.D. Chamarbaugwalla v. Union of India, 1957 SCR 930: AIR 1957 SC 628 and CIT v. Sodra Devi, 1958 SCR 1: AIR 1957 SC 832: (1957) 32 ITR 615, relied on

Lalji Haridas v. State of Maharashtra, (1964) 6 SCR 700: AIR 1964 SC 1154 and Balwant Singh v. L.C. Bharupal, ITO, (1968) 70 ITR 89(SC), overruled by legislative enactment

[2315] — S. 195(3) — Sub-section (3) held, is a clearly expressed explanatory provision imposing a restriction on the interpretation of the term "court" — Restriction is discernible from the words: "... if declared by that Act to be a court for the purposes of this section" — IT Act, 1961, S. 136 — Motor Vehicles Act, 1988, S. 169(2) — Administrative Tribunals Act, 1985, S. 22(3) — Consumer Protection Act, 1986, S. 13(4) — Monopolies and Restrictive Trade Practices Act, 1969, S. 12 — Recovery of Debts Due to Banks and Financial Institutions Act, 1993, S. 22

The body of sub-section (1)(b) of Section 195 CrPC refers to the expression "court" and the same stands explained in sub-section (3). Without a reading of sub-section (3), "court" may be interpreted in a narrow context, but with the inclusion of sub-section (3), widest possible connotation is to be made available provided however, the statute declares it to be so. The language "if declared by that Act" is significant. (Para 6)

The inclusion of sub-section (3) under Section 195 cannot but be taken to be an explanatory provision. The body of Section 195(1)(b) refers to the expression "court" and the same stands thus explained in sub-section (3). The restriction imposed is easily ascertainable by reason of the inclusion of the words "if declared by that Act to be a court for the purposes of this section" (emphasis supplied) — the user of the words is very significant. One of the golden canons of interpretation is that the legislature always avoids surplusage and attributes a definite meaning to each of the words mentioned in the statute. By the very inclusion of sub-section (3) and the language, the intent of the legislature cannot thus be far to seek — it is connotative of a definite meaning. (Para 7)

The clear language of Section 195(3) CrPC unmistakably depicts the restrictive intent of the legislature and if the intent was otherwise to include an Arbitral Tribunal within the fold of Section 195(3) of the Code, that is to say, if the legislature wanted to confer such a status there was no difficulty as such in incorporating thereunder a provision as is contained in the Debt Recovery Act (vide Section 22); Income Tax Act (vide Section 136); Motor Vehicles Act [vide Section 169(2)]; Administrative Tribunals Act [vide Section 22(3)]; Consumer Protection Act; MRTP Act; and Companies Act etc. etc. since these statutes have definitely included and declared the Tribunal being ascribed to be a court within the meaning of Section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The inclusion of explanatory provision by way of sub-section (3) makes the situation abundantly clear. (Para 16). Manohar Lal v. Vinesh Anand, (2001) 5 SCC 407: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1322: AIR 2001 SC 1820: 2001 Cri LJ 2044.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Misra and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-4-2001]

Baliram Waman Hiray (Dr.) v. Justice B. Lentin, (1988) 4 SCC 419: 1988 SCC (Cri) 941, relied on

Sailaja Kanta Mitra v. State of W.B., AIR 1971 Cal 137: 75 CWN 804, overruled

Puhupram v. State of M.P., 1968 MPLJ 629, approved by implication

Virindar Kumar Satyawadi v. State of Punjab, AIR 1956 SC 153: 1956 Cri LJ 326; H.C. Ganti v. F.L. Harcourt, AIR 1931 Cal 436: 32 Cri LJ 826, distinguished

[2316] — S. 195(4) — "Ordinarily" — Meaning of — Explained

The expression "ordinarily" may mean "normally" but, the said expression must be understood in the context in which it has been used. "Ordinarily" may not mean "solely" or "in the name", and thus, if under no circumstance an appeal would lie to the Principal District Judge, the court would not be subordinate to it. When in a common parlance the expression "ordinarily" is used, there may be an option. There may be cases where an exception can be made out. It is never used in reference to a case where there is no exception. It never means "primarily". (Para 19). State of A.P. v. V. Sarma Rao, (2007) 2 SCC 159: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 535: AIR 2007 SC 137: 2007 Cri LJ 289.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-11-2006]

Kuldip Singh v. State of Punjab, 1956 SCR 125: 1956 Cri LJ 781, distinguished on facts

— S. 196 See also Ss. 196, 196-A, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 1062 et seq. in Vol. 2

— S. 196 See Ss. 154, 190, 195, 196, 197 and 200

See also Ss. 190 to 210, 225 to 235 and 238 to 250

See also Ss. 190, 193 and 195 to 199 & 204

See also Ss. 195 to 199

See also Ss. 197 and 196

See also Ss. 340, 192 to 196, 227 and 482

See also Ss. 482, 200, 196

[2317] — S. 196 — Sanction for prosecution under — Appropriate authority to grant — Held, Lt. Governor of Delhi is appropriate authority for NCT of Delhi in light of Ministry of Home Affairs, GOI Noti. dated 20-3-1974 — Government of NCT of Delhi Act, 1991 does not in any way affect validity of the same — Constitution of India, Arts. 239 and 239-AA — Appropriate authority to accord sanction under S. 196, CrPC for NCT of Delhi — Held, is Lt. Governor of Delhi

As regards the sanction under Section 196 CrPC it is recited in the sanction order (Ext. P-11/2) that the Lieutenant Governor acted in exercise of powers conferred by Section 196(1) CrPC read with the Government of India, Ministry of Home Affairs notification dated 20-3-1974. Under that notification, there was delegation of powers to the Lieutenant Governor to grant sanction. The said notification which finds place in the annexures to the written submissions made on behalf of Gilani shows that it was issued under Article 239(1) of the Constitution enabling the Administrator of the Union Territory to discharge powers and functions of the State Government under CrPC. The delegation of power contained in the said notification will continue to operate unless Parliament by law provides otherwise. The Government of NCT of Delhi Act, 1991 does not in any way affect the validity of delegation contained in the presidential notification issued under Article 239. (Para 11)

Hence, the sanctions under Section 50 of POTA and Section 196 CrPC were accorded by a competent authority. (Para 12). State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715: 2005 Cri LJ 3950: (2005) 122 DLT 194.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2005]

Goa Sampling Employees' Assn. v. General Superintendence Co. of India (P) Ltd., (1985) 1 SCC 206: 1985 SCC (L&S) 201, distinguished

[2318] — Ss. 196, 190, 193 and 209 — Whether committal Magistrate takes cognizance of offence while committing the case to Sessions Court and therefore order granting sanction for prosecution has to be produced before the Magistrate or is it the Sessions Court which takes cognizance after committal of the case to it and therefore, the order granting sanction required to be produced before it — Not necessary to decide since in any event, Sessions Court takes cognizance of the offence irrespective of whether earlier the committal Magistrate had taken cognizance of the same offence for committal of the case — However, since in this case the contention that the order of sanction having not been produced before the committal Magistrate the entire proceedings were vitiated, was raised for the first time before High Court in revision and since even considering that contention, on facts, it was not possible to grant substantial relief to the petitioner, SLP need not be granted

Though there is considerable force in the argument of the petitioner that the Magistrate does take cognizance of the offence before committing the case to the Court of Session, still the question remains whether the sanction order is required to be produced before the Magistrate who takes cognizance in the first instance or before the Sessions Court which has exclusive jurisdiction to try the offence. Though the Sessions Court cannot take cognizance of the offence as a court of original jurisdiction, it has to necessarily take cognizance of the offence irrespective of the fact whether the committal Magistrate at an anterior point of time had taken cognizance of the same offence for the purpose of committal. (Para 6)

However, no opinion need be expressed on the question regarding the effect of non-production of sanction order before the Magistrate who committed the case to the Sessions Court since it is not a fit case to interfere by granting leave in exercise of jurisdiction under Article 136. Firstly, the petitioner did not choose to raise the objection regarding sanction either before the Magistrate or even before the Sessions Court. The only point urged before the Sessions Judge in the application for discharge was that there was no evidence even prima facie to connect the accused with the offence. The contention regarding non-production of the order of sanction before the Magistrate was urged for the first time in the revision filed in the High Court. Even then, this contention could have been considered, if substantial relief could be granted to the petitioner or if injustice could be averted. Assuming that the petitioner is right in his contention, at best, the matter has to be sent back to the Magistrate to go through a fresh process of committal after receiving the sanction order filed by the prosecution. In any case, the matter would have to come up to the Sessions Court again. The compliance with the formality would only result in further delay in holding the trial, without any corresponding advantage to the petitioner. Such a situation should not be permitted to happen while exercising the jurisdiction under Article 136, more so when the petitioner inexplicably failed to raise the objection at the earliest. (Para 7). Dharmesh v. State of Gujarat, (2002) 6 SCC 370: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1327: AIR 2002 SC 2784.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and P. Venkatarama Reddi, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-8-2002]

Gangula Ashok v. State of A.P., (2000) 2 SCC 504: 2000 SCC (Cri) 488, relied on

[2319] — Ss. 196, 195 and 197 — Sanction order — Grant of sanction — Nature of act — Application of mind in — What is required to show — Test for — Held, grant of sanction is an executive act and validity thereof cannot be tested in light of principles applied to quasi-judicial orders

The grant of sanction is an executive act and the validity thereof cannot be tested in the light of principles applied to quasi-judicial orders. (Para 16)

The test to be applied is whether relevant material that formed the basis of allegations constituting the offence was placed before the sanctioning authority and the same was perused before granting sanction. (Para 16)

The observations in Rambhai case, (1997) 7 SCC 744, at p. 749, para 11 do not mean that different standards should be applied for judging the validity of a sanction made under the provisions of TADA or POTA and the sanctions under ordinary laws. That is not the ratio of the decision. The learned Judges were only pointing out that enough seriousness was not bestowed in the process of granting sanction for prosecution under a stringent law. (Para 16)

The two-pronged test laid down therein has been amply satisfied in the instant case. The sanction orders on their face indicate that all relevant material viz. the FIR, disclosure statements, recovery memos, draft charge-sheet and other materials on record were placed before the sanctioning authority. The fact that the sanctioning authority perused all this material is also discernible from the recital in the sanction orders. An elaborate narration of facts culled out from the record placed before the sanctioning authority and the discussion as to the applicability of each and every section of the penal provision quoted therein is not an imperative requirement. A pedantic repetition from what is stated in the FIR or the draft charge-sheet or other documents is not what is called for in order to judge whether there was due application of mind. The oral evidence let in by the prosecution by examining PW 11 dispels any doubt as to the consideration of the matter by the sanctioning authority before according the sanction. (Para 16). State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715: 2005 Cri LJ 3950: (2005) 122 DLT 194.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2005]

State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192; Supdt. of Police (CBI) v. Deepak Chowdhary, (1995) 6 SCC 225: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1095, relied on

Gokulchand Dwarkadas Morarka v. R., AIR 1948 PC 82: 49 Cri LJ 261; Jaswant Singh v. State of Punjab, 1958 SCR 762: AIR 1958 SC 124: 1958 Cri LJ 265, followed

Rambhai Nathabhai Gadhvi v. State of Gujarat, (1997) 7 SCC 744: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1169, clarified

[2320] — Ss. 196, 195 and 197 — Sanction order — Requirements for efficaciousness of — Quality of drafting, charges framed thereupon, mentioning of inapplicable statutory provisions — Relevance of — Prevention of Terrorism Act, 2002, S. 50 — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 19

The charge need not follow the exact terms of the sanction, though it must not relate to an offence essentially different from that to which the sanction relates. In any case the mention of an inapplicable section does not go to the root of the matter or otherwise makes it vulnerable to attack. (Para 15)

Careless drafting cannot deal a fatal blow to the sanction order. Looking at the substance and reading the entirety of the order it can be concluded that the sanction was duly given for the prosecution of the accused for the offences under POTA after the competent authority (the Lieutenant Governor) had reached the satisfaction prima facie in regard to the commission of the POTA offences as well. (Para 14)

Though the conspiracy to commit the offences punishable by Section 121 is covered by Section 121-A, probably Section 120-B was also referred to by way of abundant caution in the sanction order though the prosecution for the said offence does not require sanction. At any rate, the insertion of a seemingly overlapping provision does not and cannot affect the validity of the sanction order. Nor can it be said that the addition of Section 124 IPC, which has really no application to the present case by itself vitiates the sanction order. From the insertion of one inapplicable provision, a reasonable inference cannot be drawn that there was no application of mind by the competent authority. A meticulous and legalistic examination as to the offences applicable and not applicable is not what is expected at the stage of granting sanction. (Para 15). State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715: 2005 Cri LJ 3950: (2005) 122 DLT 194.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2005]

Gokulchand Dwarkadas Morarka v. R., AIR 1948 PC 82: 49 Cri LJ 261, relied on [2321] — S. 196(1) — Absence of sanction under S. 196(1), CrPC for prosecution under — Effect — Held, proceedings must be quashed — Written instructions received by the counsel for the State in this regard directed to be kept on record — Penal Code, 1860, S. 295-A. Manoj Rai v. State of M.P., (1999) 1 SCC 728: 1999 SCC (Cri) 98: AIR 1999 SC 300.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-8-1998]

[2322] — S. 196(1-A) — Bar under, against taking cognizance of offences enumerated therein except with prior sanction of Central Govt. or State Govt. or District Magistrate — Applicability — Held, the said bar is against taking of cognizance by court and not against registration of criminal case or investigation by police or submission of police report under S. 173 CrPC on completion of investigation — If the said acts are done without prior sanction of Central Govt. or State Govt. or District Magistrate, there will be no violation of S. 196(1-A) — FIR lodged under S. 153-B IPC against respondent — Respondent produced before Magistrate — Magistrate remanding respondent to judicial custody — Held, order of remand did not amount to taking cognizance of the offence — High Court erred in taking a contrary view in this regard — Thus, in such circumstances, S. 196(1-A) had no application — Quashing of proceedings by High Court due to absence of prior sanction under S. 196(1-A), held, not justified — Penal Code, 1860, S. 153-B

An FIR under Section 153-B IPC was lodged against the respondent. The respondent was arrested. He was produced before a Magistrate on the same day who remanded him to judicial custody as no application for bail had been filed. The respondent filed a petition under Section 482 CrPC before the High Court. The High Court quashed the entire proceedings initiated against the respondent on the ground that as the investigating agency had not obtained previous sanction of the Central Government or of the State Government or of the District Magistrate as required by Section 196(1-A) CrPC, the initiation of criminal proceedings against the respondent was bad in law. Hence, the present appeal by the State.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The opening words of Section 196(1-A) are "No court shall take cognizance" and consequently the bar created by the provision is against taking of cognizance by the court. There is no bar against registration of a criminal case or investigation by the police agency or submission of a report by the police on completion of investigation, as contemplated by Section 173 CrPC. If a criminal case is registered, investigation of the offence is done and the police submits a report as a result of such investigation before a Magistrate without the previous sanction of the Central Government or of the State Government or of the District Magistrate, there will be no violation of Section 196(1-A) CrPC and no illegality of any kind would be committed. (Para 8)

Several provisions in Chapter XIV of the Criminal Procedure Code use the word "cognizance". However, the word "cognizance" has not been defined in the Criminal Procedure Code. The dictionary meaning of the word "cognizance" is — "judicial hearing of a matter". Taking cognizance of an offence is not the same thing as issuance of process. Cognizance is taken at the initial stage when the Magistrate applies his judicial mind to the facts mentioned in a complaint or to a police report or upon information received from any other person that an offence has been committed. The issuance of process is at a subsequent stage when after considering the material placed before it the court decides to proceed against the offenders against whom a prima facie case is made out. (Paras 10 and 13)

In the present case neither any complaint had been filed nor any police report had been submitted nor any information had been given by any person other than the police officer before the Magistrate competent to take cognizance of the offence. After the FIR was lodged and the respondent was arrested, he was produced before the Magistrate. The Magistrate had merely passed an order remanding him to judicial custody. An order remanding an accused to judicial custody does not amount to taking cognizance of an offence. In such circumstances Section 196(1-A) CrPC can have no application at all and the High Court clearly erred in quashing the proceedings on the ground that previous sanction of the Central Government or of the State Government or of the District Magistrate had not been obtained. On the view taken by the High Court, no person accused of an offence, which is of the nature which requires previous sanction of a specified authority before taking of cognizance by the court, can ever be arrested nor such an offence can be investigated by the police. Therefore, the whole premise on the basis of which the proceedings have been quashed by the High Court is wholly erroneous in law and is liable to be set aside. (Para 14). State of Karnataka v. Pastor P. Raju, (2006) 6 SCC 728: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 179: AIR 2006 SC 2825: (2006) 102 Cut LT 612: (2006) 3 KLT 830.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.P. Mathur and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2006]

R.R. Chari v. State of U.P., 1951 SCR 312: AIR 1951 SC 207: 1951 Cri LJ 775; Darshan Singh Ram Kishan v. State of Maharashtra, (1971) 2 SCC 654: 1971 SCC (Cri) 628; Narayandas Bhagwandas Madhavdas v. State of W.B., (1960) 1 SCR 93: AIR 1959 SC 1118: 1959 Cri LJ 1368; Kishun Singh v. State of Bihar, (1993) 2 SCC 16: 1993 SCC (Cri) 470; State of W.B. v. Mohd. Khalid, (1995) 1 SCC 684: 1995 SCC (Cri) 266, relied on

— S. 196(2) See also Ss. 482 and 196(2)

[2323] — S. 196(2) — Charge clearly of conspiracy to cheat by impersonation — Sanction not necessary — CrPC, 1898, S. 196-A. Yash Pal Mittal v. State of Punjab, (1977) 4 SCC 540: 1978 SCC (Cri) 5: AIR 1977 SC 2433: 1978 Cri LJ 189.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.K. Goswami, N.L. Untwalia and D.A. Desai, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-11-1977]

[2324] — S. 196(2) — Applicability — Prior consent of State Govt. or District Magistrate for initiation of proceeding — Requirement of — Offence under S. 161 IPC may be punished with imprisonment up to three years — Punishment under S. 5(1)(d), Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 shall not be less than one year, but may extend to seven years — Thus, conspiracy to commit either of the offences was punishable with imprisonment for a term exceeding two years' RI — Hence S. 196(2), held, not applicable in the instant case — Discretion of court in respect of said offences to award lesser sentence (below 2 years), held, would not support the defence plea as to applicability of S. 196(2) — CrPC, 1898, S. 196-A — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 161 and 120-B — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(1)(d) — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 13(1)(d)

The conspiracy to commit either of the offences in question was punishable with imprisonment for a term exceeding two years' rigorous imprisonment and, therefore, Section 196(2) CrPC had no application because in respect of both the offences, the court had jurisdiction to pass a sentence of over two years' RI. The submission that it was permissible for the court to award simple imprisonment for any term subject to the maximum prescribed and, therefore, Section 196(2) was applicable, cannot be accepted. Equally without substance is the submission that the conspiracy alleged must be compulsorily punishable with rigorous imprisonment for a term exceeding two years, leaving no discretion in the court to pass a lesser sentence. (Para 3). Shiv Nandan Dixit v. State of U.P., (2003) 12 SCC 636.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-12-2003]

[2325] — S. 196(2) — Requirement under — Authorisation obtained by Assistant Collector of Customs for prosecution under S. 120-B, Indian Penal Code, read with Item 81, Schedule to S. 167, Sea Customs Act, 1878, read with Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1947, held, not improper where such officer was not holding authorisation envisaged by S. 187-A, Sea Customs Act, 1878 — No such requirement can be read into S. 196-A, CrPC, 1898 — Customs Act, 1962, S. 137 — CrPC, 1898, Ss. 196-A & (2). S.N.Banerjee v. Babulal Gupta, (1979) 2 SCC 390: 1979 SCC (Cri) 507: AIR 1979 SC 1526: 1979 Cri LJ 950.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-4-1979]

Section 197 — Sanction for prosecution of public servants

— S. 197 See also S. 197, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 1065 et seq. in Vol. 2

Synopsis

(1) Object and purpose — Nature of bar under 755

(2) "Public servants" protected under 758

(3) Retirement/Change in post of public servant, etc. — Effect on protection under S. 197 764

(4) "Discharge of official duty"/"Colour of duty" — What is and Determination of 766

(5) Sanction when necessary 783

- (i) Need for acts to fall under/have reasonable connection with "discharge of official duty" 783
- (ii) Need for prima facie case against accused 791

(6) Stage at which question of sanction to be considered/raised — Preliminary enquiry by court as to whether sanction required at all 791

(7) Effect of unavailability of protection under S. 197 804

(8) Sanctioning authority 804

(9) Sanction/Sanction order if proper — Matters to be considered 813

(10) Review of Sanction order 816

(11) Hearing/Disclosure of inculpatory material to accused before sanction 817

(12) Relative scope vis-à-vis S. 6, PC Act, 1947 818

(13) Relative scope vis-à-vis S. 19, PC Act, 1988 819

(14) Relative scope vis-à-vis other provisions/statutes 822

(15) Quashment of proceedings for want of sanction 826

(16) Invalid/void/improper sanction — When material to overturn conviction 829

(17) Judicial review of/Interference with sanction 829

(18) Discharge of official duty by members of Armed Forces — Ss. 197(2), (3) or (3-A) 832

— S. 197 See Ss. 154, 190, 195, 196, 197 and 200

See also Ss. 190 to 210, 225 to 235 and 238 to 250

See also Ss. 190, 193 and 195 to 199 & 204

See also Ss. 190 and 197

See also Ss. 195 to 199

See also Ss. 196, 195 and 197

See also Ss. 228, 197 and 177

See also Ss. 401, 397 & 482 and 197

See also Ss. 438 and 197

See also Ss. 465 and 197

See also Ss. 482, 173 and 197

See also Ss. 482 and 197

See also Ss. 482 and 197, 173, 309, 437(6) and 468

(1) Object and purpose — Nature of bar under

See also Section 197, '(4) "Discharge of official duty"/"Colour of duty" — What is and Determination of',

'(5) Sanction when necessary', and

'(6) Stage at which question of sanction to be considered/raised — Preliminary enquiry by court as to whether sanction required at all', below

[2326] — S. 197 — Trial without sanction amounts to trial without jurisdiction — Policy and object underlying S. 6, Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 indicated

The policy underlying S. 6 and similar sections, is that there should not be unnecessary harassment of public servants. The object is to save the public servant from the harassment of frivolous or unsubstantiated allegations. Existence thus of a valid sanction is a prerequisite to the taking of cognizance of the offences. In absence of such sanction the Court would have no jurisdiction to take cognizance of the offences. A trial without a valid sanction where one is necessary under S. 6 is a trial without jurisdiction by the court. R.S. Nayak v. A.R. Antulay, (1984) 2 SCC 183: 1984 SCC (Cri) 172: AIR 1984 SC 684: 1984 Cri LJ 613: (1984) 1 SLR 619: (1984) 86 Bom LR 365.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: D.A. Desai, R.S. Pathak, O. Chinnappa Reddy, A.P. Sen and V. Balakrishna Eradi, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-2-1984]

(1) Object and purpose — Nature of bar under (contd.)

[2327] — S. 197 — Object, nature and scope, reiterated

All acts done by a public servant in the purported discharge of his official duties cannot as a matter of course be brought under the protective umbrella of Section 197 CrPC. Further, there can be cases of misuse and/or abuse of powers vested in a public servant which can never be said to be a part of the official duties required to be performed by him. The underlying object of Section 197 CrPC is to enable the authorities to scrutinise the allegations made against a public servant to shield him/her against frivolous, vexatious or false prosecution initiated with the main object of causing embarrassment and harassment to the said official. However, as indicated hereinabove, if the authority vested in a public servant is misused for doing things which are not otherwise permitted under the law, such acts cannot claim the protection of Section 197 CrPC and have to be considered dehors the duties which a public servant is required to discharge or perform. Hence, in respect of prosecution for such excesses or misuse of authority, no protection can be demanded by the public servant concerned. (Para 18). Choudhury Parveen Sultana v. State of W.B., (2009) 3 SCC 398.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-1-2009]

Bhagwan Prasad Srivastava v. N.P. Mishra, (1970) 2 SCC 56: 1970 SCC (Cri) 292, relied on [2328] — S. 197 — Use of words 'no' and 'shall' in expression 'no court shall take cognizance' in S. 197 CrPC, 1973 — Make abundantly clear the mandatory character of the protection afforded to public servants under S. 197. State of Maharashtra v. Dr. Budhikota Subbarao, (1993) 3 SCC 339: 1993 SCC (Cri) 901.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and R.M. Sahai, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-3-1993]

[2329] — S. 197 — Bar under, on powers of court to take cognizance — Held, mandatory — Hence, where the actions alleged against a public servant and constituting the offences had been done in purported discharge of his duties, even though amounting to abuse of power, held, the trial court could not, in absence of sanction under S. 197, take cognizance of the said offences — Hence, the High Court rightly directed the dropping of the proceedings — However, such an order of the High Court did not have the effect of barring of the grant of sanction subsequently and the activating of the prosecution thereafter — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 120-B, 195, 469 and 471

In the established facts and circumstances of the case as noticed by the High Court the allegations made against the respondent who was a public servant at the time of the commission of the alleged offence, no cognizance of the offence could have been taken against him in the absence of sanction under Section 197 CrPC. It is not disputed that the actions alleged against him lay within the scope of his official duties or at any event were allegedly committed in the purported discharge of his duties as Director of Enforcement, though it is canvassed that he had abused his official position while discharging his official duties. The High Court has rightly found that that would not oust the necessity of sanction under Section 197 CrPC to take cognizance of the offence.

However, should the competent authority in future grant sanction under Section 197 CrPC, it will be perfectly valid and open to the State to activate the prosecution against the respondent and the order of the High Court or the Supreme Court's order in the instant SLP shall not come in the way of the court to take cognizance nor shall the orders come in the way of the competent authority to grant sanction under Section 197 CrPC. State v. B.L. Verma, (1997) 10 SCC 772: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1037.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-3-1997]

[2330] — S. 197 — Bar under, regarding court's power to take cognizance — Nature and applicability of — Held, is absolute and complete — Hence, court cannot take cognizance of complaint against a public servant in respect of an offence alleged to have been committed in discharge of official duty unless sanction is obtained from the appropriate authority — However, given that it must be determined whether there is a reasonable connection between the act done and the official duty, the concept of S. 197 does not get immediately attracted on institution of the complaint case

The cognizance of any offence, by any court, is barred by Section 197 of the Code unless sanction is obtained from the appropriate authority, if the offence, alleged to have been committed, was in discharge of the official duty. The section not only specifies the persons to whom the protection is afforded but it also specifies the conditions and circumstances in which it shall be available and the effect in law if the conditions are satisfied. The mandatory character of the protection afforded to a public servant is brought out by the expression "no court shall take cognizance of such offence except with the previous sanction". Use of the words "no" and "shall" makes it abundantly clear that the bar on the exercise of power by the court to take cognizance of any offence is absolute and complete. The very cognizance is barred. That is, the complaint cannot be taken notice of. According to Black's Law Dictionary the word "cognizance" means "jurisdiction" or "the exercise of jurisdiction" or "power to try and determine causes". In common parlance, it means "taking notice of". A court, therefore, is precluded from entertaining a complaint or taking notice of it or exercising jurisdiction if it is in respect of a public servant who is accused of an offence alleged to have been committed during discharge of his official duty. (Para 9). State of Orissa v. Ganesh Chandra Jew, (2004) 8 SCC 40: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2104: AIR 2004 SC 2179: 2004 Cri LJ 2011.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-3-2004]

[2331] — S. 197 — Bar under, regarding court's power to take cognizance — Nature and applicability of — Held, is absolute and complete — Hence, court cannot take cognizance of complaint against a public servant in respect of an offence alleged to have been committed in discharge of official duty unless sanction is obtained from the appropriate authority — However, given that it must be determined whether there is a reasonable connection between the act done and the official duty, the concept of S. 197 does not get immediately attracted on institution of the complaint case (Paras 9 and 7). K. Kalimuthu v. State, (2005) 4 SCC 512: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1291: AIR 2005 SC 2257: 2005 Cri LJ 2190.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-3-2005]

State of H.P. v. M.P. Gupta, (2004) 2 SCC 349; State of Orissa v. Ganesh Chandra Jew, (2004) 8 SCC 40: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2104; S.K. Zutshi v. Bimal Debnath, (2004) 8 SCC 31: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2096, relied on

[2332] — S. 197 — Bar under, regarding court's power to take cognizance — Nature of — Held, is absolute and complete — Hence, court cannot take cognizance of complaint against a public servant unless sanction is obtained from the appropriate authority

So far as public servants are concerned, the cognizance of any offence, by any court, is barred by Section 197 CrPC unless sanction is obtained from the appropriate authority, if the offence, alleged to have been committed, was in discharge of official duty. The said section not only specifies the persons to whom the protection is afforded but it also specifies the conditions and circumstances in which it shall be available and the effect in law if the conditions are satisfied. The mandatory character of the protection afforded to a public servant is brought out by the expression, "no court shall take cognizance of such offence except with the previous sanction". Use of the words "no" and "shall" makes it abundantly clear that the bar on the exercise of power of the court to take cognizance of any offence is absolute and complete. The very cognizance is barred. That is, the complaint cannot be taken notice of. The word "cognizance" means "jurisdiction" or "the exercise of jurisdiction" or "power to try and determine causes". In common parlance, it means taking notice of. A court, therefore, is precluded from entertaining a complaint or taking notice of it or exercising jurisdiction if it is in respect of a public servant who is accused of an offence alleged to have been committed during discharge of his official duty. (Para 10). State of H.P. v. M.P. Gupta, (2004) 2 SCC 349: 2004 SCC (Cri) 539: AIR 2004 SC 730.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-12-2003]

Black's Law Dictionary, referred to [2333] — S. 197 — Object of, restated

The protection given under Section 197 is to protect responsible public servants against the institution of possibly vexatious criminal proceedings for offences alleged to have been committed by them while they are acting or purporting to act as public servants. The policy of the legislature is to afford adequate protection to public servants to ensure that they are not prosecuted for anything done by them in the discharge of their official duties without reasonable cause, and if sanction is granted, to confer on the Government, if they choose to exercise it, complete control of the prosecution. (Para 9). Centre for Public Interest Litigation v. Union of India, (2005) 8 SCC 202: AIR 2005 SC 4413.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Ruma Pal, Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2005]

R. Balakrishna Pillai v. State of Kerala, (1996) 1 SCC 478: 1996 SCC (Cri) 128; State of H.P. v. M.P. Gupta, (2004) 2 SCC 349: 2004 SCC (Cri) 539; State of Orissa v. Ganesh Chandra Jew, (2004) 8 SCC 40: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2104; S.K. Zutshi v. Bimal Debnath, (2004) 8 SCC 31: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2096, followed

[2334] — S. 197 — Prosecution of public servant — Requirement of obtaining sanction for prosecution mandatory — Bar of taking cognizance of offence in absence of sanction absolute

So far public servants are concerned the cognizance of any offence, by any court, is barred by S. 197 of the Code unless sanction is obtained from the appropriate authority, if the offence, alleged to have been committed, was in discharge of the official duty.

(1) Object and purpose — Nature of bar under (contd.)

The section not only specifies the persons to whom the protection is afforded but it also specifies the conditions and circumstances in which it shall be available and the effect in law if the conditions are satisfied. The mandatory character of the protection afforded to a public servant is brought out by the expression, 'no court shall take cognizance of such offence except with the previous sanction'. Use of the words, 'no' and 'shall' make it abundantly clear that the bar on the exercise of power of the court to take cognizance of any offence is absolute and complete. Very cognizance is barred. That is the complaint cannot be taken notice of. State of Maharashtra v. Dr. Budhikota Subbarao, (1993) 3 SCC 339: 1993 SCC (Cri) 901.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and R.M. Sahai, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-3-1993]

[2335] — S. 197 — Requirement of obtaining sanction for prosecution before court can take cognizance — Mandatory nature of — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 19. Ashok Mehta v. Ram Ashray Singh, (2004) 13 SCC 705.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-9-2004]

[Ed.: In respect of sanction under Section 197 CrPC see (2005) 4 SCC 512, Shortnote A; (2004) 8 SCC 31, Shortnote B; (2004) 8 SCC 40, Shortnote A and (2004) 2 SCC 349, Shortnote B, wherein in the applicability of S. 197 CrPC, a preliminary stage is envisaged. At this preliminary stage the court is to examine if at all S. 197 CrPC is attracted, inasmuch as the court has to determine whether there is any need for any sanction at all. This depends on whether the alleged act done by the public servant is reasonably connected with the discharge of his official duty, in which case the protection of S. 197 is available; and if it is not so reasonably connected, the protection of S. 197 is not available.]

(2) "Public servants" protected under

[2336] — S. 197 — When applies — Public servant must be covered by the definition clause twelfth of S. 21 IPC and must be removable from his office only by the appropriate Government — Where public servant was not removable by government from the office he initially held viz. Laboratory Officer of Municipal Corporation but was removable from the office to which he was subsequently appointed/deputed by the Government viz. Public Analyst under Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, his official act in connection with the latter office will relate to the former office — Accordingly, he not being a public servant for the purposes of S. 197 while holding the former office of Laboratory Assistant under the Municipal Corporation, held, prior sanction of the Government not required under S. 197 for taking cognizance of offence alleged to have been committed by him while acting or purporting to act in discharge of his official duty as Public Analyst — Penal Code, 1860, S. 21 clause twelfth

The appellant is an employee of the Municipal Corporation, Ahmedabad. While holding the post of Laboratory Officer, the State Government by a Notification dated December 21, 1966 under S. 8 of the Food Adulteration Act, 1954 appointed the appellant as a Public Analyst for the local area comprised within the limits of the Corporation. The complaint was filed by the respondent before the Magistrate for the offences punishable under Ss. 465, 468 and 201, IPC alleged to have been committed by the appellant while exercising the functions as Public Analyst.

The appellant moved the High Court under S. 482, CrPC for quashing the criminal proceedings on the ground that, he being a public servant removable from office only by the State Government the Magistrate could not take cognizance of the offence alleged to have been committed while discharging the duties as Public Analyst without the requisite sanction under S. 197, CrPC. The High Court rejected this contention and dismissed the petition.

Held :

Section 197(1) extends immunity from irresponsible, frivolous and vexatious prosecution. The privilege of immunity from prosecution without sanction extends only when the accused is a public servant as defined in S. 21 of the Indian Penal Code and not removable from his office save by or with the sanction of the State Government or the Central Government as the case may be. The offence must also be one committed by the accused while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty.

Section 197, CrPC clearly intends to draw a line between public servants and to provide that only in the case of the higher ranks should the sanction of the government to their prosecution be necessary. While a public servant holding an office of the kind mentioned in the section is as such public servant appointed to another office, his official acts in connection with the latter office will also relate to the former office. The words "removable from office" occurring in S. 197 signify removal from the office he is holding. The authority mentioned in the section is the authority under which the officer is serving and competent to terminate his services. If the accused is under the service and pay of the local authority, the appointment to an office for exercising functions under a particular statute will not alter his status as an employee of the local authority.

The appellant herein is admittedly the Laboratory Officer in the service and pay of the Municipal Corporation of Ahmedabad. The appointment as Public Analyst by the government does not confer on him the status of a public servant or an officer under the service and pay of the government. He is not remunerated by any fee by the government. The appellant was not the employee of the State Government and was not employed in connection with the affairs of the State. He was not holding any public office in connection with the affairs of the State. The State Government had merely entrusted him with the functions of a Public Analyst which could be granted and taken by an administrative act. It was on account of his being employed by the Municipal Corporation that he was appointed as a Public Analyst by the government. He is not appointed as Public Analyst in the cadre against any post. The Prevention of Food Adulteration Act also does not contain any deeming provision to treat the Public Analyst as a public servant.

The appellant is holding an office from which he is removable by the Local Authority and not by the government. The cancellation of the appointment as Public Analyst would not amount to removal from office. Section 197, CrPC in this context contemplates the removal of the appellant from the office of the Laboratory Officer and not his transfer or removal from the office of the Public Analyst. The removal of the appellant from the office of Public Analyst would not affect his office as a Laboratory Officer under the Local Authority and would not amount to removal from office. The appellant is not therefore a public servant removable only by the State Government. Lakshmansingh Himatsingh Vaghela (Dr.) v. Naresh Kumar Chandrashanker Jah, (1990) 4 SCC 169: 1990 SCC (Cri) 558: AIR 1990 SC 1976.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. T.K. Thommen, Kuldip Singh and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-7-1990]

[2337] — S. 197 — Employee of govt. company or public undertaking — Need for sanction — Sanction for prosecution of State Govt. officer (appellant) on deputation as MD of a cooperative society (State Cooperative Land Development Bank) for offence under IPC (S. 500), held, not required to be obtained under S. 197 — No sanction required for prosecution of an officer of a govt. company or public undertaking — Appellant not covered by the definition of public servant under S. 21 IPC — Definition of "government employee" under R. 2(d) of Haryana Civil Services (Punishment and Appeal) Rules, being "for the purpose of these Rules", cannot be applied for affording protection under S. 197 — S. 118 of Haryana Cooperative Societies Act regarding taking cognizance of offence is also confined to offence under the said Act and not under IPC, hence not applicable in this case — S. 123 of the said Act also not applicable to the MD of the cooperative bank as he was not engaged in recovery of loan, nor appointed as a liquidator and nor an arbitrator so as to fall within that provision — Haryana Civil Services (Punishment and Appeal) Rules, 1987, R. 2(d) — Haryana Cooperative Societies Act, 1984 (22 of 1984), Ss. 118 and 123 — Penal Code, 1860, S. 21 cl. 12

The underlying object in enacting Section 197 CrPC is to protect a public servant from frivolous prosecution. The said provision, however, although may not be construed too narrowly, cannot be interpreted liberally so as to bring within its purview other officers who are not so protected. Section 197, inter alia, protects the public servants. "Public servant" has been defined in Section 21 IPC but the appellant herein does not answer the description of a public servant within the meaning of Section 21 IPC. The salary of the appellant is not paid by the Government. He at the relevant time was not in the service of the State. Prosecution against an officer of a government company or a public undertaking would not require any sanction under Section 197 CrPC. There is a well-marked distinction between a body created by a statute and a body coming into existence and governed in accordance with the provisions of a statute. (Paras 12, 14, 13 and 17)

The appellant also cannot be said to have continued to be a public servant within the meaning of the Haryana Civil Services (Punishment and Appeal) Rules, 1987. The definition of "government employee" in Rule 2(d) of the said Rules cannot be extended for purposes other than sought to be achieved thereby. Provisions of the said Rules, therefore, cannot be invoked for affording protection under Section 197 CrPC. (Para 14)

Section 117 of the Haryana Cooperative Societies Act, 1984 enumerates offences. Section 118 limits taking of cognizance of offences which come within the purview of the said Act, as would be evident from sub-section (1) thereof, and not under the provisions of IPC or any other statute. The said provision, therefore, has no application. In terms of Section 123, only an employee who is engaged in the recovery of loans or a person who has been appointed as a liquidator or an arbitrator only shall be treated as a public servant. By reason of the said provision, a legal fiction has been created. A legal fiction, as is well known, is created for a specific purpose and thus, applicability thereof cannot be extended for a purpose other than that for which it has been created. As the Managing Director of Haryana State Cooperative Land Development Bank Ltd., the appellant was not engaged in the recovery of loans or appointed as a liquidator or an arbitrator and in that view of the matter, the limited purpose for which the legal fiction has been created would have no application in the instant case. (Paras 15 and 16). N.K. Sharma v. Abhimanyu, (2005) 13 SCC 213: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 135: AIR 2005 SC 4303: 2005 Cri LJ 4529: (2005) 4 KLT 738.

(2) "Public servants" protected under (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-10-2005]

Mohd. Hadi Raja v. State of Bihar, (1998) 5 SCC 91: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1265; Shreekantiah Ramayya Munipalli v. State of Bombay, (1955) 1 SCR 1177: AIR 1955 SC 287: 1955 Cri LJ 857; S.S. Dhanoa v. MCD, (1981) 3 SCC 431: 1981 SCC (Cri) 733: 1982 SCC (L&S) 6, relied on [2338] — S. 197(1)(a) — "Public servant" under — Scope — Chairman and MD of Indian Bank — Appellant claiming benefit of S. 197 on the basis of the appointment procedure under Nationalised Banks (Management and Miscellaneous Provisions) Scheme, 1970 whereunder, the Central Government in consultation with RBI had power to appoint Chairman and MD of Indian Bank — Ss. 10(BB) and 36(AA) of the Banking Regulation Act, 1949, however providing that power of removal and appointment of Chairman/Director/CEO (by whatever name called) of any banking company vests with RBI — Therefore, held, it is prima facie clear that the appellant will not come within the scope of S. 197 CrPC as Banking Regulation Act, 1949 would prevail over Nationalised Banks (Management and Miscellaneous Provisions) Scheme, 1970 — Banking Regulation Act, 1949, Ss. 10(BB) and 36(AA) — Nationalised Banks (Management and Miscellaneous Provisions) Scheme, 1970, Rr. 5(1), 7, 8(1-A) and 8(4) — Banking Companies (Acquisition and Transfer of Undertakings) Act, 1970, S. 9 — Constitution of India — Art. 136 (Paras 18, 9 and 7). M. Gopalakrishnan v. State, (2009) 3 SCC 681.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-2-2009]

[2339] — S. 197 — "Public servant not removable from his office save by or with the sanction of the Government" — Officer of a nationalised bank even if a public servant, is removable by a competent authority which is not Government — Hence, sanction under S. 197 for launching prosecution against such an officer not required. K. Ch. Prasad v. J. Vanalatha Devi, (1987) 2 SCC 52: 1987 SCC (Cri) 297: AIR 1987 SC 722: 1987 Cri LJ 697: (1987) 1 LLN 424.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.L. Oza and M.M. Dutt, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-2-1987]

K. Ch. Prasad v. J. Vanalatha Devi, 1984 Cri LJ 1013 (AP), affirmed

[2340] — Ss. 197 and 2(y) — Sanction under, not required for prosecution of officers of govt. companies or public undertakings even if such companies or undertakings fall within the definition of State under Art. 12 — These instrumentalities or agencies of the State, even though perform some of the functions of the State, have their own separate entity and cannot be equated with departments directly run by the Govt. — Therefore, action taken by them, however important the same may be in the interest of the State, cannot be held to be an action taken by or on behalf of the Government as such within the meaning of S. 197 CrPC — Penal Code, 1860, S. 21 Twelfth (b) — Constitution of India, Art. 12

The protection by way of sanction under Section 197 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is not applicable to the officers of government companies or the public undertakings even when such public undertakings are "State" within the meaning of Article 12 of the Constitution on account of deep and pervasive control of the Government.

The justification for the protection under Section 197 of the Code of Criminal Procedure lies in the public policy to ensure that official acts performed by a public servant do not lead to needless and vexatious prosecution of such public servant and it is desirable that it should be left to the Government to determine the question of expediency in prosecuting a public servant.

"Public servant" has not been defined in the Code of Criminal Procedure but by virtue of Section 2(y) thereof "public servant" defined in Section 21 IPC will have the same meaning in Criminal Procedure Code. But protection under Section 197 CrPC is not available to a public servant unless other conditions indicated in that section are fulfilled.

Although the instrumentality or agency with a corporate veil, for all intents and purposes may be held to be a third arm of the Government and such instrumentality discharges the duties and functions which the State intends to do such instrumentality or agency is none the less a juridical person having a separate legal entity. Therefore, such instrumentality must be held to have an independent status distinct from the State and cannot be treated as a government department for all purposes. Therefore, even if an officer of such instrumentality or agency takes or receives, keeps or expends any property or executes any contract, such acts even though in ultimate analysis may be held to have been done in the interest of the State, such action cannot be construed, as of rule, an action of the Government by its employees or by an authority empowered by the Government.

For the purpose of enforcing the fundamental rights, the public undertaking which, on account of deep and pervasive control, can be held to be a State within the meaning of Article 12 has been treated on a par with the government department but in all its facets, public undertaking has not been equated with the department run directly by the Government. Whenever there was a felt need to include other functionaries within the definition of "public servant", they have been declared to be "public servants" under several special and local acts. If the legislature had intended to include officers of an instrumentality or agency for bringing such officers under the protective umbrella of Section 197 CrPC, it would have done so expressly.

Therefore, it will not be just and proper to bring such persons within the ambit of Section 197 by liberally construing the provisions of Section 197. Such exercise of liberal construction will not be confined to the permissible limit of interpretation of a statute by a court of law but will amount to legislation by court. Mohd. Hadi Raja v. State of Bihar, (1998) 5 SCC 91: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1265: AIR 1998 SC 1945: 1998 Cri LJ 2826.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-4-1998]

[2341] — S. 197 — S. 21 IPC — Minister of a State Government — Held, is a public servant and therefore, entitled to the protection of S. 197(1) — Word "Government" used in S. 197 means the Governor in the case of a Chief Minister or Minister — General Clauses Act, 1897, S. 3(60) — Constitution of India, Arts. 164 and 167

The Chief Minister is paid from public exchequer for performing a public duty and is, therefore, a public servant within the meaning of Section 197 of the Code. So also a Minister of a State is paid from its public exchequer. He is paid for doing the duty entrusted to him as a Minister and, therefore, the Minister must also be held to be a public servant. Since he is appointed or dismissed by the Governor, he would fall within the expression "a public servant not removable from his office save by or with the sanction of the Government". By virtue of Section 3(60) of the General Clauses Act, 1897 the expression 'Government' used in Section 197 would mean the Governor in the case of a Chief Minister or a Minister. Therefore, a Minister would be entitled to the protection of Section 197(1) of the Code. R. Balakrishna Pillai v. State of Kerala, (1996) 1 SCC 478: 1996 SCC (Cri) 128: AIR 1996 SC 901: (1996) 1 KLT 250: (1996) 1 KLJ 112.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, C.J. and S.C. Sen, J. [Date of decision: 5-12-1995]

M. Karunanidhi v. Union of India, (1979) 3 SCC 431: 1979 SCC (Cri) 691, followed

Namdeo Kashinath Aher v. H.G. Vartak, AIR 1970 Bom 385: 1970 Cri LJ 1427: 1970 Mah LJ 662, approved

[2342] — S. 197 — Sanction for prosecution of public servants — Conditions for applicability of S. 19, PC Act, 1988 — MP is a public servant but there is no authority competent to remove him from his office — Held, per Agrawal and Anand, JJ. (Ray J, concurring) merely because there is no authority to remove an MP from his office, he does not cease to be a public servant for the purpose of the Act — In absence of authority competent to remove and grant sanction under S. 19(1) there is no limitation on the power of the court to take cognizance of offence under S. 190 CrPC of offences mentioned in S. 19(1) — But till provision is made by Parliament in that regard by suitable amendment in the law, the prosecuting agency, before filing a charge-sheet in respect of an offence punishable under Ss. 7, 10, 11, 13 and 15 of the 1988 Act against an MP in a criminal court, shall obtain the permission of the Chairman of the Rajya Sabha/Speaker of the Lok Sabha, as the case may be — Held, per Bharucha and Rajendra Babu, JJ., S. 19 applicable only to public servant who is removable from his office by a competent authority — Hence, court must try to identify the authority competent to remove the public servant — If court fails to identify the competent authority to remove, the public servant would not be liable to be prosecuted under Ss. 7, 10, 11, 13 and 15 though he would be liable to be prosecuted for any other offence under the Act — If a person is found to be a public servant within the meaning of the definition under S. 2(c), he must be treated as such for the purpose of all the provisions of the Act where the expression is used including for the purposes of the sanction provision and the position cannot change even if it be found that there is no authority competent to remove him from his office — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 — S. 19

(2) "Public servants" protected under (contd.)

Per Agrawal and Anand, JJ.

The definition of "public servant" in Section 2(c) of the 1988 Act includes persons who are public servants under that provision though the criterion of removability does not apply to them and there is no single individual authority which is competent to grant sanction for their prosecution under Section 19 of the 1988 Act. In respect of a Member of Parliament the Constitution does not confer on any particular authority the power to remove him. It is no doubt true that the House in exercise of its power of contempt can pass a resolution for expulsion of a Member who is found guilty of breach of privilege and acceptance of bribe by a Member in connection with the business of the House is regarded as breach of privilege. On that basis it may be possible to say that the House has the power to remove a Member who is found to have indulged in bribery and corruption. But in view of the decision in Veeraswami wherein Shetty, J. has said that the legislature while enacting clause (c) of Section 6 of the 1947 Act could not have intended Parliament to be the sanctioning authority, the House cannot be regarded as the authority competent to grant sanction under Section 19(1)(c) of the 1988 Act. On that view of the matter it must be held that there is no authority who can remove a Member of Parliament and who would be competent under clauses (a), (b) or (c) of Section 19(1) of the 1988 Act to grant sanction for his prosecution. This does not, however, lead to the conclusion that he cannot be treated as a "public servant" under Section 2(c)(viii) of the 1988 Act if, on a proper interpretation of the said provision he is found to be a public servant. Since on an interpretation of the provisions of Section 2(c)(viii) of the 1988 Act it has been held that a Member of Parliament is a public servant, a Member of Parliament has to be treated as a public servant for the purpose of the 1988 Act even though there is no authority who can grant sanction for his prosecution under Section 19(1) of the 1988 Act. (Para 93)

When there is an authority competent to remove a public servant and to grant sanction for his prosecution under Section 19(1) of the 1988 Act the requirement of sanction precludes a court from taking cognizance of the offences mentioned in Section 19(1) against him in the absence of such sanction, but if there is no authority competent to remove a public servant and to grant sanction for his prosecution under Section 19(1) there is no limitation on the power of the court to take cognizance under Section 190 CrPC of the offences mentioned in Section 19(1) of the 1988 Act. The requirement of sanction under Section 19(1) is intended as a safeguard against criminal prosecution of a public servant on the basis of malicious or frivolous allegations by the interested persons. The object underlying the said requirement is not to condone the commission of an offence by a public servant. The inapplicability of the provisions of Section 19(1) to a public servant would only mean that the intended safeguard was not intended to be made available to him. The rigour of the prohibition contained in sub-section (1) is now reduced by sub-section (3) of Section 19 because under clause (a) of sub-section (3) it is provided that no finding, sentence or order passed by a Special Judge shall be reversed or altered by a court in appeal, confirmation or revision on the ground of absence of, or any error, omission or irregularity in the sanction required under sub-section (1), unless in the opinion of that court, a failure of justice has in fact been occasioned thereby. This would show that the requirement of sanction under sub-section (1) of Section 19 is a matter relating to the procedure and the absence of the sanction does not go to the root of the jurisdiction of the court. It must, therefore, be held that merely because there is no authority which is competent to remove a public servant and to grant sanction for his prosecution under Section 19(1) it cannot be said that a Member of Parliament is outside the purview of the 1988 Act. (Para 95)

In the absence of requirement of previous sanction for initiating proceedings in a court of law against a Member of Parliament in respect of an offence mentioned in Section 19(1) of the 1988 Act the possibility of a Member of Parliament being subjected to criminal prosecution on the basis of malicious or frivolous allegations made by interested persons cannot be excluded. It is hoped that Parliament will provide for an adequate safeguard in that regard by making suitable amendment in the 1988 Act. But till such safeguard is provided, it appears appropriate that protection from being subjected to criminal prosecution on the basis of malicious or frivolous allegations should be available to Members of Parliament. The Chairman of the Rajya Sabha/Speaker of the Lok Sabha by virtue of the position held by them are entrusted with the task of preserving the independence of the Members of the House. In order that Members of Parliament may not be subjected to criminal prosecution on the basis of frivolous or malicious allegations at the hands of interested persons, the prosecuting agency, before filing a charge-sheet in respect of an offence punishable under Sections 7, 10, 11, 13 and 15 of the 1988 Act against a Member of Parliament in a criminal court, shall obtain the permission of the Chairman of the Rajya Sabha/Speaker of the Lok Sabha, as the case may be. (Paras 96 and 97)

Per Ray, J. (concurring)

I respectfully concur with the findings of Mr Justice Agrawal and agree with the reasoning for such findings that since there is no authority competent to grant sanction for the prosecution of a Member of Parliament under Section 19(1) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, the court can take cognizance of the offences mentioned in Section 19(1) in the absence of sanction but before filing a charge-sheet in respect of an offence punishable under Sections 7, 10, 11, 12 and 15 of 1988 Act against a Member of Parliament in a criminal court, the prosecuting agency shall obtain the permission of the Chairman of the Rajya Sabha/Speaker of the Lok Sabha, as the case may be. (Para 99)

Per Bharucha and Rajendra Babu, JJ.

Members of Parliament and the State Legislatures are public servants liable to be prosecuted for offences under the Prevention of Corruption Act but they cannot be prosecuted for offences under Sections 7, 10, 11 and 13 thereof because of want of an authority competent to grant sanction thereto. It is hoped that Parliament will address itself to the task of removing this lacuna with due expedition. (Para 182)

Sanction is not required in respect of all offences covered by the said Act; it is required only in respect of the offences that are punishable under Sections 7, 10, 11, 13 and 15. Secondly, the person charged must be a public servant at the point of time the court is asked to take cognizance; that is the material time for the purposes of the section. Thirdly, the sanction must precede cognizance; it must be prior sanction. Fourthly, and this from the point of view of this judgment is most material, the section covers all public servants. In other words, if any public servant is charged with an offence punishable under the aforesaid sections, the court shall not take cognizance in the absence of sanction. That the section applies to all public servants is also clear from the three clauses of sub-section (1). The question as to whether or not a person is a public servant within the meaning of the statute must be determined having regard to the definition of a public servant contained in the statute. If the person is found to be a public servant within the meaning of the definition, he must be taken to be a public servant for the purposes of all provisions in the statute in which the expression "public servant" occurs. If, therefore, a person is found to satisfy the requirements of the definition of a public servant, he must be treated as a public servant for the purposes of the sanction provision. (Paras 166 and 175)

It is not possible to accept the view that the provisions of Section 19 are applicable only to a public servant who is removable from his office by an authority competent to do so. It is correct to say that Section 19 contemplates that for every public servant there must be an authority competent to remove him from his office and that, therefore, the effort must be to identify that authority. But if no authority can be identified in the case of a public servant or a particular category of public servant, it cannot lead to the conclusion that he is not a public servant or this is not a category of public servant within the meaning of the said Act. The finding that the Members of Parliament are public servants, based upon the definition section, must apply to the phrase "public servant" wherever it occurs in the said Act. It cannot change if it be found that there is no authority competent to remove Members of Parliament from office. Members of Parliament would, then, not be liable to be prosecuted for offences covered by Sections 7, 10, 11, 13 and 15, the condition of prior sanction being incapable of being satisfied, but they would remain liable to prosecution for offences under the said Act other than those covered by Sections 7, 10, 11, 13 and 15. (Paras 167 and 169)

It is clear from Article 101 that the seat of a Member of Parliament becomes vacant immediately upon his becoming subject to the disqualifications mentioned in Article 102, without more. The removal of a Member of Parliament is occasioned by operation of law and is self-operative. Reference to the President under Article 103 is required only if a question arises as to whether a Member of Parliament has earned such disqualification; that is to say, if it is disputed. The President would then have to decide whether the Member of Parliament had become subject to the automatic disqualification contemplated by Article 101. His order would not remove the Member of Parliament from his seat or office but would declare that he stood disqualified. It would operate not with effect from the date upon which it was made but would relate back to the date upon which the disqualification was earned. Without, therefore, having to go into the connotation of the word "removal" in service law, it seems clear that the President cannot be said to be the authority competent to remove a Member of Parliament from his office. (Para 180)

(3) Retirement/Change in post of public servant, etc. — Effect on protection under S. 197

In the light of the aforesaid position it is not necessary to consider the submission that the scheme of the 1988 Act, as compared to the 1947 Act, had undergone an important change by reason of the introduction of sub-section (3) in Section 19. (Para 181). P.V. Narasimha Rao v. State (CBI/SPE), (1998) 4 SCC 626: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1108: AIR 1998 SC 2120.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: S.C. Agrawal[1], G.N. Ray[2], Dr. A.S. Anand[1], S.P. Bharucha[3] and S. Rajendra Babu[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 17-4-1998]

K. Veeraswami v. Union of India, (1991) 3 SCC 655: 1991 SCC (Cri) 734, dissenting view overruled

S.A. Venkataraman v. State, AIR 1958 SC 107: 1958 SCR 1040: (1958) 2 LLJ 1; Kihoto Hollohan v. Zachillhu, 1992 Supp (2) SCC 651, relied on

Habibulla Khan v. State of Orissa, 1993 Cri LJ 3604: (1993) 3 Crimes 198, overruled

(3) Retirement/Change in post of public servant, etc. — Effect on protection under S. 197

See also Section 197, '(12) Relative scope vis-à-vis S. 6, PC Act, 1947', and

'(13) Relative scope vis-à-vis S. 19, PC Act, 1988', below

[2343] — S. 197 — 'Any person who is or was ... a public servant' — Held, even a retired public servant entitled to protection under — Hence respondent, an ex-Naval captain protected

Section 197 of the Code as it stands after 1973, extends the protection even to a retired public servant as is clear from use of the words, 'is or was' provided the accusation is in respect of an act or omission done or purported to have been done when such public servant was in office. By legislative fiction the officer is deemed to be a public servant under S. 197 of the Code irrespective of his retirement if the accusations against him are for act or omission done by him when he was in service. The purpose is to avoid exposing a public servant to vexatious or frivolous prosecutions merely because he has demitted his office. The submission that if a public servant ceases to hold the office by the time the court is called upon to take cognizance he cannot claim any protection, being in the teeth of the section, does not need any further elucidation. State of Maharashtra v. Dr. Budhikota Subbarao, (1993) 3 SCC 339: 1993 SCC (Cri) 901.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and R.M. Sahai, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-3-1993]

[2344] — S. 197 — Prosecution of a retired public servant — Necessity of obtaining sanction for — Held, is essential in cases where S. 197 has application — But an accused facing prosecution for offences under Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 or Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 cannot claim any immunity on the ground of want of sanction if he ceased to be a public servant on the date when the court took cognizance of the said offences (Para 11). S.K. Zutshi v. Bimal Debnath, (2004) 8 SCC 31: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2096: AIR 2004 SC 4174: (2004) 3 KLT 505.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-8-2004]

R. Balakrishna Pillai v. State of Kerala, (1996) 1 SCC 478: 1996 SCC (Cri) 128; State of H.P. v. M.P. Gupta, (2004) 2 SCC 349: 2004 SCC (Cri) 539; State of Orissa v. Ganesh Chandra Jew, (2004) 8 SCC 40, relied on [2345] — S. 197 — Prosecution of a retired public servant — Necessity of obtaining sanction for — Held, is essential in cases where S. 197 has application — But an accused facing prosecution for offences under Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 or Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 cannot claim any immunity on the ground of want of sanction, if he ceased to be a public servant on the date when the court took cognizance of the said offences (Paras 16 and 18). State of Orissa v. Ganesh Chandra Jew, (2004) 8 SCC 40: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2104: AIR 2004 SC 2179: 2004 Cri LJ 2011.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-3-2004]

S.A. Venkataraman v. State, AIR 1958 SC 107: 1958 Cri LJ 254; C.R. Bansi v. State of Maharashtra, (1970) 3 SCC 537: 1971 SCC (Cri) 143; State of Maharashtra v. Dr. Budhikota Subbarao, (1993) 3 SCC 339: 1993 SCC (Cri) 901; Kalicharan Mahapatra v. State of Orissa, (1998) 6 SCC 411: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1455; R. Balakrishna Pillai v. State of Kerala, (1996) 1 SCC 478: 1996 SCC (Cri) 128: AIR 1996 SC 901; State of H.P. v. M.P. Gupta, (2004) 2 SCC 349, followed

41st Report of Law Commission, para 15.123, relied on

[2346] — S. 197 — Prosecution of a retired public servant — Necessity of obtaining sanction for — Held, is essential in cases where S. 197 has application — But, an accused facing prosecution for offences under the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 or Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 cannot claim any immunity on the ground of want of sanction if he ceased to be a public servant on the date when the court took cognizance of the said offences (Paras 8 to 10). N. Bhargavan Pillai v. State of Kerala, 2005 SCC (Cri) 142: AIR 2004 SC 2317: (2004) 2 KLT 725: 2004 Cri LJ 2494.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-4-2004]

Kalicharan Mahapatra v. State of Orissa, (1998) 6 SCC 411: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1455; R. Balakrishna Pillai v. State of Kerala, (1996) 1 SCC 478: 1996 SCC (Cri) 128, followed

41st Law Commission's Report, para 15.123, relied on

[2347] — S. 197 — Prosecution of a retired public servant — Necessity of obtaining sanction for — Held, is essential in cases where S. 197 has application — But an accused facing prosecution for offences under the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 or Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 cannot claim any immunity on the ground of want of sanction, if he ceased to be a public servant on the date when the court took cognizance of the said offences (Paras 17 and 19). State of H.P. v. M.P. Gupta, (2004) 2 SCC 349: 2004 SCC (Cri) 539: AIR 2004 SC 730.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-12-2003]

S.A. Venkataraman v. State, AIR 1958 SC 107: 1958 Cri LJ 254; C.R. Bansi v. State of Maharashtra, (1970) 3 SCC 537: 1971 SCC (Cri) 143; State of Maharashtra v. Dr. Budhikota Subbarao, (1993) 3 SCC 339: 1993 SCC (Cri) 901; Kalicharan Mahapatra v. State of Orissa, (1998) 6 SCC 411: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1455; R. Balakrishna Pillai v. State of Kerala, (1996) 1 SCC 478: 1996 SCC (Cri) 128, followed

[2348] — S. 197 — Prosecution of a retired public servant — Necessity of obtaining sanction for — Held, is essential in cases where S. 197 has application — But an accused facing prosecution for offences under the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 or Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 cannot claim any immunity on the ground of want of sanction if he ceased to be a public servant on the date when the court took cognizance of the said offences — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 6 — Inapplicability to retired public servant — Position contrasted with that obtaining under S. 197, CrPC — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 19 — Inapplicability to retired public servant — Position contrasted with that obtaining under S. 197 CrPC

The correct legal position, therefore, is that an accused facing prosecution for offences under the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 or Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 cannot claim any immunity on the ground of want of sanction, if he ceased to be a public servant on the date when the court took cognizance of the said offences. But the position is different in cases where Section 197 of the Code has application the expression "was" came to be employed after the expression "is" in Section 197 so as to make the (sic need for) sanction applicable even in cases where a retired public servant is sought to be prosecuted. (Paras 17 and 19). Rakesh Kumar Mishra v. State of Bihar, (2006) 1 SCC 557: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 432: AIR 2006 SC 820: 2006 Cri LJ 808: (2006) 38 AIC 13 (SC): (2006) 1 KLJ 405: (2006) 2 KLT 26.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-1-2006]

Kalicharan Mahapatra v. State of Orissa, (1998) 6 SCC 411: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1455, followed

[2349] — S. 197 — Sanction for prosecution — Requirement of, after retirement of public servant — S. 197, unlike the provisions of Prevention of Corruption Act, postulates obtaining an order of sanction even where the public servant has ceased to hold office. P.K. Choudhury v. Commander, 48 Brtf (Gref), (2008) 13 SCC 229: AIR 2008 SC 1937.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-3-2008]

[2350] — S. 197 — Sanction for prosecution in case public servant is no longer holding the post/office during the currency of which the alleged offence was committed — Need for — Position obtaining under S. 197 contrasted with that obtaining under S. 19 PC Act, 1988 — Held, there is no need for sanction under S. 19 in the abovestated situation while sanction is required under S. 197 CrPC in such a situation — The difference in the positions is not the result of a casus omissus and S. 19, PC Act, 1988 and S. 197 CrPC operate in conceptually different fields — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 19

Section 197 CrPC and Section 19 of the PC Act, 1988 operate in conceptually different fields. In cases covered under the PC Act, 1988 in respect of public servants the sanction is of automatic nature and thus factual aspects are of little or no consequence. Conversely, in a case relatable to Section 197 CrPC, the substratum and basic features of the case have to be considered to find out whether the alleged act has any nexus with the discharge of duties. Position is not so in case of Section 19 of the PC Act, 1988. The reason is obvious. The sanction contemplated in Section 197 CrPC concerns a public servant who "is accused of any offence alleged to have been committed by him while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty", whereas the offences contemplated in the PC Act, 1988 are those which cannot be treated as acts either directly or even purportedly done in the discharge of his official duties. Parliament must have desired to maintain the distinction and hence the wording in the corresponding provision in the PC Act, 1947 was materially imported into the new PC Act, 1988 without any change in spite of the change made while enacting Section 197 CrPC. (Paras 10 and 9)

Hence, the plea that the effect of the Law Commission's Forty-first Report which recommended extending the protection of sanction under Section 197 CrPC to a retired public servant as well should have been also extended to Section 19(1) of the PC Act, 1988, and Dr. Bakshi Tekchand's Report has not been considered by the legislature, and therefore this is a case of "casus omissus", is clearly without any substance. (Para 9). Lalu Prasad v. State of Bihar, (2007) 1 SCC 49: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 241: (2007) 1 KLT 47: (2007) 50 AIC 107 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-12-2006]

Kalicharan Mahapatra v. State of Orissa, (1998) 6 SCC 411: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1455, followed

R.S. Nayak v. A.R. Antulay, (1984) 2 SCC 183: 1984 SCC (Cri) 172, held, affirmed

(3) Retirement/Change in post of public servant, etc.— Effect on protection under S. 197 (contd.)

[2351] — S. 197 — Sanction for prosecution of a public servant — Held, is necessary even if the public servant sought to be prosecuted has ceased to be a public servant on the date of taking cognizance of the offence. R. Balakrishna Pillai v. State of Kerala, (1996) 1 SCC 478: 1996 SCC (Cri) 128: AIR 1996 SC 901: (1996) 1 KLT 250: (1996) 1 KLJ 112.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, C.J. and S.C. Sen, J. [Date of decision: 5-12-1995]

[2352] — S. 197 — Sanction for prosecution — Applicability to retired government servant — Held, applicable if the offence was relatable to official duty — Maharashtra Civil Services (Pension) Rules, 1982, R. 27

Though the view of the High Court that no sanction under Section 197(1) CrPC is needed in the case of retired government servant is erroneous, in view of the finding that the charged offences are not relatable to any official duty, the appeal fails and deserves to be dismissed. The High Court, was in error in observing that sanction was not necessary because the expression used in Section 197(1) CrPC to refer to a public servant is "was". But the question is really of academic nature because the alleged offences cannot be related to any official duty. (Paras 13, 8 and 9). Raghunath Anant Govilkar v. State of Maharashtra, (2008) 11 SCC 289: 2008 Cri LJ 2054.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-2-2008]

Rakesh Kumar Mishra v. State of Bihar, (2006) 1 SCC 557: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 432; R. Balakrishna Pillai v. State of Kerala, (1996) 1 SCC 478: 1996 SCC (Cri) 128; State of H.P. v. M.P. Gupta, (2004) 2 SCC 349: 2004 SCC (Cri) 539; State of Orissa v. Ganesh Chandra Jew, (2004) 8 SCC 40: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2104; S.K. Zutshi v. Bimal Debnath, (2004) 8 SCC 31: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2096, relied on

(4) "Discharge of official duty"/"Colour of duty" — What is and Determination of

See also Section 197, '(1) Object and purpose — Nature of bar under', above, and

'(5) Sanction when necessary', and

'(6) Stage at which question of sanction to be considered/raised — Preliminary enquiry by court as to whether sanction required at all', below

[2353] — S. 197 — " Offence committed in discharge of official duty" — Test — Held, there must be direct and reasonable nexus between the offence committed and the discharge of official duty — Charge of dishonest misappropriation or conversion of goods by Customs Authorities which they had seized and held in trust — The act, held, not in discharge of official duty — Hence, sanction under S. 197 not required — Accused must act in his official capacity so far as entrustment is concerned to attract S. 409, IPC, and for subsequent act of misappropriation or conversion, he need not be in his official capacity — CrPC, 1898, S. 197

The respondent imported certain goods from Germany under a valid customs clearance permit for a certain period and the goods were to be re-exported thereafter. After the expiry of that period the Customs Officers (appellants) raided the premises of the respondent and seized the goods, prepared their inventories and then packed them in boxes and sealed them. The respondent made an application before the SDM praying for return of the goods. The SDM issued an order accordingly against which the appellants carried revision up to the High Court. Under an order of the High Court, the goods were produced before the SDM, who got opened the boxes and noted that the seals of the boxes were tampered with and one of the boxes was broken while the remaining packages were completely empty but sealed. The respondent thereupon made a complaint before the SDM alleging that the appellants by their act in illegally tampering and breaking the seals of the goods seized by them and removing some of those goods and further abusing their positions and seizing some of the personal articles of the complainant under the colour of search warrant and illegally holding those goods had committed offences under Ss. 120-B/166/409, Indian Penal Code. After a preliminary enquiry the SDM having found a prima facie case under Ss. 120-B/409, Indian Penal Code, against the appellants, directed that the appellants be summoned. The appellants appeared but contended that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to take cognizance of the complaint in the absence or sanction under S. 197, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898 and S. 155, Customs Act, 1962, for their prosecution. The Magistrate accepted the contention and a revision application having been dismissed by the Additional Sessions Judge, a further revision was carried before the High Court which held that no sanction was required for the prosecution of the appellants as they were not acting in the discharge of their official duties when they misappropriated the goods.

Held :

The sine qua non for the applicability of S. 197 is that the offence charged, be it one of commission or omission, must be one which has been committed by the public servant either in his official capacity or under colour of the office held by him.

The test for determining whether an offence was committed in the course of official duty or under colour of office is that the act constituting the offence must directly and reasonably be connected with his official duty. It is the quality of the act that is important.

Although the seizure of the goods by the appellants and their being thus entrusted with the goods or dominion over them, was an act committed by them while acting in the discharge of their official duty, there is nothing in the nature or quality of the complained subsequent act of dishonest misappropriation or conversion of goods by the appellants which attaches to or partakes of the official character of the appellants. Nor could the alleged act of misappropriation or conversion, be reasonably said to be imbued with the colour of the office held by the appellants. Generally in the case under S. 409, Indian Penal Code, the official capacity is material only in connection with the 'entrustment' and does not necessarily enter into the later act of misappropriation or conversion, which is the act complained of.

This, however, should not be understood as an invariable proposition of law. The question depends on the facts of each case. Where on special facts of the case the act of criminal misappropriation or conversion complained of is inseparably intertwined with the performance of the official duty of the accused, sanction under S. 197(1) for prosecution of the accused for an offence under S. 409, Indian Penal Code would be necessary. B. Saha v. M.S. Kochar, (1979) 4 SCC 177: 1979 SCC (Cri) 939: AIR 1979 SC 1841: 1979 Cri LJ 1367: (1979) 16 ACC 318.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria, P.N. Shinghal and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-1979]

[2354] — S. 197 — Applicability — Expression "any offence alleged to have been committed by him while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty" — Words "official duty", how to be construed — Held, "official duty" implies that the act or omission must have been done by the public servant in the course of his service and that it should fall within the scope and range of his official duty — Test is whether omission or neglect to do that act would have brought on the charge of dereliction of his official duty — S. 197 to be construed strictly while determining its applicability to any act or omission in the course of service — Hence protection does not extend to criminal activities — But, where act or omission performed by a public servant had reasonable connection with discharge of his duty, it must be held to be official

There cannot be any universal rule to determine whether there is a reasonable connection between the act done and the official duty, nor is it possible to lay down any such rule. One safe and sure test in this regard would be to consider if the omission or neglect on the part of the public servant to commit the act complained of could have made him answerable for a charge of dereliction of his official duty: if the answer to this question is in the affirmative, it may be said that such act was committed by the public servant while acting in the discharge of his official duty and there was every connection with the act complained of and the official duty of the public servant. This aspect makes it clear that the concept of Section 197 does not get immediately attracted on institution of the complaint case. (Paras 6 and 13)

"Official", according to the dictionary, means pertaining to an office, and "official act" or "official duty" means an act or duty done by an officer in his official capacity. Use of the expression "official duty" therefore implies that the act or omission must have been done by the public servant in the course of his service and that it should have been in discharge of his duty. The section does not extend its protective cover to every act or omission done by a public servant in service but restricts its scope of operation to only those acts or omissions which are done by a public servant in discharge of official duty. (Paras 10 and 11)

The protective cover of Section 197 has been widened further by extending protection to even those acts or omissions which are done in purported exercise of official duty; that is under the colour of office. Official duty, therefore, implies that the act or omission must have been done by the public servant in the course of his service and such act or omission must have been performed as part of duty which further must have been official in nature. The section has, thus, to be construed strictly, while determining its applicability to any act or omission in the course of service. Its operation has to be limited to those duties which are discharged in the course of duty. For instance a public servant is not entitled to indulge in criminal activities. To that extent the section has to be construed narrowly and in a restricted manner. (Para 12). Rakesh Kumar Mishra v. State of Bihar, (2006) 1 SCC 557: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 432: AIR 2006 SC 820: 2006 Cri LJ 808: (2006) 38 AIC 13 (SC): (2006) 1 KLJ 405: (2006) 2 KLT 26.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-1-2006]

(4) "Discharge of official duty"/"Colour of duty" — What is and Determination of (contd.)

Bakhshish Singh Brar v. Gurmej Kaur, (1987) 4 SCC 663: 1988 SCC (Cri) 29: AIR 1988 SC 257; P. Arulswami v. State of Madras, (1967) 1 SCR 201: AIR 1967 SC 776: 1967 Cri LJ 665; B. Saha v. M.S. Kochar, (1979) 4 SCC 177: 1979 SCC (Cri) 939; Matajog Dobey v. H.C. Bhari, (1955) 2 SCR 925: AIR 1956 SC 44; R. Balakrishna Pillai v. State of Kerala, (1996) 1 SCC 478: 1996 SCC (Cri) 128: AIR 1996 SC 901; State of H.P. v. M.P. Gupta, (2004) 2 SCC 349: 2004 SCC (Cri) 539; State of Orissa v. Ganesh Chandra Jew, (2004) 8 SCC 40: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2104; S.K. Zutshi v. Bimal Debnath, (2004) 8 SCC 31: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2096, relied on

[2355] — S. 197 — Applicability — Expression "any offence alleged to have been committed by him while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty" — Words "official duty", how to be construed — Test for — Held, "official duty" implies that the act or omission must have been done by the public servant in the course of his service and that it should fall within the scope and range of his official duty — Test is whether omission or neglect to do that act would have brought on him the charge of dereliction of his official duty — S. 197 to be construed strictly while determining its applicability to any act or omission in the course of service — Hence, protection does not extend to criminal activities — But, where act or omission performed by a public servant had reasonable connection with discharge of his duty, it must be held to be official

"Official", according to the dictionary, means pertaining to an office, and official act or official duty means an act or duty done by an officer in his official capacity. Thus, use of the expression "official duty" in Section 197 implies that the act or omission must have been done by the public servant in the course of his service and that it should have been in discharge of his duty. The section does not extend its protective cover to every act or omission done by a public servant in service but restricts its scope of operation to only those acts or omissions which are done by a public servant in discharge of official duty. (Para 10)

It is not the duty which requires examination so much as the act, because the official act can be performed both in the discharge of the official duty as well as in dereliction of it. The act must fall within the scope and range of the official duties of the public servant concerned. It is the quality of the act which is important and the protection of this section is available if the act falls within the scope and range of his official duty. There cannot be any universal rule to determine whether there is a reasonable connection between the act done and the official duty, nor is it possible to lay down any such rule. One safe and sure test in this regard would be to consider if the omission or neglect on the part of the public servant to commit the act complained of could have made him answerable for a charge of dereliction of his official duty. If the answer to this question is in the affirmative, it may be said that such act was committed by the public servant while acting in the discharge of his official duty and there was every connection with the act complained of and the official duty of the public servant. This aspect makes it clear that the concept of Section 197 does not get immediately attracted on institution of the complaint case. (Para 7)

Section 197 CrPC has been widened further by extending protection to even those acts or omissions which are done in purported exercise of official duty. That is, under the colour of office. Official duty therefore implies that the act or omission must have been done by the public servant in the course of his service and such act or omission must have been performed as part of duty which further must have been official in nature. The section has, thus, to be construed strictly while determining its applicability to any act or omission in the course of service. Its operation has to be limited to those duties which are discharged in course of duty. For instance, a public servant is not entitled to indulge in criminal activities. To that extent the section has to be construed narrowly and in a restricted manner. (Paras 11 and 12). State of Orissa v. Ganesh Chandra Jew, (2004) 8 SCC 40: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2104: AIR 2004 SC 2179: 2004 Cri LJ 2011.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-3-2004]

Bakhshish Singh Brar v. Gurmej Kaur, (1987) 4 SCC 663: 1988 SCC (Cri) 29 ; P. Arulswami v. State of Madras, AIR 1967 SC 776: 1967 Cri LJ 665; B. Saha v. M.S. Kochar, (1979) 4 SCC 177: 1979 SCC (Cri) 939, relied on

Matajog Dobey v. H.C. Bhari, AIR 1956 SC 44: 1956 Cri LJ 140, followed

[2356] — S. 197 — "Official duty" — Test for ascertainment of — Public servant purporting to act in official capacity — If covered — Exercise of discretion in discharge of administrative duties — In the instant case where State's officers were required to take decisions in matters placed before them by their subordinates, or were required to apply their mind, or were required to take decisions in supervision and completion of a government project, or having regard to rules of executive business were required to take decision for and on behalf of State, or were required by their superiors to render their individual opinions, or were members of a committee constituted by authorities which assignment they could not decline or were under obligation to render their opinion being such a member, held, each of them was performing his official duties — Further held, not only when public servant acts in his official capacity but also when he purports to act in that capacity, provisions of S. 197 of the Code are attracted — In the instant case, where trial court had observed that sanction for prosecution was not required inasmuch as criminal misconduct arising out of corrupt practices of a public servant committed under Ss. 13(1)(d)(ii)-(iii) of Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 had nothing to do with his normal activity as a public servant, and also that none of the accused was any longer a public servant, held, sanction for prosecution was required under S. 197 CrPC — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 13(1)(d)(ii)-(iii) (Paras 57 to 59, 22 and 64). State of M.P. v. Sheetla Sahai, (2009) 8 SCC 617: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 901.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2009]

Centre for Public Interest Litigation v. Union of India, (2005) 8 SCC 202: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 23; Sankaran Moitra v. Sadhna Das, (2006) 4 SCC 584: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 358; Matajog Dobey v. H.C. Bhari, AIR 1956 SC 44: (1955) 2 SCR 925; B. Saha v. M.S. Kochar, (1979) 4 SCC 177: 1979 SCC (Cri) 939; R. Balakrishna Pillai v. State of Kerala, (1996) 1 SCC 478: 1996 SCC (Cri) 128; Rakesh Kumar Mishra v. State of Bihar, (2006) 1 SCC 557: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 432; State of Karnataka v. Ameerjan, (2007) 11 SCC 273: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 130, relied on

[2357] — S. 197 — Applicability — Expression "any offence alleged to have been committed by him while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty" — Words "official duty", how to be construed — Held, "official duty" implies that the act or omission must have been done by the public servant in the course of his service and that it should fall within the scope and range of his official duty — Test is whether omission or neglect to do that act would have brought on the charge of dereliction of his official duty — S. 197 to be construed strictly while determining its applicability to any act or omission in the course of service — Hence, protection does not extend to criminal activities — But, where act or omission performed by a public servant had reasonable connection with discharge of his duty, it must be held to be official

"Official", according to the dictionary, means pertaining to an office, and official act or official duty means an act or duty done by an officer in his official capacity. Thus, use of the expression "official duty" in Section 197 implies that the act or omission must have been done by the public servant in the course of his service and that it should have been in discharge of his duty. The section does not extend its protective cover to every act or omission done by a public servant in service but restricts its scope of operation to only those acts or omissions which are done by a public servant in discharge of official duty. (Para 8)

Section 197 CrPC has been widened further by extending protection to even those acts or omissions which are done in purported exercise of official duty. That is, under the colour of office. Official duty, therefore, implies that the act or omission must have been done by the public servant in the course of his service and such act or omission must have been performed as part of duty which, further, must have been official in nature. The section has, thus, to be construed strictly while determining its applicability to any act or omission in the course of service. Its operation has to be limited to those duties which are discharged in the course of duty. For instance, a public servant is not entitled to indulge in criminal activities. To that extent the section has to be construed narrowly and in a restricted manner. (Paras 9 and 10). S.K. Zutshi v. Bimal Debnath, (2004) 8 SCC 31: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2096: AIR 2004 SC 4174: (2004) 3 KLT 505.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-8-2004]

B. Saha v. M.S. Kochar, (1979) 4 SCC 177: 1979 SCC (Cri) 939, relied on

Matajog Dobey v. H.C. Bhari, AIR 1956 SC 44: 1956 Cri LJ 140, followed

[2358] — S. 197 — Applicability — Expression "any offence alleged to have been committed by him while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty" — Words "official duty", how to be construed — Held, "official duty" implies that the act or omission must have been done by the public servant in the course of his service and that it should have been in discharge of his duty — S. 197 to be construed strictly while determining its applicability to any act or omission in the course of service — But once any act or omission is found to have been committed by a public servant in discharge of his duty, held, liberal and wide construction to be given so far as its official nature is concerned — Where act or omission performed by a public servant had reasonable connection with discharge of his duty, it must be held to be official

"Official" according to the dictionary, means pertaining to an office, and official act or official duty means an act or duty done by an officer in his official capacity. Thus, use of expression "official duty" in Section 197 implies that the act or omission must have been done by the public servant in the course of his service and that it should have been in discharge of his duty. The section does not extend its protective cover to every act or omission done by a public servant in service but restricts its scope of operation to only those acts or omissions which are done by a public servant in discharge of official duty. (Para 11)

(4) "Discharge of official duty"/"Colour of duty" — What is and Determination of (contd.)

It has been widened further by extending protection to even those acts or omissions which are done in purported exercise of official duty. That is under the colour of office. Official duty therefore implies that the act or omission must have been done by the public servant in course of his service and such act or omission must have been performed as part of duty which, further, must have been official in nature. The section has, thus, to be construed strictly while determining its applicability to any act or omission in the course of service. Its operation has to be limited to those duties which are discharged in the course of duty. But once any act or omission has been found to have been committed by a public servant in discharge of his duty then it must be given liberal and wide construction so far as its official nature is concerned. For instance, a public servant is not entitled to indulge in criminal activities. To that extent the section has to be construed narrowly and in a restricted manner. But once it is established that that act or omission was done by the public servant while discharging his duty then the scope of its being official should be construed so as to advance the objective of the section in favour of the public servant. Otherwise the entire purpose of affording protection to a public servant without sanction shall stand frustrated. For instance, a police officer in discharge of duty may have to use force which may be an offence for the prosecution of which the sanction may be necessary. But if the same officer commits an act in course of service but not in discharge of his duty then the bar under Section 197 of the Code is not attracted. If, on facts, it is prima facie found that the act or omission for which the accused was charged had reasonable connection with discharge of his duty then it must be held to be official to which applicability of Section 197 of the Code cannot be disputed. (Paras 12 and 13). State of H.P. v. M.P. Gupta, (2004) 2 SCC 349: 2004 SCC (Cri) 539: AIR 2004 SC 730.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-12-2003]

B. Saha v. M.S. Kochar, (1979) 4 SCC 177: 1979 SCC (Cri) 939, relied on

Matajog Dobey v. H.C. Bhari, AIR 1956 SC 44: 1956 Cri LJ 140, followed

[2359] — S. 197 — Applicability — Expression "any offence alleged to have been committed by him while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty" — Words "official duty", how to be construed — Test for — Held, "official duty" implies that the act or omission must have been done by the public servant in the course of his service and that it should fall within the scope and range of his official duty — Test is whether omission or neglect to do that act would have brought on him the charge of dereliction of his official duty — S. 197 to be construed strictly while determining its applicability to any act or omission in the course of service — Hence, protection does not extend to criminal activities — But, where act or omission performed by a public servant had reasonable connection with discharge of his duty, it must be held to be official

